Memorial to An...

The Methodist Recorder ... recent meeting in the Method... town, New York, to unveil a memorial window in honor of Anna Howard Shaw. The donor of this window was a devoted friend and long-time companion of Dr. Shaw, who was prevented by an accident from being present. The editor of the Methodist Recorder, Dr. Lyman E. Davis, was pastor of this church in 1880, when Dr. Shaw was ordained to the ministry. He was present on this recent occasion and made an appropriate address. The chief address of the occasion was delivered by Rev. Caroline Bartlett Crane, LL. D., of Kalamazoo, Mich.

The Methodist Protestant Church honored itself in consenting to ordain this great woman preacher to the ministry. She was formerly a member of and preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, having license to officiate in marriage, but no license to administer the ordinances of the church. She applied for ordination that she might render a larger service. The Massachusetts Conference, to which she applied, refused the request. She appealed to the General Conference of that church, and this body not only denied the application but revoked the license she already had. Invited by a Methodist Protestant minister to apply to the Methodist Protestant Church for ordination, she finally consented to do so, and Tarrytown was the place of meeting of the New York Conference of our church when she made application. There was strong opposition here and the case was debated in the most spirited way for hours. One minister, himself unmarried, raised the objection that Paul wrote that an elder must be the husband of one wife. How could Anna Howard Shaw be the husband of one wife? Her ready wit had an appropriate answer. She said she presumed Paul was simply guarding the ministry against polygamy; but if he were to be taken absolutely, wasn't she as much the husband of one wife as her bachelor brother who raised the objection? Another objector made the point that the applicant was not a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. To meet that objection, Dr. Davis, pastor of the church where the conference was held, called a meeting of his people at once and received her into their membership. Dr. Shaw in her autobiography said of this occasion: "The ordination service was very impressive and beautiful. Its peace and dignity, following the battle that had raged for days, moved me so deeply that I was nearly overcome."

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw is regarded as one of the prime movers in the progress made in the recognition of the rights of women during the last half a century. She aided in the organizing of women for their part in national defense during the World War, and after the war her arduous work continued until finally she fell a sacrifice to it. She literally gave her life for the public good. Who can regret that the Methodist Protestant Church ordained this great preacher of righteousness? Associated with Dr. Davis in the effort to secure the ordination of Dr. Shaw was Dr. C. E. Wilbur, late editor of our Sunday school publications.

...es of Our Vices

... a virtue of necessity when we ... doing voluntarily what we do ... only from the compulsion of circumstances. For instance, we may practice economy from necessity and take to ourselves honor for being self-denying.

But we may do a much worse thing. We may have real vices and persuade ourselves and try to persuade others that they are real virtues. The man who gives way to a violent temper has been known to assert that it was only an outburst of righteous indignation. The man who is stingy and miserly sometimes lays claim to approval for practising economy. The man who from natural affinity associates with evil companions may flatter himself that he is trying to win them to a better life. The man who rejects the truth that binds his conscience tries to make it appear to himself and others that he has thus escaped from the bondage of superstition and error. The man who refuses in a spell of ill-feeling to speak to his neighbor justifies himself on the ground that he is administering a just rebuke. The man who defrauds in trade may try to believe that he is only practising commendable shrewdness. The mother who deceives her child to pacify it thinks she is practising true mother-love. Whatever species of meanness we may have, it is possible for us to deceive ourselves into thinking that it is really among the virtues. It is a dangerous mental habit to get into. God is not mocked by our false self-estimates. Why should we deceive ourselves when we cannot deceive God?

The Foolishness of Preaching

Paul wrote to the Corinthians that it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

Dr. McElroy, professor of Theology in Adrian College, used to tell the young theologues to note especially that Paul did not say "foolish preaching."

If preaching is not foolish preaching, whence then is the foolishness of preaching? Evidently it is in the false conception of those who do not accept the truth proclaimed by the preacher. If preaching is indeed foolish preaching, then men would be justified in rejecting it. It is not just any kind of preaching that will accomplish the result indicated by Paul—the salvation of those who believe. There is a kind of preaching that will produce that effect, and this fact frees such preaching from the reproach of foolishness. While it is foolishness in the sight of the unfair judges of it, it is real wisdom of the highest sort in the estimation of fair-minded judges. The true aim of preaching is the salvation of those who hear. It is wonderful that one man by the power of speech may lead other men to salvation. The effect is so great in proportion to the cause that it might seem in advance that it would be folly to expect such a cause to have such an effect. But the apostle positively asserts that God has put this honor upon the preaching of the truth as it is in Jesus to make it the means of salvation of

IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER?

LUTHER K. LONG

We are approaching the end of the year of grace 1926. Soon we shall be entering upon the activities and privileges of the year 1927.

Many reflections crowd upon our minds at such a time. We are full of regrets that the past is so entangled with failure, and so lacking in the completed work we had planned so hopefully at the beginning of the year. But there is also a feeling of gratitude that something has been accomplished and that we are as far along as we are.

Looking over the world as it is related to the years gone by it may be well to consider anew the old question, "Is the world growing better, or is it becoming worse—riper for its deserved destruction?"

MATERIALLY

The rivers and harbors, the farms and orchards and gardens, the highways and rail-roads, are certainly in much better condition and more serviceable to mankind than at any other time in the world's history. Autos and other vehicles, ships for the air, and vessels for water travel, have become better and better with the passing years. The megaphone, the telephone, the telegraph, and the radio, are far beyond former methods of rapid and long-distance communication.

In the houses we inhabit and in their equipment, together with the food we eat and the clothing we wear, there have been marked improvements. The value and character of our live-stock, the beauty and comfort of our surroundings all show great improvement.

ASK THE CHILDREN

"We lost our first child. Most young couples lose their first baby, humans know so little about the care of their own young." So said a neighbor. This sounded rather dismal to me, for my wife and I were beginning to raise a family. Our first baby has three children of her own, and she bids fair to continue on the earth a good number of years. The proportion of babies who live to maturity is larger than ever before. The average length of human life is constantly on the increase. Societies having in mind the health, education, and comfort of children are doing an increasingly broad and effective work in behalf of their wards. I think children would decide almost unanimously that they would rather be born in this and the coming years than at any other time in the history of the world.

WHAT SAY THE WOMEN?

All through the ages women have been struggling for independence. They have wanted the right to control their own bodies, to hold property in their own right, to attend school and college with their brothers and cousins, to help make and execute the laws, to help decide who shall hold office, and to be recognized as competent preachers and teachers of religion. All these desires are being gratified, and there is to be more progress in the years to come. I do not hear the women longing for the return of the "good old times."

HOW ABOUT THE LABORING CLASSES?

Always there may be heard the cry of some discontented or oppressed individual or group. They are looking forward to more than they have. Discontent is often the precursor of better things to come. But when you see the working-man, his clothes, the contents of his dinner pail, the furnishings of his home, the schooling of his children, the opportunities for education and advancement of his whole family, you know that something has been doing to his advantage in the years just back of us. Can you find a labor organization that would vote to go back to former hours of work, former shop-practice, and former wages? It is found difficult to get Jews to return to their ancestral home in Palestine; but it would be impossible to induce the workers of the world to move back into the last century, or into any other century of which they have knowledge.

MORAL AND SPIRITUAL TRENDS

There is a type of religious individual who despises material progress and well-being. That, to his mind, is only evidence of Satan's dominion over men, deluding them with false good and keeping them from anything that would be of value to their souls. Also, there are those who scout the idea that the preservation of life and the advantages of schools and books and improved methods of travel and communication, count for anything when we are considering moral and spiritual values.

As I see it, religion is that which enlightens men, uplifts the mind and hearts, inspires the best activities of life, quickens and sweetens all the varied relations of peoples—through the presence and power and goodness of God who is manifest in the person, life, teachings, humiliation, and exaltation of his Son, Jesus Christ.

Of course, we have not yet fully taken hold of that for which Christ has taken hold of us. But I am thoroughly convinced that followers of Christ are pressing forward to the mark of the prize of our high calling.

The past fifty years have been the best period, so far, in which to live and work. I think the next half-century will be still better. In my childhood-life and training I had advantages over the children of any previous period. But my children had better opportunities than I had, and I believe their children are to be more highly favored than were any of us. Religion and the Bible and the church have a firmer and a more rational hold on the people in these days than they have had in any previous period of the world's history.

I am not unconscious of the grave conditions and problems with us and ahead of us. There is a call for serious effort and for loyalty to truth and righteousness and God. But we are not discouraged. Disregard of the 18th Amendment is the expiring struggles of John Barleycorn, a monster whose hold on individuals and on the body politic was much stronger than even the most discerning among us suspected. His power is broken, and the grasp of his farthest-reaching tentacles will eventually be loosened. Crime is having its special innings just now, due partly to the loosing of destructive forces in the world war, and partly to the failure of instructors in the home and in the church and in the school to meet the rising generation with a set of moral and spiritual views adequate to the situation in which we find ourselves. This situation, I believe, will be remedied. Already parents and teachers and preachers are awakening to the importance of moral and religious training for the young. Courses of study and personal contacts should show valuable results in the days ahead of us.

Then, farewell to 1926, and hail to 1927! Thanks to God for the mercies and blessings of the past; and may his grace and strength be given us for the coming year.

THE GREAT IDEAL

This great ideal, that had its full and finest statement in the first Christmas message two thousand years ago, still halts and tarries,—the thing most difficult of attainment, it would seem, of all the ideals that have lured and tempted the hearts of men. Why is it so, we wonder? Humanity is achieving many things, and is becoming very wise and proficient in so many ways, but this seemingly simple thing of how to live together in a kindly and human Christian way seems to be almost past its skill and cunning. . . . Do we not need most of all today to go back to Bethlehem and learn again the lessons that the things of the spirit are supreme, that there is nothing so mighty in all the world as good-will, and that life is safe only as it forgets itself in goodness and in service? If we could learn those lessons today, how much it might mean!—Christian Guardian.

CHRISTIANITY, INCORPORATED

By J. W. ARMSTRONG

Capitalization—Unlimited. New shares issued every day.

Common stock—No par value and amount unlimited.

Organized under the laws of a higher civilization of the world.

Founded—Nineteen hundred and twenty-six years ago by Jesus Christ, in Jerusalem.

Incorporators—Christ and the twelve Apostles.

Bonds outstanding—The accumulated errors of man since the time of Adam. Many new issues have been marketed since that time and have been quickly absorbed by the weaknesses of human nature. The bonds of this corporation are unlike the bonds of other companies as the interest is CALLABLE from the bond holders instead of payable to them.

Location of plants—The company has plants all over the world. Its subsidiaries are numbered by the thousands, all working under the direct supervision of the parent organization. No plant has ever failed where the policies of the original incorporators have been carried out.

A few imitation concerns have started up but have soon become bankrupt and gone by the board.

It is thought by many in recent years that a closer consolidation of many of the subsidiary plants under one head would bring better results and higher dividends. While the fundamental principles of the many plants are the same, there seems to be a tremendous waste of effort on account of the different ideas of management, as carried out by many of them. Fewer, more efficient plants, each one drawing from a larger territory would undoubtedly result in greater dividends and reduce the amount of bonds outstanding.

Dividends—The company has paid dividends since the first day of its incorporation. They are paid daily to all stockholders. No company has ever paid larger dividends in proportion to what the stockholders have invested. It is no secret that to many the dividends have appeared small, but it must be remembered earnings are "plowed in" for the betterment of the company and are sure of being paid later, or in the next world, in large blocks of extras—stock dividends.

Terms of Sale—The mere signing of your name with any church or denomination in the world makes you a stockholder, but no dividends are payable until you pay in thought and deed some Christ-like coin. A close study and following of The Golden Rule and The Ten Commandments entitles you to be classed as a SUPER-PREFERRED stockholder and you receive many dividends that the regular stockholders do not get.—Forbes Magazine.

SOMETIME

The highest is in us all. At times it flames up and we know that we are not dust but spirit and that in fellowship with the Spiritual Life from whom we came, is our power and our peace. But many a man who has known the meaning and the might of this relationship has largely lost by it, not because theoretically he has disbelieved, but because practically he has crowded it out.

"Sometime," the man says, "I will attend to these deepest and finest relationships."

Meanwhile he picks up his life as a football runner does the ball and speeds across the field. He does not notice the ground across which he runs; his eyes are set upon the goal. He has no present; he has only a future. The most enriching relationships of life, from family love and friendship to religious faith offer their best to him, but he runs by. "Sometime," he says.

That time never comes; it never will come. What he needs most to learn is that the days are not a football field to be run over, but gardens to be tilled, and that if tilled well, they can grow now the things of which heaven is made.

"Carpe diem," said the Latins—"Seize the day." Some people who for many years have been doing the opposite, crowding out the best by pre-occupation and postponement, might well begin a new year with the single resolution to put first things first.

For the untimate trouble with pre-occupation is that it takes no account of the flight of time.

Someone has figured human life as covering the span of a single day's waking hours from six in the morning until ten at night. Then if a man is twenty years old it is ten o'clock in the morning with him; if he is thirty it is high noon; if he is forty, it is two in the afternoon; if he is sixty, it is six in the evening. So the day passes and the enriching experiences which fellowship with the Highest offers us are lost, not because we deliberately discard them, but because our time and attention are pre-engaged.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

A STUPID SLAVERY

By CHARLES RICHET

(Prof. Richet, Paris, received the Nobel Prize in Physiology in 1913. There is no higher authority on this subject in the world.)

"Tobacco is pernicious. Tobacco smoke is noxious. It contains dangerous gases—oxide of carbon, hydrocyanic acid and nicotine fumes. And yet I live in the midst of these poisons. Instead of breathing the pure, free, health-giving air, I injure my appetite, my memory, my sleep and the action of my heart by breathing noxious vapors. To excuse myself I cannot even claim, like many smokers, that tobacco is harmless, since I am well aware that it is harmful, exceedingly harmful.

"In any case, my mania for smoking is a fresh and unexpected proof of man's incorrigible folly. Tobacco is a stupid habit to which I am enslaved, while all the time fully realizing my stupidity. And because I am more alive to it than other men, I am more to blame.

"Weird mania! Absurd aberration! I have fettered myself with this habit with no better excuse than universal folly. A stupid slavery from which I lack the courage to break away."

Not many men will make the frank and honest confession made by this man of high authority. The question is often asked, Why do so many good men use tobacco? No doubt we have here the answer that fits an overwhelming majority of the cases.

If tobacco using is a "stupid slavery," "universal folly," "absurd aberration," and "extremely harmful," injuring "appetite, memory, sleep and the action of the heart," the time surely has come to put forth every effort

To keep the young folks clean from the blight of nicotine;
To teach the youth the truth about tobacco,

that they may be free—real Americans.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF EVOLUTION

There is a psychology behind this infidelity of Americans; a psychology or public mind that is indicated in these words from the pen of Henry Fairfield Osborn, one of the active promoters of the "evolution hypothesis." "In truth," writes Dr. Osborn, "from the period of the earliest stages of Greek thought, man has been eager to discover some natural cause of evolution, and to abandon the idea of supernatural intervention in the order of nature." This is the psychology of evolution: "The mind to abandon the idea of supernatural intervention," or in other words, to abandon the God in whom our fathers trusted.—The Temple Watchman.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

FOREIGN MISSIONS

An Appreciation—An Appeal

REV. J. C. BROOMFIELD, D. D.

The sad duty has just come upon me to take up the pen where our greatly beloved foreign missionary secretary, Rev. F. C. Klein, D. D., laid it down so suddenly. For many years he filled this column profitably and with marked regularity, even down to the hour of his death. In order that there may be no break in the continuity of his appeal to the church in behalf of the heathen world, I am writing this article on the train, on my way home from his funeral just held in Starr M. P. Church, Baltimore.

During the nineteen years of my association with Dr. Klein on the Board of Foreign Missions, and especially during the five months we spent together visiting our mission fields in Japan, China, and India, I learned to love him sincerely. His rugged honesty, his high sense of honor, his purity of speech, his refreshing humor, his utter unselfishness, his rare consideration for others, his willingness to sacrifice to the limit, his fearlessness in support of truth and righteousness as he understood them, his zeal in service, his efficiency as a kingdom worker,—these, and a multitude of other Christian characteristics, made him the Christian gentleman that he was. I think the church ought to know that for many years he served for much less salary than did the secretary of either of our other larger Boards and he did this in spite of the fact that his own Board voted repeatedly to place his salary on par with that of other secretaries. His continued refusal was based on the claim that the work needed the money. I think the church ought to know also that every dollar he could borrow on his life insurance, he had borrowed and loaned to the Board to carry on the work, and that when he died the Board owed him $3,000 that he had thus borrowed. Such willingness to sacrifice for the church and the kingdom I have not seen surpassed. But Fred Klein's pen lies idle on his desk, and his voice will be heard no more on earth pleading in behalf of the unevangelized.

Another pen will fill this column, and another voice will be heard pleading in the councils of the church for the millions beyond the seas.

In the meantime the responsibilities of your Boards, to whom has been entrusted the management of our foreign missionary work, will be greatly increased. As president of the Board of Foreign Missions, as well as of the Union Board of Foreign Misionary Administration, I would ask for the prayers of the church, that we may be divinely guided in the adjustments we shall be called upon to make, as a result of Dr. Klein's death. No better tribute can we pay to his memory than just to support to the limits of our ability the work to which he gave his "full measure of devotion."

For a number of years Dr. Klein has cherished two ambitions. The first was to have all our foreign missionary work under the care of one Board; and the second was to see a church building erected at the college in Nagoya, Japan. Forty years ago he established this school and his joy in its phenomenal growth has been exceedingly great.

At the time of his death both of these ambitions were in process of realization—the Union Board is in control of all our foreign work, and the church building he desired is in process of erection.

To complete the church the Board is in immediate need of $10,00—and I think the time opportune for me to ask those who have not yet paid the contribution they made at the General Conference at Tiffin, Ohio, toward the erection of the building, to do so as soon as possible. In closing I would ask the Church to remember at the throne of grace Mrs. Klein, who for many years shared with her devoted husband, the labors and privations of our pioneer missionary work in Japan, and who in all the years since their return has served the church and the Board gratuitously in a multitude of ways.

THE UNION BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSION ADMINISTRATION

By the action of the last General Conference the Board of Foreign Missions and the Women's Foreign Missionary Society were organized into a federated group in order to unify our missionary activities, save expense and to avoid needless conflict on the foreign field. In his annual report, Rev. F. C. Klein, D. D., Executive Secretary of the Board, has this to say, "The Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration has functioned continuously and successfully during the year. A better understanding of the foreign missionary work of the church has been obtained by the Board members, and all possibilities of duplication, of overlapping, of conflict in plans and operations have been eliminated, and the steady progress of the enterprise represents the best judgment of the men and women of the Board, whose sole aim is to conserve and develop all the interests of the growing work in our three fields."

JAPAN

Our mission work in Japan is the oldest and most extensive of the three fields in which the church is at work. Including one in America on furlough there are fourteen missionaries here. Two things characterize especially the work in Japan, the kindergarten and college work. There are a half dozen well developed kindergarten centers in as many different cities. At Yokahama there is a splendid school for girls having an enrollment of 533 while at Nagoya there is a school for boys having an enrollment of over 1100. These institutions are exerting an ever widening influence and stand among the best in Japan. The missionaries are carrying on the usual church and missionary activities. The membership of the churches totals 2226.

CHINA

Our work in China has lately been greatly handicapped due to the civil war now raging. Kalgan is the center of our missionary activities being in charge of five missionaries with a school for girls and one for boys, each located on its own compound. The churches show a membership of 1573 at last reports. The civil war has interferred with the missionary activities seriously. The Christian General was forced to retreat and the expected brigandage has driven some three hundred men and women into the compounds creating a real problem for the missionaries. For a time it was feared the unsettled conditions would necessitate the closing of the schools but this has not been found necessary. But the rising cost of commodities and the reduction of the appropriation from the Budget has made the work more difficult.

INDIA

The work in India is still in its formative stage being the most recent undertaking of our church in the missionary field. There are seven missionaries on the field and the work is making steady progress. There are two schools here also, one for boys and one for girls. Evangelistic, church and kindergarten work are carried on as in the other fields and the opportunities are far greater than the resources in men and money.

The development of the foreign missionary program of the Methodist Protestant Church during the last fifty years has not been rapid but it has been continuous. The lack of funds has added to the burdens of loyal missionaries and general secretaries and the achievements have been little less than marvelous. The offerings received at the Centennial Christmas Service will meet a great need and accomplish a world of good. F. W. S.

THE DENOMINATIONAL OUTLOOK

Alabama.—The session of Conference recently held reported a 37 percent increase over the previous year in contributions to the Annual Conference Budget, and eight percent in contributions to the G. C. B. There was a net gain of 330 members.

Arkansas.—The Secretary reports more money raised than in any year in the history of the Conference. A net gain in membership. Ten new preachers received. A number of important fields are opening up.

Eastern.—The Annual Bazaar held by the Ladies' Sewing Circle of the Schulville church netted $370.—A steam heating plant has been installed in the Roseland church at a cost of $1,500.—The church at Baldwins has a Mortgage Fund Society. During the past year it helped reduce the church debt by $2,000, and the remaining $500 of the parsonage debt will be paid this month.—100 copies of the Centennial Edition of the Hymnal have been purchased for use in the Manasquan church.—The church at White Plains is known as "the most spiritual church in the city."

Georgia.—A committee met at the Henry Grady Hotel in Atlanta recently to lay plans for a Centennial Church in that city. It will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Georgia Annual Conference.

Ft. Smith-Okla.—A new church building has been purchased for the congregation of the recently organized church at Prague, Okla.

Illinois.—The addition to the Avalon Park church, Chicago, was dedicated during the week of November 7.—A splendid meeting was held at St. Paul church, Pinkstaff Circuit. There were nineteen professions and thirteen additions. —$1,000 has been spent in repairs to the church at Cuba.

Indiana.—78 churches observed Rally Day, and 39 churches have reported to date that they observed Annual Conference Day.

Iowa-Missouri.—Sixty people met to hold the first quarterly conference of the Osceola Circuit at the Frame church. A group from the Union church put on a program of music and recitations for the occasion.

Maryland.—28 were received into membership in the Milford church following the revival service.—A "Joash Service" was held at the Deer Park church recently for the purpose of raising the last $350 on the parsonage debt. The entire amount was raised. The service was repeated at Providence church and $342 was raised. The C. E. Society of the Deer Park church has raised the money to send the pastor to the International Convention at Cleveland.—At the Thanksgiving service held at the Greenbush church the membership laid on the altar a thousand dollars for the parsonage debt. A like amount was given at the service last year.— The new church at Mariners is well on the way to completion. —The church at Pocomoke City is to be remodeled at a cost of $40,000.

North Mississippi.—The reporter for the Conference states that the recent session was "one of the best in recent years." Two ministers, one from the M. E. Church, South, joined the conference.

Ohio.—The four churches of the Mt. Vernon Circuit put on a Circuit Rally Day service which was held in the Mt. Vernon church, which is a station. The offering was $75.— The Pleasant Hill church, Catawba Circuit, has installed a moveable type, glass inclosed Bulletin Board in front of the church, the first country church in the Conference to do so.— The Attica church has added two rooms to the parsonage at cost of $800.

Pittsburgh.—The report of the Treasurer of the Pittsburgh Conference shows a gain in receipts for the first quarter of $2,416 over the corresponding period last year.—The Ladies' Aid of the Turtle Creek church cleared $200 for the church building fund.

South Carolina.—A tent, $40 x 70, has been purchased for use in evangelistic meetings throughout the Conference.

A WORD TO THE PASTORS AND REPORTERS

Very few folks have said so, but I am persuaded that the "North Carolina Notes" in the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Recorder, and likewise the "Denominational Notes" in the Methodist Protestant Herald, have been helpful. That's the only possible excuse for going to the trouble of working them out from month to month. And, so far as I am concerned, the belief that they really are helpful is my sufficient reward.

What I'm asking now is that those who report to the Herald make their reports definite. Give facts in your reports to the Herald, not generalities.

Occasionally I get a letter from some brother who doesn't often report through the Herald, giving me facts from his charge. I'm glad to get them that way. But why not say it in the Herald, too? And still another suggestion that will help make the Notes interesting: If you who read this see items of interest in the daily papers concerning our folks or our enterprises, send me the clippings. Unfortunately, I am up in this neck of the woods where very little news gets through. And I do not take the papers of the middle or eastern part of the State.

Give me the facts one way or another and "I'll tell the world." C. W. Bates

ALONE

'Tis a good thing sometimes to be alone—
Sit calmly down and look Self in the face,
Ransack the heart, search every secret place;
Prayerful, uproot the baneful seed there sown,
Pluck out the weeds ere the full crop is grown,
Gird up the loins afresh to run the race,
Foster all noble thoughts, cast out the base,
Thrust forth the bad, and make the good thine own.
Who has this courage thus to look within,
Keep faithful watch and ward, with inner eyes,
The foe may harass, but can ne'er surprise,
Or over him ignoble conquest win.
Oh, doubt it not, if thou wouldst wear a crown,
Self, baser Self, must first be trampled down!

—The advent of the new year was marked by a number of suicides on the part of young men who had prematurely drained the cup of life. It is sad when a young person can find nothing worthy to live for.

The WORK and the WORKERS

With New Year greetings and heartiest good wishes for all the work and for all the workers, we launch out upon the voyage of another year of joyous service for the dear Master, through the Church we call our own. May God bless and direct each of you into a splendid victory over self, and for Him.

We spent the first Sunday in the year in a quiet, restful way. During the afternoon we visited my father near Reidsville, who on that day was 85 years old. He is remarkably preserved for a man of that age, and still has the prospect of living for several years. He takes both the Methodist Protestant and the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD and keeps well posted on the work of the Church.

The Herald

A letter was recently mailed to each pastor of our conference in which it was said:

"We are making wonderful progress as a denomination, and many things of great importance are to be done this year by the help and co-operation of our people. To secure this help and co-operation we must reach them with the facts. The pulpit, the platform, and the paper are our means of communicating with our people. The paper will reach more people and reach them more quickly than any other means, so please help us to get as many subscribers as possible.

"By the help of the dear Father, and by the help of the pastors, and with the co-operation of all the people, this is to be the very best year in the history of the North Carolina Conference. Help to make it so. Be a booster!

"Dr. McCulloch has sacrificed much through the years to give us a church paper which has helped in the building up of our Conference more than we will ever know. And now we should rally to him and the paper by rolling up a worthy subscription list.

"We should certainly have at least 4,000 subscribers to THE HERALD. It is a bright and breezy, readable, and newsy church paper. It should be read by all our folks in all our homes.

The subscription price is $1.50 per year. Send all subscriptions and renewals to Rev. J. F. McCulloch, D. D., Greensboro, N. C."

President of General Conference

Doctor T. H. Lewis, president of the General Conference, has sent out a blank to all pastors of the denomination to gather some much-needed information. Some of our pastors, we happen to know, have already filled out the blanks and have mailed them both to Dr. Lewis. And we are hoping that every pastor in the North Carolina Conference will properly fill out these blanks and mail them to Dr. Lewis promptly. A stamped envelope accompanied each blank, and that should certainly insure its prompt return.

College Assessment

The Annual Conference directed that $5,000 be distributed among the charges for College running expenses. This is not a large amount on any charge, and it is meant for this current year at the College. The College management stands in great need of this amount of money right now, to meet running expenses. So we are appealing to the charges to raise this College assessment at once and send to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C., so the College may have the immediate benefit of it. Thank you for your attention to this.

It may also be true that a number of us have pledges to the College building fund, or to the endowment fund, which are due. These should be paid as rapidly as possible that we may thus share in the great things being done for the College.

Sparkles from the Charges

We hesitate to write under this sub-heading lest something which is really a worthy sparkle be overlooked, but here goes.

We noted in a recent report that Rehoboth Church, on Granville Charge, joins the ranks of those churches paying a stated amount per month to the Children's Home. If we mistake not, it is through an offer made by Mrs. E. C. Harris that this is made possible. If this splendid country church can pay $20 per month to the Children's Home, then many other churches can do the same thing.

We wish to commend all churches that are making monthly payments to the Home; but we especially commend those churches which set a stated amount to be paid each month.

those who believe. What a power God has given to preachers of His word. He has given to them the keys of the Kingdom. By the truth committed to them they may open to sinful men a great door of hope and salvation. This unquestionable fact should nerve the preacher to endure all the charges of foolishness and uselessness that an unbelieving world may hurl against him. The results attributed to preaching do not lie in the realm of the imagination. They are open to inspection in the lives of believers. The Gospel of Christ demonstrates its power to save men. Men who have believed to the saving of their souls know the power of the truth and are ever ready to testify for the benefit of honest doubters. But we must not overlook the secret of power in this case. It is not the mere word of the preacher that saves men, even when that word is the truth. It is a sort of delusion that the power resides in the preacher. If there were no power higher and greater than the preacher's power, preaching would indeed be foolish and it would be vain to expect any salvation to result from acceptance of the preacher's message. Salvation comes into the life of the believer because the truth leads him to One who has indeed the power to save from sin. The truth leads to a Divine Person who came into the world to save his people from their sins. The sound of the preacher's voice, his words committed to writing, or cherished in memory are only of value because they lead one to Jesus Christ, the real Savior of men. Preaching that brings men to Christ for salvation has no foolishness, but the highest wisdom.

YOUR HEART IN YOUR WORK

Years ago, in Worcester, Massachusetts, a young man was assistant in an architect's office. He did not want to be an architect; he wanted to use his voice, and was dismissed by his employer because he spent too much time in the office reading Crawford's story, "A Roman Singer." "I'm really doing you a favor, but you don't know it," said his employer as he sent him away. The words proved true, for the young man at once took up musical studies and rose in them so fast and so far that he became one of the world's great tenors. It never pays to continue in a task to which we cannot give our hearts. Any person or any circumstance is a blessing that drives us from such work into our true employment.—Forward.

OUR STORY PAGE

MARTIN'S DREAM

Martin Cameron had always wanted to ride a horse. His favorite dream was one in which he was a cowboy, racing wildly over the prairies on the back of a bucking bronco But, alas! Martin lived in a small apartment in a large city, and the nearest he ever came to having his dream come true was when he stroked the noses of the horses which brought the garbage wagon twice a week.

One bright, warm day in June, on a Saturday, Martin and his best friend, Ed Allen, went for a walk in the park nearby. Martin was telling Ed all the things he was going to do later on when he grew up to be about sixteen. To begin with he was going West, and then he was going to ride over the prairies.

"Aw, I'd rather have a racing car," said Ed. "Or maybe a airplane."

"I prefer horses," replied Martin. "A horse can give you his affection. A car is only a machine."

Just then Ed cried, "Oh, look!" and pointed straight ahead.

Martin looked, and there before them stood a beautiful horse all saddled and bridled. It was like a dream come true!

The boys tried to catch the horse, but it shied off, and without exactly running away, led them on and on through the most lonely parts of the park.

"We'll catch it yet," muttered Martin, excitedly. "It isn't afraid of us. You head it off that way. There! I almost had it!"

But a miss is as good as a mile, they say, and the horse trotted off, still his own master.

"A car wouldn't act like this!" panted Ed, as the boys ran behind. "You can't tell me that creature has any sense or affection either!"

"If I could only catch it, I'd play cowboy," Martin wistfully.

"Oh, how they dodged and ran and tried to catch that animal! At last, they saw him stop quite still, and he let them come up to where he stood cropping the grass Martin sprang forward to grasp the bridle, when Ed gave a sharp cry that made Martin look down. There on the ground lay a young man in riding clothes.

"The horse must have been leading us here!" exclaimed Ed. "This must be his master."

The boys ran to the man and Martin pressed his hand on the stranger's breast.

"His heart is beating," he said. "Let's give him First Aid."

They took off the man's collar, fanned him, brought water from the brook nearby and dashed some in his face. Pretty soon the man opened his eyes.

"Your horse led us here," excleamed Martin. "Are you hurt much?"

"I was thrown," said the man, smiling faintly. "No, I don't guess I'm much hurt. Help me up and I'll see."

They each took an arm and helped the stranger to his feet. There was a cut above his temple and that seemed to be the only damage done. He put his hand to his head and groaned.

"I'm a good ways from the entrance. Don't know if I can make it."

"We'll help you get into the saddle again," said Martin.

"Thank you," smiled the young man ruefully, "I don't believe I'm steady enough to ride. One of you will have to go and get a taxi for me."

"Mart," said Ed, his eyes shining, "you can ride. Go on now!" His expression said: "Now's your chance, old scout!"

Martin had never told his friend that he could ride, but he had talked so much about his ambitions that Ed got the idea that Martin was a horseman. Martin was trembling with excitement. He dared not explain that he had never been on a horse because he feared the young man would not let him ride. He walked up boldly to the horse, just as he had seen Tom Mix do, put his left foot in the stirrup and scrambled on the horse's back.

My! How high up he felt! He dared not look down on the ground for fear of getting dizzy and falling off.

"So long, boys!" he called, waving his hand and giving the horse a slap.

Well! Martin will never forget the doings of the next few minutes. The horse started off with a jerk. Martin seized the skinny edge of the saddle. In the movies the saddles had pommels. This one was like a piece of leather wrapped around the horse. Off went Martin, his fingers twisting themselves in the reins as they grasped the slick and slippery neck of the horse.

He did not know where he was going, but he was on his way. They passed lots of people and cops, too. But Martin had no voice to call with. He was thinking: "If this horse could throw off a big grown man, I guess I won't be sitting on his back long!"

They dashed out of the park, up a side street nearby, crossing some trolley tracks just as a street-car was passing. It's a wonder there wasn't a collision. Suddenly the horse began to go very fast, and the first thing the boy knew, he was in a stable.

A lot of men ran to hold the animal's head and help the boy off. Martin gasped out the news about the young man and soon help was being rushed into the park.

"You must be a good rider to be able to ride Gunpowder without your feet in the stirrups," said one of the grooms.

"Oh, I've done quite a bit of riding," replied Martin, adding slyly, "in my dreams."

"Ever been on a horse before?" inquired a man who was standing near.

"Only in my dreams," replied Martin. "It was great! I'll never forget it!"

"Well, now look here," said the man. "You have saved a valuable horse for us."

"He saved himself," said Martin, modestly. "I hadn't anything more to do with coming here than if I were a fly perched on his back."

The men laughed at that. Then Mr. Sheldon said:

"Son, you're plucky and honest anyhow, and I'm going to give you a treat every Wednesday morning about 10 o'clock if you come here. I'll let you take one of the horses for an hour. I'll teach you to be a good rider."

"Vacations start next week," said Martin. "Gee! Do you mean that, sir?"

"I do!" said Mr. Sheldon.

"Shall I ride Gunpowder?"

"No, son, he's our most valuable horse. I have a quiet old fellow named Morgan you can have."

Martin tried to look sad, but he was really very glad to have a quiet old horse at first.

"You see," he said to Ed later, "horses are affectionate and smart."

"That one sure did lead us to his rider," admitted Ed.

"And went home nicely afterwards," put in Martin. "No car could do that."

"Well, I'll tell you what let's do," said Ed. "Now, you're all fixed up with a horse to ride once in awhile and Mr. Sheldon for a friend. Let's look around for a run-away auto for me!"—Selected.

This week Liberty-Siler City won over Burlington and claims first place. West End won over Fountain Place and takes fourth place. Concord comes in seventh. Flat Rock, Granville, Charlotte and Friendship are added to the list, totaling fifteen charges heard from on the A. C. B. Palestine Church on Flat Rock went over the top.

There are nineteen entries on the G. C. B. Concord and Granville both win over West End and take first and second places. State Street, Winston-Salem, Asheboro, Whitakers and North Davidson win over Liberty-Siler City. Gibsonville and Glen Raven over Randleman. Orange, Fountain Place, Friendship, Anderson and Bess Chapel over Saxapahaw. These with six others make up twenty-three charges reporting on the G. C. B.

Tabernacle goes over the top on the College Assessment. Liberty-Siler City takes first place in the list and West End second. 34 charges have been heard from on one or more budgets. Liberty-Siler City and West End have made payments on all three budgets Mocksville, Whitakers, Fountain Place, Concord, Flat Rock, Randleman, and Friendship have made payments on two of the budgets.

In the last issue of the Herald for January, and once each month thereafter, we will publish a full list of all conference charges with all receipts attached. Neither the pastors nor the workers on the fields will want their charge to stand blank. You have about two weeks to collect more and to send in amounts in hand so that your charge will not stand blank in the list.

At present finances are a bit ahead of what had been done this time last year. It can be kept that way if all charges will make good payments monthly.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

ANDERSON CHARGE RESOLUTIONS

Resolutions presented by the pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, and adopted by first quarterly conference, Anderson Charge.

1. That we immediately put on the Every Member Canvass and get every member to contribute something making their contributions weekly if possible.

2. That we begin at once and pay something on our claims each month.

3. That we immediately put on a canvass for our Church paper and endeavor to get it into every Home.

4. That we use our influence as far as possible in establishing a Family Altar in every Home.

5. That we improve our church buildings, grounds and cemeteries wherever needed by cleaning and repairing.

6. That we make an earnest effort to improve our Sunday schools, and Christian Endeavor Societies in every way possible.

7. That we observe all the Special Days designated by our General and Annual Conference with an offering toward our Budget.

8. That we organize the Ladies' Aid and Woman's Missionary Societies.

9. The pastor with a good delegation from each church attending the Summer Conference at High Point College in July.

10. That we appoint a committee to raise our assessment for the Superannuate Fund at once.

With the above resolutions adopted by the charge, and with pastors and people cooperating to bring to pass Anderson Charge should have a good year. We believe they will.

May God bless and direct.

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Whitaker

Whereas our heavenly father in his wise Providence has taken from us Mrs. Carey Whitaker, a faithful and loyal member of our Enfield Methodist Protestant Ladies' Aid Society, and whereas we are deeply grieved, knowing she will be with us no more in body, and whereas her death has brought great sorrow to her family and this organization.

Therefore be it resolved,—

First—At our next regular meeting we spend a moment in silent reverence to the memory of this noble woman.

Second—That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Enfield Progress, a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald, a copy to the family and a copy be spread upon our minutes.

Mrs. C. H. Matthews,
Mrs. Joe Person,
Mrs. R. C. Stubbins.

Little

Mrs. Bathia Little passed away December 19 at the age of 76 years. She was living with her nephew, Mr. Walter Little. She was a good woman, was a member of Weaver Chapel church for a long time, and was loved by the community in which she lived. Funeral was conducted by her pastor, December 20, in the home of Brother Walter Little; afterward her body was laid to rest in a family burying ground near Brother L. T. King's home. J. B. O'BRIANT.

Alexander

Flavia Lillian Alexander died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Howard Wyrick, Richmond, Va., on November 12, 1926.

Just a thought of you, dear cousin,
Just a memory fond and true,
Just a token of affection
That our hearts still ache for you.

At the school house on the hill,
Or at the creek at the Old Mill,
We have spent many happy days
In our joyful childhood plays.

Now all is past and gone
And you've left us for a home
Where you'll know the Savior's love.

We are sad; we are lonely,
Since you've left us for a while.
We are missing, sadly missing
Your kind greeting, loving smile.

But we hope to meet you There
In That Celestial Home so fair,
Where partings are no more
And our heart-aches all are o'er.

A COUSIN.

Brown

Arlie W. Brown, son of H. H. and Alice Brown was born, April 18, 1903, and died November 18, 1926. He professed faith in Christ, and joined Pinnacle M. P. Church, July, 1917. He was fatally wounded November 17, while working on the train near Greensboro. He was rushed to a hospital where he had all the aid of skillful physicians that could be secured but all of no avail more than to lessen his suffering.

For anyone to have seen how he was mangled and cut up, it seemed that his pain would have been very excruciating, but those who saw him say that he was cheerful, and pleasant, talking to each of his people as they were permitted to go in the room to him and seemed perfectly conscious of his condition, but he only lived a few hours when death released him of all these earthly sufferings, and we trust that he is now where there is no more sorrow, suffering, pain, and death.

Burial services were conducted by the writer November 19th, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Pinnacle M. P. cemetery.

The beautiful and immense floral designs were evidences of the high esteem in which he was held by his many friends.

The heart-broken family have our sympathy in this sad and unexpected bereavement.

NOTED MERCHANT PRAISES PROHIBITION

A 2,900 mile automobile tour of the East satisfied John G. Shedd, chairman of the board of Marshall Field & Company, Chicago, that prohibition is making the nation prosperous. This is according to an interview with Mr. Shedd in the Current Economist.

"Savings have been growing steadily from year to year, and this growth in the accumulation of the labor classes has been notable since prohibition closed the corner saloon." Mr. Shedd stated, "The benefits of prohibition which accrued to the working men and their families the last seven years cannot be stressed too strongly."

—New Year's morn brought sadness to Brother W. H. Schell and family. Pneumonia took from them their pretty twenty-five day old baby, Joe Tom. W. T. TOTTEN.

—Rev. M. I. Crutchfield spent a ew days of Christmas week with his people in Orange county.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk should be addressed at Kernersville, N. C. He has resigned the superintendency of the Children's Home and has become pastor of the Kernersville and allied churches.

—"I am certainly not a prohibitionist, and England may not need prohibition, but I am courageous and honest enough to say from what I have seen that America has reason to be thankful for it."—Mark Goulden, Managing Editor of the "Eastern Morning News,"—England.

A guest in a Cincinnati hotel was shot and killed. The negro porter who heard the shooting was a witness at the trial. "How many shots did you hear?" asked the lawyer. "Two shots, sah," he replied. "How far apart were they?" "'Bout this way," exclaimed the negro, clapping his hands with an interval of about a second between them. "Where were you when the first shot was fired?" "Shinin' a gemman's shoes in the basement of de hotel." "Where were you when the second shot was fired," "Ah was passing de Big Fo' depot."—Exchange.

MARRIED

Rierson-Kallam

Mr. Otis Rierson and Miss Thelma Kallam were married November 25, 1926, at the Pinnacle M. P. parsonage, the writer officiating.

This couple have our best wishes.

Jenkins-Perry

Sunday, December 26, 3 p.m., at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. B. O'Briant, Mr. Herbert Jenkins and Miss Illa Perry were happily married. Mr. Jenkins is from near Littleton, N. C., and Miss Perry from near Youngsville, N. C. Many good wishes for this young couple for a prosperous journey in life.

Kearns-Vickory

On Christmas eve at the parsonage in Randleman, the writer officiated in the marriage of Joseph Wade Kearns, of Farmer, and Miss Dolly Vickory, of Climax. The contracting parties have begun housekeeping near Sumner school, where Mrs. Kearns is employed as teacher. Mr. Kearns has a position in Greensboro. The best wishes of their many friends follow these happy young people. W. H. NEESE.

Dixon-Young

On Christmas eve night Miss Donnie Dixon and Mr. William Young were married at Glen Raven M. P. church in the presence of a large audience by the writer. We wish for them much happiness. Miss Dixon is one of our faithful members of Glen Raven.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

An Irish witness was being examined as to his knowledge of a shooting affair. "Did you see the shot fired?" the judge asked.

"No, sorr; I only heard it," was the evasive reply.

"The evidence is not satisfactory," replied the judge sternly.

The witness turned around to leave the box and directly his back was turned he laughed derisively.

The judge, indignant at this contempt of court, called him back and asked him how he dared to laugh in court.

"Did you see me laugh, Your Honor?" queried the offender.

"No, sir, but I heard you," was the irate reply.

"That evidence is not satisfactory," said Pat. And this time everybody laughed.

"To every man there openeth
A way, and ways, and a way;
And the high soul climbs the highway
And the low soul gropes the low,
And in between on the misty flats,
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A highway and a low,
And everyone decideth
The way his soul shall go!"

"Every man goes down to death bearing in his clutched hands only that which he has given away."—Rousseau.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

STATE STREET FORMAL OPENING

The new Sunday school building of State Street Methodist Protestant Church will be formally opened January 9th, 11 a.m., with preaching by President A. G. Dixon. Those who come to spend the day are asked to bring lunch and the ladies of the church will serve hot coffee in the dining room of the building and then at 2:30 Mrs. H. W. Maier will make an address on some phase of Children's Work in the church. There will be several selections of special music by visitors from the different churches, but we are not able to announce just how these will come in on program as yet. Suffice it to say that we have a good program arranged. At the night service at 7:30 Brother G. H. Hendry will preach.

We invite all Methodist Protestants of Davidson and surrounding counties to come for some part of the day's program if you cannot be here for all day. You will be welcome. We will appreciate your coming to see us that day or any day.

Please pray for us that this may be a great day for the Kingdom through the Methodist Protestant Church.

N. G. BETHEA, Pastor.

Albemarle.—We are so over-joyed with our new pastor, Rev. J. R. Anderson, that we have not words to express our thanks to the Annual Conference for sending him to us. Brother Anderson is one of the best gospel preachers that I ever heard and not only a good preacher but we believe he is truly a man sent from God to preach to a lost world. And we would not be doing justice to ourselves to say nothing about his good wife. She is so good to do anything that you ask her. She is always ready with a smile. Her greatest delight is in doing something for her Master. We had a delightful Christmas exercise Christmas eve, consisting of songs by the choir and songs and recitations by the children and a solo by Master Virgil Leonard. After the exercise a very nice treat was delivered to each person on roll, consisting of oranges, apples and tangarines. Old Saint Nick was a very good hand in helping to deliver the packages. Presents were given to all the smaller classes by their teachers. It was truly a great time for the little folks as well as those of us who are some times a little older, for at this season of the year we are all made to feel young again.

We have elected our officers of the Sunday school which are as follows: Superintendent, R. L. Leonard; assistant, S. R. Green; secretary, Mrs. Bertha Shoe. The following were elected as teachers: cradle roll, Mrs. C. B. Efird, assisted by Miss Virgil Harward; class 1, Mrs. D. L. Hatley; class 2, Mrs. C. S. Moton; class 3, Mr. C. S. Moton; class 4, Mr. John Whitlock; class 5, Mrs. John Whitlock; class 6, Rev. J. R. Anderson. We are expecting a good year in our Sunday school as well as our church work.

Our most valued pianist is Miss Blanch Furr who has been faithfully holding this place ever since she has been large enough to reach the pedals on the piano. Mrs. John Whitlock was elected assistant. We are deeply grateful to one of our good Lutheran friends, Mr. H. C. Lype, for his generous gift of oranges for our Christmas treat. May God's riches blessings go with him and may the year 1927 be the best year to him and his in health and above all may he realize more than ever the words of our Master who said, Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren ye did it unto me. Our mid-week prayer meetings are beening held at the homes of our members; the writer and family were delighted to have the meeting in their home recently. Our meeting this week will be with Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Moton, with Mr. S. R. Green as leader. We are very sorry to report Mrs. Harkey unable to attend church Sunday. We wish for her a speedy recovery as Mr. and Mrs. Harkey are two of our faithful members.

Our Ladies' Aid society is doing a wonderful work as you will agree when I tell you what they did. When they held their flower show and bazaar in addition they gave a supper and charged fifty cents and when the evening was over they had over and above expenses about $110.00. They used this in buying some new furniture for the parsonage. It was very hard for the Judges to tell who was the heartiest eater at the supper; it was finally decided that it lay between three men, namely, Jap Hatley, C. S. Moton and R. L. Leonard. R. L. L., Reporter.

Anderson Circuit, Liberty Hill.—Our new pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, arrived on this work November 27 and preached two sermons at this church November 28, both being very helpful. He seems to be very much interested in the work and we are looking forward to a successful year.

The first quarterly conference was held at this place December 11. The attendance was very good. Brother Crutchfield had a good report with several splendid recommendations which the conference voted to adopt. One of these was the every member canvass which has already been started.

We had our Christmas program last Sunday night. It was very successful under the leadership of Mr. Waites, Misses Kate Poole and Sally McClimon. The attendance and offering was very good.

Our Sunday school and C. E. are progressing nicely. REPORTER.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.—Since our return from conference we have met with all the churches, and received a hearty welcome. We are glad to be back with these good people for another year, and are hoping with their cooperation to be able to accomplish more in the service of the Lord than ever before.

We held our first quarterly conference Saturday before the third Sunday in December with fairly good reports. Shoals church has about paid pastor's salary up to date.

Since hog-killing season came in, we have received from the different members as much fresh meat as we could make use of, and have had apples up to, and through Christmas, and still have some, without buying any, and have had plenty of pumpkins and potatoes, some nice honey, and a number of other things too numerous to mention for which we are very thankful and hope to be able to repay with humble service. A. L. HUNTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our new conference year has started with a splendid outlook and the various organizations of both Tabernacle and Julian churches seem to be alive to the great need and opportunities for service.

The Sunday schools are doing splendid work and we consider the attendance good for this season of the year.

The Missionary Societies are also active and do their bit toward making a live church.

We are planning to organize a Christian Endeavor Society at Tabernacle the third Sunday afternoon in this month. Dr. Dixon will preach for us and Mrs. Dixon has kindly agreed to assist us in organizing.

The Every Member Canvass has been successful on this charge and finances are coming up very well.

It is gratifying to report that our College Assessment has been paid in full. In addition to this the charge has paid $150.15 to date.

Our first quarterly conference was held on Friday afternoon, December 10, 1926. Brother Dixon was with us and the spirit of the meeting was fine and showed united interest in making plans for the year.

I have been very graciously received by this charge and my association with these people has been very pleasant.

I did not come as a stranger for many of my members were already known to me and I had formerly enjoyed their hospitality.

I have been permitted to fill every appointment and at each service have been greeted with good congregations. We have been remembered many times in a substantial way and appreciate every gift or kind remembrance.

The Christmas season had its joys for us for the pastor was not overlooked. Our good Brother W. T. Hanner of the Julian church called at our home and brought a basket filled with an assortment of good things which we will enjoy for sometime. This was a gift from himself and wife.

We take this opportunity to express our appreciation for every kindness which has been shown us and may God help us to be faithful in service.

Best wishes to all for a happy and prosperous new year. W. F. ASHBURN.

Pleasant Grove.—Our Christmas program was well rendered in the presence of a crowded house. The collection amounted to $14.25.

Mrs. J. R. Meredith was called to the bedside of her father in Concord where she spent the holidays. We greatly missed her and her children in the preparation and rendering of the Christmas program.

Rev. U. S. Crowder, pastor of Orchard Park, M. E. Church, El Paso, Texas, is expected to occupy the pulpit at the Grove next Sunday at 11 a.m.

All departments of our church work are going forward as well as can be expected. Many of our people have muddy roads to travel over in rough weather, and in view of this fact we have no night services on Sunday nights during the winter months.

Since our last report we have received substantial gifts from the following persons, viz.: Mrs. Everett Kennedy, Mrs. Ralph Kennedy, F. H. Clark, B. E. Kennedy, B. E. Payne, Noah

Charles, I. A. Teague, and Charlie Kennedy. Then at the Christmas tree we received several dollars worth of presents besides some cash. We sincerely thank all those good people for their kindness manifested in this particular way. GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

South Lexington Charge.—The work has been progressing nicely for the past few weeks. All appointments have been met. Large congregations have met the pastor for every service so far. Glad to say the new year started off fine the first Sunday here at Lexington church. We had 195 present in Sunday school, the best in the history of the church. Out at Mount Carmel church we had more present in Sunday school than were on roll last year.

The Christmas season has been one of cheer to us. And we hope all our Herald readers have had a wonderful Christmas also. A large number of our friends remembered us with Christmas cards and valuable gifts. Some of the gifts were good to eat, some good to wear, some good to smell, some good to sleep under, and some just good to look at. I take this means of saying that all the remembrances were sincerely appreciated. We are just hoping that all our friends had as good a time as we had. May the dear Lord help us to manifest His spirit of helpfulness and good will all the year through.

A. RIDGE, Pastor.

Matthews' Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—We have been silent for some time, but we are still awake and feel the Lord has been good to us in many ways, especially in sending our pastor back to us for a new year.

Sunday was a good day for us; Brother Powell was with us. We always look forward to the first and second Sundays, for we are glad to see our pastor come. He always brings us an interesting sermon, and his sermon Sunday was fine, sure!

The Christmas season has been one of good cheer with us. We had a Christmas tree and a short program on the night of December 27, at 7:30 o'clock. The program was very good according to the training, the children had and the time it was gotten up in.

We are glad to note that our Sunday school is progressing very nicely under Mr. J. B. Edwards as Superintendent, although nothing to what it might be, for so few of the parents attend. We want to encourage the young people to be faithful, and to urge that the parents come more with their children. Your presence helps, and you can encourage the young people by coming. Let's hope for better attendance.

Our Christian Endeavor met Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. There was a very good attendance. Our Society is improving very much. Leader for last night was Mrs. C. E. Ellis. Had an interesting meeting. It is very gratifying to see how willing the young people are, to do what they are called on for in the Christian Endeavor work.

With best wishes for a Happy New Year to all. LOUISE BOWEN, Reporter.

South Lexington.—The Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 195 which is the largest attendance in the history of the school, and was an increase of 63 over the previous Sunday. The only explanation of the big increase is that there was a smaller attendance on the previous Sunday which came just after Christmas and many of the people were out of town, and also because some of the members of the Sunday school have been busy getting the people into the school. The former members are being induced to come back.

The Christmas service was held on Friday night preceding Christmas Day and was largely attended. The church was filled to overflowing. The program rendered by the children of the Sunday school and the young people was very interesting. The children rendered songs and recitations and the young people rendered a pageant, entitled, "Mrs. Charity." Miss Lena Hedrick directed the pageant. Pastor Ridge filled in with a very happy talk on the meaning of the birth of Christ. The offering amounted to about $8.

Pastor Ridge seemed to be at his best in the delivery of a New Year's sermon at the night service last Sunday. He used as a text, Joshua 3:4, "For ye have not passed this way heretofore." We were very glad to have Rev. J. T. Sisk, pastor of Mocksville charge, worship in the service and lead the opening invocation. Brother Sisk was accompanied by his two sons, Hughie and Clarence, and daughter, Miss Pauline, and Brother S. C. Summer, all of whom, with the exception of Clarence composed a quartette. They rendered three selections of splendid music which was greatly enjoyed by the large congregation. Their coming was unknown and unannounced but the special feature of special music was a pleasant surprise to the people.

Next Sunday morning the congregation of South Lexington church will worship with State Street congregation in the formal opening of their new building. Dr. Dixon will be the preacher at the morning service.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Pastor Rev. D. I. Garner conducted the funeral service of the oldest member of this church, Mr. Kelly Latham, Sunday afternoon. He was born March 14, 1842, died January 1, 1927. He joined the church when a young man and lived a Christian life.

We have lost by death in the past year five of our oldest members.

Mr. Garner also preached for us Sunday night. It seems that his sermons each time are just the message that we need.

A Christmas tree and treat were given the Sunday school. Also the pageant, Resurrection of Santa Claus, was given.

Most of our young people that are away from home, visited their parents during the holidays. REPORTER.

Halifax.—We had a very good congregation at Eden yesterday, and a splendid congregation at Union in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gallaway remembered us in a special way on the Christmas tree at Hollister.

Our report last week was somewhat condensed by the publishers, two names were left out of the report. Our reports are necessarily lengthy because we have a big charge with a big people.

We have another pounding to report, Ringwood, and Union, this time. Those remembering the pastor and his family in this way, were Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Neville, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Smith, Miss Westry Harris, Roy Faircloth, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Lewis, J. N. Roseman and family, Mrs. Whitehead, Mrs. Hull, Mrs. N. W. Cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Y. A. Spivey, and Norwood Aycock. We will not mention the different articles, but will say that they brought almost everything that could be thought of to make a preacher's mouth water, even four nice chickens. We want to thank everyone, and invite the Editor down to take a meal with us.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

(Thank you. Let me know when you are going to have chicken.—Editor.)

Second Church, Charlotte.—We are glad our pastor could be with us Sunday. His wife is still fighting between life and death. We enjoyed two fine sermons delivered by our pastor Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. We held our first quarterly conference Saturday, January 1, 1927, at 7:30 p.m. We were glad to learn that our chapel is half paid for, and also the pastor's salary for the past year and all other debts that were due were settled. We are planning to start our new church in the spring. We had a very good program and Christmas tree December 24th. Everybody seemed to enjoy it immensely. The children all received presents and a bag of fruit.

The Ladies' Aid are still moving along; they have sold candy through the month of December. The profit was $16.50. They used that to pay for the Christmas expenses. May we ask the prayers of all readers for our church this incoming year.

MRS. G. W. STEGAL.

Denton Church.—On Sunday morning at the usual hour Rev. M. C. Henderson gave us a great sermon. Communion service was observed right after preaching. At the evening service Brother Henderson preached again.

We are glad to say that people in Denton think well of Mr. Henderson and family. All enjoy hearing him preach and seeing him come to our homes at any time.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely with N. V. Johnson superintendent.

Sunday, a year ago, 70 present, offering, $3.12. Yesterday, present, 70, offering, $4. Largest attendance, class no. 7; Mrs. Joe Hill, teacher; present, 17. Largest offering, class no. 2; Mr. W. A. Johnson, teacher, $1.65.

Every first Sunday our offering goes to the Children's Home at High Point.

Our C. E. Society is getting along nicely with J. V. Lanier superintendent. We ask the prayers of all good people.

REPORTER.

St. Paul.—Splendid work is being done in our Sunday school. We started out on the new year this morning with an increase of eleven members and nine visitors which made our attendance today one hundred and twenty-eight and nine dollars and forty cents collection. We hope this will continue throughout the year.

The entire Sunday school enjoyed a delightful Christmas program Thursday night before Christmas. After the program came the distributing of presents from the big beautiful tree and the Sunday school treat followed this. The affair was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Next Saturday night the Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. Carl Wilson; after the business meeting a delightful social hour will be enjoyed. The ladies have been doing great work. They have recently purchased some new furniture for the living room of the parsonage.

Our pastor has not been with us long, but has been doing good work since he arrived. He preached two fine sermons today and there was also good attendance at both services. His subject at the morning service was "The Last Supper", followed by communion service and at the evening service the subject was "Friendship."

NELLE WADE, Reporter.

Worthville.—Some time ago an appeal went out over the conference from Worthville, asking the various Sunday schools for a contribution for the church. The church at this place is greatly in need of repairs. Having served this people for two years plus—and being familiar with circumstances and conditions, I am in a position to say that the church is worthy, and the appeal justifiable.

Several Sunday schools have already responded beautifully. I am sure that others would do likewise if they were as fully conversant with the facts as the pastor is.

An itemized statement of all donations will be published in due time.

Send your remittance to Mr. C. F. Allred, Worthville, N. C.

Thanks in advance. WM. H. NEESE.

Asheville.—We are shocked and grieved for the sudden passing of Mrs. Robert Greenwood. On New Year's eve she had been visiting her sister, Mrs. Brigman, in Weaverville, and returned home for supper. She was taken ill and passed away within two hours. Her funeral was held in our church here Sunday afternoon. Pastor Bates had charge, assisted by Rev. J. S. Williams and Dr. O. J. Chandler. Mrs. Greenwood was a charter member of our church here. She was a member of our Ladies' Aid and our Missionary Societies. She was certainly most faithful and loyal to our church and to her Lord. She prayed and worked and talked for "my church" as she called it, and for "my preacher." She was her pastor's stand-by ever. She and her husband lived in their house by the side of the road and were friends to all comers. Many will testify to their hospitality.

Two Sundays ago, Brother Ward Mitchell was laid to rest from our church. The services were conducted in the home of his sister, Mrs. John Cathey, wife of Asheville's Mayor. Brother Mitchell had been ill for some time. We had hoped and prayed for his recovery. He and his wife were devoted members of our church, liberal and attentive.

Our Asheville Church has been hard hit recently. So many of our members have been taken by death. Others of our members have moved away, thus reducing our supporters and support.

A Christmas pageant was given Sunday night after Christmas. Mrs. Bates had charge. Pastor Bates read the scripture stories. Misses Hanner and Eudora Younginer held the lighted candles. Hymns and carrols were sung in the adjoining room. Individual representatives from the various departments brought offerings to a beautifully improvised altar. The offering amounted to a little more than fifty dollars.

On Tuesday night a Christmas tree was lighted in the church. Mrs. J. S. Williams told stories to the children. The Primary department sang carols. Presents were given out by Superintendent Cashatt and Pastor Bates.

On New Year's eve the Ladies' Aid met at the parsonage. A very interesting meeting.

Our church here is sorely bereaved by the death of Dr. F. C. Klein. REPORTER.

Mt. Carmel, South Lexington Charge.—Our Sunday school met at its regular hour January 2nd, and elected new officers and teachers. H. G. Swicegood, Secretary and Treasurer; Beautus Waitman, assistant Secretary and Treasurer; H. L. Swicegood, assistant superintendent; W. W. Swicegood, organist; Annie McCray, assistant organist; H. V. Swicegood, reporter; class no. 1, F. S. Swicegood, teacher; C. A. Berrier, assistant teacher; class no. 2, H. L. Swicegood, teacher; Irma Helmstetler, assistant teacher; class no. 3, H. L. Swicegood, teacher; Miss Eula Fritz, assistant teacher; class no. 4, Miss Leona Helmstetler, teacher; Miss Beautus Waitman, assistant teacher.

We were glad indeed to have such a large number at Sunday school on the first Suuday in the new year.

Brother Ridge preached at 11 o'clock a sermon enjoyed by all.

Our C. E. Society is doing good work under the leadership of Brother L. H. Waitman, its president.

H. V. SWICEGOOD, Reporter.

Lincolntton.—On Christmas evening an excellent program was rendered by the children and the young ladies of the church. Many thanks to Mrs. E. E. Eudy and Brother R. S. Ward and Mrs. Maggie Hoke for training those who were in the exercise.

All phases of the Sunday school are moving out of the old ruts. Collection better, attendance better, Scripture reading better. Our standard for this year is two hundred average attendance.

Saturday evening there was a steward meeting and many good reports were made. The treasurer said that the collections for this year was up to this date better than they had ever been. Next meeting will be at Brother E. E. Eudy's February 5, 1927.

It is fine for intelligent men and women at the close of service to step around and say, "That was a fine sermon," then for the treasurer of the church to come around on Monday and hand to the pastor his salary in full, up to the present date.

If there is anything that gets my goat and pulls the wool off my sheep's back is for the steward to come around with a few nickles and pennies and say, "Here is enough to buy your gas." Where do the wife and kids come in? W. L. CARSON, Pastor.

Henderson.—We are still at work and progressing in our different organizations. However, due to the cold weather and some sickness our Sunday school attendance has not been so good. The morning church services are always well attended and we enjoyed some special music by the choir Christmas Sunday. Under the direction of Miss Searsie we are hoping for a continued progress in all our church music, especially the Junior Choir.

The pageant, "Gifts to the King," was presented on last Sunday evening, December 26.

Amidst an embankment of small evergreens, in the glow of soft candle light, the beautiful story of the birth of Christ was most impressively read and presented. A well filled house enjoyed the service and a collection of gifts was given to the amount of thirty-six dollars.

The Philathea Class held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Clyde L. Finch, Thursday night, December 30th, with Messrs. R. D. Starkey, T. B. Beckham, C. M. Hight, and Misses Lettie Finch, and Lucy Taylor associate hostesses. A very interesting meeting was had and the election of officers for the coming year was held. At the close of the business, a social hour was enjoyed, and each guest was asked to write a New Year's resolution. These were then collected and read aloud, and the one writing the best resolution received the prize.

Miss Mary Young, Dean of Women at High Point College, and guest of the evening, was voted writer of the best resolution and was presented with a pair of hand-painted shoe trees. After which the hostesses served refreshments.

With all good wishes to the Herald and our friends for a Happy New Year.

MRS. CLYDE FINCH, Reporter.

Winston-Salem.—Our first Christmas in "Dixie" has left with us delightful memories. Our Sunday school held a White Gift Service on the Wednesday before Christmas. The church was beautifully decorated and the programme was well rendered by the smaller children of the school assisted by the church choir. A number of bundles of good things to eat were sent to the Children's Home at High Point and the offering in cash was nearly forty dollars.

The church gave the pastor and family an immense pounding that stocked the pantry with enough food to last for a long time. Many beautiful and useful gifts were sent to the pastor and family, ranging from gold to goodies.

Splendid congregations and a fine spirit marked the entire Christmas holidays. The first Sunday of this year I had the pleasure of presenting to the church a canceled mortgage which wiped out all of the indebtedness on the property here. We were all very happy because of it.

A fine spirit of cooperation is evident in all departments of the church and both pastor and people are planning for a great year of active service.

C. MORGAN COMPHER.

Henderson.—Our good reporter has been so faithful that it hasn't seemed necessary for me to add anything to her reports. I would like to say, however, that we have been most cordially received for another year by the Henderson church. The conference year started off splendidly with increased attendance at Sunday school and at preaching services. The Thanksgiving service on Thanksgiving day was well attended and the offering amounted to $144.00, the largest ever.

The pageant, "Gifts for the King," under the direction of Mrs. C. L. Finch, Mrs. L. R. Gooch and Mrs. S. R. Watson, was given Sunday evening, the 26th. The church was packed to capacity, the program was splendid and the offering was liberal.

Although the people have been busy about the work of the church, they have not failed to remember in a very substantial way the pastor and family. On Wednesday evening before Christmas, while we were at church assisting in the rehearsal of the pageant, a messenger informed us that we were wanted at home. We left immediately and upon arriving at the parsonage found Brother and Sister S. R. Harris. After conversing with them for a few minutes we found that they were but forerunners of a large number of members who soon filled the front room of the parsonage with their "presence" and "presents." Time and space forbid our naming the gifts or the givers, but we will say that we are well supplied with good things to eat. Two cash donations were received in addition to all the other good things. Thank you, good people, and God bless you all.

All indications point to a successful year for Henderson. We are undertaking great things for our Master and are expecting great things from Him. R. A. HUNTER.

Fairview and Glen Raven.—The work has started off nicely. Our Christmas service was given at Glen Raven Christmas eve night. It was very good. I want to thank Mrs. Bessie Hornaday, and Miss Florence Garrison, for getting up the program. Sorry we could not attend the one at Fairview, as it was given the same night. We have found a good and faithful people at Fairview. These people remembered their pastor and family with a nice treat. The pastor and family had a nice Christmas; the time was spent in homes of our members and some that were not members of our church. We were remembered by friends and relatives with Christmas cards, which we were very glad to receive. We received several nice presents from members and friends. Will not try to mention all, but will say the Baraca class of Glen Raven gave their pastor a nice Elgin watch, which I am very proud of. Hope to repay these good men in some way.

On Christmas eve Mr. and Mrs. Y. F. Tickle and Mr. William Mitchel gave us liberal supplies for the pantry. The Ladies' Aid gave Mrs. Williams a nice dress before conference. We say thank you all and pray God's richest blessings on each one.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

Gibsonville.—The pastor and family are comfortably situated in an attractive five-room bungalow purchased by the church for a parsonage. The parsonage is almost completely furnished, including bed covering and bed linen.

The people seem to have "a mind to work." We have, no credit to me, a lively Sunday school, Ladies' Aid Society, W. H. M. S., Y. P. S. C. E., Intermediate C. E., (the Junior C. E. gradually disappeared and then reappeared in the Intermediate), and a Workers Council. The Christian Endeavorers will make a canvass for subscriptions to the Herald. The Board of Stewards have made the every-member canvass and use envelopes for weekly offerings.

A very pleasing event was a visit Sunday night before Christmas by the Woman's Missionary Society and other friends from Mebane. By our invitation they gave as the program for our W. H. M. S. Thank-offering service the pageant they had used for their own Thank-offering program—only they gave it better here, I think. We thank them most sincerely, and indulge the hope that there may be further inter-visitation as a stimulus to the work.

Our congregation joined in a union Thanksgiving service at the Lutheran church. We also participated in a union Christmas prayer and preaching service at the Baptist church Christmas morning at 6:30.

Our workers gave on Thursday night, the 23rd of December, a pageant, "The Bethlehem Inn," taking an offering for the G. C. B. The pageant was so impressive that by request they repeated it on Sunday night, January 2, before a capacity audience. Every available space was occupied, including standing room. It has never been my privilege to witness a clearer, more forceful, more impressive presentation of the birth of Christ and its setting in history.

On Thursday evening at the close of the exercise a package, rather a barrel full of packages, was presented to the pastor and his family, with the instruction to take the barrel, too, and keep it. However, it was not explained whether it was intended that the pastor should use the barrel to preserve the old sermons for future use or to keep them in it continuously and permanently. At any rate they have our heartfelt gratitude for these gifts for the pantry and the dining table, as also for numerous other remembrances and gifts during the Santa Claus season. T. M. JOHNSON.

Chatham Circuit.—The first quarterly conference of the Chatham circuit was held at Piney Grove, Saturday, December 18. All the churches were well represented and much interest was manifested in the plans for the work of the coming year.

On Sunday, the 19th, I preached, at 11 a.m., to a large and attentive audience at the Hickory Grove church. Upon reaching my car at the close of the service, I was agreeably surprised to find it loaded down with a large pounding. For a while it seemed that it was going to be a hard job to move the car without having it pushed off as there was no room for a driver; but of course a way was arranged whereby we got it all home. This evidence of the thoughtfulness of these good people is greatly appreciated.

At the Christmas tree at Piney Grove, the pastor was remembered with a number of nice presents, including a sum of money. Words could not express our appreciation of these tokens of esteem.

I hope to more nearly deserve the splendid support given by the good people of the charge, by giving better and more efficient service in the future than I have been able to give in the past.

The work as a whole is going well. May God's blessings continually be upon these people. C. G. ISLEY.

First Church, Spencer.—I have found the Spencer members, although few in number, a very enthusiastic and sincere band of co-workers. We are surrounded by a number of prosperous churches of various denominations and we are the only Methodist Protestant church in Rowan County, but in spite of all our disadvantages we are working with a hope and determination that some day, by the help of the Heavenly Father, we shall have a church that will be a power for God in the salvation of souls and will stand on a level with the other churches of Spencer.

Our first quarterly conference met on December 22, and adopted the Aims for 1926-1927, that were presented by the pastor, Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D., and adopted by the first quarterly conference, Gibsonville charge. On Sunday, January 2, we received six members—Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Thompson and children, Margarette and William, all of whom were received by certificate from First Methodist Protestant church, Burlington, N. C., where they had formerly made their home, and their other two children, Ruth and Sarah Forest, joined on confession of faith. We were glad indeed to have Brother Thompson and his family unite with our church. We have paid our annual conference budget in full and are looking forward to the near future to make another payment on our church lot.

T. GLENN MADISON, Pastor.

Mebane.—I took up my duties as pastor of this charge the first Sunday after conference. Since then I have met all of the appointments. I do not recall that I have ever received a more cordial welcome than the good people of this charge gave me. The parsonage has been treated to two coats of paint and improved in other ways.

We were delayed in our moving and did not get into the parsonage till December 14th. This delay was due in part to the fact that the improvements were being made on the parsonage.

Since getting moved we have received many tokens of kindness. When we arrived at the parsonage several of the good women brought in a supply of good things to eat. No one knows better how to appreciate an act like this than a preacher who is moving into a new charge. May the Lord abundantly reward every one who has been so thoughtful and kind.

The work has started off nicely and we are looking for a good year. EDW. SUITS.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We had our Christmas tree December 28th. The congregation was very large considering the heavy rainfall. We had a splendid program and the children did their parts well. Much credit is due to Mrs. Van Gardener and Miss Lucy Elenor Williams for training the children and preparing the program. Our pastor gave us a short talk on "Christmas" that was enjoyed by all. After the program all the members of the Sunday school were given a treat.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely but there is still much room for improvement, especially in the attendance.

Our pastor has filled every appointment with us since conference. He always comes, rain or sunshine, and brings us a message that is worth listening to. If the members of our church would be as faithful to come to church as our pastor they would always be there at every service.

We have received two members in our church recently. They are Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Gallaway. We welcome them in our church and Sunday school. They have already proven themselves to be a great help to our church and Sunday school.

The Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary societies will meet with Mrs. J. J. Williams on January 11th. All members are urged to be present.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers for a happy and prosperous new year.

REPORTER.

High Point.—Rev. P. E. Lindley delivered a beautiful New Year's message on Sunday morning on Opportunity and the Larger Life. He said that those who are surrounded by many opportunities are often out-distanced by those who through sheer pluck make their own chances. He told his hearers to set themselves a goal for the new year of 1927, and resolve to read at least six worth-while books. People usually find time to do those things that they really enjoy, and every one of us can add to our culture by reading good books in spare moments. In this day and time every young man and woman who wishes can obtain a good education. The New Year lies before us, full of opportunities for more friendliness and sympathy for our fellows, more service to the needy and distressed, and more love to the Master. May we, the members of this church, reach out and grasp these golden opportunities while they are ours.

At the morning service last Sunday the congregation was delighted with a lovely vocal duet, "O Love that will not let me go," by Mrs. J. H. Allred and Clarence Schultheiss, and the choir rendered a beautiful Anthem, "God so loved the World."

The congregation was much pleased Sunday morning to hear Mr. Lindley announce that Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Allred have joined our membership by transfer. Mr. Allred is Professor of Romance Languages in High Point College, and Mrs. Allred, who before her marriage was Miss Myrtle Perry of Thomasville, has a very beautiful voice. We feel that these talented young people will be valuable acquisitions to our ranks, and we tender to them a hearty welcome.

On Monday afternoon the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies held an interesting meeting in the beautiful new home of Mrs. E. L. Douglas on Montlieu Ave. There was an attendance of 30 members, and the new president, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, presided in the Foreign Society. A contribution to the Pine Ridge work was made, and it was voted to donate the sum of $50 to a scholarship for the children of Mr. Obee, one of our missionaries. Miss Millie Bowman was made a Perpetual Member in the Foreign Society. Reference was made to the passing of two of our most loyal and beloved missionary workers, Mrs. Jane A. Gordon of Pittsburgh, who has been Corresponding Secretary of Woman's Home Missionary Society for many years, and Dr. Fred Klein, Secretary of Foreign Missions for several years. We deeply regret the loss of these faithful and beloved leaders.

The Christian Endeavor Society held a splendid meeting Monday evening, and the topic discussed was, "Being True to the Covenant with Christ."

Tuesday evening the Sunday School Worker's Council will meet at the church.

High Point College resumed its class work Monday morning after the Christmas recess of two weeks, and practically all members of the Faculty and student body were in their places.

Mr. D. A. Neese has returned from a business trip to Memphis and other points in Tennessee, and reports that the Cumberland, Tennessee, and Mississippi River districts were flooded.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard returned Friday night from a visit to the former's parents in Baltimore, and while there attended the funeral services for Dr. Klein.

Miss Daisy Lee York, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York, will return today to N. C. C. W. at Greensboro to resume her studies.

Mrs. Richard Reitzel spent Christmas in Durham with relatives.

Best wishes for the New Year to the Editor and Herald family.

REPORTER.

Asheboro.—The annual Watch-Night service was held by the C. E. Society Friday night from 9:30 until the ushering in of the New Year. The prayer meeting was conducted by Miss Cleta Rich. She led a very effective meeting, dividing the members into two groups, one telling of mistakes and lessons of the past year, and the other suggesting remedies for the mistakes of the past and hopes for the future.

Sunday morning's service was well attended. A wonderful sermon on "The Swiftness of Time" was considered by many as one of the most able sermons preached by the pastor as yet.

REPORTER.

Asheboro.—The Christmas season has been a pleasant one for the pastor and his wife and our church as a whole. Some of our people have had sickness and sadness and some of them have lost loved ones, but the great majority of our people have found the season to be one of gladness. Many cards and expressions of appreciation came to the parsonage and some substantial gifts were received which were appreciated greatly. As it is not my custom to enumerate articles nor give names of the donors I will say that we know who brought the articles and the Lord knows who brought them and the people who brought them know, so I guess that is sufficient.

On the afternoon of the day before Christmas quite a number of the parents came with the smaller children to the social room of the church where a short programme was rendered and where the little folks were given a treat. Then on Sunday evening after Christmas the pageant, Gifts to the King, was rendered with a reasonably good offering for the General Conference Budget.

Yesterday we had 196 in Sunday school and fairly good congregations for both morning and evening. We have been pleased to have a good deal of special music. A week ago we had beautiful solos by Mrs. Darby of Southern Pines and Mr. Millikan of Archdale. Mr. Millikan is a brother of Mrs. Earl F. Bulla of our church.

But along with all our joys comes some sadness. Yesterday afternoon the funeral of Mr. Lacy William Black was held in our church. In his early days Mr. Black lived at Ramseur but later moved to Asheboro and in 1917 was united in marriage to Miss Mabel Spoon of our church. For some time they have been living in High Point where they had set up a home and where there was every prospect of many years of happiness. But about two months ago he was stricken with disease and lingered until last Saturday morning when he was called into the great beyond. He is survived by his wife who is still a member of our church, two precious little boys, his mother, two sisters and one brother. The funeral was conducted by the writer yesterday at two o'clock, assisted by Rev. B. C. Reavis of the M. E. church. The Masonic order of High Point had charge at the grave. Mr. Black was a member of the Baptist Church at Ramseur but attended the First Methodist Protestant church at High Point with his wife. Several of the High Point people were down for the funeral, among them being Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Neese and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hinkle.

State Street Church.—Services are being held in the new building with a pleasing increase in attendance. Everything is so convenient and seems so "roomy" since being rather crowded before.

The C. E. Society gave a social Friday night in the basement of the building. There were various games and contests and a general good time for everyone. Sandwiches and coffee were served and the very enjoyable affair closed with a song and chain of prayer just as the old year was going out.

Next Sunday is the day for our formal opening. We are looking forward with much pleasure. Dr. Dixon and some other prominent speakers and singers are to be with us, and also many friends and visitors from neighboring churches and communities.

The necessary arrangements and changes have been completed at the parsonage and our pastor and his family now have a beautiful and convenient home for the first time since they have been with us. They made out with the cramped quarters and general inconvenience of living upstairs uncomplainingly but are very glad that it is about over.

We hope all who read this account of our opening will consider it a personal invitation to attend.

Roberta.—Another year with joys and its sorrows, its crowns and its crosses, its gains and its losses, its successes and its failures, is on the pages of eternity. And we are now a three-days journey in the new year. Many of us look back with a sad heart, that we have done so little, when there is so much that will never be done. If we are to make the best of the year 1927, we must set our feet securely on the "Rock of ages" to begin with. We know not what the present year holds in store for us, "For ye have not gone this way, heretofore." But this one thing we do know, He will lead us like a shepherd, "And will never leave us nor forsake us," so that we can boldly say "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," and "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." "He knoweth the way that I take" and "We know that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord."

If we are to make the three hundred and sixty-five steps up to the temple of glory and virtue, we shall have to climb their rugged heights one step at the time; it is not reached by leaps and bounds, and the elevators are not running this way. We are sure that "He climbs best who climbs most on his knees." Lord, teach us to pray. The pages of the three hundred and sixty-five-page volume given us for 1926 is full and "What I have written, I have written."

"Things that time cannot erase, I must meet them face to face
When I stand before the judgment bar."

O the records that have been made by many poor souls, I fear, in the past few days! Many, no doubt, would gladly go to the stake and be burned to death by degrees, if such a death would blot out the record and move away the guilt. Oh that they would fly to the Savior!

"Let me turn and seek the Lord, let me trust
His holy word,
Let us bow and call upon him while He's near,
Then when I my records face, He will answer in my place,
When I stand before the judgment bar."

Death has been in our ranks again, and claimed for its victim a sturdy citizen and a good husband and father, Mr. James W. Stowe. He leaves a wife, three daughters, and one son with a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. His brother preceded him in death just twenty-eight hours. Brother Stowe was 76 years, one month and nine days of age. His body was laid to rest in Roberta cemetery, December 23, 1926.

Our Sunday school and church service are well attended, and we are delighted with the prospects of the year in kingdom service. We are proud and thankful for the efficient leadership and untiring efforts of our Sunday school superintendent, Miss Ethel Blackwelder.

It is a joy to the pastor of Roberta church to know for sure that ninety-five people have thought of his interest, and gave him a fine send-off for the new year by dressing him up from the sole of foot to the top of his head with a complete outfit. Fine suit, hat, shoes, socks, shirt, collar, tie etc. What be your names? It seems I have seen you all somewhere. Preachers, don't you weary.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—The Sunday school in our church is steadily climbing. We have 94 on roll; 76 present last Sunday; seven new members. Some changes have been made in the officers of the school, and they are as follows: superintendent, A. H. Reid; assistant, W. W. Russell; secretary-treasurer, Jesse Taylor; organist, Miss Lovie Frank; Senior class, J. P. Elliott; Intermediate, Miss Nora Carroll; Junior, Miss Lovie Frank; Primary Department, Miss Lola Morris. We are putting on a contest for new members for the next quarter. Watch our next report. Mr. Reid is a wonderful church worker; splendid work is being done; fine interest is shown in all the classes. We feel very fortunate in getting our pastor back, Rev. C. E. Ridge. He gave us a good sermon last Sunday. He was also with us the fourth Sunday, and held communion service.

The Christian Endeavor meetings on Sunday evenings, are being well attended by a large number of young people. We have an average attendance of 50. We were very glad to have with us last Sunday night the older people, who gave us some splendid talks, and encouragement. We were also glad to have visit us "The Christian Endeavor Society" from Pleasant Grove Church. Everybody come again. We are always glad to have you.

Our church purchased a piano in December of which we are very proud. We now have a Junior choir.

Thursday evening, 7:30, 23rd, we had a Christmas tree, and program rendered by the Sunday school. A treat was given to all members of the Sunday school.

Mr. Baxter Riley of New Mexico is visiting his mother. We were very glad to have Mr. Riley with us the fourth Sunday, also Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ridge of High Point.

Stewards meeting Monday evening 7:30. Books revised and W. A. Frank elected as chairman.

Haw River Charge.—Another Christmas season has just passed us, leaving with us the pleasant memories of many kindnesses shown us. The first came to us in the form of a pounding, given by Brown Summit. Friendship also contributing, and then came the Christmas gifts from the different churches. A beautiful brief case from Mrs. R. P. Butler and her Sunday school class, worth $10. Four new shirts of much finer quality than this insignificant person is accustomed to wearing. Also linens and wares, meat and sweets galore have been given to us. All told, we feel that the Christmas has brought us the most valuable gifts we have received since we've been in the work. We received $5. each from Misses Lola and Effie McCollum, from Reidsville church. We will not mention names and articles in full lest we appear "cruel to animals."

For all these we are profoundly grateful.

The trustees are authorized to sell the old church at Midway, preparatory to building a new.

When this is done Haw River Circuit will have a good church.

W. D. REED.

Siler City.—Sunday was a beautiful day for the beginning of the New Year. A good number attended the morning and evening services. Good thoughts of the new year were given us by our pastor at both services.

The first quarterly conference of the Liberty and Siler City churches met at Siler City Sunday afternoon, January 2nd. Mrs. Ed. Woody was elected secretary. After the meeting had been opened with a short devotional service a written report was submitted by our pastor which covered two months of much activity. He also submitted goals for the new year which were immediately adopted. A recommendation that a committee on pulpit supply be selected from each church to secure supply while our pastor is in Maryland was carried. Other steps were taken in the meeting that we hope to report results from later. Each organization was present with a written report. These reports showed much work accomplished during the past two months. Especially is the financial status of both churches in good condition, according to the treasurer's report.

A goodly number attended this meeting and a fine spirit of optimism and cooperation prevailed. We missed our dear co-worker, Dr. F. A. Shepard, who passed to his Heavenly Home a few weeks ago. The conference was adjourned in honor of him who had been a trustee and faithful Christian and Methodist Protestant.

Friday evening the Christian Endeavor Society met at the home of Miss Sallie Smith for a social and business meeting.

The business meeting consisted of the election of new officers and the work of each officer mapped out for the new year, with the assistance of our pastor. The following officers were elected: president, Mr. D. L. Cooper; vice-president, Miss Oma Andrew; secretary-treasurer, Miss Clatie Andrew; assistance secretary-treasurer, Cletus Whitehead; corresponding secretary and press reporter, Lebus Stone; pianist, Miss Minnie Cooper; assistant pianist, Lebus Stone; chairman of music committee, Miss Minnie Cooper; chairman of look-out committee, Miss Oma Andrew; chairman of good literature committee, Mr. Marvin Phillips; chairman of missionary committee, Miss Marion Cooper; chairman of flower committee, Miss Margaret Siler; chairman of prayer meeting committee, Miss Sallie Smith; chairman of social committee, Mrs. D. L. Cooper.

The remainder of the evening was spent as a social hour. Various games were played. Fruits, candies, sandwiches and hot coffee were served during the evening.

As the clock was almost ready to strike twelve the group of Endeavorers went to ring out the old year and ring in the new year, with its many blessings and opportunities which it holds for us.

The Senior Endeavorers went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben White Sunday evening to hold the regular Sunday evening prayer service.

A program was planned by Miss Clatie Andrew, pertaining to the new year. The program seemed to bring joy into the hearts of these two old people.

The Endeavorers enjoyed these welcome moments spent in their home.

Miss Margaret Siler, a student at Boone training school, spent the Christmas holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wade Siler.

The Senior Endeavorers enjoyed going to the homes of shut-ins on Christmas morning, singing Christmas carols.

Charlotte, First Church.—We have all enjoyed Christmas and the holidays and starting into the new year with much work to be done.

A contest in the Sunday school has increased the interest very much. A Christmas tree and treat was given for the children the night of 23rd. Santa Claus was present to amuse the children.

The Christmas program was given by the children Sunday morning, the 26th. Mrs. J. E. Hankins had charge and is due much credit for her splendid work.

On Sunday evening a cantata, "Chimes of the Holy Night," was given by the choir under the direction of Mrs. W. A. Neal. This was very good.

Robert Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Nichols, had the misfortune of getting a limb broken last week. We sympathize with Robert and will miss him in Sunday school.

Since the workers council of the Sunday school changed their meetings to the second Tuesday evening of the month the attendance has been almost perfect. Supper is prepared and served by a committee at a small cost and a special speaker increases interest.

Mr. J. C. Scruggs presented his two little children last Sunday morning for baptism. Mr. Surratt preached a splendid sermon from

HOW TO LIVE LONG

The Rev. Dr. Robert A. Hume has recently returned to America from India. He is 79 years old and has spent almost 52 years as a missionary under the American Board. Missionaries usually retire at the age of 70, but Dr. Hume has continued to 79 and expects to continue in some sort of Christian service to the end of his life.

This veteran missionary was asked to tell in a few words the things that make for good health, long life, and efficiency. He summed up the situation in the following words:

"From my experience, four things are likely to promote good health and longevity—1. Get good heredity—2. Marry a good wife—3. Work steadily, but never worry—4. Observe regular physical habits."

"Before the chicken burst his shell,
He could not see things very well.

"It seemed to him like one white wall,
He could not look outside at all.

"But when once free, he viewed on high
The beauty of the bright blue sky.

"'Some day, when I am grown,' said he,
'I'll break that blue shell that I see.'"

—Western North Carolina is one of the best localities in the United States for the production of some of the small fruits, such as grapes, strawberries, raspberries, sour cherries and damson plums. Mr. George E. Murrell, Horticulturist of the Southern Railway System, recently made a survey of conditions in this territory, with special reference to the production of grapes. He reports that the climate, soil and topography of the country could hardly be improved upon for the growing of Concord, Niagara, Catawba and similar varieties. He found that the existing vineyards produce large quantities of grapes of superior saccharine content and flavor and that local markets yielded substantial profits.

A Hope That Persists Through the Centuries

The Old and New Testaments have inspired many hopes in the hearts of men. Some of the pictures and promises of these sacred books have been wrested from their true meaning and made the basis of false hopes. Some think that the Jews have misinterpreted the prophecies in expecting another return to the Promised Land and their reinstatement there as a nation. Some think that the premillennialists of our time are under a delusion resulting from a misinterpretation of certain scriptures. The Adventists and the Russellites have been disappointed in special hopes, based on prophecies not clearly understood. The Shakers are about to lose out and become extinct because they misunderstood the Scriptures. The long-time delusions of great bodies of men are pathetic. That these delusions are based on the utterances of true prophets is a thing not to be expected. Yet it is not the fault of the true prophets that men are deceived by their utterances. Their purpose was to produce true and not false conceptions. Men have wilfully perverted the scriptures and tried to make them sanction courses to which their own evil hearts inclined them. Some of the deluded have wilfully followed false prophets without investigation to ascertain that they were false prophets. Men themselves and not Providence are responsible for their delusions. Men have assumed that they might move Providence to come to their help and bring fruition to their hopes because, forsooth, they profess a religious motive in their movements. But God quietly allows men to follow for years and even centuries the disappointing ways they have dishonestly chosen. The Scriptures of God cannot be made to support false hopes conceived in selfishness. Great is the disappointment of these hopes when it comes, but it is sure to come sooner or later.

But there is one great promise of the Scriptures that has aroused great hope in the hearts of men of every generation which promise has verified itself in the experience of all who have rested upon it. We refer to the promise of Jesus in the words: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." With this great promise Matthew concludes his Gospel. This last word of Jesus is still mighty in the consciousnes of His servants. The task assigned them is often difficult, requiring more than human wisdom and power, and there is shrinking and maybe a disposition to turn back. But this reassuring promise is brought to mind by the Holy Spirit, and at once new courage is begotten in the heart of the worker for the Kingdom, and he goes forward trusting in the strength that never fails. O, this is a great asset, this promise of our Lord. By it we can conquer where otherwise defeat would be certain.

Pastor, missionary, Sunday school teacher, personal worker for Christ, does the way look dark, do the obstacles intimidate, does the opposition terrify? Remember the promise of that Mighty One who has all power in heaven and earth—His promise to be with you.

Fame is an undertaker that pays but little attention to the living, but bedizens the dead, furnishes out their funerals and follows them to the grave.—Colton.

Shakers Approaching Extinction

The Shakers trace their origin to two Frenchmen who about 1687 received or thought they did a revelation of new doctrine. These men went to England in 1706 and about 40 years later organized a new sect which they called "The United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearing." They were nicknamed Shakers and the name stuck to them. The sect did not gather much following in England, but a prophetess arose among them, "Mother Anne Lee," who was a preacher of power and influence. She preached the immediate coming of Christ's kingdom on the earth. In 1774 she emigrated to America with seven followers and they settled in Albany county, New York. In 1785 the first house of worship was built by them at Mount Lebanon. For half a century they grew and prospered. Other communities of them were planted in several different states. At one time they numbered as many as six thousand members in all their communities. One of their tenets was that they should not marry, basing this on Christ's statement that in heaven they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of heaven. They therefore depended on the world for recruits. They received orphans. Some people, tired of the world, came to them for asylum. But recently the recruits have not come, and the remaining members are advanced in years. They have all things in common, after the manner of the early Christians in Jerusalem. When the society becomes extinct, which it seems likely to do before many years pass, their property in New York will pass to the State. They still have 2,500 acres of fine land with massive buildings of brick and stone. What good will this strange sect have accomplished? It is hard to estimate fully its worth and its injury to the cause of truth and righteousness. It may serve as a warning to others about to become followers of the same fallacies.

A Changed Conception of Christian Duty

In the early Christian centuries there were those who believed that it is the chief duty of the Christian to prepare himself for Heaven, and who also believed that this could best be done, if, indeed, it could be done in any other way, by withdrawing from society and living in solitude. As time passed, people saw that solitude for all was impracticable, but they still clung to the belief that the chief duty is to prepare for the future life. They sought how this might best be done without withdrawing into soliude. Later people came to see that society, instead of being a hindrance to preparation for Heaven, may be made a help in that preparation. In our day the emphasis has been shifted again, and now people believe that the chief effort of the Christian life is to be put forth in the enterprise of transforming and Christianizing this world, planting or rather building the Kingdom of God upon the earth. By thus doing we best prepare ourselves for Heaven. Jesus said, He that would save his life shall lose it. He that thinks so much of his own precious soul that he loses sight of every other man's soul is most surely losing his own soul.

Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.—Bible.

FAITH AND WORKS

JESSIE W. GIBBS

On every hand one hears, nowadays, that it doesn't make any difference what you believe, if you only do what is right. Persons holding contradictory views, we are told, may be equally sincere and righteous. Even in the Church it is said that theology and creeds are to be cast into the limbo of outworn and useless things. All that is necessary is to follow the simple way of Jesus and do His works. Let us consider this proposition that is doesn't make any difference what you believe, if you only do what is right.

Suppose I believe that Chicago lies out in the Rocky Mountains. I may be earnest and sincere in this belief; I may go out to the Rocky Mountains and spend my life searching among them for Chicago—but will I find it? No, because it is not there. My belief was false. What I needed was to learn the truth about where Chicago is, before I attempted to go there.

Here is a farmer who says he does not believe in new-fangled methods of agriculture, but only in hard work. His neighbor tells him that he ought to select his seed, rotate his crops, etc., but he turns a deaf ear to such counsels and bends his back to his drudgery. He wears himself out and impoverishes his land and reaps an inferior harvest. His neighbor, acting on scientific principles, does not work so hard, and yet preserves the fertility of his land and reaps a superior harvest. The first man fails because he is ignorant of the underlying principles of his business; the second man succeeds because he knows and works in accordance with those principles.

We recognize that there is such a thing as truth, in the natural realm. We recognize that there is such a thing as truth, and such a thing as falsehood, in our thinking about the natural realm. Either the world is round, or it is flat. It can't be both. We know that one of these propositions is true, and the other false. We believe that Chicago is on Lake Michigan, and not in the Rocky Mountains. And we know that it is necessary for us to understand the truth of the natural realm before we can act rightly in this realm. If our theory is false, our action cannot be right. We are careful to study and to teach our children the truth of the natural realm, and are quick to resent and refute any erroneous teaching in regard to it. We are convinced from all the evidence before us that the world is round, and if the teacher undertook to teach your child that the world is flat, you would have her discharged. We want our children to know the truth about the natural realm, because we believe it is essential to their success in this world that they should know this truth.

Now if there is a spiritual realm, something is true in this realm. There are facts here, too, which must be accepted, and underlying principles which must be understood and obeyed, if we are to do righteous works. To say that it doesn't make any difference what we believe in regard to spiritual things is to say that there is no such thing as spiritual truth. And if there is no such thing as spiritual truth, there is no such thing as a spiritual realm. This is worse than agnosticism; it is atheism.

If there is a God who created us and the universe, we are under infinite obligation to Him and cannot be righteous while ignoring Him. If there is a God, something is true about His character and purpose, His dealings with us, and our relation and obligations to Him, and it is necessary for us to understand all this truth, if we are to act in accordance with His law. Back of every act, of whatever nature, lies a theory, and the rightness or wrongness of the act is determined by the truth or falsity of the theory. If I believe that a loving Heavenly Father created man in His own image, I will be led to look to Him and to His works of love for the preservation of my life. If I believe that God loves the righteous and hates sinners, I will think it my duty to punish sinners. If I believe that God loves sinners and suffers to redeem them from the just consequences of their acts, I will suffer with Him in His divine redemptive work. If I believe that I am justified in my own righteousness, I will give no heed to an offer of a better salvation, and I will have no pity on the frailties of my fellow-men. If I believe that I myself am a sinner, condemned by the absolutely righteous law of God, and dependent on the salvation He has wrought out for me in Christ, I will seek this salvation for myself, and will recognize my obligation to forgive and save those who injure me. If I believe that there is no law for me above my own will, I will do as I please. If I believe that I am subject to the law of God, and must give an account to Him, I will have respect to His law. If I believe that death ends all for me, it will not seem very important how I behave myself for the few brief years that I live on the earth. If I believe that there is hope of a life beyond the grave, I will seek to conduct myself so as to be worthy of that life. If a nation believes that she is righteous and other nations evil, that God loves her and hates other nations, she will be led to destroy other nations. If a nation arose to believe, with Christ, that God created and loves all peoples, she would lose her life, with Him, to plant His universal saving Kingdom in the earth.

It is apparent that some of these contradictory propositions must be true, and some of them must be false. And it is necessary for us to know which are true and which false, before we can work right works. Opposite beliefs lead to opposite lines of action. Every theory works out its inevitable conclusions in the lives of those who believe it and in the history of the institutions that are founded upon it. "By their fruits ye shall know them." "Wisdom is justified by her works." A true philosophy cannot bring forth evil works, nor a false philosophy good works. Every theory is tested in experience and proven or disproven by its fruits. How many philosophies have risen and flourished and passed away, because they failed to perfect individual character or social organization. He who believes in the spiritual realm, who believes that he has the truth of this realm, must contend earnestly for his faith, knowing that works cannot be right unless they are founded on a belief in the truth, and that truth alone can save us.

Now a creed is simply a statement of what is believed to be true in the spiritual realm. Faith must find expression in a creed. A creed is as essential to practical religion as a statement of the laws of nature is to practical science. A man has no more guidance for constructing a right life without a creed than an architect would have for constructing a stable building without a statement of the laws of mechanics or mathematics. Imagine a physician who should say to a patient, "There may be laws of nature governing the human body, but I have never studied them and am not able to say what they are; I am a practical physican; I will experiment with your case and see what I can do for you." Would the patient put his case into the hands of such a physician? Not if he were sane. He would go to one who had made a patient study and acquired a thorough grasp of the laws governing the human body, so far as they have been discovered by science. Even so necessary is it for us to have a clear grasp of the truth of the spiritual realm, if we are to work its works; but this is immeasurably more important, for the truth of this realm is ultimate, omnipotent truth, and its works the only finally saving works. And if we have a clear grasp of this truth, we will be able to state what it is. If our idea of spiritual truth is so vague that we cannot make a clear statement of it, we will not be able to act intelligently upon it.

In one word, whether in the natural realm or the spiritual realm, we must be sure we are right in theory before going ahead with action. Orthodoxy, right thinking, is the primary necessity.

Again, in the natural realm, we see that a clear and positive conviction that something is true is the motive power which impels men to decisive and vigorous action. If a business man has a proposition presented to him in such a way as to convince him that it will be a profitable undertaking for him, he will take it up and throw all his energies into pushing the enterprise. If a prospector is convinced that he has hit upon the proper location for an oil well or a gold mine, he will work night and day to open up that hidden treasure and to persuade others to back him in the undertaking. But if the busines man is not persuaded of the profitableness of the proposition presented to him, he will not take it up; and if the prospector has only a vague notion that there may be oil or gold somewhere in the vicinity he is investigating, he will not put forth a supreme effort to obtain it, and will not be able to persuade his friends to take stock in his enterprise.

The achievements of men in history have been motivated by convictions in their minds. Kings have ruled and made war because they believed it to be their divine right and duty to do so. Scientists and explorers have labored to demonstrate the truth of their theories. Reformers have battled and suffered for causes which they believed to be righteous. Columbus believed the world to be round, and braved the uncharted wilderness of the Atlantic. George Washington believed in democratic principles, and with our Revolutionary forefathers fought for those principles and established this Republic. Napoleon believed in the star of his own individual destiny, and defied man and God in his egotistical career. Christ believed in a God of love, and died on Calvary to demonstrate the power of that love. Multitudes of Christian martyrs, believing in Christ as the Son of God, laid down their lives with Him and raised up the Christian Church to his honor. Missionaries, believing in Christ's universal kingdom, have carried His Gospel to every quarter of the globe.

All our acts, whether in great matters or in small, are motivated by some sort of belief. The manufacturer produces his article because he believes it will be useful and people will buy it. The storekeeper opens his place of business because he believes he can serve the community and earn a living there. The housewife feeds her family because she believes it is necessary for their life and health. The farmer sows his seed because he believes it will germinate and bring forth a harvest. The schoolboy studies his lessons because he believes the knowledge he is acquiring will be of service to him. The minister preaches the Gospel because he believes it is the truth of God and the power of God unto salvation. The Sunday school teacher teaches the Bible because she believes it is the Word of God. The evil man lies or steals or kills because he has a false belief that these acts will be profitable to him in some way. Even acts of passion are motivated by at least a momentary delusion of their justification or profitableness.

The mind is the controlling power. If we sincerely believe a thing to be true, we will act that belief. If we would move men to action, we must convince them of truth. If we would move them to spiritual action, we must convince them of spiritual truth. The more definite and positive the conviction, the greater will be the resultant power of action. Action roots back in conviction, and conviction roots back in a definite and positive statement of truth, that is, a creed.

Everyone has some belief, some philosophy of life and of the universe, on which he acts. He may not be a philosopher himself; he may be merely a drifter with the current of the times in which he lives; but back of that current is the moving power of some philosophy, and those who drift with the current echo the catch-words of that philosophy and work out its conclusions in their lives. This statement that "It doesn't make any difference what you believe, if you only do what is right," is one of the catch-words of our modern philosophy, that man is by nature capable of righteousness. The modern man is thinking to justify himself by his own good works, and does not feel any need of a divine salvation.

But is this philosophy, which is being tested in our times, being justified, proven true, by its works? Are men able to attain the standard of righteousness they set for themselves? Is it not apparent that while we pile up laws, lawlessness increases? We speak of temperance, and practice every form of license. We speak of brotherhood, and crush one another in the economic struggle. We speak of peace, and practice war. Conspicuous among our law-makers and law-enforcers are law-breakers. While we ignore God, every form of authority is weakened. Children run wild; the marriage tie is broken; crime flourishes. Our action gives the lie to our words. More and more our own righteousness is seen to be hypocrisy.

Why are we so unable to realize the righteousnes we profess? It can only be because our belief in righteousness is not sincere. The very standard we set up exhibits this insincerity by its inconsistencies. The law hopes to enforce righteousness by the very power of evil it condemns. We really believe in the supreme power of evil. We are under the deceit of this power. We are moved by many false beliefs—in the profitableness of sensual pleasures, worldly gain, and selfish power. We believe that it is possible to compromise with evil and escape the judgment of God's law. Man is not righteous, because he is the dupe of subtle and powerful deceits. The root of all our trouble is that our mind is involved in error. And our philosophy of the natural righteousness of man is false. And being false, it cannot lead us to right works.

But if we acknowledge the teaching and example of Jesus as our standard the question at once arises why we accord to Him this supreme authority? We are confronted with the theological problem and spiritual fact of His person and power and right to command men. If we study His teachings, we find that He said more about the necessity of repentance and faith toward God, and in Himself, than about our duties toward one another. If we study His life, we find that He lived in vital, conscious communion with God, the loving Heavenly Father, to whom He attributed His works; that He claimed to have been one with the Father before the foundation of the world. If we try to follow His precepts, we find that this is utterly impossible to men, in their own natural strength. If we consider that He did follow them Himself, we are forced to conclude that He was, as He claimed to be, more than a man; we realize that if we are ever to practice His divine righteousness, He must work in us some divine work, to enable us to practice it. He Himself taught this plainly. He taught that men must be brought into organic union with Him through faith, that they must be born again of His Spirit, if they were to work His works; that apart from Him they could do nothing.

Here is the great dynamic of Christianity: a faith that is a vital personal commitment of the soul in trust and surrender to a Divine Person, Who overmasters our natural, selfish, sensual materialistic minds and wills, and liberates in us the Holy Spirit to enable us to work the works of God. The Christian's works are not his own; they are Christ's. Christ said, "The Father in me doeth His works." And the Christian must say, "Christ in me doeth His works." He cannot claim a righteousness of his own; he must give the glory of his righteousness to Christ, to whom it belongs.

But if one is ever to have this divine experience of regeneration in the life and power of the Spirit, through a personal union with Christ, he must first have a right belief about Christ, about Christ's work for the world, and about his own relation to the law of God and to Christ. It is only according to our faith that it is done unto us. We cannot obtain a divine regeneration from a merely human Jesus. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," and can reproduce only after its kind. We will not surrender ourselves to Him so long as we believe that we can justify ourselves in our own righteousness. But if we recognize that we are sinners, condemned under the law of God, and believe that God gave His Son to die in our stead and so to redeem us from the judgment of the law, we will be moved by such great love to cast ourselves on the mercy of God and find the new life that is in Christ and the new power of His Spirit.

Thus we see that a Christian standard of works involves the whole of Christian theology. No where in Scripture is there any schism between faith and right works. Everywhere the two are seen to be inseparable, and faith is seen to be the radical thing, the only source of right works. The faithful man, the man full of faith, is the righteous man, the man obedient to God's law. "Faith without works is dead," but works without faith are also dead. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." The man of faith is "cleansed from dead works to serve the living God." Christ condenses all this in the saying, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent."

We see that spiritual truth confronts us in our own failure, and supremely in the presence and power of Christ in the world. We cannot deny our own sin, nor His righteousness, —our own condemnation, nor His vindication by the government of God. It is perfectly clear that we are lost and undone in the power of an adverse law which is turning us to destruction, and that our only hope of salvation is in Him. Not to believe in Him is to deny manifest truth, to be insincere.

We are living in a superficial age. The characteristic thinking of this age is limited by the natural realm; it does not go to the spiritual root of anything. Men scorn theology because their minds are too shallow to comprehend it. Theology is the deepest truth men can know—the truth about God, about His character and dealings with us and our relation and obligations to Him and the possibilities of our lives when united with Him through faith.

The false philosophy of man's salvation by his own righteousness is being discredited before our eyes. The Church had committed to her the truth of a better salvation, through faith in Christ. If she is largely unable to work His works, today, it is because she does not hold the faith of the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. The integrity of her thinking is destroyed by an admixture of the philosophy of the world. Modernism has engulfed the Church and obscured, in large measure, the Christian faith. Many popular leaders in the Church have become blind guides, promising the works of Christ while denying His power.

Yet there is always a word to be said for the heretic. He usually arises to criticize some limitation in the would-be orthodox. Our modernists are casting a just reproanh on the Church for her failure to practice Christ's social principles. But the remedy for the Church's impotence in these matters is not in denying the divinity of her Lord, through Whose divine power alone His principles can be put into practice, but rather in enlarging her vision of His Power and Kingdom.

Truth is infinite and the human mind is narrow. Men seem to be able to receive truth only a little at a time. He who accepts new truth is prone to reject old truth, so that the heretic is likely to be right in what he affirms and wrong in what he denies. He rejects old truth because of the limitations of those who held it, without being conscious of his own limitations. Yet the time comes when his limitations also appear, and the necessity of the old truth is again recognized. And then the time is ripe for a synthesis of the new truth with the old.

We can reach forth now to such a synthesis. It does not appear that the modernist is able to impose Christ's principles upon an evil world. He cries "Peace!" and there is no peace. It is a time for all of us to humble ourselves, to acknowledge the human limitations we have placed upon the power of Christ, to learn from one another whatever truth there may be in any of us. The fundamentalists must confess that they limited Christ's power to too narrowly individual a scope, and so denied its application to the whole of life. The modernists must confess that while seeking to enlarge the scope of Christian activity they have denied the divine power of Christ, through which alone His works can be done. The fundamentalists must learn that Christ is not only a personal Savior, but the King of a reorganized society, whose law He set down in the sermon on the Mount. The modernists must learn that apart from Him and the atonement of His cross and the regeneration of His Spirit, they can do nothing.

Brethren, all of us must separate ourselves wholly from the vain beliefs of a materialistic world, in its most materialistic age, unto Christ and His spiritual truth and power. If we will so humble ourselves that we can give ourselves unitedly to Him, He will give the Holy Spirit to us, and we shall know His truth and exhibit the unity of the Spirit in our own organization—a power of which the world is incapable—and the world, seeing the greatness of His work in us, shall believe that He came out from God; shall repent of its sensuality and selfishness and bitterness and strife and confusion, and yield itself to the higher power of His Kingdom and be saved from sin and chastisement.

This is the only way we can demonstrate the truth of Christ. Christ's works are not for the world, but for those who believe on Him. As He came out from God to manifest the truth of God in His flesh, so the Church is in the world to manifest that truth in a new spiritual organization of society founded on faith in Him and working by love. Let us quit preaching to society, to the state, to worldly organizations which have not in them the power of life or peace, and let us separate ourselves unto Christ and find the power of His Spirit to demonstrate the life and peace of His Kingdom. When we can bear a living witness to Him, both in word and in deed, through the power of the Spirit, the Spirit will convince the world of its own error and sin and condemnation, and of Christ's truth and righteousness and justification, and men and nations shall be converted unto Him and come into His Kingdom and be saved.

ROBERT E. LEE'S DOMESTIC LIFE

By H. H. Smith

General Lee was unusually happy in his domestic life, and it is indeed an inspiration to read of his tender devotion to his wife and children. One of his biographers wrote: "Should we seek through all the annals of time for an illustration of the best that exists in family life, we need not go further to find the perfection and refinement of elegance and of purity than that stately mansion, the home of Lee, which from the wooded heights of Arlington, looks down upon the city of Washington."

One thing alone interrupted the joys of his home life—absence from home, which the service of his country demanded. "Oh what pleasure I lose in being separated from my children," he exclaims in one letter. "Nothing can compensate me for that; still I must remain here, ready to perform what little service I can, and hope for the best."

It is touching to read that this devoted father was kept from home so long that he did not know his own child when he returned from Mexico—picking up his neighbor's child, he exclaimed, "Here's my little man."

In a letter to Mrs. Lee, written from Mexico, on Christmas Day, 1846, he says: "We have had many happy Christmases together. It is the first time we have been entirely separated at this holy time since our marriage. I hope it does not interfere with your happiness, surrounded as you are by father, mother, children, and dear friends. I therefore trust that you are well and happy, and that this is the last time I shall be absent from you during my life. May God preserve and bless you till then and forever after is my constant prayer."

It is to his credit as a husband and father that a writer has noted "how little of war and how much of Christian feeling and domestic affection his home letters contain."

He wrote such charming letters to his wife and children that we must quote a few extracts from them, for therein is revealed the husband and father that he was. These extracts are taken from that interesting volume, "Recollections and Letters of General Lee," by R. E. Lee, Jr.

In a letter to his wife he writes: "You do not know how much I have missed you and the children, my dear Mary. To be alone in a crowd is very solitary. In the woods, I feel sympathy with the trees and birds, in whose company I take delight, but experience no pleasure in a strange crowd. I hope you are all well and will continue so, and, therefore, must again urge you to be very prudent and careful of those dear children. If I could only get a squeeze at that little fellow, turning up his sweet mouth to 'Keese baba!' You must not let him run wild in my absence, and will have to exercise firm authority over all of them. This will not require severity or even strictness, but constant attention and an unswerving course. Mildness and forbearance will strengthen their affection for you, while it will maintain your control over them."

His concern for the moral and spiritual welfare of his children breathes through all his letters. Writing to his son, W. H. F. Lee, he says: "When I think of your youth, impulsiveness and many temptations, your distance from me, and the ease, (and even innocence) with which you might commence an erroneous course, my heart quails within me, and my whole frame and being trembles at the possible result. May Almighty God have you in His holy keeping."

Writing again to his son he expresses gratification at hearing of his soldiership, zeal and devotion to duty, and adds: "But I was more pleased at the report of your conduct. That went nearer my heart and was infinite comfort to me. Hold on to your purity and virtue. They will proudly sustain you in all trials and difficulties, and cheer you in every calamity."

He might have been excused for not writing to his children during a pressing military campaign, but somehow he always found time to pen a few lines to those so dear to him. Writing to his daughter Mildred from Camp Fredericksburg, on Christmas Day, 1862, only a few days after that awful battle, he says: "I cannot tell you how I long to see you when a little quiet occurs, my thoughts revert to you, your sisters, and your mother; my heart aches for our reunion....You must study hard, gain knowledge, and learn your duty to God and your neighbor. That is the great object of life."

Fitzhugh Lee, writing of General Lee's Mexican campaign, says: "It seems on the eve of active operations Captain Lee's thoughts were ever returning to his family and his home. In a letter to his two eldest sons (one thirteen and the other nine years of age), written at Camp Saltillo, December 24, 1846, he says: 'I hope good Santa Claus will fill my Rob's stocking tonight: that Mildred's, Agnes', and Anna's may break down with good things. I do not know what he may have for you and Mary (his daughter), but if he only leaves for you one-half of what I wish, you will want for nothing. I have frequently thought if I had one of you on each side of me riding on ponies, such as I could get you, I would be comparatively happy.' "

Writing again from Mexico, he says: "I thought of you, my dear Custis, on the 18th, in the battle, and wondered, when the musket balls and grape were whistling over my head in a perfect shower, where I could put you if with me to be safe."

Christmas always brought him fond memories of domestic happiness around the family fireside. Writing from Texas to his family at Arlington, in December, 1856, he says: "The time is approaching when I trust many of you will be assembled around the family hearth at dear Arlington another Christmas. Though absent, my heart will be in the midst of you, and I shall enjoy in imagination and memory all that is going on. May nothing occur to mar or cloud the family fireside, and may each be able to look back with pride and pleasure at their deeds of the past year, and with confidence and hope to that in prospect. I can do nothing but hope and pray for you all."

What parental affection breathes through his letters to his children! To his daughter he wrote, on her sixteenth birthday: "And are you really sweet sixteen? That is charming, and I want to see you more than ever. But when that will be, my darling child, I have no idea. I hope after the war is over we may again all be united, and I may have some pleasant years with my children, that they may cheer the remnant of my days. . . . . I have grown so old, and become so changed, that you would not know me. But I love you just as much as ever and you know how great a love that is. . . . I pray day and night for you. May Almighty God guide, guard and protect you."

Another letter reads: "My Precious Annie: I long to see you through the dilatory nights. At dawn when I rise, and all day, my thoughts revert to you in expressions that you cannot hear or I repeat. I hope you will always appear to me as you are now painted on my heart, and that you will endeavor to improve and so conduct yourself as to make you happy and me joyful all our lives," etc.

How sharply he felt the pain of separation from his children is seen in these lines: "My Precious Daughter: I wish I could see you, be with you, and never be parted from you. God only can give me that happiness. I pray for it night and day."

The death of his daughter, Annie, was a severe blow. On hearing of her death, he wrote Mrs. Lee: "I cannot express the anguish I feel at the death of our sweet Annie. To know that I shall never see her again on earth, that her place in our circle, which I always hoped one day to enjoy, is forever vacant, is agonizing in the extreme. But God in this, as in all things, has mingled mercy with the blow in selecting that one best prepared to leave us. May you be able to join me in saying, 'His will be done!' "

Fitzhugh Lee, General Lee's nephew, says: "Children always held the key which would unlock the heart of Lee." Another biographer argues that this is an evidence of character, and puts it thus: "He loved children and children loved him, which is surely the most flattering and conclusive evidence as to character." One of his officers who served with him in Texas, said: "The little children always hailed his approach with glee—his sincerity, kindness of nature, and cordial manners attracting their unreserved confidence."

During the last years of his life at Lexington, many were impressed with his devotion to children. "He knew all of the children in Lexington, and along the roads and by-paths of his daily rides, and it was pleasing to witness their delight when they met him. He could be seen at any time stopping on the street to kiss some bright-eyed little girl or pass a joke with some sprightly boy. . . . . To the day of his death the entrance of a child was a signal for the dignified soldier to unbend, and among his most cherished companions in his retirement, when he was, perhaps, the most noted captain in the world, were the little sunbonneted daughters of the professors of the college of which he was president."

The WORK and the WORKERS

Sunday, January 9th, was truly a red letter day with the members of State Street Church in Lexington. The day was given to the formal opening services in the splendid new Sunday school rooms, which will serve as church, Sunday school rooms, and social hall for some years to come. The building is beautiful in its architectural arrangements, and is well adapted to church and Sunday school work. The plant is centrally located on a splendid corner lot, and abundant space is still left for the church auditorium when the congregation stands in need of it, and is ready to build.

Under the pastorate of Rev. D. A. Braswell the lot was purchased. Rev. J. H. Abernethy organized the church with 13 members. The parsonage-church was built under the direction of Rev. C. L. Whitaker, D. D., and Rev. N. G. Bethea, the present pastor, has had the pleasure of leading these splendid people in planning and building the present beautiful plant. The parsonage has had other partitions put in on the lower floor, and is now, we think, the very best parsonage in the conference.

We had the privilege of preaching the opening sermon on Sunday morning, and also of hearing Mrs. H. W. Maier make a most excellent address at the afternoon service. The music was good, and the pastor and his people were happy.

Rev. E. Lester Ballard and Rev. J. T. Sisk were both present in the afternoon to help with the singing. Rev. G. H. Hendry preached at night.

Thomasville, First Church

For the Sunday evening service we came to Thomasville, and preached in the First Church. We found the pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollonger, suffering with laryngitis, so our coming at least proved to be timely. We enjoyed preaching to a good congregation made up mainly of young people. This church is well organized, and is going forward splendidly under the pastorate of Brother Trollinger. His people are pleased with his work, and are co-operating with him. They are beginning to talk of enlarging to meet their growing needs, and ere long we suspect the sound of hammer and saw will be heard in these parts.

Sparkles From the Fields

Word has come to me that Calvary Church has also promised to pay a definite amount per month to the Children's Home. I did not learn what amount.

Did you note Pastor Crutchfield's resolution No. 9 in last week's HERALD? "The pastor with a good delegation from each church attending the Summer Conference at High Point College in July."

Let every pastor so resolve, and we will have our "best yet" conference.

Rev. C. M. Compher reports: "The first Sunday of the year I had the pleasure of presenting to the church a canceled mortgage which wiped out all of the indebtedness on the property here. We were all very happy because of it."

It is fine to see so many pastors reporting "severe poundings." Who fares better than a faithful pastor, anyway?

February

Remember that February is Stewardship and Church Extension month. Let us prepare to preach and teach stewardship, and to collect as much as possible of the Annual Conference Budget during February.

Looking forward to this, we plan to publish a list of all charges, showing just what each charge has done on budgets, in the HERALD for the last week in January.

Send in as much on budgets as you can during next week, so as to get into this final report for January.

Appointments

Two days this week are to be spent in Baltimore at committee and board meetings.

January 16th, 11 a. m., Moriah; 2:30 p. m., Tabernacle; 7 p. m., West End.

January 23rd, 11 a. m., First Church, High Point; 7 p. m., Welch Memorial.

January 30th, 11 a. m., Calvary; 7 p. m., St. Paul.

Most of these appointments are being made without consulting pastors, because of my desire to work close home during the winter months. If other plans forbid my coming then, other plans can be made.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

THE REPEATED VISIT

Someone says that God is so constant a Friend He may be expected to return His own calls. Fortunate for us that it is so. We are not very proficient in matters of courtesy—toward God. We depend upon Him to bridge chasms and to travel all lengths of love. If the best He ever did were to meet us half way, there would be few reconciliations. "God commendeth His love toward us," in that He does all the seeking, makes all the overtures, and is not even dismayed by our reluctant hospitality. Alas for us if God turned His back when we fail to answer His first knock! Unless He had kept repeating His calls, few of us would be in the Kingdom today. We love Him, if at all, because He would not take "no" to His offers of Himself in redemption. Thus I am not surprised to find Jesus appearing in the upper room on the Sunday next after Easter. Was it for Thomas specially that our Lord repeated His visit? Thomas had been absent, with his doubts and defeats, a week earlier. But Thomas was present, now, perhaps with an unvoiced hope that his Master would come again. Thomas' heart claimed things that his head argued were too good to be true. At any rate, expected or not, but more welcome than sunrise, Jesus suddenly, convincingly "stood in their midst." And Thomas got the certification he was needing. And so, in this tender repetition of His visit, Jesus showed us His Father's face.—George Clark Peck.

A BED-TIME PRAYER

Soon we shall be sleeping
In Thy care tonight,
Keep us, loving Father,
Safe till morning light.

Let us feel Thine arms are Holding us in love,
Let us trust Thy watching
From Thy heaven above.

Let us feel the darkness
Comes from loving care,
In the silence feel Thee
Listening to our prayer.

And as sleep steals o'er us
Help us know, we pray,
That Thy love is 'round us
Always, night and day.

MESSAGE FROM UNION BOARD

I am calling a special meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions to be held in Baltimore on Tuesday, January 11, to consider the appointment of a successor to Dr. Klein, our corresponding secretary, who recently went home to be with God. As president of the Board I feel keenly the great responsibility that rests upon us to secure a successor to one who was so worthy and so efficient.

Familiar as I am with our foreign work, it seems strange for me to be providing the material for this missionary column, and I imagine it is equally strange for you to be reading about our missionary work from the pen of another. The workers drop out but the work must go on, hence the obligation upon all of us to take up another "hole in our belt," and with renewed zeal "carry on."

Japan

When I was in Japan in 1919, in company with Dr. Klein, I was much impressed with the imperative need for a new church building in connection with Nagoya College. With over a thousand students in the college, we could accommodate less than two hundred in the very modest church building there. I recall my feeling the Sunday I preached there when the church was crowded, and we baptized nearly thirty young men. I thought of the hundreds who could not, if they would, have entered.

Several years ago the students themselves, many of them non-Christians, sensed the great need for a church, and proposed to the Board to raise $25,000 for college-building purposes, if we would provide an adequate church building. We accepted their proposition in good faith: they have given us more than the amount they pledged: whereas we have been exceedingly slow in keeping our part of the bargain. And the reason has been our lack of money. A subscription for this purpose was received at the session of the General Conference in Tiffin in May, 1924. Nearly $4,000 of this subscription is yet unpaid. If we had this amount it would help greatly. The building is now in process of erection. It will cost around $20,000, and we are short about $9,000.

We are also in need of a new church at Hamamatsu. Our lease on the lot where our present church stands has expired, and the owner is insisting that we move the church elsewhere.

China

We have all been much concerned, because of war conditions, for our work in north China. A recent letter from Rev. Soderbom relieves our anxiety somewhat. He says, "Things are going on very smoothly in both of our schools. Kalgan itself is very peaceful, although the natives are much troubled about the war conditions for fear new hostilities might break out here."

This is a great relief, for Kalgan has been the center of the war zone, and our work greatly disturbed for many months.

Dr. Fleagle left China on her furlough in September; the furlough of Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom is long overdue; and the period agreed to for Brother Williams' stay in China will presently expire. Our great need is for another missionary in Kalgan to carry on the evangelistic work. I would call upon the church to pray the Lord of the harvest to speedily send a laborer to this needy field.

A new church building is greatly needed in Chai Kou Pu, and the widow of one of our ministers, has agreed to erect this building as a memorial to her husband. Thank God for this much-needed help!

The women's department of our work is in great need of a teacher to have charge of our girls' school in Kalgan. In the absence of such a teacher Mrs. Soderbom is helping all she can. Pray for China.

India

The city of Dhulia is the center of our work in India. There on our "Girls' Compound" we have a fine new hospital building, and a competent nurse, but no doctor. Pray God to send us a woman doctor to meet this great need.

On this same compound we need a church building to meet the needs of our two schools and our native constituency.

The success of our work in these three lands is gratifying, and at the same time embarrassing. We are not keeping pace at home with the progress we are making abroad; hence our many needs. Our success abroad challenges us. We are increasingly accepting the challenge.

A Conception of the Future Life

A brother now facing the setting sun of life thus writes of his thoughs of the future state:

"The years come and go, but the old loves and friendships abide. If nature is so careful to conserve matter, so that no particle of it is ever destroyed, surely God will conserve all that is good in His children. I do not think so much of the rest and peace with which some would fill heaven and the future life. It seems more natural, and better, that we should have there something of the struggle to which we are accustomed here. Labor is so good, achievement is so delightful, overcoming is so strengthening, adding a friend to our list is so enriching, the acquisition of a new or larger truth to take the place of a half truth is so satisfying, that I think we shall want to be very busy. We shall, probably, need to suffer some in the process of eliminating our persisting badness, but we can well afford that."

MR. GORDON AN OPTIMIST

Mr. Ernest Gordon, who has so powerfully laid bare the teachings and schemes of the Unitarians and Modernists in his much discussed book, "The Leaven of the Sadducees," does not at all despair because the forces of unbelief are at this time operating so widely and aggressively. On the contrary, he believes that the Gospel of Christ is sufficiestly vital to triumph over these assailants, as is attested by the closing words of his startling volume:

"The old rationalism under a new name is rearing its head again. It is aiming at nothing less than the perversion of the entire institutional life of American Christianity. It has up to the present worked quietly and its successes have been both notable and shameful. They may be still more remarkable in the near future. But only for a time. Those who are disconcerted and alarmed by this unlooked-for development will find reassurance in the history of the Christian renascence which followed the eighteenth century. Prof. Troeltsch has to record that 'the English, Swiss and German revival period created in the Protestant Churches a mighty counter-current which ended with the complete expulsion of the Enlightenment Theology.' So will it be with us. When the outlook seems most discouraging, we are to look for great manifestations of God's power.

PRENT'S PROPERTY

"Well, son," said Mr. Halliday, handing his son a letter, "Here's some news that ought to interest you."

Prent Halliday sure was interested. He took the letter and rushed over to see his chum, Clyde Doyle.

"Gee!" exclaimed Clyde, as soon as he had read the letter. "What're you goin' to do about it?"

"Do?" repeated Prent. "I'm going to go to Fairfields as soon as Dad'll let me."

"I'd like to go too," said Clyde, and, of course, that was exactly what Prent would like.

So it was that in a day or two the boys set off in a buggy to go to Fairfields which was 20 miles away. The day was hot and sunny, and when they reached Siddons Creek, the boys decided to cool off a little, so they first went wading, then they took off their clothes and bathed.

All this took time and when their stomachs told them it was lunch time they had only reached Todd's Four Corners, less than half-way to their destination. Old Fan, the mare, ambled along good-naturedly, halting once in a while to take a nip of grass along the road.

"Say!" cried Clyde, "are we expected to be back home tonight?"

"Yep," admitted his friend. "If Dad would let me drive the car, we could whiz there and back in half an hour."

"Gee!" said Clyde, "I wish he would let you. I don't see why he doesn't. If we had a car my Ma would let me drive her anywhere."

"Dad thinks I'm too young!" sighed Prent. "But I'm eleven now, and even if I can't get a license, the chances are nobody'd stop me, I look old for my age."

Old Fan stopped again to nibble, and the boys saw a turtle in the road, so they both hopped out of the buggy and began to play with the turtle. While they were thus engaged, they heard an auto horn, and saw a car coming. It stopped right beside them and a large, pleasant-faced man leaned out and asked: "Want a lift somewhere?"

"One minute, sir!" cried Prent, while Clyde climbed eagerly into the car. He ran to Old Fan and turned her around, knotted the reins up, and then jumped into the auto.

"She'll go home," he said comfortably.

So the boys soon got to Fairfields, in spite of their wading and playing.

"I got to go to Mr. Hapgood's office," said Prent, importantly, as he alighted from the car.

"It's right yonder," said the driver of the car, pointing to a new wooden shack near a stack of lumber.

The boys thanked him and started for the office, but when they looked in a window and they did not see anybody there, only a desk, chairs, papers and a clock which said 12 o'clock. That was lunch time again, and the boys felt hungry.

"We must have eaten too soon," said Clyde sadly.

They went and played on the lumber for awhile, and then they went back to the shack and this time they saw somebody inside who turned out to be the driver of the car.

"Where's Mr. Hapgood?" asked Prent.

"Right here!" smiled the man. "What can I do for you?"

Prent thought he might have told them who he was before, but taking a long breath he explained his errand.

"Dad got a letter from you," he explained. "It says Miss Tessie White, who died last winter, left me two acres of land, and so I've come to—to."

"Take it along?" grinned Mr. Hapgood. Then he frowned and asked: "How was it that Miss Tessie happened to leave you this land? Were you good and polite to her? Or were you mean and annoying?"

"I was good and polite," said Prent. "She came to sew for Mother. I waited on her nice and polite, and she told me awful ghost stories and I'm real sorry she's dead."

Mr. Hapgood sighed, shook his head, and muttered: "Strange! Strange!" Prent got real anxious. At last the gentleman got up and put on his hat. "I'll show you the land," he said mournfully.

The boys followed him out and he walked ahead very fast until he came to a bog, full of frogs and cattails.

"There's your land!" he said, waving his hand.

If he expected Prent to burst out crying, he was disappointed, for the boy gave a yell of joy.

"Gee!" he exclaimed. "Ain't this fine? Let's catch some frogs and get a bunch of cattails to dry and burn! Miss Tessie sure was kind to leave me this fine marsh land."

Mr. Hapgood shrugged his shoulders and walked away. He thought the old lady was mean to leave a kind, polite little boy such a bad piece of land. He thought she was playing a horrid joke when she did it, but Miss Tessie had had to leave her little house and yard to a niece who lived with her, and this bog was the only other bit of land she had.

Prent and Clyde made a raft and poled around in Prent's property. They played with the frogs and got chewed up by mosquitoes, and just as the sun got low and they thought about how they were going to get back home, Mr. Hapgood appeared on the scene.

"What! Playing here yet!" he exclaimed. "I'm going now, so if you want a lift home, come along."

"Thank you, sir," said Prent. "I was just saying that I should have tied Old Fan behind your car, so's we'd have had her to go back with."

"She'd have done some swift traveling," said Mr. Hapgood.

The boys got home and found their families all in a stew because Old Fan had wandered home an hour before without her passengers.

After that Prent gave his parents hardly any peace. He was all the time wanting to go to see his property. Prent's father said, "Well, the boy's pleased, and it was good of Miss Tessie to leave him anything, besides one shouldn't look a gift horse in the mouth."

"There'll be taxes to pay," said Mrs. Halliday, gloomily.

One bright day, when Prent sat on the porch making a net with which he planned to fish his bullfrogs, Mr. Hapgood came into the yard in his car.

"Good news!" he shouted, his face red and his eyes shining.

Mr. Halliday came running from the barn and Mrs. Halliday hastened from her flower-garden.

"The new electric light company is going to flood the whole of the land around the Goose River and they're offering twenty-five dollars for those two acres of Prent's!" exclaimed Mr. Hapgood.

"Twenty-five dollars!" exclaimed his mother. "A lot of money for a little boy."

"I won't sell it!" cried Prent.

They all stared at him in surprise.

"It was left to him," said his father. "He doesn't have to sell unless he wants to."

Mr. Hapgood went away, looking puzzled. But in a few days he was back again.

"Kid," he said to Prent, "the electric light people say they'll give you fifty dollars for your land. You can buy a nice bike with that. Come now, you're holding up their operations."

"Nope," said Prent. "I don't want a bike."

The next time Mr. Hapgood came around, he brought another man with him.

"Look here," said the stranger, pointing to something. It was a shiny new bicycle with a little motor fastened to one wheel. "I'll give you that and fifty dollars for your old bog!"

Prent walked around the new bike. He just couldn't resist it, so he sold his property.

"He's the shrewdest real-estate man in the country!" said Mr. Hapgood, pinching Prent's ear.

His mother beamed with pleasure.

"Yes, but he got his land because he was kind and polite to an old lady," she said proudly.

"He may be shrewd and he may be kind and polite," muttered Clyde, who was there, "but I call it just plain luck!"—Selected.

A BOY WHO HELPED

In every conflict with foreign powers, some of those who perform the most important services are persons who for one reason and another have been compelled to remain at home. As a striking illustration of this truth, the Pilgrim Teacher recalls an anecdote of revolutionary times.

Luke Varnum lived in a small village among the Green mountains. He was fifteen years old, and was lame in his left foot. So when every other boy and every man, old and young shouldered his firelock and marched off and to join General Stark and fight the Hessians at Bennington Luke was left behind. He limped and held the stirrup, for Lieutenant Crittenden to mount, and then he had to stay at home with the babes and the women.

The company had been gone an hour and a half, more or less, when three men galloped up on horseback. Luke went down to the rails to see who they were.

"Is anybody here?" asked one of them.

"Yes," said Luke, "I am here."

"I see that," said the man laughing.

"What I mean is, is there anybody here who can set a shoe?"

"I think I can," said Luke. "I often tend fire for Jones. I can blow the bellows, and I can hold the horse's foot. Anyway, I will start up the fire."

So Luke went into the forge and built a fire. He hunted up half a dozen nails, and he had even made two more, when a fourth horseman came slowly down on a walk.

"What luck," said he, "to find a forge with a fire lighted!"

The speaker threw himself off the horse meanwhile, and Luke pared the hoof of the dainty creature and measured the shoe, which was too big for her. He heated it white, and bent it to the proper size.

"It's a poor fit," said he, "but it will do."

"It will do very well," said her rider.

"But she is very tender-footed, and I do not dare to trust her five miles unshod."

For pride's sake, the first two nails Luke drove were those he had made himself. When the shoe was fast, he said:

"Tell Jones that I lit up the forge, and put on the shoe."

"We will tell him," said the colonel, laughing, as he rode on.

But one of the horsemen tarried a minute and said:

"Boy, no ten men who have left you today have served the country as well as you have done.

"That is Colonel Warner."

And when we read how Colonel Warner led up his regiment just in time to save the day at Bennington, we can think of Luke Varnum, who bravely helped his country.—Selected.

A LESSON TO PREACHERS

"In an age when the decadence of the church and religion is so much discussed it is worth noting that a successful business man is both willing and eager to testify that the church gave him the stimulus he needed, the opportunities he sought and the help that he required in achieving material success. It was a curiosity and not a selfish hope that he might be benefited that led him to the church at first, but the rest followed when he came under its influence and subscribed to its altruistic philosophy."—Theodore Price.

Many ministers and more laymen are telling us that the church is on trial and that it is in danger of losing its supremacy over the hearts and lives of men and women. Undoubtedly in the jazz period and the transition age there are indications that the church lacks the authority of a generation ago. It may be, however, that the loss of faith is not so great as the lack of authority.

Certainly the need of the church is not more power but more regeneration of the hearts of men and women. It is not adherence to creed it needs so much as a religion that warms the heart and stimulates to noble deeds. It is not in institutionalizing churches—making them soup kitchens and dancing halls and entertainment halls. It is rather in preaching the gospel of faith and hope and goodness. It is in stimulating youth to—

"Do noble deeds, not dream them all day long."

In a recent issue of Commerce and Finance, its editor, Theodore Price, tells how an old-fashioned sermon of faith and hope stimulated a youth and gave him the impulse that resulted in large financial success. Or rather the financial success was an incident to zeal to a young man to make the best of his life. It happened to Jacob Kindelberger, of Kalamazoo, Mich. He was born in Alsace-Lorraine 50 years ago and came to the United States some years later. When he was 15 years old he could not write, his eyesight was defective and he worked in a paper mill at 25 cents a day. One night a sermon he heard at a Methodist revival woke him up and he joined the church. It not only gave him a better heart—it stimulated ambition. He determined to educate himself and was helped to go to Ohio Wesleyan University, earning enough money to pay his way. He hoped to become a minister, but his bad eyes denied him the ability to read and compelled him to abandon the ministry as a life work. He had worked in a paper mill; he returned to that work as a salesman and succeeded. Later he and friends built a paper mill with $50,000. Today he controls property valued at over seventy million dollars. This paper millionaire attributes his success to the impulse caused by the sermon by the unknown Methodist preacher. To be sure, his fortune is not the proof of his rebirth. That came as a by-product. He would have succeeded just as well in the real sense if financial possessions had not come to him, and he attributes it to the fact that he was truly awakened.

Do all preachers feel that they are speaking to plastic minds and that if they wake youth up to clean living and right thinking "all these things shall be added?" If so, how can they fail in zeal and enthusiasm?.—News and Observer.

Woman's Missionary Department

Miss Esther Ross, Editor
Asheboro, N. C.

NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE W. H. M. S.

My New Year's wish for each member of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. in North Carolina is contained in the following beautiful lines from the Pine Ridge Booster:

"I would flood your path with sunshine,
I would fence you from all ill.
I would crown you with all blessings,
If I could but have my will.

Aye! but human love may err, dear,
And power all wise is near,
So I only pray God bless you
And God keep you through the year."

With the beginning of the new year there comes to us a realization that the end of our Missionary Branch year is not far away, but there is still much work to be done before we are ready for it.

Of several important events to occur in the next few weeks, perhaps the most important of all is the Day of Prayer, January 6, which our beloved Dr. Klein in his last message to us urged us to observe. Before you read this I hope you all will have received a blessing from the observance of this day of prayer for the evangelization of the world.

March 4, 1927, has been announced as the Day of Prayer for missions. The council of women for Home Missions and the Federation of Woman's Board of Foreign Missions have received letters from women of many foreign lands revealing a longing for a world's day of prayer for mission.

On March 4th thousands of women all over the world will be praying for missions.

Think of the inspiration, the spiritual uplift, that will come to the women of our church if we add our links to the great golden chain of prayers that bind our hearts to God! Send for the program for that day. It is called "Pray Ye Therefore" and Mrs. Matthews can send it to you. If your church is small, have a union service with the women of other churches, take an offering if you wish, and divide it, but the main thing is prayer.

All auxiliaries of the W. F. M. S. should begin at once to plan and prepare for a splendid Thank-offering service in February. Try to have a program that will not only bring in money for the maintenance of our work, but one that will also call the attention of uninterested people to the fact that they are losing a great privilege in failing to enlist for the greatest work of the Kingdom. If possible, use the children, young people and adults on this program, for they should all be interested in some department of the W. F. M. S.

The last time I heard from our treasurer she reported that our Branch budget is far from being raised. You doubtless remember that the North Carolina Branch voluntarily promised to pay $6250, which is more than one tenth of the entire budget of the Board. We are one of the strongest Branches numerically and we have also been blessed financially more than some, so I am sure we shall do our best to meet our obligation with a little more for good measure.

Some time ago I called the attention of the executive committee of the Branch to a special fund that is to be used to meet an emergency that arose after the year's budget had been apportioned by the Board. We realized that we were giving scholarships to the daughters of our native preachers in our mission fields and neglecting the daughters of our missionaries, so we, as a Board, assumed two scholarships costing $96.00 and $120.00 which were to be raised by special gifts, not to be included in our budget. These gifts have been very slow in coming in, though our Branch has sent more than any other, so far. High Point auxiliary has promised to try to send some money for a scholarship, and I am hoping that other auxiliaries may also send some special gifts in order that we may pay for one whole scholarship. Send money to Mrs. Taylor marked "special scholarship" and remember that it will not count on your budget.

The Thank-offering counts on the budget of the auxiliary and of the church.

I wish the auxiliaries that have not adopted the plan of sending to the treasurer one twelfth of their annual budget each month would try the plan. There is as much satisfaction in it as there is in a quarter gas meter or patronizing a cash store. Try it and find out.

Let us make this a year of more praying and more giving of our money, our time and ourselves to the work of the kingdom. Let us be Christian Stewards indeed.

Will all our auxiliaries not try to do extra work this month and send good reports to Mrs. Harrell for the executive meeting to be held in February?

May abundant success attend you in your efforts. MRS. GEO. R. BROWN.

DOES FIRE PREVENTION WEEK PAY?

In order to ascertain the practical effect of the Fire Prevention Week observance fire lessons throughout the country, the National Board of Fire Underwriters sent a questionnaire to the fire chiefs of all cities with populations of 20,000 or upwards. The returns from 279 cities show that during Fire Prevention Week, 80 municipalities, or 28 percent, suffered no fire loss whatever, and that during the following week 87 escaped loss by burning, the figures covering all buildings and contents, but not automobile fire occurring in the open.

All of the eighty cities, jointly, had an average weekly fire loss in 1925 of $173,648. In addition, there were 35 cities with losses amounting to not more than $25 and 22 others which reported that no more than $60 worth of property had succumbed to the flames.

These favorable records show the results of the educational campaigns that were staged by the fire chiefs, chambers of commerce, local agents, and insurance commissioners.

HAVE YOU DONE IT?

Just recently Brother J. G. Rogers was traveling by dirt road from Lewisburg to Henderson. On the way he passed a church building that attracted his attention, and he immediately wondered if it was an M. P. church. He is not the only man who passes that road and wonders what church that is. But why should they have to wonder? A simple, inexpensive, but attractive marker would tell them what they want to know. They would have the satisfaction of that information, and the church the benefit of the advertising. Have you done this simple, but worthwhile thing for your church? Let's have a suitable marker at every Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina. S. W. TAYLOR.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Wray

Robert Thomas Wray, born August 31, 1846, passed out of this life January 3, 1927. He was married in 1866 to Millie Wallace Lane. To this union were born nine children, six girls and three boys. The surviving are J. M., J. H., and T. B., Wray; Ida L. Wray, Mrs. A. L. Harrell, Mrs. S. H. Troxler, Mrs. J. C. Lester. He had 26 grand children and fourteen great-grand-children.

In 1901 Brother Wray professed faith in Jesus Christ and joined Flat Rock church and remained faithful until God called him home. Brother Wray was very quiet in his manner, yet very firm in his faith. He was a good father, a kind neighbor to all about him. He showed love to his pastor.

On January 5th this writer said the last words over his lifeless body in the presence of a large congregation of sorrowing relatives and friends. The floral display testified to the love and high esteem the grief-stricken family had for Brother Wray. May God lead each one in His service until they shall be an unbroken family at his right hand.

JOEL B. TROGDON.

Jones

Bettie Nelson Jones was born September 9, 1846, and died December 4, 1926. In June, 1871, she was married to Caleb Jones. To this union were born two sons: Walter Jones, of Kernersville, N. C., Houston Jones, of Stokedale, N. C. Ten grand-children survive.

Sister Jones accepted Jesus Christ in early life as Companion and Savior through life. She joined Bethel, M. P. church and remained faithful as long as she was able to attend; for the last year or two the infirmities of old age kept her close at home, yet her faith was unwavering in her Redeemer.

Her two sons are the greatest asset she left to the world, who are now carrying on the work of Christ's Kingdom that she started early in her life. A good woman has gone from us. Her funeral was conducted December the fifth by her pastor in the presence of a large concourse of people who loved her. The flowers were beautiful.

May God lead the two sons and all the grand-children till they all meet where the flowers bloom for ever.

JOEL B. TROGDON.

Johnson

Byrd Washington Johnson, born August 7, 1839, was called from labor to reward December 13, 1926. About 1870 he was married to Miss Mattie Highfill. To this union were born ten children, six sons and three daughters survive. The sons are: C. H., J. N., C. D., N. F., H. L., W. E. Johnson; daughters, Mrs. C. F. Coe, Mrs. A. B. Bray, Mrs. M. W. Thomas. Twenty-three grand-children, one great-grand-child. In early life Brother Johnson yielded up his life to Jesus Christ that he might be his leader and teacher on the voyage he had to make over the rough sea of time. In taking Jesus as his leader his name was written in the Lamb's book of life, and he enlisted in the army at Flat Rock church and remained a faithful soldier till the warfare was over. Then he sang the victory song through redeeming Grace and went home to live with his Redeemer.

The fruit of Brother Johnson's life remain with us manifested in his noble sons and daughters, who have heeded the teaching and example of their father and mother, and have built for themselves characters that demand respect of all who know them, and as time goes on the stream of Christian influence will broaden as a result of his life. His funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. R. Hutton, Rev. W. D. Kennett, Rev. J. D. Williams, and his body laid to rest in Flat Rock cemetery beneath a beautiful bank of flowers.

I never can forget the sweet spirit that glowed from his weak form when he handed this writer $10. just two weeks before his death, and said, "I may not be here when you come again."

May the good Lord lead each child and grand-child until they all anchor their ships in the haven of eternal rest.

JOEL B. TROGDON.

Lindley

Egbert Love Lindley was born November 3, 1866, and departed this life January 1, 1927. For many years he had been a member of Center Methodist Protestant church.

He leaves a wife, Manie Stockard Lindley, and four children, Joseph, Mae, Lucy and Junius, to mourn their loss. He is also survived by three sisters, Mrs. G. G. MacBane, Mrs. A. L. Fuquay, and Mrs. Ed Meachem, and two brothers, Dewitt Lindley and Lizzie Lindley.

A tribute by one who knew him well and loved him much: A highly esteemed citizen, a fine, true gentlemen, a practical Christian, and a most kind and unselfish companion and father has entered into sublime peace.

Although not strong he was brave: although his suffering had been long and intense he bore it patiently, and was thoughtfully courteous and gratefully appreciative to the end. He was happy to stay and willing to go.

The funeral service was conducted by his pastor assisted by Rev. Oscar Lindley of the M. P. Church, and Rev. Mr. Hurst of the Baptist church and Rev. Messrs. Harris and Newlin of the Friends church and the body laid to rest in Center cemetery.

Paschall

J. E. Paschall, prominent merchant of Drewry, N. C., this county, died at his home on Wednesday, December 15, following a stroke of paralysis. Brother Paschall had not been well for several months, although just a few days prior to his death he expressed himself as feeling better than usual and still had hopes of recovering. Brother Paschall was one of Vance county's best men. Many years ago he professed faith in Christ and united with New Hope Methodist Protestant church where his membership remained until his death. Surviving are his two sons, Thomas and Elwood, three daughters, Misses Kathleen, Edna and Irma Paschall, and three brothers, W. H., A. B., and J. R. Paschall, and four sisters, Mrs. W. W. Grissom, Mrs. L. M. Lambert, Mrs. H. P. Wilson, and Miss Louise Paschall. All live in the Drewry neighborhood with the exception of two sisters who reside in Virgina.

The funeral was conducted at New Hope church Thursday afternoon, December 16, by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, and Rev. J. Alston Boyd, Presbyterian minister of Townsville. A large congregation attended the funeral attesting their love and sympathy. Interment was made in the cemetery at the church, beneath a large bank of flowers.

"There is a world above
Where parting is unknown;
A whole eternity of love
Formed for the good alone:
And faith beholds the dying here
Translated to that happier sphere."

M. P. CHAMBLISS, Pastor.

Reavis

Following several months of ill health, Mrs. J. W. Reavis, well-known lady of Vance county, passed away November 30, 1926, at her home near Flat Rock church. She was 76 years of age. Sister Reavis had not been confined to her bed all the while, yet she had been rather feeble for some time. Sister Reavis retired about 10 o'clock, apparently well as usual. Her husband, Brother J. W. Reavis, who had looked after her so patiently, found her dead in bed about four o'clock. Mrs. Reavis is survived by her husband, who is widely known as one of the most substantial citizens of the county. She also leaves three sons, L. O., W. B., and L. P. Reavis and three daughters, Mrs. J. P. Jones, Mrs. J. H. Satterwhite and Mrs. H. L. Powell, all are residents of Vance or Warren counties with the exception of Mrs. Powell who lives in Virginia.

Many years ago even before Flat Rock church was erected, Mrs. Reavis professed saving faith in Jesus Christ and later joined Flat Rock, where her membership remained until her death. The funeral was conducted at Flat Rock church November 29, 1926, by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter of the Methodist Protestant church, Henderson. A large congregation attended the funeral. It was estimated that the congregation would have filled the church two or three times.

"Only Good Night, beloved, and not Farewell,
A little while, and all His Saints shall dwell
In hallowed union indivisible.
Good Night.

"Until we meet again before His throne,
Clothed in the spotless robe He gives his own,
Until we know even as we are known:
Good Night."

M. P. CHAMBLISS, Pastor.

Braxton

Hiram Braxton was born January 16, 1841, and departed this life December 29, 1926.

Brother Braxton was a member of Center M. P. Church for 30 years. For a good while before his death he was afflicted so that he had not been able to attend the services.

Surviving him to mourn their loss are a wife, Margarrett C. Braxton, and two sons, John H. Braxton and Thomas H. Braxton, and nine grand-children and a host of friends and relatives.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Allen of the Friends Church, and the body laid to rest in Center cemetery.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bess Chapel.—We were glad to hear that Brother Bingham was to be with us another year. We believe he is a good Christian man and does his best for the uplifting of God's Kingdom.

Our Sunday school is progressing under the supervision of Mr. Guy Heavner.

The Senior C. E. Society meets on Sunday evening at 6 o'clock. We hope to do even more work than we did last year. Notra Childers is our new superintendent, Essie Foster, secretary.

The Junior C. E. is doing splendid work. We have on a contest to see which will read the most chapters in the Bible during the week. Some of them read as many as 76 in one week.

We would like to say to Rev. E. G. Cowan who organized our C. E. Society and who was loved by all the young people of this church, that we are still pressing forward with the work to reach the goals he set for us.

The W. H. M. S. is doing a great work. They purchased a new piano for the church just before Christmas.

They have been working on a quilt as a means to help pay for it. There are twelve stars and anyone who wishes to have their name on, pays any amount above 10 cents. After the stars are filled with names they will quilt it and send to the Children's Home. Some of them have $20.50 on one star. They have an oyster supper in view and practicing on a play. They hope to make another payment on the piano by spring.

A Christmas pageant, "Gifts to the King," was given Sunday night, December 26. A large crowd was present.

Our first quarterly conference was held Saturday afternoon, January 1st. After the business was transacted Rev. Bingham presented the following to the conference and they were adopted. All of these can be attained and even more than prayer and service to God.

"Goals for the New Conference Year."

1. The Sunday school increasing in interest and in number.
2. The C. E. Societies doing more individual work and reaching all the young people for the kingdom.
3. The W. H. M. S. keeping up their enthusiasm and continued growth.
4. The organization of a Sunday school council for better cooperation and a more efficient Sunday school.
5. A number of our members tithing and all paying something towards the General and Annual Conference Budgets.
6. 100 percent increase in the families taking church papers.
7. A larger and better Bible Vacation School.
8. A family altar in every home.
9. A great revival with a worthy increase in members.
10. All praying, paying, and working for the best year yet for Kingdom service.

We are striving to do our best for the Master and ask the prayers of all who read this that we may accomplish many things during the coming year.

Charlotte Mission.—We held our first quarterly conference January 1st. It was well attended. The usual business was attended to in a very interesting, lively manner. Every body present seemed to have the spirit to go forward. A number of warm speeches were made in a spirit of love and Christian-fellowship. The Aims for 1926-1927, presentedby by the pastor, Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D., of Gibsonville Charge, were read and adopted by the quarterly conference. Our assessment for A. C. B., G. C. B., and for the college was read and accepted. The pastor made a number of recommendations which were accepted. It was decided to make the every-member canvass at once. Our membership aim is one hundred, and the dedication of one hundred children by baptism. Our official list was corrected and improved. I organized a Bible class Sunday morning with seven members to begin with, and elected a treasurer and secretary. I hope you will hear good things from this class in the near future. We have set the third Sunday in January to correct our class book. Every member is urged to be present and answer to their names. You see we are making history for this new mission field. We have set in to carry out the discipline this year. We will give the names of all the officers in the near future.

I want to thank Rev. L. W. Gerringer for $1.00; this should have been in my other report. I also thank the following persons for their gifts: Brother H. G. Ellington, $5., and Sister Ellington, his wife, for $2. Brother Ellington and his wife are members of Harris Chapel on Vance Circuit. The money was sent by Brother M. P. Chambliss. Sister Glena Lane, a member of Meltons Grove, sent us one dollar. We thank all these dear friends and all others that have expressed their sympathy in any way. My good friends will all be glad to know that my financial hopes are much brighter than they have been. I am truly glad to tell you, brethren, that I have a host of good friends that are standing right by my side. I am glad the clouds are breaking away and God's Son is lighting up the day. Brethren and sisters, I want you to continue to pray for us, we need your prayers. My dear wife is still alive, fighting for what we all love so much, that is life. I sat right by her bed side all last night and watched every move she made and heard every groan uttered. I groaned within me when she made those struggles for breath. She can use her left hand and it was hurtful indeed to see how often she placed that hand to her poor head. All I could do was to take my hand and brush back those white locks. Oh these cold winter nights are so long from midnight to six in the morning. We have had lots of them in the past four years. I must confess that I do not understand all this. All that know my wife say they believe she is a good woman. What does all this mean, my dear brethren? All these things are trying my faith. I am trying to serve God the very best I know how. I sit by my wife all night until six. This morning I left my daughter's. I left her in bed sick. And I came home and got my breakfast, and I decided I would write a few lines to the paper. My face is set heavenward. God bless you all; pray for us. D. A. BRASWELL.

Denton Church.—Number in Sunday school a year ago, 29; yesterday, 78. Offering year ago, 92 cents; yesterday, $2.91. Largest attendance class, no. 7, Mrs. Joe Hill teacher, present 20. Largest offering class, no. 2, R. H. Hardy Secretary and Treasurer of the class, $1.40.

The Christian Endeavor is very lively. The young people, especially, are taking good interest.

Rev. M. C. Henderson and family have been sick with colds; are some better this morning. We hope they will keep on getting better so they can be out at church next Sunday.

We surely miss them when they are not there.

We are sorry to say that we have lost one of our members at Mt. Ebal, Mrs. A. M. Johnson, the mother of Mr. W. A. Johnson, and Mr. L. V. Johnson of our Sunday school.

REPORTER.

Burlington.—The one service at our church yesterday was well attended although the weather was cold and threatening. At night we united in a community prohibition program at the First Baptist church, with Mr. Upchurch, superintendent of the State Anti-Saloon League, as speaker. Two other like services, with visiting speakers, were held in the city at the same hour. The church made prohibition possible, and its continued support is necessary to make it effective.

On last Sunday night Mr. Joseph W. Fix, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fix of our city, preached for us. His effort was well received by a large congregation.

Just at this time an unusual number of our people are sick. Some are sick at home, others are in our city hospital, and still others are in Baltimore. All have our deepest sympathy and earnest prayers.

On next Sunday night our Senior C. E. will reorganize for the winter and spring months. We are looking forward to a period of renewed activity in this department of our work.

The Editor is making his released time count big for the Herald. The improved form and subject matter are gratifyinglv noticeable —and it is fastened together. Keep it up, Brother Editor, keep it up!

S. W. TAYLOR.

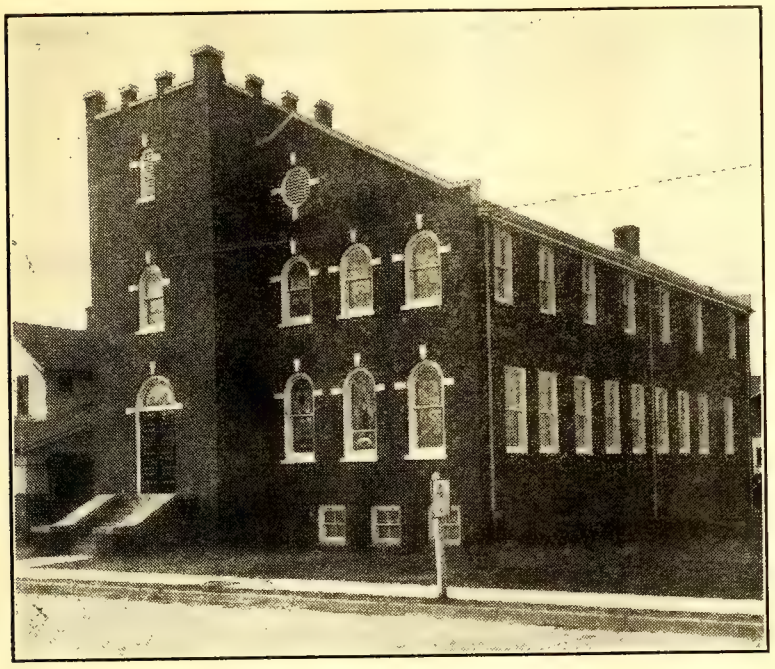
Hope, Chatham Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his appointment January 9th. The weather being rough, there were not very many out to hear the helpful message which he brought us. His theme was, "From Prison to Paradise."

Mr. E. F. Cude of Burlington, who was to have favored us with his singing, was kept away by throat trouble. We hope to have him with us later.

We were glad to have Mr. McDonald of Burlington worship with us.

Brother Isley seems to be a live young minister, full of enthusiasm and plans for the year, and we hope by giving him our hearty support we may accomplish much good this year.

A committee has been appointed to solicit subscriptions to the "Methodist Protestant Herald." KARA ANDREW, Reporter.



NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL ROOMS
State Street Church, Lexington

Lexington, State Street Church.—The opening service in our new building Sunday was helpful and inspiring all the way through. At eleven o'clock Dr. Dixon preached a great sermon to a very appreciative audience. Just after the sermon lunch was served in the spacious room in the basement of the church which has been fitted up for such occasions or for any social need we may have.

At 2 p.m. we met again, at this time there was some fine music by some of the home folks and by Mr. Sisk and his quartet from Mocksville and by Mr. Ballard of High Point. After this Mrs. Meyer of Thomasville gave a most splendid lecture, her subject being, "The Need of the Child, the Law of the Church."

All the neighboring country churches of the denomination were represented at this afternoon service, also Greensboro, High Point, and Thomasville and every church in Lexington. It was indeed a good day in every sense of the word, and the closing service, a forceful and helpful sermon by Brother Hendry of the Concord M. P. Church, was enjoyed as much as the other services had been.

With thankful hearts for what has already been accomplished we are hoping and expecting to go on to greater things under the leadership of our wide-awake and competent pastor.

A collection was taken at the afternoon service and a liberal sum was raised for the purpose of buying a piano. We are expecting to have the piano ready for use by next Sunday. REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—We are still trying to make some progress.

Union Grove and Hebron churches have each purchased individual Communion Sets.

The parsonage trustees met last week and devised plans for reducing the parsonage debt.

We are trying to raise college assessment this month.

Hope to raise Annual Conference claims next month.

All churches have raised amounts for old parsonage claims, and Superannuate Permanent fund except Chestnut Ridge. Hope to get these claims out of the way at this church soon. Chestnut Ridge is completing payments on piano. This account has been standing for some time. Glad the prospect is good for getting it paid.

The weather has been unfavorable, consequently our congregations have been small. Still we are not discouraged but are trying to move forward. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Salem, Saxapahaw Charge.—Our Sunday school attendance has been very good during the winter months.

We held a Christmas program which was a success and the Christmas tree was enjoyed by all.

The second Sunday in January at 11 o'clock our pastor, Rev. H. L. Isley, gave us an inspiring sermon on "Putting to work that which we have." This should have been a great help to all who heard him because there are so many people who think they can not do good unless they have a large amount to begin with.

The W. F. M. S. is still alive at Salem church and is planning to do better work this year than ever before. They meet every first Sunday just after Sunday school.

The Bell Thompson Mission Band are planning to give a program on Washington's birthday.

Our plans are to keep moving along and do more work for the Master.

OLA PARISH, Reporter.

Welch Memorial.—The new year 1927 has been ushered in with its opportunities and responsibilities. We aim to do in the future as we have done in the past; that is, let God lead us. Since our last writing some things worthy of mention have taken place. We have been kindly remembered by our friends. The first remembrance was from my friends at the Union Furniture Factory. In November I had a birthday and they gave me a nice Typewriter table, worth at least twenty-five dollars, and then at Christmas they remembered me with a fifty dollar check, and a five-pound box of assorted chocolate candy. Then on Thursday evening, December 23d, at 7:30, our Sunday school rendered an interesting program; the program was in two parts, one by the small children, and the other by the young people of the C. E. Society. Each part was well rendered. At the conclusion of the program many presents were distributed from a beautiful Christmas tree. I also received several presents off the tree; the Sunday school also gave a nice treat to each pupil.

On the first Sunday we received two new members, Mr. J. M. McDowell, and Mrs. Myrtle Jackson. Mr. McDowell was formerly a Methodist Protestant, holding his membership at one of the churches of the old Uwharrie Circuit. Mrs. Jackson came to us from the Baptist church, she having married a young man who recently united with us. We are glad to have these two in our fellowship. We have also had some new pieces of furniture donated to the parsonage. Brother W. T. Richardson and the company for whom he works presented us with a nice buffet, the Kearns Furniture Factory presented us with a new kitchen safe; Brother Nance presented us with a nice halltree. We are very grateful to our friends for each of these items.

The pastor and family were made happy by the church having the parsonage repaired; they are spending eight hundred dollars which will put the parsonage in excellent shape; the carpenters have almost completed their work, and the painter has painted the greater part of the out-side and would have finished the inside this week if the weather had remained good. We will almost think we are living in a new home when it is all completed.

Since conference I have united in marriage the following couples:

On November 20, Mr. George Rule and Mrs. Bertha Little were united in marriage, the ceremony taking place at the parsonage.

December 11th, Mr. Govener Spear and Miss Bell Martin were united in marriage; this ceremony was also performed at the parsonage. One hour later Mr. Earl Hyde and Miss Carlotta Horton came over to the parsonage and were joined together by the pastor.

December 22rd, Mr. Clyde Rush and Miss Mattie Kerr were united in marriage by the pastor, the ceremony taking place at the parsonage in the presence of several special friends who came to witness same. One hour later I was called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clinard in Mechaniesville where I united in marriage their daughter, Miss Bernice, to Mr. Guy Lee; this ceremony was performed in the presence of several friends who had assembled to witness same.

Each couple is very popular, and has many friends who wish for them many years of happiness. T. E. PIERCE, Pastor.

Richland Charge, Asheboro.—Santa Claus has come and gone, leaving us with greater courage for the new year. Even though we have been with our people only a short time, we received a large number of Christmas presents, for which we are very grateful.

Our church work is going along nicely, and the congregations are always good, despite the unpleasant weather. We are now working on the Conference Budget, and we are hoping soon to have raised the full amount. Come on, good people, and let's not leave anything undone until tomrorow that we can do today.

On Saturday night before Christmas our church people began visiting the parsonage. The house was soon crowded with people, each one bringing boxes, baskets, or some kind of packages. In a short while both kitchen and dining-room were filled with goodies sufficient for many weeks to come. We are truly grateful and appreciative of the kindness and thoughtfulness of our people in giving us a real pounding.

We are now serving a people who are faithful workers for the Master. May God bless them in all of their efforts, and may we work together to make this a wonderful year for our Savior. FRED R. LOVE, Pastor.

Second Church, Charlotte.—We are glad our pastor could be with us Sunday.

We have taken in four members in our little church since January 1, 1927.

The Ladies' Aid will give an old-time ginger bread and coffee supper free Saturday night, January 22, at 7:30, at the church for the selling of their name quilt. Everybody welcome. They thank all who gave anything or helped in any way on this quilt.

REPORTER.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—Our Sunday school has reorganized for the new year and has occupied the new Sunday school rooms. We have a splendid set of officers and teachers and are looking forward to a prosperous year in the Master's work.

Last year our enrollment reached 319. Now we have revised the roll, have reached the number of 217, but have as our goal 400.

One of our busiest organizations is our Workers' Council. Our pastor showed wisdom in organizing the council, which is about a year old, and has been a great help to the officers and teachers and even the whole Sunday school.

We are glad to see so much interest shown by the older people as well as the young people. We have quite a number of gray-haired fathers and mothers in our Sunday school every Sunday, and they are an inspiration to us all.

We are very much gratified at the cooperation we have had in the building of, and paying for the Sunday school rooms of which we are all so justly proud. Several of the classes are taking great pride in paying for the chairs in their own rooms. God will surely bless us when we give him part of what He gives us.

Let's work and pray for a good year in the Master's Vineyard.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF, Reporter.

Shiloh, North Davidson Circuit.—The Christian Endeavor Society met at the home of Mr. W. J. Berrier January 7th, and held our regular weekly meeting. We had a large number present. The topic was: "What Confession of Christ Includes." This was an interesting topic. We as Christians should think more and more about it. It calls for the best that is in us, and we should try at all times to do our best for the Master. After the program we had the election of officers for the year. They were as follows: Mrs. Protus Koontz, president; Mr. Clayton Koontz, vice-president; Mr. Lyman Troxler, secretary; Mr. Protus Koontz, treasurer; Rev. R. S. Troxler, critic; Mrs. Protus Koontz, organist. We also decided to organize a country-wide Christian Endeavor union. This is to bring us closer together, as we know Christ says: "We are all one in Christ." Last year was a good year for us, and the more we work for the Master the more we want to work. So by the help of God and the cooperation of every one, we are going to try to make this year the best year of our Society. May we continue to pray, for in prayer there is great power.

EMMA BERRIER, Reporter.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Charge.—Many reflections crowd our minds at this time, while looking over the world, and as we try to discern as to whether the world is growing better or worse. Every year is a ledger account and every month a page and every day a column, and many things are written in this book we strive to forget, but sometimes we cannot, and it's not best for us to forget some things, for they linger in our minds that we might not do those things any more. For we must know that the book we write goes to God and every vain and idle thought will be taken note of in God's memory and we will have to give account of it some time some where and some how.

But we thank God for a time once a year a little above other times, and that is Christmas when our minds can go back to Bethlehem where Jesus was born and to think of the joyous scene that unfolded to the shepherds as they watched their flock by night.

We had one of the best Christmas entertainments this year we ever had, for which we thank every one that helped to make such a good one and especially Mrs. Trogdon whose untiring work had a great deal to do in making it a success. F. J. L., Reporter.

Graham.—Our Christmas service was well attended. The offering was $17. Our thanks to Miss Blanche Fuller for getting it up, also all those who took part in it. The Christmas tree was beautiful, loaded with presents and a treat for the children. And we older ones were not forgotten. Just a few days before Christmas the Ladies' Aid sent up a nice dining room suite for the parsonage, then came a turkey from J. L. Amick, then a china set of fifty-two pieces given by the church. Also other nice presents, for which we are very thankful.

Our Sunday school attendance is holding up fine; preaching services are well attended. We notice strangers in our congregation at most every service. We are praying this may be the best year in the history of our church.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Union Grove Charge.—The work is starting off very promising for a good year.

The attendance at Sunday school and church service is increasing. Christian Endeavor Society is very much alive, more young people taking an active part this year than before.

A committee has been appointed, and plans made to raise the budget. The piano debt has been lifted, and some paid on pastor's salary.

We are indeed glad to have for our pastor Brother Glenn Madison, and very proud too, that we can claim him as one of our boys. He is delivering good sermons to us from the pulpit, but the life he has lived from a child, among us, is the greatest sermon he can ever preach for us.

Our little flock has been saddened by the death of one of our oldest, and most loved members, Mrs. L. Q. Wooten.

We are glad to say that Allen Templeton, one of our young members, who has been very sick and underwent a serious operation in a Statesville hospital recently, is getting along well, and will soon be at home.

Our people are gladly looking forward to fourth Sunday in January, expecting Brother J. D. Hardy, a former pastor, to preach for us. ASSISTANT REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Rev. M. C. Henderson last Sunday delivered a most wonderful sermon to a fairly good-sized congregation. The people are highly pleased with Brother Henderson. His words are sounded around.

It was resolved on last Sunday that we pay up our minister monthly. The church officers were elected. The old trustees were left in. Class leader, Mr. C. O. Leonard; chairman of stewards, Mr. C. M. Crever; Mr. N. W. Lanier, Misses Ora and Blanche Wright, assistant; Mrs. N. W. Lanier, Herald reporter.

The prayer meeting was at Mr. H. M. Futts' last night. It goes to Mr. Ben Parrish's next Saturday night.

I am glad to see many encouraging reports in the Herald, the best I believe I have ever seen in a beginning of a new year; I read them with joy in my heart, looking forward to a most prosperous year in the spiritual work.

In reading the Roberta report in last week's Herald it brings to my mind the thought that the man of God shall prosper and that they shall be clothed and fed. He was once beloved pastor on our work as well as some others.

Communion service will be held at Cid the first Sunday in February at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. J. B. Delk of Piney Grove was a pleasant visitor of Mrs. N. W. Lanier last Friday afternoon. Mr. Ed Grubb is in the High Point Hospital and has been operated on for appendicitis. He is getting on fine.

We are sorry to learn of our pastor's wife being on the sick list.

MRS. N. W. L.

Spring Valley, Vance Circuit.—A new year, and we are still at work. Our Sunday school is doing fine, and we have good attendance each Sunday. Yesterday was very rough, and we did not have as large a crowd as usual, but we had Sunday school just the same.

Last Sunday was promotion day, and we organized a new young people's class with 25 on roll, and we elected new officers for the coming year. We hope these new officers will just put their shoulders to the wheel and go forward with the vast amount of work for the Master that needs to be done. Every one must cooperate with them for success.

We had our Christmas program on Friday night, and had a splendid program. Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus came to see each of the children, and all had a jolly time. The offering was $8.14.

We hold our Christian Endeavor prayer meetings each week, and are doing good work. The young people are very interested in the Christian Endeavor work.

The Woman's Missionary Society held their regular monthly meeting last Wednesday with Mrs. J. W. Hight, and had a splendid meeting. They are planning to have an oyster supper Friday night, if the weather permits, for the purpose of raising money to help on the additional Sunday school rooms, which we are planning to build in the very near future.

We expect Brother Chambliss to fill his regular appointment next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Wishing the Herald and its readers a very happy new year. REPORTER.

Littleton Circuit.—We have entered our work with as much confidence as we could,—confidence in our class, our people and God. We are being encouraged quite a bit as we see some signs of better work this year.

We have received two additions to our church at Littleton since conference. The Sunday school there is doing much better. They had an interesting program for Christmas and nice Christmas tree. They had something for all the children and the pastor and family were not forgotten. Mr. Samuel Riggan, Jr., who joined the Littleton church just before conference is the superintendent. Miss Fannie Barnes, though a lady, serves as his right-hand man in the work and deserves much credit for the progress they are making.

Miss Thelma Lucas and Mrs. J. W. Warren deserve special mention for the Christmas program and tree. Miss Thelma served as pianist, while Mrs. Warren helped much in planning the tree and making things look neat and tidy. Though she is a busy woman at all times in hotel business she found time to go to the church and help in this work.

We are hopeful of some progress this year in some phases of the work. The people are nice to us, though we have been with them a long time, and we learn to know better and appreciate them more as the years go by.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Liberty, Liberty-Siler City.—Last Sunday was a good day for all the activities of the Liberty church. This was the last Sunday for the writer at this church before leaving for school. He was glad to visit all the organizations and find them in good condition. After visiting and teaching the Baraca class which was enjoyed very much, and receiving a great tonic from our live Sunday school the morning service was on. A goodly number were present regardless of the unfair weather. A good business meeting followed and a pulpit committee was appointed to supply during the absence of the pastor.

It was my privilege to visit all three of our Christian Endeavor societies. Mrs. J. W. Curtis and Miss Ruth Croson are doing wonderful work with their live band of Juniors. I found Mrs. J. A. Croson and Mrs. Joe Swaim with a splendid group of Intermediates. The Seniors, under their new president, Mrs. T. L. Smith, are doing extra good work.

At the evening service all the Endeavorers were requested to remain for a special message, "Leadership with a Vision." They did so and we had a wonderful service. Many visitors were present who were requested to stand. About one half of those present stood. The presence of visitors in our congregations from time to time adds encouragement to our work here.

At this writing Mrs. Ed. Woody is ill at her home at Siler City. Mr. H. C. Causey is much improved but is still in the hospital, Clinic, of Greensboro. Miss Bertine Shepard, our reporter, has been critically ill but is improving. We wish for these a speedy recovery.

Our paper campaign is going nicely at both churches. We hope to place one or more of our church papers in every home.

Happy new year to everybody.

F. L. GIBBS.

A SURPRISE

On the evening of the thirtieth of December, quite a number of the friends of Mr. I. L. Trogdon gave him a surprise birthday party. The first arrival was Mr. T. B. Reynolds, then in a short while Mr. D. T. Smith arrived; their arriving caused no surprise but was considered only as friendly calls, then very soon people began coming in until the living room was filled with unexpected visitors; it was then the excitement began; even the radio seemed to become excited and pour forth music in increased volume.

After listening to the radio for awhile, the crowd retired to the parlor where a good fire had been built. After spending some time socially, Miss Mearle Garrett, with a few well-chosen remarks, presented to Mr. Trogdon, a beautiful gold watch, given by the Community Sunday school, as a token of their appreciation of the splendid work which he had rendered to them in the past few years. Mr. Trogdon then expressed his great appreciation for the gift, but most of all he said, he appreciated the spirit in which it was given, and the spirit of cooperation in the work.

After the serving of fruits and candy and the singing of some songs, the party dispersed, expressing the wish that Mr. Trogdon might live to see many more birthdays, and that he might appear no older upon his next birthday than at the present one.

MRS. L. V. GARRETT.

POUNDING

Our friends from Corinth came to our door. They brought the following things and more: pickles, cocoanuts, fruits, meal, soap and towels to keep ourselves clean, bed quilt to keep us warm while we sleep, sugar and preserves to keep us sweet. This pounding happened on Monday night before Christmas when the Morris and Carter families came representing Corinth church. There was a school truck load of them. More would have come but there was no room for more. Some who could not come sent there Christmas wishes, tied on their packages. It was a real jolly crowd and were in fine spirits and they made us to feel like Christmas had begun. Yes, we were glad to show them the way into our dining room, and they went there before they stopped. Thank you, friends. May the good Lord richly bless and prosper you this year of 1927 and help us to render more helpful service. J. B. O'BRIANT.

I have received check for $15,200 on account of High Point's subscription, making a total of $100,365.00 received on account of the original subscription of $100,000. This balance has been used to pay a similar amount due the contractor for the dormitories, paying him in full, except interest. This is indeed encouraging. No institution in North Carolina has accomplished what High Point College has accomplished during the time which has elapsed since the enterprise was undertaken. However, we must bear in mind that these are very different times from those of fifty or a hundred years ago, when other colleges were being established, and much more is required. Let us continue our support until the debt is paid, an adequate endowment provided, and the college thoroughly equipped to do the work which is so much needed for the young people of the State.

"TOO MUCH FOR US"

We don't like to confess too much to our readers, lest our editorial infallibility fall into question. But we have to confess, with however great reluctance, that this prohibition problem, at least as presented by the "wets," is getting to be too much for us. Here are the "wets" telling us that prohibition is a farce — that there is more liquor being drunk in this country than ever before—that "bootleggers" are themselves the chief supporters of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, so great a help are these to their business—and so on, ad libitum, ad infinitum. If the wet propaganda is to be trusted, a flood of alcoholic stimulants is pouring into every port, and rushing over every frontier. But now notice! Here comes a man—a seasoned traveler resident in Boston, just returned from France on his 102d transatlantic voyage—who is not thinking of the liquor problem at all. He is concerned with the debt situation, and more particularly the sudden flare-up of ill feeling in France against the United States. Seeking the causes of this startling phenomeon, he says, "The French consider that we are forcing them to burn the candle at both ends. They feel that we have ruined the export market for their wine, in itself almost enough to impoverish them under the conditions since the war. In addition we are calling on them —to pay their debts." Now, here is the kind of thing that forces us, in desperation, to confess that this prohibition problem is too much for us. Here on the one hand are we told that America is "wetter" than ever, and on the other hand that the French "export market for their wine is ruined!" This is an 'Alice in Wonderland" situation, of course, Or worse, it is a new sample of "squaring the circle," or "perpetual motion," or two objects occupying the same point at the same time. What we have here, obviously, is a fundamental contradiction; both of these propositions cannot be true. Either America is not as "wet" as formerly, or else the export in wine out of France and into the United States is not ruined at all but, on the contrary, more prosperous than ever. For ourselves, we have no doubt as to where the truth lies. The testimony of the European traveler is that unconscious and thus unbiased testimony which is always most conclusive. Prohibition is effective enough in this country to ruin the export trade of the greatest wine-producing nation in the world. Which means, first, that America is drying up, and, secondly, that the liquor still available is the "hooch" produced within our own borders, which kills more often than it cures.—Unity.

Faith

If on this night of still, white cold,
I can remember May,
New green of tree and underbush,
A hillside orchard's mounting flush,
The scent of earth and noon's blue hush,
A robin's jaunty way;

If on this night of bitter frost,
I know such things can be,
That lovely May is true—ah, well,
I shall believe the tales men tell,
Wonders of bliss and asphodel
And immortality.

Cigarettes

According to statistics nearly eighty billion cigarettes were made in the United States during 1925. This means that those who smoke cigarettes smoked four billion more than during the previous year, or else that new cigarette smokers were made to consume the extra supply. This means that nearly six hundred million dollars were spent for cigarettes during 1925. The situation is indeed a grave one.—Christian Sun.

VOLUME XXXIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., JANUARY 20, 1927 NUMBER 11

The Pioneer Work of Rev. D. A. Braswell

When the editor of the HERALD was pastor of the Church in Fairmont, W. Va., a service was held in honor of Governor Pierpont, a member of that church who was then about eighty years of age. A number of eulogistic speeches were made. When the Governor's time to speak came, he said the addresses reminded him of a funeral occasion. But the brethren who had spoken wished to hand the Governor flowers while he was still living rather than to keep them to lay upon his grave.

Doubtless when our good brother, Rev. D. A. Braswell, finishes his course and goes home and the obituary committee appointed by the President of the North Carolina Conference goes over his life, they will be surprised to find that he accomplished so much pioneer work during the course of his ministry. He entered the ministry comparatively late in life. Perhaps the lack of early educational advantages explains this. But the record of his achievements is by no means an inconsiderable one.

Last week mention was made of the fact that the lot for the new church in Lexington was bought during the pastorate of Brother Braswell. Brother Braswell had a spirit of hopefulness which made him optimistic and gave him visions of hope where other men would have faced the situation with discouragement. But for the pioneer work of Brother Braswell, we might not have had this splendid church plant in Lexington today.

We believe a similar story may be told of Asheville. In the early days it was Brother Braswell's optimism that was the chief asset in keeping the enterprise alive. A church has been built where another minister said it was impossible to build.

Go to Charlotte to the First Church, and you find that Brother Braswell was the pioneer worker. He worked on when others could see nothing but failure in prospect. One man came to the Annual Conference and declared that there was no prospect in the world of building a Methodist Protestant Church in Charlotte. But Brother Braswell kept hope alive until enough interest was awakened to move forward to the success that has crowned effort at that point.

In the new church undertaking at Spencer, we find Brother Braswell on the field, inspiring faith, and pushing the work forward against all odds. His strong faith in God and his deep love for the Methodist Protestant Church seem to spread from him to those about him, and he inspires a new community with some of his own zeal.

We believe our church at Roberta is another monument to Brother Braswell's pioneer spirit. He was there in the early days of its history and saw the coming church that is there today.

We do not so well know what our Concord Church owes to Brother Braswell, but we believe he wielded a strong if not the determining influence in the early days.

In the eastern part of the state he did a work that looked impossible to others—that of building at Edenton, N. C. It is true that this church did not survive to our denomination, but the building of it under such conditions reveals the power of the man that led in the enterprise.

Brother Braswell is laboring as a pioneer in a second church enterprise in Charlotte. We have few men, if any others, that would have the pioneer spirit that Brother Braswell has for such undertakings.

He may well feel that he has not labored in vain. When he has gone and a complete survey has been made of his life and labors in our Conference, we believe material will be found to weave a true story of achievement under difficult conditions that will be truly inspiring to all our workers.

May Brother Braswell's last days be his best days and his happiest days. May he never lose his optimism, even when the clouds gather most threateningly, but may he be sustained by an unfaltering trust in Him who has guided and guarded all the way.

Shall We Have Another War With Mexico?

The American people are warned that our government is about to precipitate us into another war with Mexico, and that the people would better be protesting against it, if they do not want it. Certainly few Americans wish war with any other nations. The great mass of the American people would now be opposed to any war that was not necessary on moral grounds. There are no doubt citizens that would welcome war if they thought it a means of bringing profit or great advantage to them. The trouble in Mexico as we understand it is between certain large investors in Mexican property and the Mexican government which is enforcing laws regarded as inimical to foreign investors. Then there are the Roman Catholics who feel aggrieved by recent legislation taking from them some of the advantages they have long held. The question is, Shall we go to war to force the Mexican government to accede to the wishes of the foreign investors and members of the Roman Catholic Church?

Let the two questions be separated, and see whether either furnishes an issue calling for armed intervention. A communication signed by 400 prominent citizens of the United States, including ministers and college presidents, urges that the questions in dispute be arbitrated, calling attention to the fact that an existing treaty with Mexico provides for the arbitration of differences between the two nations. Surely our recollections of the world war with its horrors will make us slow to declare war against any people. The danger is that the government will lead us into war before we are aware of it. A leading Boston editor wrote asking Mr. Kellogg, Secretary of State, to give the names of the Nicaragua parties that had asked for government protection. He did not reply. The

CAN RELIGIOUS PEOPLE PRACTICE CO-OPERATION?

LUTHER K. LONG

No doubt there are good reasons for many of the differences of views among honest thinkers.

Frank and fearless discussion of these differences is perfectly proper, and such discussion may result in clearer thinking and better understanding.

Life, however, is for action, as well as for thought and discussion.

It is a matter for gratitude that even where there is great diversity of thought there may yet be practical unity of action.

It is always a pleasure to note, and to report, cases in which good fellowship and united action come to the front. Here are some of those cases:

Recently, in Chicago, 70 prominent Jews gave a dinner to which each of the seventy brought "my best Christian friend." After dinner addresses were made by a Roman

Some years ago an Independent Presbyterian church was The speeches were reported to be "no pleas for mutual tolerance based on indifference, but appeals for co-operation and fellowship based on mutual respect and understanding." Intolerance, itself, was the only thing they thought should be treated with intolerance. Intolerance—whether social, religious, industrial, or racial—should be superseded by a broad, brotherly spirit.

Some years ago an Independent Presbyterian church was organized in Birmingham, Alabama. The Hebrew congregation Emanu-El offered the use of their building until the new church could erect a house of worship. The invitation was accepted and the Presbyterians worshipped in the synagogue seven years. Recently the Presbyterians found in their new church two beautiful silver candelabra, a gift of friendship from their Hebrew hosts. A local paper wisely and sympathetically said:

"When incidents of this sort occur, as they are occurring frequently all over the United States, the puny and purblind efforts of fanatics and apostles of strife and hatred will not get very far."

The United Church of Canada—made up of Congregationalists, Methodists, and Presbyterians—is a real going concern in which many Christians outside of Canada are greatly interested. That denomination has recently sent out forty missionaries. Some of them have reached their fields and others are still on the way. They go to China, to Japan, India, Korea, Africa, and to various mission stations in different parts of Canada.

The Mexican border has been the scene of much disorder and many disgraceful occurrences. Here is something different:

"A conference was held in El Paso, Texas, December 11-16, for the study of the social, economic, educational, and religious conditions among the Mexicans and Spanish-speaking Americans in the United States. Five commissions, representing boards and agencies which work among these people and which have been making an investigation into the present conditions and welfare activities, co-operated in the conference. It is hoped that the result will be the co-ordination of the work of the various agencies now operating in this field and a corresponding increase in the efficiency of their work. To prevent the conference from having the appearance of being an attempt to hand down something to the Mexicans, an attempt was made to secure an equal representation of Spanish-speaking delegations. The conference was financed chiefly by the boards connected with the home missions council and the council of women for home missions, and valuable co-operation was received from the departments of education and charitable organizations of the border states. Tho total number of persons now residing in the United States who are of Mexican birth or parentage is estimated to be between 1,200,000 and 1,500,000."

Dr. Charles R. Brown, Dean of Yale Divinity School, in the course of an address on "What Does It Mean to Be a Christian?" is reported to have said:

"There are those who give to Christ a conventional, formal support. These are members of the church who attend church services on Sunday but on Monday do not conduct their business on the principles of the Golden Rule. They are not opposed to child labor, or to unsanitary tenement conditions. They oppress the widow and the fatherless. There are those who follow Him from conviction and choice. They believe He is the Son of Man, the Way, the Truth, the Life, the King of kings, the Savior and Lord. These are Christians whatever their denomination. For example, I will mention four men:

"Once it was my privilege to sit near Cardinal Mercier of Belgium. He had a saintly face and his words and deeds were as saintly as his face. He was a Roman Catholic and he believed many things that I cannot subscribe to. Yet he was a Christian because he stood before Jesus Christ in reverent, obedient trust and gave Him loyal devotion.

"There was John G. Paton, who swallowed the whole Westminster Confession without turning a hair, which no doubt many of you could not do, neither can I, but he went to the heathen saying, 'God loves you, I love you' and won them to Christ. He stood before Jesus Christ in reverent, obedient trust and gave Him loyal devotion.

"General William Booth discarded the society of the Wesleyans and organized the Salvation Army. He did not administer the sacrament of baptism or the Lord's Supper, but he won many from lives of sin to lives of godliness. Oxford gave him the degree of Doctor of Laws, not because he was a great scholar, but because of his work. He was a Christian because he stood before Jesus Christ in reverent, obedient trust and gave Him loyal devotion.

"Edward Everett Hale did not think of Christ as you and I do, but he believed in the brotherhood of man and he lived the Golden Rule and he believed this, 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these ye did it unto me.' All these were in the unity of the spirit. They were Christians because they stood before Jesus Christ in reverent, obedient trust and gave Him loyal devotion."

Loyal devotion to the organization to which one belongs and to the truths for which that organization stands is a fine thing, but loyal devotion to the kingdom of God and its great all-inclusive spirit is finer. The light and truth that hold humanity together and impel all men forward in the service of God and their fellows is the light and truth we need in all our hearts and minds.

—A new decree in Italy requires all official correspondence, etc., to bear two dates, that of the Gregorian calendar (the one now in general use) and that the new fascist calendar which dates from October 28, 1922. Thus, January 15, 1926, would also be written "January 15, Year V." Another decree stipulates that the black shirt takes precedence over the dress uniform of foreign diplomats at state functions.

IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER?

The question is often asked, Is the world growing better or worse? It is a question I cannot decide, but of one thing I am sure: opportunities for young people are better than when I was growing up forty years ago.

As far back as I remember I felt that God was calling me to work for him. The greatest desire of my young heart was to go and tell about Heaven and the Savior of the world, how he left his home in Glory and came to earth and suffered and died that we might live. How well I remember how I would sit in church and listen to the minister. Then I would say to myself, The time will come when I too will stand before people and tell the wonderful sweet story of Jesus and the gospel. But to my sorrow and disappointment that time never came.

My father was a poor man, mother almost an invalid. From my earliest recollections my older sister had never been strong, and while she was very young was stricken down with double pneumonia; her life was despaired of several times. She did rally finally but was never strong any more.

It seemed hard on father, and I was his standby, as he often said.

Yet I could feel the call to go carry the message. I never gave up. I worked and went to school all I could, rising every morning before day to get through with the work in time to get to school on time, studied faithfully. Soon as I could read I went to studying the dear old Bible. How well I remember how I would slip away in some quiet place, away from everyone except God and nature to study His Word.

I also stood well in my class, knew my lessons; my teachers always took a great interest in me and often I was called on to do something by my teacher. I worked hard, studied and dreamed on—but, alas! my proper desire and aim in life was soon to be shattered.

How I remember one afternoon on my way home from school, I met one of my teachers, one who had always encouraged me.

After arriving at home I was informed she had been there and had insisted, even plead for me, to go to a higher school and in her earnestness for me she had said more than she should have said in my behalf, forgetting my frail mother.

When my father kindly but firmly told me how impossible it was for me to leave him, then it was that I shed some of the bitterest tears of my life. Yes, I cried, shed tears of disappointment and my heart went out to my poor father as never before. And yet I knew without going to a higher school I could never do the work that I felt in my heart God was calling me to do.

My father never knew how hard it was on me; he knew my heart was broken and I was disappointed, for he did know I craved an education. I realize now my mistake. I should have told him of the call, and confided in him. I believe he would have helped me, for he was a consecrated Christian and was considered a pillar in the church. But instead of telling him all, I decided that perhaps God would use me at home and have tried to live for Him and work for Him, but somehow I am never called on to do anything in the church or anything that I feel counts. I want to work for Him but there seems to be no room for me.

Am writing thus with the hope it will help some young person who feels the call as I did to confide in someone whom you know is your best friend, parent or pastor. I am glad the time has come when all young people can have an education if they desire it. There are high schools within reach of almost every child and there is always someone who will help a high school graduate go to college.

And if anyone wants to enter the ministry, or go to the heathen lands, there is always an opening, and in my heart I thank God for this improvement, for every good gift cometh from Him, but I am no longer young, my best days are spent. While there seems to be no place in the church for me to work I enjoy and attend services and in my heart I know I am a child of His and I feel there will be a place for me in Heaven.

Touching Story of a Life

We publish elsewhere the story of one woman's hopes and disappointments. One feels the pathos of it. Our sympathies are enlisted, and we feel that the disappointment might have been prevented if only she had made her desires known. She is advanced in years now and no longer hopes to do the work she once ardently looked forward to. She writes anonymously, and tells her story, not to awaken sympathy and enlist help for her, but to call the attention of young people to the importance of their using the advantages provided in this better day to prepare themselves in time for the work to which God is calling them. She feels that her life has been a failure; but has it? It is true she has failed to do the special work she had in mind in her early days, but have not her longings to enter that work made her a better woman in the somewhat different sphere of life in which she has lived? We believe so. She may have been mistaken as to her proper sphere and work. God's providence often leads us in a better way than we could have chosen in the days of our youthful ambitions. Few do just the things they had imagined for themselves. If we yield ourselves to God, He will do with us and through us greater and better things than those we had pictured so fondly for ourselves. This consideration may relieve the sense of disappointment we feel when we compare life as it has been with life as fancy had painted it. Surely no life is a failure that leads one to God. May our sister find comfort in a sense of the Father's love and guidance in what of life remains to her.

Shall We Have Another War With Mexico?

same question was directed by a group of editors to the President. After a time he replied respectfully, but did not give the information asked for. A Massachusetts man remarks that the church should be getting ready to bless a war waged for the purpose of making Mexico and Nicaragua safe for foreign investors.

Let us not be led into an unholy war with Mexico. We would better pay our citizens for all they have lost by their investments. As to our Catholic brethren, let us recommend to them the method of moral suasion.

A writer in the July Biblical Review asks, "How can there be any evangelism if the Evangel be denied? Are we loyal to evangelism if we allow the faith of the younger generation to be undermined by negative ideas, and the faith of the younger ministry to be shattered in the very schools of divinity? While we evangelize this generation we are allowing negative thinkers to train leadership that will unevangelize the next. Such loyalty to truth must make angels weep and devils laugh."—Selected.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ITEMS

Thirty-two men in our colleges and seminary are being given financial assistance by the Board this year. They are distributed as follows: Seminary, 1; Western Maryland, 5; Adrian, 4; Westminster College, 4; and High Point, 2.

Fourteen young people are being given assistance through the Student Loan Fund. They are distributed as follows: Adrian, 10; Western Maryland, 3; and High Point, 7. Another application has been received from a young lady in Adrian. If the conditions are met she will be added to this list.

The returns from Rally Day are now ahead of the total received for all of last year. The following statement is interesting. The prospects are that the offerings this year will exceed anything ever received by the Board of Education for a special day.

Rally Day Offerings

Conference	To date—Jan. 1.	1925-1926

Washington Mission	65.00	.....
Missouri	50.67	.....
Arkansas	37.75	77.63
Louisiana	10.70	.....
Tennessee	1.00	.....

Other Conferences sent in offerings last year. Only those reporting so far this year are included in the above tabulation. Ohio, Pittsburgh, West Virginia, Indiana and North Carolina Conferences report substantial increases. The amount received to January 1st was $13,911.13, several hundred dollars more than the total received last year.

Several prominent Methodist Protestant business men in North Carolina have become so concerned over the situation at High Point College they have accepted the responsibility of securing funds for the $250,000 indebtedness which has not only been a serious handicap but has threatened to bring to an untimely end this promising enterprise. We are not at liberty to give figures, but we are reliably informed that the effort is meeting with encouraging success. The entire amount will be provided for by the close of the school year, according to those responsible for the campaign.

High Point College has secured a continuation of their rating as a Standard Grade A institution. This is a temporary arrangement but will be maintained as long as the school meets certain requirements as to income, faculty standards, library equipment, etc. But it means that in a short time the debt must be liquidated and an endowment secured yielding at least $25,000. These conditions are made by the standardizing agencies and denominational authorities have no control over them. We must meet them or our educational program will be ruined.

The Adrian College campaign is on the point of beginning the active solicitation for funds. The survey is practically completed. This furnished approximately 12,000 names to whom the literature will be sent and from whom it is hoped pledges will be obtained. The survey revealed that the Methodist Protestant people of the Adrian area are able to give the $500,000 sought although it means giving to the very limit of their ability. The response from those to whom the solicitors have gone first makes the campaign committee feel that there is every reason to expect success.

Westminster College is struggling bravely ahead and there is evidently a growing confidence in the school and its future. The closing of the old dormitory for boys and the discontinuance of the interscholastic athletic program have done far more good than expected. Matters of discipline are not so acute and the interest of the students in fundamental college matters has visibly increased. Westminster College is probably the first denominational school in the country to have the courage to give up extra-mural athletics. The action has been commented on favorablyby leading educators in Texas and the step commended. The final results will be watched with much interest.

Each General Secretary is responsible in a special way for the promotion of the General Conference Budget in a certain area or group of conferences. The results in the Fourth Area during the first two years of the quadrennium are not without significance. The conferences of this area include Alabama, Mississippi, North Mississippi, Louisiana, Colorado-Texas, Texas, Arkansas, Fort Smith-Oklahoma and the Colored Conferences. Their contributions for the two years are as follows:

Board of Home Missions	$1,224.10	$1,559.52
Women's Foreign Missionary Society	679.03	2,357.91

NEWS FROM OUR FOREIGN FIELDS

By the time you read this the Board of Foreign Missions will have met in Baltimore, and the matter of securing a successor to the late Fred C. Klein, D. D., as corresponding secretary of the Board, will have been acted upon. The hearts of all our people, who loved Dr. Klein, must have found sincere satisfaction in the worthy tribute paid to his memory by our editors in last week's issue of their papers; and I am sure that a kindred experience will be that of our missionaries and native Christians across the seas, for whom he labored so faithfully.

India—Good News

Usually "the best of the wine is kept to the end of the feast," and usually in this column we write of our missionary fields in the order in which we entered them—Japan coming first. A piece of good news, however, justifies us in abandoning these customs. Under date of November 18, 1926, in a letter to Dr. Klein, Rev. Paul M. Cassen, of India, writes, "About three weeks ago I wrote you concerning a bungalow, and the prospects concerning one in the near future. At that time I had nothing to offer by way of suggestion; but now I have something to tell you. In the past two weeks we have received $1,000 from a party, who does not care to disclose names, and the money is in the bank at the present time. It is the desire of the party that the money be put toward a bungalow for us. They have left the matter wholly in our hands, however, to be used as we shall see fit." After explaining a number of local matters pertaining to the building of the proposed bungalow, and showing that about Rupees 10,000, or approximately $3,000 more will be needed, he closes that part of his letter, saying: "Separate houses is one of the biggest needs at the present time, and if that problem is solved it will mean a great deal to the workers and the work."

Knowing our physical equipment in India as I do, I keenly appreciate the great handicap under which the Minnis and Cassen families have served as missionaries, in being forced to live in the same bungalow. The privacy essential to a happy home life has been denied them, but with Christian grace they have borne the handicap, sustained by the hope that the Board would provide, as soon as possible, an additional bungalow for the Cassen family. All our other missionaries have separate homes, and the Board is anxious to provide the additional home we need in India. Any one desiring to contribute to this worthy enterprise, can send their gift to Mrs. Fred C. Klein, Berwyn, Md., marked, "For the Cassen bungalow in India."

Japan

A recent letter from Rev. Clyde Auman says, "I am making my plans to leave Japan in July next as per Board's action." How rapidly the years fly! It seems but yesterday since the Aumans left for Japan, and before we know it they will be here among us spending their furlough. Such reflections remind us that what we do for world evangelization we must do quickly.

China

In a letter dated November 9, 1926, Rev. C. G. Soderbom writes, "I have been thinking over our furlough. Please do what you can for us that we may begin it not later than the autumn of 1927. By that time it will be very near fourteen and a half years since I arrived last in China, and of these years I have spent over ten in Methodist Protestant mission work. I have already noticed the consequences of this too long term are beginning to tell on me."

The Board greatly appreciates Brother Soderbom's sacrifice in continuing his stay until another missionary can be sent to help Brother Horace Williams, and will strive to grant his request.

Another Letter

By means of excerpts from letters received, this column can pass on to you the gist of what you ought to know concerning our missionary work. The following is from Brother H. C. Staley, our treasurer: "The enclosed statement contains an overdraft of $5,520 and as we have the three leanest months of the year facing us, and with your expenditures running in the neighborhood of some $9,000 a month, it will be necessary to do some financing at an early date."

This means that either the church will raise the budget, the monthly allowance to Japan, China and India remain unsent, or six or eight thousand dollars be borrowed. Our folks have the money we need and every dollar of it is the Lord's.

J. C. Broomfield.

"FAINT, YET PURSUING"

"I want to let go,"
But I will not let go!
I am sick that is true,
And discouraged and blue,
Worn out thru and thru,
But I will not let go!

"I want to let go!"
But I will not let go!
I am poor and perplexed,
Disheartened and vexed,
Care not what comes next!
But I will not let go.

"I want to let go!"
But I will not let go.
The joys are all flown,
Life hath left me alone—
For bread there's a stone:
But I will not let go.

"I want to let go!"
But I will not let go.
There's work to be done,
A race to be run,
A crown to be won:
I will not let go.

"I want to let go!"
But I will not let go.
There are battles to fight,
By day and by night:
And I will not let go.

"But I want to let go!"
But I will not let go.
I never will yield.
What, lie down on the field,
And surrender my shield?
No, I will not let go.

"I want to let go!"
But I will not let go!
Be this ever my song,
" 'Gainst the legions of wrong,
Oh, God make me strong,
That I may not let go."

SORROW TURNED INTO JOY

Whose lives are peaceful, ne'er by toil distressed;
They cannot fathom the physician's skill
Whose frame knows naught of pain, who ne'er are ill.

They cannot see the beauty of His face
Whose circle is complete—no vacant space;
Nor taste the sweetness of His wondrous love
Till other sweets have fled, or worthless prove.

Twas in the furnace that the Lord's own hands
Relieved the faithful three of all their bands;
And in the lions' den that Daniel proved
The power and keeping of the God he loved.

The WORK and the WORKERS

This last Sunday, the cold Sunday, was spent at Moriah, Tabernacle, and West End.

At Moriah Rev. H. C. Carmichael, of Lexington, preached to a small audience of good listeners. He gave us a good gospel message. The audience was small because of a death in the community, and because of the intense cold of the morning. All who were present deserve credit.

At Tabernacle Mrs. Dixon gave the message. Brother Ashburn had asked that she organize a Christian Endeavor Society, and with this in view she made the address leading up to the organization. There was a good audience considering the weather, and they responded well and organized the C. E. Society. I trust the reporter from Tabernacle will tell more about it and give the list of officers.

At West End for the evening service I found that my presence was timely, since the sister of Dr. J. D. Williams and the mother of Revs. D. R. and T. A. Williams had passed away Saturday night. Rev. N. M. Harrison,Jr., preached for Dr. Williams Sunday morning, and I was glad to be able to be of help in the evening service. It was a pleasure to preach to these people. The church here is undertaking new and heavier responsibilities, and under the leadership of their splendid pastor we believe they will move on to success.

Appointments and Omissions

Rev. O. B. Williams has been appointed pastor of one church at Haw River and has taken charge of that pastorate.

My attention has been called to the omission of Winston, South Winston, and Yarboroughs in the Stationing Committee's report as published in the Journal. This must have been an omission of someone who copied the report, or of the typesetter. It certainly was not an intentional omission. Rev. C. M. Compher is pastor of Winston, Rev. P. L. Kinnaman of South Winston, and Rev. E. G. Cowan of Yarboroughs. Rev. M. I. Crutchfield was released from Yarboroughs that he might give full time to Anderson.

First Quarterly Conference and Report Blanks

We presume that nearly all first quarterly conferences have been held, or that they will be held within a very few days, so report blanks will be mailed to pastors at an early date, hoping that each one will report promptly.

Helpers Who May Be Called Upon

Frequently in our outlying fields pastors feel the need of help. The president is always glad to go when he can, and his attention is always given to the "weaker fields" in preference to the "stronger fields," but no one of us can be in two places at the same time; so I am following my former plans and am asking a few men in each district to stand ready to render assistance when called upon. Pastors will please press these men into service when needed. In each case I am naming first the chairman of the district:

District 1.—R. C. Stubbins, J. M. Cutchin, C. L. Spencer and S. C. Whitaker.

District 2.—R. A. Hunter, H. F. Fogleman, C. B. Baskett and S. J. Floyd.

District 3.—T. O. Pender, B. M. Williams, T. M. Johnson and S. W. Taylor.

District 4.—L. W. Gerringer, J. D. Williams, F. R. Stout and N. M. Harrison, Jr.

District 5.—W. T. Hanner, G. F. Millaway, F. S. Gibbs and John Curtis.

Disttrict 6.—J. E. Pritchard, W. L. Ward, L. F. Ward and W. H. Neese.

District 7.—N. G. Bethea, V. W. Idol, J. W. Boyles and J. H. Moton.

District 8.—R. M. Cox, R. N. Hauser, George L. Curry and C. M. Compher.

District 9.—J. D. Morris, J. M. Morgan and E. A. Bingham.

District 10.—H. F. Surratt, G. H. Hendry, R. S. Garmon and D. A. McLaurin.

District 11.—C. W. Bates, J. D. Cranford and Lester Watts.

District 12.—J. Lee Poole, E. G. Cowan and M. I. Crutchfield.

District 13.—J. U. Whitlock, J. H. Snotherly and J. R. Anderson.

District 14.—J. T. Sisk, Gleen Madison and J. W. Cartner.

I have already attended seven quarterly conferences and will be glad to attend as many as possible during the year. Pastors can help in this, if they desire my presence, by holding some of their conferences on other days besides Saturday. If you must hold on Saturday, and wish help, then call on some of the above men, or anyone else in your territory you would like to have.

Sparkles From the Field

Brother S. W. Taylor calls our attention again to those markers, simple and inexpensive, which will tell the passer-by what church he is passing. This should be done by all our country churches. It has been done by a number of them, and usually where it is done the church grounds are kept well. I passed one of our country churches a few days ago; there is no marker, the grounds are badly washed, and it is really difficult to get in from the main road to the church.

Bess Chapel reports: "A C. E. Society, organized by Rev. E. G. Cowan, still pressing forward with the work to reach the goals he set for us."

In that same column Rev. E. A. Bingham sets splendid goals before his people for the year. Among them we read: "A larger and better vacation Bible school."

From Charlotte Mission Brother Braswell says: "Our membership aim is one hundred, and the dedication of one hundred children by baptism."

Orange, Rev. B. M. Williams says: "We are trying to raise College Assessment this month. Hope to raise Annual Conference Claims next month." Fine! May his tribe increase.

Shiloh, North Davidson: "Our Sunday school has occupied the new Sunday school rooms. Last year our enrollment reached 319. We have for our goal this year 400. Our pastor showed wisdom in organizing a Workers' Council, which has been a great help to the officers and teachers, and to the whole Sunday school."

Appointments

January 20, 7 p. m., Moriah, quarterly conference.

January 23, 11 a. m., First Church, High Point; 7 p. m., Welch Memorial.

January 30, 11 a. m., Calvary, Greensboro; 7 p. m., St. Paul.

February 6, 11 a. m., First Church, Winston; 7 p. m., Lebanono, High Point.

February 13, 11 a. m., First Church, Burlington; 7 p. m., Fountain Place.

Some of these appointments are being made without consulting pastors, so if other things are in the way and my coming will not be timely, changes can be made.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. Dixon.

OUR DAILY LIFE

If today we are tempted to do wrong we must remember that sin is not something we can get rid of by forgetting it. We may think that it will cost us only a few days of wretchedness and then our conscience will become quiet and everything will go on as before. But everything will not go on as before. We may forget it or we may be able to quiet our conscience so that we shall feel perfectly comfortable over it, but so long as that sin stays in our heart its deadly work will go on. An unforgiven sin keeps on undermining our character regardless of whether we think of it or not. There is no way to smother out a sin, we must get rid of it, and we can only get rid of it through forgiveness.

We can find at the foot of the cross what Jacob found at Peniel. With that vision of Christ's sacrificial love before us we can see our sin and we can look to Him to forgive our sin.

Are we really kind or are we only trying to make our way by a show of kindness. We are going to do the things which kindness demands whether we are kind or not, but if we go no further than that it will amount to nothing in the end. We must fall in with God as our Father, and then when we look upon our fellowmen we shall see that they are our brothers and our hearts will go out to them as our brothers.

If we have trouble with a fellow man today, and we become conscious of the slightest feeling of malice or bitterness and have not the courage to get rid of it by going at once to him in the right spirit, we must hasten at once to Christ and seek His spirit. If we get His Spirit we shall have a forgiving spirit which refuses to cherish malice or bitterness toward any one under any circumstances. We must remember that whether we are given an opportunity to express our forgiveness or not, we must forgive in our heart, and if we do this we shall think of him in a spirit of forgiveness and thus our hearts will be kept free from every trace of malice or bitterness.—Selected.

SOMETIME

Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here have spurned—
The things o'er which we've grieved with lashes wet—
Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
As stars shine, most in deeper tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love and true.

But not today. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart;
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.
And if, through patient toil we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
When we shall clearly know and understand,
I think that we shall say that "God knew best."

CHRIST'S WAY

When Jesus was on earth he never sought to entice people into becoming his disciples by offering to gratify their pleasurable emotions or selfish appetites. His appeal was to their deep sense of need and obligation. To be sure, he held up before them the wealth of the Heavenly Father's love and the rich provisions of His grace, but along with these he presented faithfully to their view the self-denial and self-sacrifice that would be required. When an enthusiastic scribe announced his purpose to follow him, he replied, "The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." To seek to win men to the Church by appealing to wrong motives is to reduce Christianity to the low level of the heathen religions. Its challenge to the heroic element in man has ever been one of the potent elements of strength in the Christian faith. This may repel some, but only those who are thus won will worthily represent our Lord.—Selected.

BE A BOOSTER

If you think your Church the best
Tell 'em so!
If you'd have it lead the rest,
Help it grow!
When there's anything to do,
Let them always count on you,
You'll feel good when it is through,
Don't you know?

If you're used to giving knocks,
Change your style,
Throw bouquets instead of rocks
For awhile.
Let the other fellow roast,
Shun him as you would a ghost;
Meet his banter with a boast
And a smile.

When a stranger from afar
Comes along,
Tell him who and what you are,
Make it strong.
Never flatter, never bluff,
Tell the truth for that's enough,
Be a booster, that's the stuff.
Don't just belong.

AMBITION AND SUCCESS

A boy at seventeen can practically determine for himself whether he will be a simple burden-bearer for others as long as he lives, a leech on society, or whether he will be a broad-minded, useful and successful man. If the boy at this age has no ambition to be anybody and content to simply let things flicker and take his chance with others just like him, frittering away his opportunities to acquire knowledge and caring only for the trivialities of life, he can make up his mind to carry a hod, ride on the brake beams of a freight car or dodge the police as long as he lives, or he can resolve to be a man in the highest sense, seek every means by physical, mental and moral growth and development and graduate into the ever widening field of utility and success. It matters little what his boyhood environment may be. If he but has the ambition and well-grounded purpose he will climb out of it.—Pittsburgh Press.

OUR STORY PAGE

PLAYING HOUSE

Billy and Jean and little Marge were playing house. That is, they were going to play house. Marge always hoped that they would begin, but they never could begin, because Billy and Jean never could finish making the house. Every time it was almost ready to play house in, it would be time for lunch or supper, or something.

Today, it was a sand house. It had low walls and lots of rooms. Jean was making sand furniture—chairs and things—and Billy was digging the bath tub. He let Marge run down to the sea and bring up water in her little pail for the bathtub, but it wasn't really necessary, because he was going to dig deep enough so the sea water would come up from the bottom.

"Maybe it'll be finished today in time to play house in," said Marge, hopefully.

"You go and get some shells, Marge," said Billy.

Marge willingly trotted off with her little pail to pick up shells. There were lots and lots of them, but the little ones a little way off always looked the best, so Marge went further and further from her big brother and sister.

Suddenly she saw something bright lying at her feet, and when she picked it up she found it was a tiny silvery watch with a glittering bracelet attached. She was so excited she hardly knew what to do at first. Then she put it in with her shells, thinking that it would be real cute on Jean's little mantle-piece.

The little pail was quite full, when she heard somebody calling: "Ma-r-rgie!"

Oh, dear! Now they wouldn't be able to play house. It was time for something.

There stood her mother and two bigger sisters and her Aunt Beth who was visiting them.

"Come, children!" called Mother. "Time to get cleaned up for supper."

"Aw, shucks!" exclaimed Billy.

"Maybe we can begin playing house tomorrow!" said Marge.

"No, the tide will come in and wash our house away!" sighed Jean.

"Come on," said Grace, one of the big sisters. "Empty your pail, Marge."

"No!" exclaimed Marge, looking fierce.

"Well, don't be so cross about it," said Grace, in her grown-up voice. "Mother says you've got to stop bringing trash into the house."

" 'Tisn't trash either," replied Marge. "You don't know the diamonds and treasures I've got in this pail."

Grace smiled and said: "No, darling, I don't."

As the family went up the sands to their bungalow, they met a crowd of people coming down. They all seemed to have stiff backs like Uncle John with the lumbago. They were bent over, shooting their necks right and left like chickens.

"What's the matter wif you?" inquired Marge stopping one of the gentlemen.

"A lady has lost something very precious," he replied, while Grace pulled Marge's hand.

"I got something precious in my pail," said Marge, and and the man saw the shells, smiled and winked at the little girl.

"Well," he said, "keep hold of it and don't let it get away from you."

"What's a good way to keep them from getting away," insisted Marge.

"Well," answered the man, "find a good place to keep them, and then keep them there."

This was advice worth thinking about. Marge thought and thought about a good place for her watch, little dreaming that it was the very thing that all those people were looking for. Finally she had a bright idea. Her hat! She had a nice straw hat made of what her mother called "peanut straw." It was lined with white cloth. Marge picked a little place in the lining and put her watch in. But first she wound the watch. Then she pinned the place shut with a safety pin.

After this the family noticed that Marge had become very fond of her hat. Her mother had had an awful time making her wear it, but now she insisted on having it with her always. She was seen to hug it close to her face with a rapt expression. She was always holding it up and waving it in front of people and asking them to hear it tick. This was a fearful bore to the grown-ups. Peanut straw always ticks when it dries or gets wet or gets hot or gets cold.

Meanwhile the days slid by and Billy and Jean kept building houses, but they never finished them in time to play house. Marge almost gave up hope. They kept her trotting on errands and the big sisters acted as if they didn't want to be bothered with little five-year-old girls, so Marge began to feel a little blue.

One day she saw the man who had advised her about precious things, and she trotted up to him. He was glad to talk to her. They went for a walk, and he showed her how to skip stones, and told her about the queer ways of the crabs. He was just the nicest man in the world. When Marge let him listen to her peanut straw hat, he didn't wave it away and start talking about something else. He was real interested, and asked to see the treasure inside. Marge made him promise not to tell about it, then she unpinned the lining and showed him the watch. You should have seen his eyes bulge.

"Why—why—you little dickens!" he cried. "Here you had it the whole time! my dear, that cost over a thousand dollars."

"I knew it was precious," smiled Marge proudly, taking it quickly out of the man's hand. "That's why I found a good hiding place for it and kept it there, just like you told me."

"Yes, yes," said the man, knitting his brows, "but isn't there anything in the world you'd rather have than the watch. Think now."

"Maybe he's a fairy under an awful enchantment," thought Marge. "Some wicked witch has made him fat and all that. Well, I must think quick!"

She shut her eyes a minute to concentrate. Then she opened them and fairly shouted: "I wish for a playhouse all fixed and ready to begin playing house in!"

"Presto!" cried the man. "Hide your treasure, and when your wish is granted give it to me in return."

"I'll give it to you now!" said Marge.

"Where do you want your playhouse?" inquired the man.

"Oh, why, let's see!" said Marge. "I want a magic one that'll be anywhere I want it to be. In our yard in the city, here, on the beach or anywhere."

"I see!" said the man with his eyes on the tiny watch.

He was a famous architect instead of a fairy, so he had to do more than wave a wand. But in about a week a large box arrived for Marge, and when it was opened it was found to contain all the parts of a lovely little playhouse. The walls and everything were numbered and there was a piece of paper telling how to put it together.

My! it was exciting! The whole family helped to put it up in the yard. It took only a little while, and there stood a lovely little house painted white, all papered inside and furnished nicely. There was a porch, sitting room, kitchen and bedroom and bathroom. There was a fireplace and a chimney. Billy and Jean took it all down and put it up again by themselves—with Marge's permission.

"And to think that child had the watch in her hat the whole time and we never knew it!" exclaimed Grace.

The best of it all was that Billy and Jean and Marge began playing house that very day.—Selected.

PROVE THAT YOU ARE AS GOOD AS ANYBODY

There is a certain lad in a town not a hundred miles from Chicago who is very fond of saying that he is as good as anybody. And apparently it is with the idea of proving the assertion that he goes about wearing his hat when he would be expected to remove it. He tramps through a crowd with his elbows out, and if people do not wish to be shoved or stepped on, they had better get out of the way. He is as good as anybody, and he proves it by being less considerate and courteous and obliging than the average.

Sensible people have no objection to a boy's thinking well of himself. They know that self-respect is back of most achievements and that the boy who cringes and tacitly apologizes for existing has a poor prospect of ever making a man. If America stands for anything it is for the idea that any boy can be as good as any other. His ranking does not depend on what his father was, or what his grandfather did. It is not decided by his surroundings nor his pocket money. We start even.

You are as good as anybody till you fall below the standard. That was the mistake of the foolish youth referred to earlier. He tried to prove his worth by falling short in the fundamentals of gentle manlinesss, and he failed. Shabby clothes and an humble ancestry did not make him inferior to those he met, but his own bad manners did.

You cannot prove you are as good as anybody by arrogance and rudeness. But the fact is that if you are as good as you ought to be you will not be troubling yourself to prove it. You will be so much more concerned to measure up to your own standard than you are to impress other people, that you will go right on living at your best, regardless of what others say and think.—Youth's Companion.

WHO HOLDS YOU DOWN?

What object is more pitiable than that of a healthy, strong, well-educated young man whining about the hard times, or the lack of opportunity in this land which is so packed with chances? In what other country, or at what other time in the history of the world, were the times better or the opportunities greater?

Tens of thousands of young people in this country try to excuse themselves for their failure to do something worth while by saying that it is the fault of society, that it is due to economic conditions, to the fact that a few good-for-nothing idlers get all the money and all the good things, while the many do all the work and bear all the burdens.

Young men and young women idle away their lives, waiting for something to turn up, for somebody to boost them: while other boys and girls, with half their chance, educate and lift themselves out of poverty. The veriest nonsense that ever entered a youth's head is that the good chances are in the past, that somebody must help him or he can never start.

The mainspring of your watch is not outside of its case. No power of influence outside of the watch can make it keep good time. Its mainspring is inside. The power which will carry you to your goal is not somebody else. It is in yourself, or nowhere.—Success.

THE UNSEEN GARMENT

A dressmaker was coming to sew in the Masterson home. Esther had her new dress all planned. A drop dress of a thin, inexpensive material was required underneath the tunic. Esther was young and had no experience whatever in dressmaking, but she was sure that she could make that slip. Finally her mother let her try.

When the dressmaker came the next day it took more time to alter the slip and make it right than it would have taken to make a new slip.

"I didn't think it would matter so much," said Esther. "The slip does not show."

"If the slip does not hang right, the whole dress will hang wrong," said the dressmaker. "The part that doesn't show must be right, as well as the part that does show."

It is the same with more serious things. If you want your manners and your words to be right, the surest way to accomplish this is to have good thoughts and feelings. The things that are unseen must first be right.—Queen's Gardens.

THE EYE OF THE LORD

Some years ago George Kennan, the famous traveler and explorer, in one of a series of articles on the Russian exile system for political prisoners, described the cells in the Strubatski fortress in which such prisoners are first confined.

In the door of each cell is an opening, commanding every portion of the room, just large enough for a human eye. At any time that eye may appear, calm and inscrutable—nothing but the eye. There is no corner in which to hide from it. Every act can be observed, every movement watched, and the effect on the prisoner, guilty or not, is a nervous strain under which many break completely down. It is always the eye, impersonal and terrible, standing for an avenging law seeking evidence on which to condemn.

"The eye of the Lord is in every place, beholding the evil and the good," and the thought is either terrible or blessed according to our view of God and our attitude toward Him. If we think of the Almighty merely as a great Ruler, the King of kings, whose chief aim to uphold the majesty of His law, watchful for every slip, insistent that each shall bear the fullest penalty of every act, then no wonder if the thought of His all-seeing eye is more terrible than the eye of the watcher in the Strubatski fortress is to the Russian prisoner. But if we rise to the precious truth of the Fatherhood of God, then as His children we rejoice to think of His eye upon us, for it means comfort, protection and help.—Lutheran Observer.

CHILDREN AND THE CHURCH

Children should be taught to love the Church, and to interest themselves in its care. They will thus be more readily interested in its services, and accept the truths preached. The seeds of an early affection will bear fruit to God's glory, and the early recollection will be a delight. Some joke on this subject. They tell of enforced church attendance; of long sermons, stiff seats and aching backs; of Sabbath as a dull and dreary day. Such talk is on a par with the standard joke about mothers-in-law. There may be vicious and unreasonable mothers-in-law, so there may be families where Sabbath is a torment, but they are the exception. We have heard many blame early church attendance in explanation of their non-attendance at church, but the instances in which we thought this plea sincere and the true explanation have been very rare indeed. As a rule, it is those who have attended church as children who as adults are regular church attenders. As a rule, too, they are grateful for having been required to attend church. —Selected.

MISSIONARY ACTIVITIES ON RANDLEMAN CHARGE

Mt. Lebanon

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of Mt. Lebanon held their Thank-Offering service on the night of November 26. The president, Mrs. J. L. Hall, had worked untiringly for the success of the service.

The program consisted of special songs, a duet, by Misses Margaret Hall and Mildred Brookshire, Pantomime, "The Sinner and the Song," Miss Bertie Caudle sang the solo, Misses Kate Ferree, Margaret Hall and Mr. Ed Jarrett and Rev. Mr. Neece sang the quartet, Mrs. Johnsie Van Werry made the gestures. It was good. Talks were made by Mr. L. R. Hughes and Pastor Neese. A reading, "My Thank-offering," was given by Mrs. Neese. "The Missionary Alphabet" by the children. The ladies of the society turned in their Blessing Boxes with the offering. We have $12. to send into Treasury which puts our society "over the top" on our Budget.

At the regular meeting of the society Sunday a.m. we were pleased to have Prof. Shelton, Principal of Randleman High School, meet with us and read the Scripture lesson. Rev. Mr. Neese led the opening prayer and Mr. L. R. Hughes the closing prayer. We are always so glad to have the honorary members meet with us that we give them something to do.

It was decided Sunday to pack a box of second-hand clothing and send to Pine Ridge within the next week. The President distributed the Blessing Boxes and asked that we try to fill them before our next Thank-offering service. I am sure if we were to drop in even a penny for each blessing we have our boxes would be running over before another year should roll around. So may it be.

Worthville

We held our regular meeting of the Foreign Missionary Society here Sunday night. We did not have a full attendance of the memmers but we had a good meeting. We have a faithful few here who never miss a meeting.

Mr. Fred Allred, one of our honorary members, had charge of the devotional, reading a Psalm of Thanksgiving, after which he made us a good little talk. Mrs. Paris Foust led the prayer, after which she read a paper which was interesting.

This society is almost "over the top" too, with its Budget.

MRS. W. H. NEESE, Corres. Sec'y.

(This paper recently came to our attention in an unexpected place. We beg pardon for the delay in its publication.—Editor.)

—Brother J. F. Williams of Calvary church was not well enough to be at church last Sunday. We hope he will soon be with us again.

—A number of Calvary people attended the funeral of Mrs. Thomas Gladson at Moriah last Sunday afternoon.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

There can be no doubt as to this fact: the Young People's Summer Conference is one of the outstanding events of the conference year. A conference in which better and more effective methods of every phase of church activity are studied; in which the young people of our church receive a large vision; in which there is being developed capable leadership; in which every year a goodly number of our young people consecrate their life to part or full time service. Surely such a conference as this is worthy of our time, our devotion and our best efforts. Therefore, during these days when the weather is exceedingly cold and we feel that we would thoroughly enjoy just a few days of "the good old summer time," may we be thinking and praying and working even now to the end that the summer conference of 1927 may be the "best yet" conference.

The Time: July 18th through the 24th.

The Place: High Point College, High Point, N. C.

Last Friday at a meeting of the Young People's Board, Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., was asked to conduct the registration campaign for this conference. We can not afford to fall below the registrations of previous years. We must go forward to bigger and greater things! Therefore, we want the largest registration ever. The fees are: Adults, 50 cents; children 25 cents. Send all registration fees to Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., Greensboro, N. C.

Yours for a bigger and better conference,

FRED W. PASCHALL.

ERRORS IN THE CONFERENCE JOURNAL

Along about this time of year for the past eleven years, I have written a piece to the Herald with some such caption. So it has become somewhat of a habit. But I always write it with regret. I had hoped sometime the Conference Journal would be so perfect it wouldn't be necessary for me to have to say anything.

This time there are two errors that my attention has been called to, and I suppose someone will discover still others.

The first is the omission of three charges from the Stationing Committee's report, namely: Winston, South Winston, and Yarborough. I do not know how the error occurred, except to say that these charges were included in the report of the Committee as it came to my Secretary's desk. So I probably overlooked it in reading the proof. I am sincerely sorry!

However, these charges with the names of the pastors will be found in the Conference Directory, and, of course, they couldn't have got there unless the Stationing Committee put them there, or Conference so directed. This Directory will be found on page 8.

The other error is in Table III of the Statistics. Three colums have been transposed, or at least the headings have. "Special Offering" ought to be the last column. If you will move the other two up, you will have no difficulty with understanding the Table.

C. W. BATES, Secretary.

—Terrible things are happening in China. In their rage against foreigners the natives are attacking English and American women as well as men, beating them and dragging them through the streets by the hair. The boxer uprising is being repeated and outdone.

Sunday School Offering

High Point, First church, $16.17; Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Charge, $4.40; Mizpah, Haw River charge, $5; Shiloh, Randolph charge, $2.41; Lebanon, High Point, $4.09; Calvary, Greensboro, $20; Hickory Ridge, Forsyth Circuit, $5.28; Haw River Mission, Haw River, $3.89; Mount Carmel, Forsyth Circuit, $2.25; Ray Bible class, Graham charge, $2.73; Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Circuit, $2.90; Pleasant Hill, Birthday offering, from Spring church, $4.36.

Our heartfelt thanks go out to everyone who helps us, let it be much or little. We are praying for a good year for every church in the conference. Hope you will remember us in your prayers as well as with your money. We have a big responsibility in looking after so many children, and trying to guide them in the way they should go.

Lesson for January 23.—Prayer in the Christian Life. Mark 1:35; 14:32-36; Matt. 6:9-13.

Song Books Needed

We need a few song books for our Sunday school, and wonder if we cannot get a few, like we now have, from some Sunday school that has been using the same book, but has gotten new ones. We use the "Hymns of Praise," published by Hope Publishing Company, and would greatly appreciate it if any school that has discarded this book would send us a dozen or so copies. We will pay the express. Ship to H. W. Wade, Treasurer, Burlington, N. C.

Sincerely yours,

H. W. WADE.

—Mrs. Lucinda E. Williams died Sunday morning at her home, Hillsboro, aged 85 years, and was buried Monday. Funeral was held in the Episcopal church, Hillsboro, at two o'clock. She was the mother of Rev. D. R. and Rev. T. A. Williams, and sister of Rev. J. D. Williams.

—Mrs. Mary S. King of Greensboro was buried at Pleasant Garden last week. Her husband was a minister in the Southern Methodist Church. She was a sister of Mrs. J. H. Coble of Calvary M. P. Church, and Pastor Gerringer assisted in the funeral.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Greenwood

To most of us, whether kin or acquaintance, she was simply "Cousin 'Lize" or "Aunt 'Liza." And the very fact that we all called her so is in itself a tribute to her character.

Last Friday night, New Year's Eve, she complained a bit of her arm hurting; and then, at 9:30, as she and her husband were alone together, she slipped away and left him alone. "There shall be two together, and the one shall be taken and the other left." There was no great pain for her, no lingering illness. As her husband said, she took the easiest way to go to glory.

And surely she is there. This woman was an outstanding Christian. Quiet in her religious profession, but one whose very attitude witnessed to the spirit of Jesus in her. And noble in all the finest qualities of Christian womanhood.

She had one preeminent virtue—that of loyalty. Devotion to things and folks was a passion with her. And especially toward her friends and loved ones, and toward the church.

It is written of a certain man that "He lived in a house by the side of the road."

It was true literally and figuratively of Mrs. Greenwood. No hour was too late to welcome to her home those who came for shelter from the night. The house was usually full of folks whose hearts were warmed by her welcome, and whose bodies were comforted by her hospitality.

But it was toward her church and her pastor that this loyalty was especially manifest. Whenever the pastor called it was her invariable custom to greet him with: "Here comes my preacher." He belonged to her.

We say often of some one, " He was a pillar in the church." Of no one can it be said more truthfully than of her. A charter member of the Asheville church, she gave her heart and soul to it, rejoicing in its prosperity, mourning when difficulties befell it; but always loyal. She was rarely ever absent from a morning service, necessity only keeping her from both the services. And always she came with a word of greeting and a cheery smile, things we shall miss as much as we miss her presence.

To many of us it was given to pass out of the old year into the new. It was her privilege to pass out of time into eternity. She leaves behind those who were near and dear, and they bear the burden of a great sorrow, but not the sorrow of those who have no hope. Rather there is rejoicing in it, the gladness of those who know that she is safe at home.

Mitchell

I do not know the facts of Brother Mitchell's life except by hearsay. The record shows that he joined the church during Brother Gerringer's pastorate "on profession of faith." But that in itself is eloquent, for they tell me that before that time and for many years before he led a wild life. He was above any man I know a trophy of the saving grace of God. For whatever may have been his life before, he was from the time he gave himself to Christ and the church a changed man. He was born again, born from above.

For some months before Brother Mitchell died his mind was diseased. Sometimes he was violent, sometimes almost normal. During his last normal spell he had two great desires. One was to come to church, the other was to go to Morganton where he hoped he might be cured of his malady. The day before he went to Morganton he came to church, and, his wife says, put the last dollar they had in the world into the collection plate. I shall not forget the satisfaction in his voice and face, as going out the door after service he said to me, "Well, preacher, I paid all I had on my assessment." (We gave it back to his wife afterwards, unknown to him.) And the next day he went to Morganton. But the spells he had been having grew worse rather than better, and in one of them, he passed on to be with Christ.

Our sympathy goes out to the lonely wife. It would be hard to find a couple more devoted to each other than these two were. The greater the love the greater the loneliness. But she is comforted even in her grief with the belief in her husband's happiness, and in the hope of reunion with a loved one she has loved and lost awhile.

Reavis

Mrs. J. W. Reavis of the Flat Rock Community, Vance county, living six miles north of Henderson, N. C., born May 21, 1851, was suddenly called from labor to reward on December 1, 1926.

The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baskett, Vance county. She had six sisters. She is survived by only one sister, Mrs. Frank Worthum of the Flat Rock community, Vance county.

She was married to J. W. Reavis November 14, 1872. To this union were born nine children. Two died in infancy. Mrs. Fletcher Satterwhite died in China some ten days before the mother deceased this life. The sad news of her daughter's death in China was never revealed to her as she was in very feeble health for some time before her departure. It seems fortunate, also providential, that God should come in the quietness of the night while grandma was sleeping and take her to His Eternal Home without her having to pass through the sad bereavement of her daughter's death. One can only imagine this meeting of mother and daughter on the Eternal Shore. Was it a surprise?

There survives her an aged husband, John W. Reavis, three sons, L. O. Reavis, Manson, N. C., W. B. and Louis Reavis, Henderson, N. C. The two latter living in the home with mother at time of death. Three daughters, Mrs. Jeff Jones, Henderson, N. C., Mrs. H. L. Powell, Triplet, Va., Mrs. J. H. Satterwhite of Flat Rock; sixteen grand-children, two great-grand-children, many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

As a wife she was true and devoted. A mother of the old type, loving and affectionate. Her oldest son, who had always been in the home with her, said to me on day of burial: "There may have been as good mothers but none better than my mother." A neighbor without an enemy. She always lent a helping hand to those in need. The whole community loved her. All were her friends who knew her. The kind, whole-hearted welcome and the sweet heavenly atmosphere about her good home made everyone love to visit there.

She was converted in 1889, joined Rock Spring M. E. Church, South; after her marriage to J. W. Reavis and they located in the Flat Rock community Flat Rock Methodist Protestant church was built, she and her husband joined, being charter members. Here she brought up her children in the Sunday school and church. She was not only a member but a devoted Christian. Her home was the home and resting place for the preacher, as many who read this sketch can testify.

The writer became acquainted with this good woman and family more than thirty years ago. I was her pastor for three years. living in parsonage near by. She loved the church and every cause of the Master's Kingdom.

Her funeral was conducted in her home church, a few hundred yards from where she lived her devoted and useful life, in the presence of more than a church full of sorrowful and weeping loved ones and friends, who had assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to one they loved, by Rev. M. P. Chambliss, the present pastor, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, pastor of First M. P. Church, Henderson. After the funeral her mortal remains were laid to rest in Flat Rock cemetery. Her mortal remains left to rest beneath a beautiful magnificent mound of the most expensive flowers, given by loved ones and friends. Here her remains await the awakening of the ressurection call.

Do not weep as those who have no hope. If you are faithful and true as she was faithful and true you will meet her in a better land where saints immortal reign and the shadows of night never fall, sickness and death are unknown.

(Written by request of family.)

H. L. POWELL, Ex-pastor.

White

Miss Frances Ann Ellen White, born July 23, 1856, departed this life Sunday, November 14, 1926. Miss White professed faith in Christ at an early age and united with Union Chapel M. P. Church on Granville Charge, later coming to Flat Rock on Vance Charge.

Cousin Ellen, as nearly everyone called her, never put herself forward or assumed any responsibility in the work of her church but was very faithful in her timid way. She was always kind and appreciative of her pastor.

She had made her home for more than five years with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. White, having come there upon death of the late Mrs. India Satterwhite. On October 10th last she suffered a fall that injured her hip, and from then until her death she was helpless, suffering much, but never complaining.

Surviving are two cousins, A. E. White and S. H. Satterwhite, and other distant relatives.

Funeral services were conducted from Flat Rock Methodist Protestant church, by Rev. R. A. Hunter, pastor of the Henderson church. She was laid to rest in J. P. Satterwhite's family plot at Flat Rock cemetery.

The pallbearers were Fletcher M. White, Henry E. White, Leonard W. Paschall, Ulyssess J. Parrott, Harry L. Smith, J. Henry Satterwhite.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Weaverville.—It has been some time since you have heard from us, but that is not saying that we have not been doing things. So far this year we have been very busy. There is lots of sickness in our community, at present.

We were very thankful to God and the good people of Weaverville charge for letting us come back with them for another year.

There have been some improvements made since conference. Clarks Chapel has purchased a new piano which adds greatly to the service.

There has also been a garage built and almost paid for on the parsonage lot; the writer is indeed thankful for that.

All our churches had splendid Christmas exercises. The pastor and his family were well remembered by all the churches, with lots of nice presents. We feel as if we never can repay the good folks of this work for the nice things given us.

Then as we were about to recover from the shower of Christmas presents they came to us with the most bountiful pounding; this came on the first Wednesday of the new year, bringing in many useful things for the kitchen, for all which we are very thankful to our Heavenly Father and to the people.

We held our first quarterly conference in Clarks Chapel last Thursday night at eight o'clock. Had a splendid meeting, heard good reports from the work. The reports show the work to be in much better condition this year than the same time last year.

The pastor has filled all his regular appointments this year but one, being called away from the Weaverville church the first Sunday in this month to attend Mrs. John Chandler's funeral. Mrs. Chandler was a member of the Baptist church but as she was the sister of Mrs. L. T. Watts, one of our leading members, the writer felt it well to accept the invitation to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Chandler, while she had been in ill health for several years, we feel as if she left all the evidence that was necessary to assure her friends and loved ones that she was gone to the mansion that Jesus said he would prepare for his loved ones. May God add His richest blessings to the family and the sorrowing ones.

Our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor services are holidng up fine this winter. The Sunday schools have doubled in attendance from last year and the prospects look fine for a real Sunday school in the summer.

May I ask an interest in all the prayers of the entire conference for us this year. We feel as if we needed them.

J. D. CRANFORD, Pastor.

Fountain Place.—Long and frequent reports are not positive evidence of progress, neither is silence an indication of retrogression. Frequently the largest smoke carries the smallest blaze. You have seen but little smoke rising from Fountain Place, however, we do not claim a great blaze, but progress seems to be normal. All members are optimistic and enthusiastic, and all indications point to a successful year.

We received a hearty welcome when we came here for the first time on the second Sunday in November, and our stay has continued to be very pleasant to date. This pleasantness was intensified on the evening of the first Sunday of December, when we were taken into the church kitchen and found that many good things had been placed there for the pastor and family. Since then we have been eating the best cornbread that ever "adorned" our table. These gifts were of material value and very much appreciated; however, we esteem the prompting spirit more highly.

We have never had the pleasure of serving a better people than those found at Fountain Place. This statement is not made because of the "loaves and fishes," but because of the spirit manifest. One member stated last Sunday that he was always anxious for Sunday to come so that he could engage in the church services. A spirit and interest like this is sure to win for the Master.

Our main point of attack at this time is our church debt. Plans are now being formulated whereby we expect to reduce our indebtedness. We are anxious to get this out of the way that we may complete our building program. While our present equipment will accommodate our congregations, it is felt that with additional facilities others would be attracted to the Light.

WILLIAM M. LOY, Pastor.

Thomasville, First Church.—The Christmas season has gone into history, with a fine record written for the good people of the "Mother Church of Methodist Protestantism in Thomasville." The Christmas tree exercise by the children and the pageant, "Gifts for the King," on Saturday and Sunday nights respectively were the most largely attended services in the history of the church. The children's exercise was one of the best it has been our pleasure to witness, the recitations together with the old Christmas hymns of our fathers opened up one's heart to a bigger ideal of what Christmas really means.

The pageant, "Gifts for the King," was a success from every point of view. Men, who were heads of large families and grandfathers who had never taken part in any public performance, were just as eager to do their parts right, as if they had been youngsters again. From the first meeting for rehearsal until the final scene on Sunday evening of the 26th of December, the spirit of co-operation and brotherly love permeated every meeting and every heart. Some of our young people who are teaching school away from home, were here for the holidays, and were frank to say that it was the best and prettiest they had ever seen. I wish that time and space would permit giving the names of those who contributed to the success of the program, but we know their names are written above, and full credit will be given there.

One outstanding feature of the Christmas tree service, was the presentation of a valuable watch and chain to the Sunday school superintendent, Brother D. R. Connell. Mr. R. L. Pope, cashier of the First National Bank, made the presentation address, and his words were so well chosen, they expressed most fully the very love of our hearts for this servant of God who means so much to the church and community in which he lives.

The Christmas offering was $46.59, which is the largest Christmas offering in the history of our pastoral life.

Since "all things work out for the best" we must accept it as such even though it seems hard at times. For some weeks I have been suffering with a throat affection, and last week it became decidedly worse, and for several days now I have lost the use of my voice, and at times it is completely gone. Of course my physician pronounced it laryngitis, and advised a complete rest for at least two weeks. Then, when I was thinking a thousand and one bad things that could and would happen, notice of the visit of Dr. Dixon came, and the sun shone a bit brighter. He and his good wife came on Sunday afternoon; Mrs. Dixon addressing the three C. E. Societies in a joint meeting at 6 o'clock, and the president preaching for us at 7 o'clock. Brother Connell took charge of the Sunday morning service, and thus the first "Sunday of silence" passed away.

Rev. J. H. Abernethy, a former pastor of the church and now a member of our church, will preach for us both morning and evening of Sunday, January 16th. I am hoping to be able to take up full pastoral duties at least by the fourth Sunday, and I am hoping so much to get to work sooner.

The work in general is good and plans are being made to enlarge our program by the addition of more working room about the church, of which I shall speak later.

J. L. TROLLINGER.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The third Sunday in January dawned bright and cold but the pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, was on the job. He was the first to the church so he built fires, cleaned up around the stoves and was ready to welcome the people as they came—not a big number came however. Then he preached a good sermon from Luke 2:52. Those who heard it can't help but be bettered by it; those who were at home by the fire are losers.

The stewards have started the every-member canvass.

Mr. Haywood Crabtree has been employed to build fires hereafter at 9:30 so that the house will be warm by 10:30 for Sunday school. Surely then the people will come and help to make Mt. Hermon Sunday school 100 percent strong. REPORTER.

Mt. Hermon Circuit, Bellemont Church.—We started the new year with a very good attendance at Sunday school, for the very severe weather.

Mr. G. A. Nicholson is our superintendent now and is always at his post of duty.

Mr. Wayne Curtis was elected superintendent for the year and was faithful to the work until he left, since Christmas, to enter school in Tennessee, for the study of music. While we miss him so much in Sunday school and all church work, we are glad that he has the opportunity to fit himself for better service in Christian work.

Our pastor, Mr. Carroll, has entered upon his duties in great earnestness, and we are hoping and praying for a good year's work. He is giving us some fine and helpful sermons. Everybody seems well pleased with him.

On December 27, we were made sad when death claimed one of our members, Mrs. Ernest Bich. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved husband and children.

Mr. James P. Sharpe, the oldest member of our Sunday school, was recently called from this earth to the land beyond. He was a regular attendant although he was eight-two years old. To his wife we extend our sympathy.

We are having electric lights installed in our church and hope to have them ready for use within another week.

The Cobles' Township Sunday school Convention will convene at Bellemont January 27, at night. There will be able speakers present. Come, you will be well paid, as the speakers have something good in store for you. MRS. CORA M HARGIS.

Randolph.—The weather was so rough on Christmas eve, that we did not get to carry out our programs in full. But all our churches had short Christmas exercises.

The people were very thoughtful of pastor and family; for which they have our heartfelt thanks.

At Bethel we received some presents; and a purse. At Grays Chapel some presents. As we could not get to all the churches the same evening, later when we went to Shilo, we received gifts. May God bless these good people who were so thoughtful of pastor and family. A. O. LINDLEY.

Mt. Zion.—Brother Hunter filled his appoint Sunday with an interesting message. Owing to the severe cold weather there were not many present.

Brother I. O. Hauser, circuit steward, called a meeting of stewards to be held next Sunday at 2 o'clock p.m.

Brother Hauser insists that every steward, by all means, be present. He has a plan for this year's work that every steward must help carry on.

Brother Hauser never lets the weather interfere with his appointment, so come on, rain or shine. C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Hickory Grove Church.—You haven't heard from our little church in quite a while, but we are living and progressing some.

We have lately started a prayer meeting and our Sunday school seems to have taken on new life. We have reorganized and elected Mr. Will Smith as our new superintendent.

Rev. Mr. Isley is our new preacher and certainly has preached some good sermons to us. We are hoping that under his leadership and with his help we will accomplish much good during this year. ELIZABETH GLASS.

Denton Church.—Our pastor preached for us Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. His sermons were helpful and inspiring.

We are glad to say that Rev. M. C. Henderson and family have already gained the confidence and love of the people in our town.

We were glad to see Mrs. Henderson and children out at church Sunday.

At the morning service one man went up and gave his hand for prayer, asking all Christian people to pray for him.

Our Sunday school was in charge of the Junior Philathea class. The devotional reading was by Miss Mary Lee Frank.

Many thanks to the class for service.

Attendance was better than a year ago. Year ago, 39 present; yesterday, 62 present. Offering year ago, $1.80; yesterday, $3.96. Largest attendance class, no. 7, Mrs. Joe Hill teacher, present 13. Largest offering class, no. 3, J. W. Lanier teacher, $2.25.

Our Christian Endeavor was well attended yesterday evening. REPORTER.

Greensville Circuit.—The first quarterly conference convened at Philadelphia January 1st. Pastor preached at 11:30 o'clock to a small but attentive little band of officials and a few not officials. A nice lunch served by a few families of the community. At one o'clock the officials were called together. All churches represented except Wesley's Chapel. Business was transacted in the spirit of Christian brotherhood. The Trustees of parsonage were authorized to take steps at once to do some needed repairs and lift all indebtness. The Trustees called a meeting on Saturday following. They met at parsonage and active steps were taken. Brother A. W. Moore was selected to do the work.

The pastor's report was adopted, which set forth a large programme for the year.

Other reports were heard. Stewards reported about $106.00 had been paid to date on pastor's salary. A little had been paid on deficit of last year.

Quarterly conference adjourned to meet at Matthew's Chapel.

We are now in the grip of the severest weather of the winter as yet. It commenced to snow on last Sunday a.m. The ground was soon white. The pastor did not go to his appointment. It is now fair and the sun shines beautifully but it is too cold for the white blanket to disappear fast. Altogether the work was starting nicely.

We hope to have a good year for our Master's Kingdom. Our people are mostly cotton raisers The sudden drop in prices has about paralyized business and every thing else in this part. Cotton is selling in this section on an average of about half of what it cost the people to produce it. I have two years crop on hand and if marketed at present price—pay standing rent, guano bills, ginning, cost of picking two bales which I hired done, I would be $2.75 in debt. Nothing for labor, board, horse labor, horse feed, tools &c. This is our plight financially.

May the Lord bless His Zion and may this be a better year. H. L. POWELL.

Pleasant Grove.—The first quarterly conference will be held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

Sunday school class no. 7 was invited by its teacher, Mr. W. S. Cecil, to take dinner with him Monday, January 10, to celebrate his 67th birthday. "Uncle Sam," as he is known, is one of our oldest and most consecrated members. At noon a table was spread with all kinds of good things to eat and everybody enjoyed the day. Members of the class present were: Mrs. Emma A. Morris, Mrs. Lee Hilton, Mrs. Ivy A. Teague, Mrs. B. E. Payne, Mrs. J. E. Meridith, Mrs. J. M. Kennedy, Mrs. J. E. Veach, Mrs. Flora Dicks, Mrs. Vivian Cecil, Mrs. F. H. Clark, Mrs. W. O. Hilton, Mrs. H. F. Kennedy, Mrs. W. H. Newby, Mrs. J. C. Newby, Mrs. O. W. Cecil, Mrs. Herbert Payne, Mrs. Robert Kennedy, Mrs. E. M. Albertson, and Mrs. B. E. Kennedy. Others present were: F. H. Clark, G. L. Hilton, W. O. Hilton, Miss Helen Cecil, Miss Katherine Newby and Francis Kennedy.

Mrs. Wilson Myers entertained the Philathea class at her home Wednesday evening. Several matters were discussed. The hostess served delicious refreshments. Mrs. H. M. Robins has been very sick for some time. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Our Sunday school and church attendance has been good despite the unpleasant weather. Last year was a good year for us, but we feel there is a great opportunity before us this year. May we make this a better year in the Master's vineyard.

MRS. RALPH KENNEDY, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro.—November 16th we took our departure from Reidsville and took up the work of West End church.

We are comfortably located at 202 Elam Ave., Greensboro. It was with aching hearts that pastor and family left the good people of Reidsville with whom we had labored for four years and during this time the people proved to us that they were our friends and that they were loyal to the church and to the Lord. We shall ever remember the many tokens of love and friendship we received at the hands of our Reidsville friends.

Ever since our arrival here the good people of this church have been making us feel welcome and that all our friends are not else where.

On the night of December 29th the parsonage was visited by a large number of the church members who administered a generous pounding to its inhabitants for which we are profoundly grateful. I do not believe that there is a greater opportunity for service or a brighter outlook anywhere within the bounds of this conference than there is here.

The church is well organized and a large percent of the people, young and old, have "a mind to work" and to undertake greater things for the Lord and the church.

In the near future we expect to see an adequate Sunday school building erected on our church lot, a building that will furnish room for our large and growing Sunday school. The membership of the church has voted to give the trustees authority to build and a competent committee is at work on plans.

All the organizations of the church are doing good work and our congregations at the preaching services are good. We are praying that through the agency of these people and their pastor the Lord may save many souls this year and that our own experiences may be enriched and our spiritual lives deepened. We have received nine members into the church this year, one by profession of faith.

J. D. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Saxapahaw Charge.—Despite the very unfavorable weather, fair congregations greeted the pastor at Orange Chapel and Concord last Sunday. Concord church decided to make a drive to raise the Annual Conference Budget in full during the month of February. We trust the other churches on the work will do likewise. This month we are trying to raise our apportionment for the running expenses of High Point College.

The pastor of this charge was remembered with many gifts during the Christmas season. Since some of the names were not given, we will not give any names. May the Lord bless each one, and may the pastor be able to give more efficient service.

Miss Lillian Lindley and Miss Ilene Thompson have the sincere thanks of the pastor for rendering such splendid service during the church paper campaign.

A number of our faithful members are sick at the present time. Some are in the hospital. We hape they will all be better soon.

H. L. ISLEY.

High Point.—On Sunday afternoon, January 9th, a Junior Christian Endeavor Society for boys and girls between six and twelve years of age was organized at the church. Misses Dennyce and Ina McAdams have kindly consented to take charge of this branch of the work, which is so much needed in order that we may have a well-organized church. This is a beautiful field of service for our young people, and we trust that this youngest society of ours may grow and expand rapidly.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its monthly meeting in the home of Mrs. A. M. Rankin on Monday, January 10th; there was an attendance of 22 members.

The annual election of officers was held, which resulted in the re-election of the entire old board as follows: president, Mrs. C. C. Robbins; vice-president, Mrs. S. S. Coe; secretary, Mrs. John H. Walker; and treasurer, Mrs. C. L. Gray. Too much cannot be said in praise of these faithful workers, who have rendered efficient and loyal service for a long period of years.

At the quarterly meeting of High Point C. E. Union Arnold J. Koonce was re-elected president for the fifth successive year, and Miss Blanche York is corresponding secretary. Approximately 150 members of the Union were present, each society being well represented, and the session was a most enthusiastic one. A banner was presented to the society of Welch Memorial church for having accomplished the most outstanding work during the past quarter, and another banner became the permanent property of High Point College society for having won it three times in succession. A banquet will be given to the local Endeavorers at an early date, when the guest of honor will be Miss Alma Headen, Presbyterian Missionary to Afica returning to this city for a vacation.

At the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning Rev. P. E. Lindley delivered a very able sermon on "Some Certainties of the Christian Religion." He said that there is more thinking on the part of individuals today than ever before, in consequence of which many people welter in a slough of doubt and uncertainty, and do not enjoy religion, but he wished to mention some certainties to guide us in the Christian life. The first and fundamental one is that there is goodness and badness in the world, and every one must choose for himself his ideal. Another certainty is that the wages of sin is death. We are punished, not on account of our sins, but by our sins. "Precious to the Lord are his own," and if we accept them and obey His commandments, He will draw near us and manifest Himself to us. To be happy in our religion we must render service. We love those for whom we labor, as a mother loves her children, and on account of that love serves them. He does not thrust Himself upon any one, but we must seek Him and ask Him to come into our hearts to reign over our lives. A very beautiful solo, "Come, ye blessed," was sung by Mr. Clarence Schultheiss. A most impressive feature of the service was the playing of the organ chimes while the congregation bowed in silent prayer.

We are delighted to report eleven additions to our membership this year as follows; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hankins, Misses Grace and Marie Hankins, Messrs. Gilbert, John, and Morris Hankins, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Poling, and Prof. and Mrs. J. H. Allred. We give these splendid people a hearty welcome to our ranks.

Mr. Theodore Ballard has been promoted to the position of Office Manager of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company at Charlotte, and we very much regret to lose him from the church, while we rejoice at his promotion. He has been president of C. E. society and teacher in the Intermediate Department of the Sabbath School, and was one of our very best and most faithful workers. Our best wishes are extended to him in his new field.

One of our valued members is to enjoy a rich treat and we rejoice with her in the fulfillment of a long cherished desire. Mrs. Louise J. Diffee will leave High Point next Thursday, January 20th, for New York City, whence she will sail on Saturday on the S. S. Doric for a cruise through the Mediterranean Sea to Egypt and the Holy Land, thence home via London. This tour will embrace visits to eleven different countries and will occupy 62 days. On last Thursday her daughter, Mrs. S. H. Tomlinson of this city, tendered her mother a very gracious compliment when she entertained a number of friends at a lovely luncheon at her elegant new home, "Tomlynhurst," in Emerywood. The best wishes of a host of friends will accompany her for a happy voyage and a safe return to the good old U. S. A.

The Junior Missionary Circle held a meeting at the church Saturday afternoon, and despite the inclement weather, there were eleven little folks in attendance, which shows that they are much interested. Mrs. R. M. Andrews is the capable superintendent of this band. Mrs. E. L. Ballard has kindly consented to take charge of the Mission Band, made up of young girls from 12 to 16 years of age.

A number of people from Greensboro, High Point, and Asheboro, including Mr. and Mrs. W. Lewis White, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, and Mrs. R. T. Pickens, went to Lexington Saturday morning to attend the funeral of Mr. Walter H. Mendenhall, a prominent banker and leading citizen. He was a native of Guilford county, having been a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James N. Mendenhall, and a brother of Mr. O. E. Mendenhall of this city.

President R. M. Andrews returned from Baltimore last week, and reported that High Point College students will have a prominent part on the program for the celebration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Methodist Protestant church in May, 1928. Elaborate plans are being made for this important event in our history.

We are very sorry to note that Miss Ida Davis had the misfortune to be struck by an automobile last Sunday evening in front of the church. She and her sister, Miss Myrtle, were on their way to the evening service. Miss Ida was knocked down, but retained consciousness. After being taken to High Point Hospital, it was found that she suffered two bad cuts on the head and a few severe bruises, but no bones were broken and there were no internal injuries. She is resting comfortably at home today. Her many friends are wishing for her an early recovery.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—Our work is moving along very well for the cold weather. We had our Christmas program December 23, which seemed to be very interesting to all. The children did fine for the training they had. Our pastor, Rev. J. T. Sisk, has filled his appointments since conference with helpful and inspiring sermons. We are very thankful that conference sent him back to us.

The preaching services had been changed to some extent. We now have preaching on the first Sunday instead of evening service.

We now have our church covered; planning to erect cement steps and paint it inside right away.

Since our last report death visited Mr. Ellis's home and claimed one of our reporters, Miss Mechum of Elbaville.

Best wishes to Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Mt. Carmel, South Lexington Charge.—Pastor Ridge filled his appointment last Sunday at three o'clock. He brought us a great and helpful sermon, after which the Lord's supper was observed. We are getting along fine with our attendance, considering the cold weather. We were glad to have Mr. Deaton worship with us Sunday, also some other visitors. Our preaching Sunday is the first Sunday at 11 o'clock, and the third at three o'clock; a cordial welcome to all services both preaching and Sunday school. Sunday school every Sunday at 10 o'clock except the third Sunday which is 1:45 o'clock.

Brethren, pray for us that this may be the best year in our Master's service.

H. V. S., Reporter.

Mebane.—Regardless of the weather, the attendance at all of the services has been good during the past month. All organizations in the church seem to be alive and are doing good work. We had the privilege of attending the meeting of the Ladies' Aid this afternoon. We were very much impressed with the work these good women have done and are doing. The attendance at this meeting was the best we ever saw at a meeting of this kind. The reports were good.

On Wednesday night, January 5, about 40 of the good people came to the parsonage and gave the pastor and family an old-fashioned pounding. We will not attempt to call names, neither will we ask for space to name each article. Every article was useful and very much appreciated. The Lord knows each one who had a part in this act of kindness and will reward them. EDWARD SUITS.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, fills his appointments regardless of the weather. He preached a helpful sermon Sunday morning. Owing to the severe cold, there were not as many present as usual. The Lord's Supper was administered after the sermon. A goodly number partook.

Our Sunday school is still moving forward. Some Sundays the attendance is small, but we are not discouraged, but try the harder to make the Sunday school more interesting. Last Sunday it was suggested by our superintendent that it be reported each Sunday how many chapters each class in Sunday school had read during the week. This is indeed a good plan and should prove very helpful.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Asheboro.—On Monday night, January 10, the Workers' Council met at the home of Mr. L. F. Ross with Miss Esther Ross hostess. In spite of the falling snow a large number were present, and the reports from the different departments were fine. The "Assistant Teacher" problem was discussed and finally settled.

The extreme cold weather somewhat lowered attendance at the Sunday school and morning church services. "Law Enforcement" was the subject for the morning sermon. The special anthem by the choir was particularly fitting and well rendered.

The pastor has lots of faith in our C. E. Society or is trying to give us a little encouragement, as he turned the Sunday evening church service over to us. The meeting was led by Mr. R. T. Lloyd and the regular lesson was studied. There were several good talks interspersed with special music, and if comments overheard meant anything the service was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

A new piano has recently been placed in the primary department and this is adding to the Sunday school services for the children.

The Brotherhood meets on Thursday night in the social room of the church. Rev. N. M. Harrison will be the speaker of the evening.

REPORTER.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—Sunday was a good day for us here. Although the weather was very cold our attendance was good at Sunday school and church services.

President Dixon and wife were with us and Mrs. Dixon preached a splendid sermon on God's love. After the sermon our Christian Endeavor Society was reorganized. Miss Nina Smith was elected president; Miss Rena Neece, secretary, and Miss Irene McCulloch, treasurer.

Our church recently lost one of its members, Mrs. Jane Shaw. She had been paralyzed and almost helpless for the last three years. She lived to be 76 years old.

Some of our older members are on the sike list. Mrs. J. P. Coble improves very slowly.

The W. H. M. S. and W. F. M. S. held the January meeting with Mrs. Allie Highfill Saturday afternoon. On account of the weather and sickness the attendance was not so good, but some good reports were given and we hope to have the best report yet for the end of the year. REPORTER.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor filled his appointment last Sunday afternoon. The attendance was very good considering the cold weather. Brother Garner preached a good sermon.

Brother Garner will give us an extra appointment next Sunday afternoon at 2:30. We appreciate this very much, as our preaching services seem so far apart owing to the size of this charge. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the management of Brother B. C. Presnell. The attendance is good for winter weather and considering the distance some of the members have to come. We think when Spring opens up it will be still better.

Our Woman's Home Missionary Society elected new officers, or rather re-elected the old ones, at our last meeting. We hope for a better year's work this year from the W. H. M. S. than we have ever had.

REPORTER.

South Lexington.—Attendance in Sunday school last Sunday was 170, which was a decrease of only 25 over the previous Sunday. The weather was extremely cold, and many of the small children could not attend. The men's class had their record attendance, there being 52 men present. That was the largest attendance the class has had since it was organized. Brother C. B. Yates is the new president of the class, succeeding Rev. C. B. Way, who resigned at the regular annual election held in December. Brother C. L. Hedrick is the very able teacher who is attracting large crowds to the class each Sunday morning with his earnest and forceful manner of teaching the lesson.

The Lord's Supper was observed at the morning church service last Sunday, and the usual number of members participated in the sacred ordinance. Pastor Ridge delivered a helpful sermon during the service.

A congregation of unusual size attended the night service last Sunday and heard a splendid sermon by Pastor Ridge on the subject of "True Service." The sermon was based on the narrative of Elijah leading the sons of the prophets in gathering material for a larger house of worship.

Announcement was made at the service last Sunday night that a male chorus organization, composed of some of the best musical talent in Lexington, will render a program of music at the night service on the fifth Sunday in this month at South Lexington church. The song service will take the place of the preaching for that appointment.

Pastor Ridge moved last week for the third time since the adjournment of the Annual Conference; once from Stanly county to Lexington, and twice since moving to Lexington. The church recently secured a permanent location as a parsonage for Rev. and Mrs. Ridge, which is located at 15 Pickard Circle, where Pastor Ridge will welcome his visiting brethren and all others.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Kernersville Charge.—There are four churches on this charge, namely, Kernersville, Pine Grove, Ai, and Sandy Ridge. I have been kindly received by each of the above named churches, and have filled all appointments beginning with the first Sunday in December.

We are very comfortably located in our apartment in the home of Brother Ad. Linville.

We reached this place January 8th. Awaiting our arrival was a box containing preserves, jelly, apples, potatoes and meal. This was brought through the kindness of the delegate, who is now, Mrs. Junius M. Hester.

Mrs. Ad Linville favored us with a nice can of pear preserves and other eats.

Each church on this charge has a Sunday school, but each, like many other Sunday schools, has room to grow both in numbers and in interest. The church in Kernersville has been much improved by laying a nice hardwood floor making it much warmer and neater in appearance. Other improvements are now being planned for this church which we hope to report to you all later. A consolidated school building is being erected in Kernersville, the contract for which is more than one hundred thousand dollars. This building is quite an additional credit to the town and country in which it is built. If schools can gain by such consolidation, is it not possible, in many instances, for churches and Sunday schools to do likewise?

Trusting that every church and Sunday school will more and more catch the Go Forward Spirit, and that our labors on this charge will bring much success to all, I am,

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Fire Damages Our Church in Winston

Winston-Salem church was partially destroyed by fire early this morning. The fire was caused by an overheated furnace under the Sunday school room; several thousand dollars damage. Only the prompt work of the firemen saved the building from total loss. The auditorium was not injured much except by smoke and water. It is a question when we can have service there again. The pastor of the M. E. Church near by has offered the use of their building for the time being.

The loss is partially covered by insurance.

—John Tyler, the 10th president of the United States, once received a fine horse from General Chalmers as a fee in a law case. This horse, which he always called General, was a favorite with the president. After years of faithful service to the Tylers old General was retired to a pasture where he spent the remainder of his days resting from his labors. When General died he was buried in the grove at Sherwood Forest, the Tyler home in Charles City county, Va. President Tyler erected over the grave a wooden slab to the old horse's memory and inscribed the following epitaph on it:

Here lie the bones of my old horse "General,"
Who served his master faithfully for 21 years,
And never blundered but once—
Would that his master could say the same!

—A memorial to William Jennings Bryan is planned for Washington, D. C., by the William Jennings Bryan Memorial Association. It will cost a quarter of a million dollars. The Association will raise the money by popular subscription.

The plan is to make the memorial a group of statues. One statue will represent Mr. Bryan giving his famous "Cross of Gold" speech before the Democratic National Convention at Chicago in 1896. That speech won him his first nomination for President. Another statue will represent him giving a speech on the tariff while a member of the national House of Representatives in 1893. Still another will show him as a deeply religious man. A fourth statue will represent him as a teacher and as a leader of the people.

—Mrs. Maud Smith, daughter of Brother Eugene Causey, is in the hospital very ill. There is much anxiety as to the outcome. She has been operated on for appendicitis and other troubles.

—Back in 1892 Albert Sealond, of Bridgeport, Conn., stopped a team of runaway ponies. Miss Martha Dobbs, who was driving the team, leaned over and asked the man his name. She wrote it down in a little book and said she was going to remember him some day. When Miss Dobbs died in 1904 she left her estate in Scotland to her brothers, with the provision that Sealond was to receive $25,000 when all the brothers were dead. The last brother died recently in Calcutta and Sealond will now receive the long awaited bequest.

—Millions of American tree seeds, put up in sacks weighing a total of several hundred pounds, were shipped to Europe the other day to the forestry departments of Great Britian, France, Belgium and Italy. They are a gift to those four nations from the American Tree Association, of which Charles Lathrop Pack is president.

Each year, for several years, the association has been sending seeds to Europe as "messengers of good will." They are seeds of the Douglas fir tree and are used to renew the forests that were destroyed in the World War. Seeds sent in former years are doing well in the Allied countries. Most of them have grown into healthy young trees.—Current Events.

Rabbit's Disease.—The doctors have discovered that a dreadful disease may be caught from rabbits. It is called tularemia. In skinning a rabbit if you have an open sore on your hand you are likely to receive a poison into your blood which will lay you up for days with a high fever, even if it does not do much worse for you. This new plague spread from the west, but it is said that it has entered our state, so you would better be careful in handling rabbits.

"A Yard of Youth"

The Youth's Companion is celebrating its hundredth anniversary by sending out a picture a yard wide of eight boys and girls. Their faces are painted in bright colors and all but two wear smiles so natural to boys and girls in their early years. Two of the eight have in their faces marks of incipient thoughtfulness. It is a striking picture and holds the attention for quite awhile. The faces not only win your attention, but they excite your interest and gain your sympathy. They take you back to that glad region when the world was new and young, the days of your own childhood. What days those were! How wonderful! How full of interest! You lived sixty minutes to the hour and had no tedious moments. What could be more interesting than just the life you lived? You were troubled with no doubts or fears as to the outcome of life. You lived naturally, you lived deeply and earnestly, and never asked why. Yes, those were great days for you, and it is easy for you to go back in memory to those days.

But you would not like to go back and be a child again, even for an hour. You value the lessons you have learned, lessons that have cost you so much. It is with a sort of pity that you look upon the faces of boys and girls. They know so little! They are so poorly prepared to meet the dangers before them, dangers that they cannot see and which nobody can show them. How will they stand the test of life? Will they endure or will they fall and fail? In your anxious regard for them, you are moved to pray for them: "O God, it would be so very sad for them to fail! Uphold them! Be with them in the hour of dreadful temptation, and foil the tempter." You not only pray for them, but you call on good men and women everywhere to join with you in prayer and in effort—if anything can be done. You believe it possible to make them a little wiser through the acquired wisdom of those who have gone before them. You would form a league of all good men and women to join hands and strive to save the young lives from the pitfalls that have been dug for their feet.

In your imagination, this yard of youth stretches out and becomes a million miles of youth. All the boys and girls of the world are in the line, and you come to realize more and more the importance, the ever urgent importance of saving the youth. What a problem it is to instruct them and lead them and train them for right living. You see what they do not and cannot see. You know what they do not and cannot know. Somehow they must be helped up to your hight. Somehow they must be kept from falling to lower depths. Will you not look into the faces of the unsophiscated youth about you and then be moved to do what you can do to save them and uplift them to the best life that Heaven has opened to us all?

—Mr. Ira Champion, assistant to Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler, Washington, D. C., in the work of the Anti-Saloon League, will speak in Greensboro churches next Sunday. He is to be at Calvary Church for the evening service. He is a member of the Methodist Protestant Church in Alabama. He was selected for his present position because of his peculiar fitness for the work. He is a sort of Colonel House.

Jesus' Agony in Gethsemane

The gospel writers have left a veil of mystery about Jesus' sufferings in the Garden of Gethsemane. Probably the reason is they did not understand the matter themselves. They could describe the outward action of Jesus, even telling the very words he spoke to God as well as those he spoke to his human companions. But they could not enter into the experiences of his soul. We are left to our own conjectures, with the realization that we are utterly unable to penetrate the mystery. We can no more understand it than we can understand the creation of the world. Both are beyond the limits of human understanding. Both are in the realm of the divine. It is doubtful whether the most intelligent among the angels of heaven are profound enough to understand what Jesus passed through in the garden when he was sore amazed and began to be exceeding sorrowful, even unto death. We believe that no alphabet of our human experiences can spell out for us the meaning of Jesus' sorrow in that dreadful hour. Surely it cannot be explained by a mere human dread of bodily sufferings on the cross. Jesus had long anticipated that and become reconciled to that and predicted that. The sore amazement that seized upon him here seems to have been an unexpected and hitherto unrealized and almost unbearable agony of soul, a bitter mental anguish beyond our power to endure as it is beyond our power to realize even in thought. This unthinkable agony of the Son of God was the bitter cup that was given Him to drink for the fallen race of men, including you and me. No, we cannot understand what Jesus suffered for us, but cannot we be more appreciative of and more grateful to Him for His voluntary submission to the agonies of that dreadful hour?

Is This a Joke?

The Hi-Po, High Point College students' paper, carries this in its issue of January 20:—

"A bill was presented to the state legislature at the beginning of the session the other week by which dances given in the name of denominational colleges would no longer be allowed in North Carolina. What action the petition has received has not been learned but it has had quite a little discussion. It is more than probable that such a bill will have little trouble in passing. It is interesting to note that H. P. C. took it upon herself to enforce such a ruling recently and was probably a pioneer in her action."

We are very ignorant in such matters, and we wonder who has been giving dances in the name of denominational colleges. Perhaps some groups have presumed to do even this; if so, there is ground for legislative action. The denominational colleges are having enough to bear without having to endure the odium of being sponsors for dances.

—Rev. Mr. Upchurch, who succeeded Rev. Mr. Davis as superintendent of the N. C. Anti-Saloon League, is in Greensboro preparing for next Sunday's campaign. He would like to place a speaker for prohibition in every pulpit. He realizes that it will require the combined and strenuous effort of church people to maintain the victory won against the wets.

AMERICA AND RELIGION—A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE

God

In the beginning—God. In Him we live and move and have our being. God is a spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth. God is a living, personal force, working in us and through us to do His will. God is love, and loves every human soul. God is truth, and living close to Him makes us know the truth. To practice the presence of God brings poise and dignity to the soul. Scientific knowledge reveals the purpose and the method of God. There is one God, the Lord and Father of us all, and in Him and through Him we are related to each other.

Jesus

God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not parish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved. The nature of God is supremely revealed in the personality of Jesus. He that has seen Jesus has seen the Father. This makes Jesus the immortal Leader of the race. The rulers of the world built their kingdoms upon force—and lost. Jesus alone founded His empire upon love—and is winning. The life of Christ concerns Him who, being "the mightiest among the holy, the holiest among the mighty, lifted with His pierced hands empires off their hinges, turned the stream of centuries out of its channel and still governs the ages." The world has never come up to Christ's teachings. Jesus not only taught great truths—He gave men power to live them. Jesus has taken the vilest men and women and given them power to live pure, clean, and wholesome lives. The power of Jesus as a social reformer is growing. He is the Court of last appeal, the greatest ruler in the civilized world, the King of kings.

Religion in Life of Humanity

Man is "incurably religious." He may be alien to the church and its customs, but he usually believes in God and accepts the value of religion as a force in human life. As man grows in wisdom and stature or suffers sudden distress or danger, he inevitably moves toward the Supreme Being whom he has always found in his inner consciousness. It is the purpose of religion to make God more fully known to men, in order that the fundamental needs of the race may be satisfied. The reason that Jesus was the most normal man that ever lived was because His life was perfectly in tune with the spirit of God. The most normal man today is the one whose life is most nearly in tune with the life and spirit of Jesus Christ. Religion breaks down the wall of partition between classes and peoples and fosters good will, because it lifts one hand to God and reaches the other across to man. It gives men a new standard of values. It shows them that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possessed." It teaches him that "if any man hath not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His." Religion centers in the cross of Jesus. It frankly appeals to men to answer the call, "Come and suffer." It does not always lead to an easy road. But it gives strength to bear the cross. It supplies all needs, according to the riches of God, in Christ Jesus—with victory and eternal life at the end of the road.

Place of the Church in the World

It was the purpose of Jesus to redeem the world from sin in every form and to bring it into harmony with the will of God. To this end He appointed His disciples and commissioned them to preach the gospel to every creature. These early disciples organized groups of Christians into churches, which became centers of religious activity. In spite of their shortcomings these churches and their successors have been instrumental in bringing about a civilization which today is the best the world has ever known—and tomorrow it will be better. Christianity's stalwartness, its ruggedness, its strength to withstand shock and opposition, is one basis of its appeal to all men and women. It is not a tottering structure, a failing institution. Men are not being asked to come and help save the Church. The Church is asking them to come in so that they may help save the world. The Church is not an end, it is a means. Its purpose is manyfold: worship, teaching, fellowship, service. It is an association of those who, candidly acknowledge their need, desire help, both human and divine, in the conquest of life. It offers a comradeship along the whole way of man's pilgrimage. It is world-wide in its activities. It gives inspiration to every other worth-while organization. It develops men and women for the highest places of leadership in the world's work. It stands for the redemption of all life and all of life, from waste, misuse, and sin. The church proclaims the "good news"—the gospel—which is capable of solving every problem facing humanity today. To this end, the Church appeals to all men everywhere to open their hearts and minds to God, to live as his children, to dwell in harmony with their fellow men, in this and other lands, and under the leadership of Jesus, to help bring in the kingdom of God.

LIFE INSURANCE AT LARGE

There are certain larger aspects of life insurance that I would like to discuss because of their bearing on American life and modern thought. It would be presumptuous of me to attempt a technical discussion of this subject before a group of life insurance experts, but there are certain phases of the subject which might more readily occur to an interested layman than to most of those who are deeply engrossed in the more technical side of it. I have so great a respect for life insurance as an institution of great public service that I want to present certain thoughts with reference to its larger aspects from a public standpoint, because to me they are unmistakable evidences of great value.

Let me say first that the enormous amounts of life insurance carried by the American people, and the increasing amounts that are being bought every year, constitute one of the most powerful answers to the alarmists who claim that America is jazz crazy. What is jazz? It is a refusal to assume responsibilities. It is a defiance of proper restraints. It is an abandonment to moral laxity and against moral obligation. Life insurance is the antithesis of all these. It shows a willingness to accept responsibilities. It is an evidence of thrift, of self-respect. It shows restraint and self-control. It manifests a positive recognition of moral obligations and responsibilities.

The jazz victim thinks of today only, with its questionable pleasures and moral abandonment. The man who buys life insurance is thinking not alone of his own future, but of the future well-being and protection of those who are dear to him. He recognizes the obligation to protect his family in case of his own death more than anything else, but he also recognizes the obligation to protect his own old age from want and dependency. It is a positive evidence of self-reliance and sturdy character. It represents not only the serious side of life but its finer side also. The first principle of life insurance is unselfishness. It is a practical demonstration of love and devotion.

In everything life insurance is the direct opposite of jazz. The tremendous and increasing amount being carried by the American people is unmistakable proof that the overwhelming majority of Americans are not infected with jazz but are sound of heart and mind, representing a great solid anchor for our civilization and good government.

As a mater of fact, jazz is merely the expression of a reckless and irresponsible and unimportant minority. It is the froth and foam of society. It is the excrescence of American life that is more conspicuous today because it is more bold. We have always had a small minority of people who were jazz crazy and we probably always will have them. The great army of Americans who are buying life insurance are necessarily serious-minded, thoughtful and substantial people who willingly accept responsibilities, exercise self-restraint, and assume without question their moral obligations.

Why is there so much talk about the manifestations of jazz? Because there are so few people involved in it—because it is unusual and not the everyday life of the great majority. Why is there so much talk about crime? Because, relatively speaking, so few crimes are committed. We never see anything in the papers about the tens of millions of Americans who go about their daily tasks without any noise or commotion, who attend their churches and lodges without any unusual conduct that makes news, and who accept and discharge the responsibilities of life in a perfectly normal and regular way. They are the backbone of America, the great solid foundation of society and government. They are the people who are buying life insurance. And life insurance is a practical evidence of fine character and sturdy citizenship.

Another thing has impressed itself upon me with increasing force. It is the fact that life insurance is a powerful answer to the philosophy of paternalism, whose followers believe that the state should do everything, be everything, who would rob the individual of all the glorious fruits of individuality. Life insurance is the product of the philosophy that the individual should do things for himself. It is a natural result of self-reliance and an evidence of it. It is a manifestation of the wish and the will to be personally independent. It is an evidence of that stability of individual character from which the endurance of the nation springs. It is one of the great guarantees of the lastingness of stable and just government.

Therefore, it would seem self-evident that all government in the United States, both state and national, should show kindly consideration and grateful appreciation to this worthwhile institution. This means that all laws relating to it should be favorable. It means above everything else that the taxes on insurance premiums should be reduced to the lowest amount necessary for proper regulation in the interest of the public. It seems to me that it is both unwise and unjust to tax life insurance premiums for vast amounts that go into the general revenues.

Still another great fact with reference to life insurance in this country, it seems to me, deserves special comment. While it is true that the extraordinary position of life insurance in the United States can be accounted for to some extent by the liberalizing features that have been written into the policies in the last 15 or 20 years, yet this of itself would not be sufficient to explain it. It is also true that it may be explained in part by the increasing national wealth; but this could not be the main reason, because wealth of itself has a tendency to demoralize, unless there go with it certain great steadying influences of real and lasting significance.

Perhaps the outstanding reasons for the marvelous success of life insurance in our own country is the unusual status of womankind and a higher regard for childhood. Women enjoy a finer position in America than in any other part of the world. They are accorded greater rights, greater opportunity and greater respect than anywhere else. The protection and development of childhood is a national characteristic. Many Americans are passionately devoted to social betterment, and this is reflected in the individual lives of countless people. It is all a part of that great American philosophy which offers equal rights, equal opportunities and equal blessings to all within our borders, and it accords to women their rightful place in society. Women have been given a higher and finer status in America than anywhere else, and when I say America I include Canada, because there is not very much to differentiate these two great peoples.

Where women are given that higher and finer status, there you find the greatest volume of life insurance sold. Likewise, where childhood is regarded with fine consideration and solicitude, there you will find life insurance bought in staggering totals. And that's America.

Life insurance in its fundamentals is a practical evidence of love and unselfish devotion. It is bought by the men who would guarantee to their families the necessities and comforts of life if they should be taken away. It is bought by those who would protect their loved ones against want and dependency, who would do so far as possible after death what they are happy and proud to do in life. Life insurance is the voice of love speaking in eloquent fashion through the trying years that follow after the hand of death strikes down the breadwinner.

Sometimes pessimists ask what has become of the American home? And yet we see increasing numbers of our people buying and paying for homes, a large per cent of them with the help of money loaned by life insurance companies. Life insurance is a positive expression of the great home instinct. It is founded on the desire not only to provide homes but to protect them. Love is the great motive power that makes possible the larger portion of the tremendous and impressive volume of life insurance that we see in force among our people. Life insurance is a material evidence of something fine and wonderful in the character of America. So long as that something remains, America is safe and her future is assured.

I can not let this opportunity pass without paying a tribute to the nation of which we are a part, and to which we owe an everlasting obligation of gratitude. Our business is rendering a great and wonderful service. It is at once a blessing and a bendiction, and yet you, like all the rest of us, owe the major portion of your success to the matchless institutions of America.

When we say America we do not mean the physical land. The same sun shines upon us today that shone upon America in the dim and distant past. The same stars twinkle in the night-time that the savages looked up and wondered at ages ago. A hundred thousand years ago, and more, the same mountains lifted their majestic forms. The same rivers were flowing to the sea long before civilization began. No, it is not physical America whose greatness and glory we proclaim. America is a great people, a human force. It is a philosophy of life and government,—a spiritual and not a physical thing.

To illustrate what I mean, let me tell you the story of my good old Father. He was born in England at a time when there were no public schools. He was 21 before he knew his A. B. C.'s, and he started in as a full-grown young man with a little copy of the New Testament and a little dictionary to learn to read by the slow and painful process of self-education, picking out one word at a time. Then he acquired a grammar so that he might learn to put the words together properly.

As a relatively young man he heard the call of America, this great land of freedom and opportunity, and like millions of other sturdy sons of Europe he came here to work out his destiny. He pursued his education still further, studying by night and working by day until he acquired an education that would do credit to the average college graduate.

He became a full citizen at the first opportunity under our laws, and he told me one time not so long before he passed away of that sacred day when he raised his right hand and forswore allegiance to the British crown and swore allegiance to the constitution and the flag of America, and his eyes filled with tears as he described to me that most sacred day of his life.

He learned every word of our constitution, every word. He learned every word of every verse of America and every word of the Star Spangled Banner, and before old age laid its heavy hand upon him he could sing those songs with a zeal and a fervor that was good to see. From the time I was a little fellow, and long before I could compreheind its significance, I saw him every time he passed by Old Glory tip his hat in veneration.

He made a great contribution to America in the creation and development of a new science for the saving of trees. He taught the American people to think in terms of the living tree. While I honor his great achievement and revere his memory, I must say in simple justice that his success probably would never have been posible anywhere else except America.

You and I, who are the fortunate beneficiaries of these great institutions, have an everlast obligation resting upon us. You, who are selling life insurance, are rendering a tremendous service in protecting and fostering those things of basic value. We all of us have a larger obligation than the faithful performance of our daily tasks. We do not own America. We have it only on a life lease. Even though the land stands in our names at the court houses all over the country, we hold it only so long as the breath of life is in us. We received it as a great priceless heritage. We are stewards so long as we may live. It is ours for safe-keeping. And then, according to the laws of nature, we must pass it on to other generations. It is our fundamental and lasting obligation to keep this, our America, as great and as wonderful and as worthwhile as it was when we received it, and to pass it on better, if possible, to those who are to follow us.—By Congressman Martin L. Davey.

CHRIST OR SANTA CLAUS, WHICH?

The holidays are over, and the great majority of our churches held some kind of Christmas service. Perhaps in some cases it was more of an "entertainment" than a religious service. It has been a question with us for a number of years as to the propriety of having any kind of "entertainment" in the house "dedicated to the worship of Almighty God." Will each one who may read this, both lay and clerical, who has a Discipline of the M. P. Church, read the Dedicatory Service? Many have never read it, not even seen it, have not the remotest idea of its high, holy, devout, dignified, sublime, majestic form and spirit. The idea, the thought, the conception contained in, and breathing through the whole service, is as foreign to anything savoring of "entertainment," as heaven is from hell.

"One of the trustees or building committee, addressing the officiating minister, shall say: Brother ——, in behalf of the church and congregation here assembled, I now present you this house to be dedicated to the worship of Almighty God." This is a solemn presentation, gift, or dedication of a house to Almighty God for a specific purpose. As much so as the dedication of the Temple or the Tabernacle. We do not have to do this. There is no law, human nor Divine, forcing us to do it. We do it of our own free will. It's no longer ours. It's God's. It's holy. Set apart for a place of prayer, worship, and instruction in God's word. And when we use this house for any other purpose than that for which it was dedicated, and thereby consecrated, it can be none other than a clear case of desecration.. A thing "devoted"—i.e, given to God could not be "redeemed." It was God's forever. We cannot "blow hot and cold" with God. Ananias owned some land. He sold it. Then he professed to give all the price received for the land to the church. But he did not. He lied. As Peter told him, he did not have to give any of the price. He was free to give or not give. But he had no right to lie. We do not have to give a house to God. But after we have given a house to God with all the solemnity of an oath, for a specific purpose, and then use it for another purpose, we have falsified our word. The dedication service has become to us "a scrap of paper." But it has not become "a scrap of paper" with God. We need a great awakening at this point. We've gone so far afield that many, if not the majority, do not think, or believe that "The Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before him." Reverence in the house of God is almost a thing of the past with many—even with those who claim to be the children of God.

Jesus said to the Jews, "My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves." Jesus was not condemning legitimate buying and selling, but buying and selling in the temple.

It was the "house of prayer." Built and dedicated for this specific purpose. God's house. The prayer house. The worship house. And this is recognized and embodied in our Dedication Service throughout.

Just a sample or two from our Dedication Service for the benefit of any who do not have a discipline:

"And may the prayers and praises of Thy people ascend from this house like holy incense, to be unto Thee a sweet smelling savor."

"Now, O Lord God Almighty, who dost live and govern all things, let, we beseech Thee, Thine eyes be open, and let Thine ears be attent unto the prayer that is made in this place, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

The whole idea, thought, sentiment, running through the entire Dedication Service is that of prayer, praise, worship of Almighty God.

How to reconcile many things said, done, and "acted" in our churches today, with the letter, spirit, and intent of our Dedication Service, I cannot see. I feel and believe it cannot be done. They are clearly a desecration of a holy place, and the church is suffering in its spiritual life just in proportion to this desecration. We can juggle with words all we please, by saying all things are sacred, or holy—as some superficial persons do—but it remains forever true, that there are laws in the spiritual world—psychological laws—that are as unbending as the laws in the natural world. These laws must be observed if spiritual results are to be obtained. This truth is recognized in the Bible.

That the temple was not to be a place of business, as business and worship are not the same. Business has to do with our fellows, while worship has to do with God. Jesus said to enter into one's "closet" to pray. There is a reason for this. The unspiritual cannot see this reason perhaps, but the saints of God have learned by experience that there is a law of his being—a spiritual and psychological law—requiring complete, absolute concentration of mind and heart—his whole mental and spiritual being on God, in order to do one's best praying, and this cannot be done with a divided mind and heart—with a distracted mind and heart—because of surrounding attractions and distractions. So Jesus said "enter into thy closet and pray." He did this himself, going alone on the mountains to pray.

There are times and places where one may be innocently amused; but the house of God is not the place for amusement nor "entertainment." Amusement and "entertainment" do not conduce to worship—prayer and praise. They are derogatory to all this, and therefore, have no place in the house of God. There are certain faculties of our being aroused, or brought into action, by amusement or entertainment, but not the faculties aroused in prayer and praise, and for this reason, amusements, or mere entertainment, in the house of God, is a desecration and a flagrant violation of the sacred compact freely entered into with Almighty God in its dedication. And for this reason all mere entertainment, as such, should be excluded from the house of God.

The Bible makes a clear distinction between the "holy and the profane."

The priests were to "put difference between the holy and the unholy, and between clean and unclean." Lev. 10:10. "And they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane." Ezek. 44:23. And the charge was brought by the Lord, through the prophet Ezekiel, that the priests had failed to teach this difference, saying, "Her priests have violated my law, and have profaned mine holy things: they have put no difference between the holy and profane, neither have they showed difference between clean and the unclean." Ezek. 22:26.

"Wherefore as I live saith the Lord God; surely, because thou hast defiled my sanctuary with all thy detestable things, and with all thine abominations, therefore will I diminish thee; neither shall mine eye spare, neither will I have any pity." Ezek. 5:11.

The churches of this age are guilty of violating the very identical precept that the priests were guilty of violating, not recognizing the "difference between the holy and profane." Some go further than God, and say that everything is "sacred." God does not do this. He says some things are "profane," i. e., common, the most of things belong to this class. Holy things are separated and set apart wholly to God, or to a religious use, or purpose, in distinction from all others that are not so set apart. The Sabbath is alled "holy," because set apart for a specific religious use. So was the Tabernacle and the Temple. Not that the material of which these buildings were constructed was at all different from like material in any other buildings. It was the specific purpose for which they were built, and then the solemn dedication to God. Not that the hours, minutes, and seconds of the Sabbath are different from those of other days, but the design or purpose makes the difference.

The Israelites are called the "holy people," not that they are naturally better than other people, but because they were chosen and set apart to a specific mission in the world. So of our churches; they are not intrinsically different in their material make-up from other houses, but wholly different in their design or object. So they are holy in this sense. A trysting place of God. Wherever we meet God is a "holy place." Jacob at Bethel and Moses in the desert. God told Moses that the ground whereon he stood was "holy." Not that the soil was different from other soil of a like kind, but that God was there in a special manifestation made the difference. God was present in the Tabernacle and Temple in his Shekinah glory. So he's present in our churches which have been solemnly dedicated to his worship, though unseen—unless we grieve him away by our worldliness—turning his holy house into a place of amusement and entertainment. Then he may say of us as he said of the Jews, "Behold your house is left unto you desolate." Where "two or three are gathered together in His name," he's in the "midst," he says. But when people gather in the house of God to have "fun," amusement, entertainment, He's not there. To play Santa Claus as is sometimes done. To endorse and propagate a myth, instead of honoring Jesus Christ, He is grieved and not there. The whole thing must be an abomination in his sight. A desecration of his house, and teaching a myth in the house of God instead of the truth.

We've attended some Christmas services where there were recitations by the children, and nearly all being something about Santa Claus, but nothing about Jesus Christ. This was painful to me, but to the unthinking, unspiritual masses it was great "fun." And people have "fun" on the road to hell.

We believe it is all right to have a Christmas service in the church, with Santa Claus and all other foolishness and worldliness left out. Let the leader read the second chapter of Matthew, and from the second chapter of Luke, about the birth of Christ, and sing the standard Christmas hymns, as "Hark the herald angels sing," and such like. Let some one make an appropriate talk or address. Might be a number of short talks. Or the children might have recitations or readings, or both, with Santa Claus left out, and all other foolishness, lightness, levity, and fun—everything of a worldly, secular nature. A service of this kind is just as interesting as one of the wrong kind, and at the same time useful as a religious service. Let the service exalt Christ but not Santa Claus. Let it be joyous but not light, frivolous, worldly, foolish. Let the whole service center on Jesus Christ. We are supposed to hold these services to commemorate his advent into the world, but if we turn away from this glorious, historical fact to a myth, it becomes worse than a farce, the whole thing a paganistic performance, "turning the truth of God into a lie," a real solemn mockery. The fact that some persons can see no impropriety in things secular, worldly, and, even false and mythical in the house of God, is because they are lacking in knowledge in reference to these things, superficial in their thinking, and unspiritual. Even persons of the "world" who think soberly can see the impropriety of these things.

It seems that some persons will persist in trying to "serve God and Mammon." Seeming to think that there is "something in common between the temple of God and idols;" that there is "something in common between Christ and Belial;" that believers and infidels can be good bed-fellows. That we can be so "good" as to invite the devil in and tell him to "make himself at home." And this he will do if we say so. But when Satan comes in as a guest Jesus goes out.

We will not discuss the question as to whether the Santa Claus myth is a sin per se; but Santa Claus nor any other myth or falsehood has any place in the house of God—in any religious service.

Christ or Santa Claus? Which has been first in the past? And how of the future? J. F. Dosier.

THE PROPER PLACE FOR REPENTANCE

Let us repent while we are yet upon the earth, for we are as clay in the hands of the artificer. The potter when he makes a vessel and it turns amiss in his hands forms it anew; but if he had gone so far as to throw it into the furnace of fire, he can no more bring any remedy to it. So we, while we are in this world, should repent with our whole heart for whatsoever evil we have done in the flesh while we have yet the time of repentance that we may be saved of the Lord, for after we shall have departed out of this world we shall no longer be able either to confess our sins or repent in the other.—St. Clement.

SAFE IN HIS KEEPING

If God has hid me in His secret pavilion, let men slander and abuse me if they like! If I can say that God is my Father, Jesus is my Savior, and heaven is my home, let the world rail, let the flesh do what it pleases, I will not be afraid of evil tidings, for my trust is in God! Is not that a good footing for eternity? "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My word shall not pass away." If you get your feet fair and square on the rock, let the waves beat if they will. A Christian once said that he trembled sometimes, but the foundation never did; he had his feet upon the Rock.—Selected.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

A special meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions, made necessary by the death of Rev. Fred C. Klein, D. D., was held in Baltimore, Md., on January 11, 1927. Because of the complete merging of the work of this Board, with the work of the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration, this was their first meeting since the adjournment of the General Conference in May, 1924. At this meeting steps were taken to secure a successor to Dr. Klein. In the meantime the Board authorized the employment of Mrs. Klein to care for the clerical work of the office until a secretary is secured.

Mrs. Klein's very intimate knowledge of our foreign work, and her oft-times demonstrated competence in managing the detail work of the office of the foreign missionary secretary, greatly simplifies the immediate problem before your Foreign Board. The Board also felt that an opportunity ought to be given to the church to express in a substantial way its high appreciation of the long and efficient service of Dr. Klein, and to that end decided to recommend to the Union Board that they plan to make the coming Children's Day Service somewhat of a memorial to our late secretary. Already letters are coming to me from different sections of the church suggesting this very idea. When the Union Board meets in Baltimore on February 24 it will give due consideration to these suggestions.

A Fine Example—Who'll Be Next?

The following letter has just come to my desk:

Dear Brother Broomfield: I am enclosing a check for the sum of ten dollars for the church building at Nagoya College, about which you write in the paper that has just come to my desk. That will help a little. May God bless you and the work in the foreign as well as in the home-land.

Fraternally yours,

Ira T. Champion.

Brother Champion is a member of our church in Alabama, and is an assistant to Wayne B. Wheeler in the Legal and Legislative Department of the Anti-Saloon League of America, with headquarters in Washington, D. C. I wonder who will be next to lend a hand in this worthy enterprise? I know of no better investment for a little money than to help in completing this church building at Nagoya College, where nearly 1,200 young men will feel its influence. I will be pleased to acknowledge in this column any help you may see fit to give. My address is 1734 Potomac Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A Wonderful Gathering

After the meeting of our Board in Baltimore, I went immediately to Atlantic City to attend the annual meeting of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America. This conference includes all the foreign mission Boards of the evangelical churches of the United States and Canada. There were over fifty Boards represented. Many notable addresses were made by the recognized leaders in this department of the work of the church, and plans were outlined for the great Missionary Council to be held in Jerusalem just before Easter, 1928; but the thing that impressed me most was the emphasized recognition given to the value of prayer for missions. The cultivation of prayer for missions, in the personal life, in the local church, in Board meetings and conventions, was presented in syllabus form, in which twenty-eight heart-searching questions were asked, dealing with this vital question. As the discussion proceeded I had a feeling that as a church we had failed to emphasize this cultivation. When I heard a representative of the United Presbyterian Church state from the floor that they had seventy regularly organized prayer groups, all over the land, meeting weekly, or semi-weekly, or monthly, to pray for missions, I felt that here possibly was the explanation of the fact that the United Presbyterian Church leads the United States in its per capita support of missions. Brethren, pray for us.

Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D. D.

FOR JESUS' SAKE

"Mother," said a little boy, "I wish Jesus lived on earth now."

"Why, my darling?"

"Because I should like so much to do something for Him."

"But what could such a little bit of a fellow as you are do for Him?"

The child said, "Why, I could run all His errands for Him."

"So you could, my child, and so you shall. Here is a glass of jelly and some oranges for poor, old Margaret; I will let you take them, and do an errand for the Savior, for when upon earth, He said, 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me.' Whenever you do a kind act for anybody because you love Jesus, it is just the same as if the Savior were now living on the earth and you were doing it for Him."—The Illustrator.

PROSPERITY

Is a friend to be coveted and an enemy to be watched.

Makes many friends for us that do not endure through adversity.

Never made an avaricious man contented.

Imposes a harder test of character than poverty does.

Never brings much consolation to an envious man.

Has never been a satisfactory compensation for the loss of self-respect.

Costs too much if it has robbed us of our peace of mind.—Selected.

THE POWER OF THE STORY OF THE LOVE OF JESUS CHRIST

Bishop Whipple is moved to tell an incident which illustrates the power of the gospel if it once gets access to a man's heart: He says in a letter to the Churchman:

"Thirty-seven years ago I knew a great orator of the lower Sioux, Red Owl. He never attended church for he was afraid he would lose his influence among his people. One day he came into the school-room and stopped before a picture of the 'Ecce Homo,' and asked, 'What is that? Why are those thorns on his head?' Red Owl was so touched by the story of the love of 'the Son of the Great Spirit' that he came again and again to ask about Jesus. 'One day I was going to Wabasha's village, and saw on the prairie a new-made grave: over it was a plain wood cross. I learned that Red Owl was dead. He had been taken ill suddenly, and when dying he said to his young men: 'That story which the white man has brought into our country is true; I have it in my heart. When I am dead I wish you would put a cross over my grave, that the Indians may see what is in Red Owl's heart.'

"The 'power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.' "—Selected.

FAITH ONLY CAN SAVE

Doubt is the seed of all sin, and nothing can remove your doubt but your faith; and do not you see that your unbelief—the seed of all sin—must, in the nature of things, remain in you on and on up to the very instant that you quit doubting and believe that Jesus cleanseth? At the very moment you fully trust, at that moment doubt and sin are removed.—G. D. Watson.

THE GIFT OF THE SNOW MAN

Little Dora was sick. She had had scarlet fever, and was just sitting up. The doctor said it would be a whole month before she could go out and play with other children, perhaps six weeks; for it was a very cold winter, and she must not take cold. So little Dora was crying, although she knew she must not cry, for it would make her eyes ache very much.

It was snowing, too. All day long it had snowed, and all day yesterday it had snowed, and the day before yesterday, too. Before that the children had waved to her as they went to school, and it had not seemed so lonesome. Today was Friday. Even if it stopped snowing, she would not see them Saturday or Sunday, so little Dora felt she must cry even if it would hurt her eyes.

At last it was bedtime, and little Dora was very glad to go to sleep and forget how lonesome she was.

When she awoke in the morning it had stopped snowing. After she had had her breakfast and had been dressed, mother helped her to the window that she might look out. All the world was boys and girls, too, for there were all her schoolmates busily at work on a snow man right under her window. Such a big snow man, too! All were helping, the girls carrying snow to the boys who were packing it down hard. Little Dora saw they did not mean to make a snow man that would melt right away. How happy they were! Little Dora wanted to play, too, but she tried to think how glad she was to be able to watch them and she waved her "Thank you" to them from her window.

At noon they all trooped off and left her with the completed snow man. He was certainly a beautiful one—white with coal black eyes. red apple skin mouth and an old straw hat on his head. He did look very funny. Dora watched him most of the afternoon, and at dusk she saw some of the boys back and pour water over him so he would freeze hard. How she did want to talk to them! But she had to stay all alone.

When she was dressed Sunday morning, she could hardly wait to get to the window. Yes, the snow was there, but he had a big basket hung on his arm, and over his head was a big sign that read: "Watch me."

Little Dora did watch him for a long time. Then she saw Marjorie come into the yard, and drop something into the basket. She made signs that it was for little Dora. Father went out to the snow man and brought in a paper parcel. In it was a Bible story picture puzzle.

"How nice!" said mother. "You can use it until you are well." Dora played all the morning trying to put the pictures together, and at last they were finished.

"I see Doris in the yard," said mother. Yes, Doris on her way home from Sunday school had dropped into the snow man's basket all the papers and picture cards they had had in Sunday school since Dora had been sick and a letter from her teacher telling her how much they all missed her. It was a happy Dora who said good night to the snow man.

After that the children brought something to the snow man's basket every day. Fred brought gingerbread; Alice brought some fudge she made herself, Harold a book he had read and marked: "To be passed on to the scarlet fever ward in the hospital." George made some molasses candy. Grace dropped in some chestnuts. Every day and sometimes two or three times a day there was something.

It was very, very cold; so the snow man lasted a long time. He lasted until the doctor said that the house could be fumigated. Although Dora could not go out until it was warmer, all danger of contagion was over, and the children could come and see her.

Before the big snow man melted, father took a picture of him with his camera. All at once he looked into the basket. Then Dora and Mother saw him pick up something in his arms and bring it into the house. In a minute he came upstairs and put into Dora's arms a little white kitten with blue eyes, who looked up at Dora and purred as much as to say: "I have come to live with you." He was very cold and shivery, so mother gave him some warm milk and wrapped him up in a worsted shawl, and he lay on Dora's lap and went to sleep.

"I think," said father, "as we do not know where he came from, he must be the snow man's own gift to you."

"We will call him Snowball," said mother. "He must have been wandering around in the cold and jumped into the basket for warmth and shelter."

Little Dora bent over and softly kissed the head of the sleeping kitten. "Of all the gifts in the snow man's basket," she said, "I like the very best, the gift of the snow man himself, my little snowball kitten."—Emma E. Bush, in Continent.

TREAT YOUR TOYS RIGHT

"Oh, dear, I wish I had nice things like you," sighed Amy as she looked at Grace's doll trunk and all the pretty books and games on the shelf.

"You do have nice things," said Grace. "Last Christmas you had more presents than I had. Then, think of all you got at your birthday. Your aunties and uncles give you lots of things, too!"

"All the same, I haven't a book that looks as good as yours or a game or puzzle without something lost. Every one of my dollies has a broken arm or leg or the hair gone."

Can you guess why Grace's things last so much better than Amy's? You do not need to see those girls to know that Amy leaves her toys and books and dolls and games wherever she happens to be. Then, rain or dogs or some of the children often spoil the things. It is really Amy's own fault those things happen, because she has not been careful. She is both lazy and careless.

It is not the child that is given many toys who has the best things. It is the one who takes care of what he or she has. You can play with the same toy or dolly a great many times and have it to give away or keep after you are grown up. Or you can let everything you have be spoiled soon.

There is nothing smart in breaking your things or leaving them where they get spoiled. Take pride in seeing how well you can make your things last and yet have fun and give others a chance to enjoy playing with them. Use your playthings, but use them right.

Well-cared-for playthings will give you many good times, and they help you to learn how to care for other things you will have to use in work and play.—Child's Gem.

GOD'S WAY

God doesn't choose scholars to meet scholars when He is in a fight. He didn't choose a giant to meet Goliath; He chose a boy. He didn't choose scholars to meet the Jewish ecclesiastical machine; He chose ignorant fishermen. The Son of God said that His Father hides things from the wise and prudent and reveals them unto babes. Paul said that God chooses foolish things to confound the wise and mighty. God does not rely upon scholars. He would never hear the last of it, if He did. They would brag forever about their victory. Unbelief chooses scholars; God chooses humble men of faith. God doesn't use argument. God uses testimony. Scholars use arguments; God's men use prayer, the Bible and testimony.—Selected.

MY SON IS A FOOL

A certain New York millionaire was showing his home to a friend not long ago. The house was equipped with every modern convenience and luxury. "I have all these things," said the millionaire, "and yet I can enjoy none of them—for my son is a fool!"

Tragedies of this kind happen in many homes Usually they come, not because the boy is spoiled, but because he is poorly informed about life. He does not know toward what goal to direct his efforts.

To help boys and girls to choose their life work intelligently, a group of famous Americans are writing for the Youth's Companion this year a series of articles on the professions. Farming is discussed by L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange. Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House of Representatives, writes about politics. Equally eminent spokesmen have been found for the other professions.

Give an ambitious boy or girl a chance to read these articles, along with more than 300 gems of fiction every year. Now is the time to enter your subscription for the Hundred and First Year of the oldest, finest and cleanest young people's magazine in America. Subscribers will receive:—

1. The Youth's Companion—52 weekly issues, and

2. The Hundredth Anniversary Souvenir Picture, "A Yard of Youth" (sent on request).

All for $2.

3. Or include McCall's Magazine, the monthly authority on fashions. Both publications, only $2.50.

—More than three thousand young people have already registered for the International Christian Endeavor Convention to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, July 2-7, 1927. An after-convention tour to Yellowstone National Park is being planned by the Travel Department of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

—Mrs. Maud Smith whose serious illness was reported last week is much improved and her speedy recovery is hoped for.

Endowment Insurance Fund

Previously reported	$7,096.61
Miss Lelia Kirkman	5.00
Mrs. R. M. Gladstone	1.00
	$7,102.61

In the Herald of January 6, the total was given as $172,582.56, but through error of the typist, this was brought forward in the Herald report the following week as $50.00 less. To correct this, I have gone back to the report of the sixth January, and have listed all payments since that date, though it will be noted that a few of these were reported in the Herald of the thirteenth and the twentieth of January.

May I call the attention of those who have subscribed to the Endowment Insurance Fund to the fact that the third payment on the insurance is now long overdue, having been extended by notes? This is, or should be, a fund that is very much alive. Each payment increases the cash value of the insurance very materially. I wonder, though, how those who have promised to pay, and are neglecting it, are expecting the Treasurer to meet the obligations, and to protect the good name of the College. Is it not better that a great many should make a little sacrifice, if necessary, than that the Treasurer should be left to undertake the impossible, and the College, in which we have invested so much, and which has justified so completely the faith of its friends, should be seriously handicapped? What say our friends who have unpaid pledges?

J. NORMAN WILLS, Treasurer.

Executive Meeting

Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer and Mrs. George R. Brown have called an Executive meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies for Wednesday, February 2nd, at 11 o'clock, Grace Church, Greensboro.

It is very necessary that every member be present. We cordially invite any lady interested in our Mission work to attend this meeting.

Please notify Mrs. J. M. Millikan, Greensboro, if you expect to be present.

AND THE PEOPLE ROSE TO PLAY

Earth's meekest man, the world's humblest and wisest law-giver save the Messiah, (Exodus 32:6 and I Cor. 10:5-7), was shocked, chagrined and overwhelmed with grief at the people's infidelity.

Today this American nation is submerged and engrossed in card playing or bridge. This condition exists throughout hundreds of homes in this city. Down in the kitchen of my rented apartment the intelligent lass of seven and the cook are intent on the game. In every section of the rural life my dearest friends, those I love best, are playing. And up in the jail, a refined lady and I found the eleven incarcerated young men (save one too drunk and just inclosed) buried in the game on Sunday afternoon. And they excused themselves with—"Just a little pastime."

All over the nation in millions of homes the lights are burning until midnight and early morn as their inmates ply the cards. This is not confined to autocrat or plutocrat, but the masses are overwhelmingly involved.

Oh, the waste of incalculably valuable moments, hours—yea, in accumulation, years. It impedes the progress of God's kingdom. It weakens our influence for good. It is such a sacrifice to the minds of our nation's youth.

In the vast realm of literature now so widespread and accessible are jewels of truth sparkling in animating, inspiring, soul-expanding truth, unexplored by the hosts of these youths. In the nation's ministerial ranks of hundrsd of ministers not one conscientious ambassador will tell you it is right. I challenge all who read this to ask their pastors.

How it must grieve the living Christ, who moves a Presence all about us to see the church for whom He gave His life a vicarious atonement, (the efficacy of whose blood avails for all who plead for it), hampered, circumscribed, its purpose thwarted and at times set aside, and in some instances nullified. Oh, to see His kingdom want while they play, play, play.

Friends, have you heard the distant mutterings and rumblings, the warnings, the prophecies of impending evil, an onslaught to me imminent, of a religious war? Such in vastness and extent as the annals of the nation's history record not. I adjure you, shall we send our youth to their gory graves, no more strongly fortified within and without than this? May God awaken us!

"And the people arose to play."

FANNIE O. KIRKPATRICK.

Fifty-six charges reported this work on one or other of the budgets. Seven reported on all three. Nine Charges went over the top on the College Assessment, and Spencer went over on the A. C. B., making three charges over on the A. C. B.

The report is a good one. Fifty-six charges reportjng in the first quarter means more nearly a full year's work and not just a few months' work just before conference.

This week I meant to publish the entire roll but because of so many things coming up unexpectedly I did not get the matter prepared, watch for it next week. For the same reason I am making no report on "The Work and the Workers." Bear in mind that February is "Church Extension" month. Let's cooperate heartily and make the month a successful one by paying this whole assessment. The Board of Church Extension held one meeting but could not make any appropriations because there was no funds. An earnest effort—a good pull altogether will raise this amount. Let's do it. May our God bless each pastor and each church.

In His name,
A. G. DIXON.

Brother Garner and his Why Not people distinguish themselves this week. Whitakers and Siler City and Albemarle are in the same class. Thanks to all the charges represented in this report.

—A bookcase filled with books in the county jail for the use of the prisoners has been provided by the Christian Endeavorers of Asheboro, North Carolina.

WORD JUMPING

This is a game that will be found interesting and instructive for a while. It consists in changing a word one letter at a time until a wholly different word has been produced. Each word formed must be a real word and only one letter must be changed at a time.

We may change LOVE to HATE thus:

LOVE, LIVE, HIVE, HAVE, HATE. Four jumps.

We may change HIM to HER in two jumps: HIM, HEM, HER.

We will give a small prize to the reader of the Herald who solves the following problems with the smallest number of jumps and sends us the list by February 10th. If two or more have the smallest number of jumps, the prize will go to the one whose letter bears the earliest post-mark.

1. Change HAND to FOOT.
2. Change EAR to EYE.
3. Change NOSE to CHIN.
4. Change SLOW to FAST.
5. Change BLACK to WHITE.

THEY DIED THAT PROHIBITION MIGHT LIVE

At the annual dinner of the Citizens Committee of One Thousand for Law Observance and Enforcement U. S. Senator Morris Sheppard called on those present to rise as a tribute to the 50 Federal prohibition officers and the State officers who have been killed in the course of duty since prohibition became effective in 1920, saying:—

"I ask that we rise for a moment in honor of these and all other officers who have died in order that civilization might be perpetuated and that law might be enforced.

"God rest their souls in His eternal peace, and may their examples give us all a renewed and an inflexible resolve to continue our endeavors for the integrity of the Constitution, the majesty of the law, the happiness of the American people, and the spirit of the American flag." From address of Senator Morris Sheppard known as "the father of the Eighteenth Amendment" at meeting of Citizens Committee of One Thousand at Washington.

—Rudyard Kipling, famous British author, was sixty-one years old December 30.

—One hundred and twenty-two women have been elected to serve in State Legislatures that meet this year, says a report made by the National League of Women Voters. Of this total eighty-six are Republicans, thirty-one are Democrats and five are independents.

—Brother J. F. Williams of Calvary church is trying out a number of radio outfits with a view to purchasing the most satisfactory. There are so many on the market that one is afraid of buying the wrong one.

—Mrs. D. A. Braswell was released from her long-continued sufferings last Sunday by death. Rev. W. F. Ashburn conducted the funeral on Monday. Rev. D. A. Braswell, her husband, will have the sympathy of many of our readers who know him and did not know Mrs. Braswell. Those who knew her felt that she was a good woman, indeed.

—A Sunday school convention for Rock Creek Township will be held at Gibsonville next Sunday afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock. Six ministers' names are on the program. All Sunday school officers and teachers in the township are expected to be present.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

THE END HAS COME

My wife died Sunday, 10 a.m., January 23, 1927. Three years and three months sufferings. She bore her suffering with the greatest patience. She has left her home on earth to go to the home prepared for the faithful. Her absence from our home makes our home very lonely. We had lived together 54 years two months and 26 days. We were married on Sunday about 10 a.m. and she died on Sunday 10 a.m. She was a good woman, a good wife, and a good mother. While she has gone to the City of light to be associated with the blood-washed host of heaven, and hear the praises of God and behold His glory and enjoy the bliss of heaven forever, she has left a home behind with a husband in that home alone to finish the battles of life where the shadows are falling, where difficulties and perplexing things are on the increase daily and the lonely winds of the midnight make the doors and windows of the home chuckle. He must finish the battle without his mate, for she is gone. But she did not take her Savior away, she left Him right here, to help me finish the battle of life. One of the last things I understood her to say was she wanted the folks in our home and all the children to be good to me. Brethren, I have always needed your prayers and sympathy. I need them more than ever. God bless you all. Pray for me.

D. A. BRASWELL.

P. S. When you come this way call on me at the old home, 83 Ann St., Concord, N. C. In the past I could say come to see us. I can not say that now. I say come to see me.

Your friend and brother. D. A. B.

FACTS ABOUT THE HUNTER-KIMBALL MEMORIAL CLASS

The Hunter-Kimball Memorial class is one of the largest Sunday school classes of Grace M. P. church. Our class is composed of young men and women. The name of the class is a memorial to Mrs. A. B. Kimball, former teacher of the girls, and Mr. T. A. Hunter who was the teacher of the boys' class before the two were united.

Both were fine teachers but after their deaths Miss Pearl McCulloch took charge of the girls' class and Miss Josephine Evans (now Mrs. N. W. Kirkman) took the boys' class.

When the summer season came and vacation time was on hand, the two classes began to fall down in attendance. A little later the girls' class lost their teacher to Calvary church, which caused the two classes to be combined.

After Miss Evans' marriage she turned the class over to Mr. J. M. Stone who is still the faithful teacher and dearly loved of our class.

The class has been a great success, we think, since the combining of the two; we have had two contests for new members and attendance. The first contest we divided boys on one side and girls on the other. The boys won in this contest and the girls entertained them with a party at Odell Club House.

The last contest, beginning in September and running through November was won by the Purple. This time we divided the class with boys on both sides—selected the captain for each side and chose our colors—purple and gold.

Both of these contests proved a great success for we added many new members to the class.

Since the class is so large and the new members are not acquainted with some of us we try to have a social of some kind every month. We have had weinie roasts, picnic suppers, and social gatherings at different homes of the class members. In order to get well acquainted with our last new members, we are having a party Thursday, January 20, at the church hut. Every member is requested to come wearing something to represent the month in which she or he was born. During the social hour we will guess the month of each and the one guessing the most correct will be given a prize.

Each member of our class makes a special donation the first Sunday in every month for the M. P. Children's Home. In order to pay for refreshments served at the socials, flowers to sick, cards for the class, etc, we retain a small amount of each Sunday's collection except the first Sunday.

J. Clyde Auman Mission Band

The J. Clyde Auman Mission Band of Flat Rock Church, Vance Circuit, met Sunday afternoon in the home of its President, Master Melvin Mulchi. The attendance was not so large but after snow all morning we should not complain.

Devotionals were conducted by Madeline Mulchi.

The secretary was absent, so we had to omit the minutes of last meeting.

Many plans were discussed to make the meetings more interesting. It was decided to hold meetings on Saturday afternoons so as to work in games and making of pictures or scrap books during social hour.

The program at this meeting consisted of Questions on Life of David Livingston, by Band Superintendent, followed by the reading of him in Racord.

The story, "The Honey Bee's Choice," was splendidly told by Madeline Mulchi and Lora Riggan. The Superintendent made a few remarks on the story to impress us, that we should all be like the little white clover—do our best, and be our sweetest just where we are. At next meeting Adolphus White and Sallie Davis will each tell a story in their own words. One selected from Missionary Record, other from M. P. Herald. In this way Superintendent hopes we will learn to know our papers better. Next meeting, January 29.

Dues collected, 30 cents.

Notice Haw River Circuit

Rev. J. Elwood Carrol of High Point College, will preach at Brown Summit the fifth Sunday in this month at 11 o'clock.

W. D. REED.

Albermarle.—We are glad to report every thing running a long fine now. Our Sunday school is increasing in members and in interest. We had 137 present Sunday and a collection of $16.68, as this was our day for Children's Home. Our church services are being largely attended by visiting friends, as Brother Anderson seems to have such wonderful messages that we can hardly wait from Sunday to Sunday to hear them. I think every time he gets through that he surely gave us a special message. If so, we are glad to say they are all special. I had a visiting brother tell me a few days ago that he had never heard such preaching in his life. We truly thank God for such messages. Sunday morning Brother Anderson opened the doors of church and Mrs. Charlie Hatley and Mrs. Hathcock came forward and united with us, and at the night service Mrs. Shofard Burrelson gave her name and was received, coming from the Baptists to be with her husband. We are glad to have these good folks unite with us as we feel sure they can do much good with us.

We are glad to see our good folks taking an interest in our church paper. I think it will be a great inspiration to us that try to report to know that our own folks think enough of our paper to read it.

Our cottage prayer meeting will be held this week with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hatley with Mrs. J. R. Anderson as leader. Our last week's was held at the parsonage with Mrs. Carl Moton as leader. Sorry we did not have more of our members present. We have received 13 new members this year; we are going to make this the banner year for Albemarle.

R. L. L., Reporter.

Mt. Hermon Charge.—Two of the churches, Bellmont and Friendship, had Christmas programs and trees. The offering for the A. C. B. was $7.16. The pastor is very grateful for the presents received from these two churches, also the ones received from members of Mt. Hermon church.

Mrs. Elsie Coble Holt, Misses Ruby Isley and Effie Keck raised enough money during Christmas week to buy a nice pulpit Bible for Mt. Hermon church. The two latter girls were only home on a vacation. Thanks to you live people!

Mr. Wayne Curtis, former Bellemont Sunday school superintendent, is now at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., taking a three-month course in vocal training. Mr. Green Nicholson succeeded him as Sunday school superintendent. Bellemont church has installed electric lights.

Friendship has installed a new stove which cost nearly one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Bellemont, Friendship, and Cedar Cliff churches have paid the college assessment in full. Weather conditions have prevented the presentation of the matter at Mt. Hermon. Of course, Mt. Hermon will pay her part when approached.

The pastor has received inside information that one of his Mt. Hermon members is to cease bachelorhood very soon. Cupid has been playing about one of the minister member's heart and he has decided to "hop off" on January 26, 1927. Miss Oda Furgeson is the bride to "sail" with him.

We have been grieved a number of times since the new conference year begun. Every church on the charge has lost at least one member by death; Mt. Hermon has lost two and Friendship has lost three. Those that have gone to join that innumberable caravan are: Mrs. Mary Ellen Fox Thompson, November 20; Mr. J. P. Sharp, November 28; Miss Mamie Loy, December 5; Mrs. Bessie Rich, December 28; Mrs. M. C. Bryant, December 30; Mrs. Bessie Patterson, January 21; and

Mr. E. R. Sharp, January 22. May the Holy Spirit comfort the bereaved and direct us in all we undertake to do.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

High Point.—With a great deal of pleasure the congregation listened to an able sermon Sunday morning by Dr. A. G. Dixon, President of N. C. Conference. We are always delighted to hear him, for we claim him as our own, having been pastor of this church for nine years, during which period he endeared himself to the members of our congregation in a very unusual degree. We were pleased to see Mrs. Dixon with him.

The Mission Study Class held an interesting meeting on Monday afternoon at the church with a good attendance. After a hymn Mrs. J. W. Mitchell led the devotionals, and we were much pleased to hear a beautiful solo, "The Holy City," by Miss Iola Perryman with piano accompaniment by Mrs. R. M. Andrews. The chapter, "Islam and Christianity" in the study book, "Moslem Women," was discussed by Mrs. E. L. Douglas, who was assisted by Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Mrs. J. H. Allred, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, and Mrs. H. A. Garrett. The Question Box was answered by Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Shelton, and Mrs. Garrett. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, the newly elected President of the Foreign Missionary Society, presided at the meeting and brought it to a close with an earnest prayer for the work and workers in foreign fields.

The topic for the Christian Endeavor meeting this evening will be "How we can train for service." Misses Claire Douglas and Rosalie Andrews will be the leaders. Mr. Ralph Vance takes the place of Mr. Theodore Ballard as President, since the latter has moved to Charlotte.

The Board of Stewards will hold an important meeting Tuesday evening.

Our mid-week prayer meeting is looking up, and last Wednesday evening the associate pastor, who has been making a special effort to increase the attendance, wore a broad smile. See what a small effort on your part will make your pastor happy!

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will conduct a Food Sale next Saturday at the store of High Point Hardware Company, cake, cheese, pies, chicken salad, and candy will be on sale and the proceeds will be used for a Scholarship for the children of Rev. Mr. Obee, one of our missionaries.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian P. Dodge and Mrs. A. M. Snapp of Washington, D. C., stopped over here last Wednesday to visit Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard. They were on their way to Florida.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker went to Lexington this afternoon in response to a message bringing the sad news of the death at 10 o'clock a.m. of her uncle, Capt. Chas. M. Thompson. His condition had been critical for several days. Capt. Thompson was a prominent and honored citizen of Lexington for more than half a century, a brave Confederate veteran who carried an empty sleeve as the mark of that conflict, a consistent member of the Lutheran church, and a successful business man. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Peebles of Davie county, two sons, Messrs. Joe H. and Cliff Thompson of Lexington, three daughters, Mrs. J. D. Hielig of Salisbury, Mesdames C. C. Hargrove and Walter H. Mendenhall of Lexington. His son-in-law, W. H. Mendenhall, died ten days ago. The sympathy of many friends is extended to the family in this double bereavement.

Siler City.—Sunday school was attended by a large number Sunday, regardless of the cloudy weather.

We are glad to say that a number of the members of the Sunday school and church are able to be back again after a few weeks of sickness.

The Junior and Senior Christian Endeavor Societies are making an effort to make this year the best since they were first organized.

The Senior Endeavorers are conducting the mid-week prayer services during the absence of our pastor.

We wish for our pastor the very best of success in his work, while in Maryland.

REPORTER.

Anderson Circuit, Liberty Hill Church.—Our pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, preached very helpful and inspiring sermons Sunday at the morning and evening services.

The C. E. met at 6:30 Sunday evening with Mr. Palmer Leonard as leader.

We had an interesting meeting. As we just have meetings on the second and fourth Sunday nights we used the subject "Denominational Loyalty."

On the third Sunday afternoon of this month Rev. Lee Leonard of Greenville came down and organized our choir. The officers are as follows: president, Harvil McClimon; vice-president, Herman Compton; choir leader, N. G. McClimon; assistant, N. N. Smith; pianist, Kate Poole, assistant, Sallie McClimon; secretary, Emma Lee Poole; foreman, Palmer Leonard.

The church has decided to raise the choir, which we think will be a great help to the singing.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely considering the weather although it is not as large as we would like to see it.

We ask the prayers of the Herald readers for our church and Sunday school, that they may continue to grow. REPORTER.

Liberty.—Our pastor, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, has gone to Westminister, Md., to enter the seminary. He will still hold the pastorate.

Mrs. Crowson entertained the Intermediate C. E.'s recently.

Mrs. Dr. F. A. Shepard is on a committee to see that shrubbery is planted on the church grounds.

I hope I will feel stronger and able to write a longer report next time.

BERTINE SHEPARD.

Second Church, Charlotte.—We were glad to have Brother Little from Concord with us Sunday. He made a fine talk to the children. We all enjoyed it very much.

The Ladies' Aid gave an old-time ginger bread and coffee supper Saturday night at sale of their quilt. Sale of the quilt brought $77.50. The amount for the names and the sale was $207.50. We wish to thank all for their help.

We had Brother D. A. McLaurin of Concord with us to auction our quilt. We wish to thank him for his help.

We are sorry to learn of the death of our pastor's wife, Mrs. D. A. Braswell of Concord; they have our prayers and sympathy. Brother Braswell has been loyal to his pastoral work for many years. May God's richest blessings rest upon him and his children in their hour of trouble.

Asheboro.—On Thursday evening of last week the Brotherhood held a splendid meeting in the social room of the church. The Home Missionary Society served a splendid supper to about twenty-five interested persons. Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., and Mrs. Harrison of Greensboro were present and after several short speeches had been made by members of the organization, the principal address was made by Brother Harrison. The address was timely and was well received. Mrs. Harrison is always welcome at Asheboro, having lived here until her marriage last October. After the address the election of officers for the next six months took place and resulted in Mr. G. W. Hayworth being made president, Prof. T. F. Bulla vice-president, and Mr. James Bunch secretary and treasurer. In order to make it easier for the High School boys, the time of meeting of the Brotherhood was changed from the Thursday night after third Sunday to Friday night after third Sunday.

The attendance at all the services was reasonably good yesterday. The Ladies' Aid held a splendid meeting at the parsonage this afternoon. This organization has done splendid work and has meant a great deal to the church. Tonight the Calendar Committee which is composed of the heads of the various departments of the church will meet at the parsonage to make the calendar for the year. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Henderson.—In view of the many past events and the number planned for the coming week, we feel sure that we are progressing in all our church activities. We trust there is much spiritual progress also. Our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, continues to preach those true gospel sermons that stir and inspire the souls of all. The large congregations and the interest and attention given proves that there is great power in the simple preaching of the word of God.

The Aid Society held its January meeting Monday afternoon, January 10, at the home of Mrs. George B. Harris. The meeting was well attended and many plans were made for the year. Miss Agnes Harris was in charge of the program, and gave an interesting sketch of the life of Florence Nightingale. This was followed by a Bible contest, after which refreshments were served.

On Tuesday, January 11, the Philathea class entertained the Baracas, with Rev. R. A. Hunter as honor guest, the occasion happening to come on his birthday. The social was held in the Sunday school rooms which were attractively decorated in the class colors. A Coo Coo game requiring each one to do some stunt afforded much merriment, and revealed quite a bit of hidden talent. A beauty contest was then held, and the prize was purposely won by Mr. Hunter. This proved to be a beautiful book trough, and was appropriately presented by Mr. Pope Garrett, followed a short speech of thanks and appreciation from Mr. Hunter.

The guests were then invited into the classrooms where a birthday cake with lighted candles, formed the centerpiece of a very attractive table. Refreshments were served by members of the Philathea class.

The young Ladies' League held its regular monthly meeting January 13th at the home of Missess Gertha and Myrtle Trogdon. In the absence of the president, Mrs. H. A. Jordan presided. After the business sessions, it was decided to hold a barbecue with the Mission Band, Thursday, January 27th. Mrs. H. A. Jordan then gave a very interesting talk on, "The Pine Ridge School," and it was unanimously agreed upon to pack and send a box of clothing there at once. The hostesses served delicious refreshments at the close of the meeting.

On last Sunday night, January 23rd the Christian Endeavor Society had a most wonderful meeting from every standpoint. The leader, Miss Mary Dosier, gave a splendid talk on "Prayer," followed by comments and reading from other members. Mrs. H. A. Ellis gave a most inspiring talk of her first experiences in Christian Endeavor work in Liverpool, England. The splendid interest shown by the large number of young people present proves that this is indeed a great work, and we do earnestly pray that it will continue to grow in every way.

The Ladies' Missionary Societies are to entertain the young Ladies' League tonight, January 24th, at the home of Mrs. F. R. Harris. A great deal of time has been spent in the preparation of the program etc., and it is hoped that a large number of the ladies of the church as well as all members of the societies will be present. I will give a full report of this meeting next week.

One other event, to which we are looking forward with much interest, is the Fifth Sunday Rally to be held at our church next Sunday, January 30th. All the Sunday schools are invited, and our congregation is making plans to serve lunch to all those who attend.

Pray for us that this may be a great occasion, and in truth a great Rally of all our forces united together for the advancement of God's Kingdom.

Friends and former members of the Henderson M. P. church will regret to learn that one of its most faithful members, Mr. T. T. Hicks, continues quite ill, at his home.

Rockingham.—Our Sunday school is now in fine progress. We have about 151 pupils on roll. The teachers and officers had a meeting to discuss plans for the new year. It was decided that we have monthly meetings throughout the year.

Next Sunday the singing convention will meet at our church about 2 o'clock. We know this will be an enjoyable meeting.

Our mid-week prayer service is still continuing in strength. The boys and the girls have their meetings a quarter past seven and join the main meeting at 7:30.

Rev. J. H. Trollinger, our pastor, gives us a Bible study on every fourth Sunday night. And since this month has five Sundays he will give us a Bible study on the fifth Sunday morning and night. We are now studying Matt., the fourteenth and fifteenth chapters for Sunday.

Our Sunday school has made some progress in the payment of the church debt. During the past year we have paid $114.20 on the debt ourselves. The highest amount given at one time was $15. The following Sunday schools have aided us some in the payment: Creswell, Welcome, Worthville, Bethesda, and Cedar Halls, The total amount that ours and these have paid is $125.95. We wish to express our appreciation for the offerings to each one of these. We still have $80. indebtedness which we intend to pay at our earliest date. We are still having our special Sunday offering for this cause. If there is anyone who is able and would like to help us on this, it will be highly appreciated.

We have begun our Children's meetings again. We meet at a quarter of ten o'clock of a Sunday morning. We carry out the old plan for our Bible study with them.

BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Charge.—Rev. W. T. Totten filled his appointment last Sunday morning. He has filled all his appointments. The attendance hasn't been what we wished for, but we hope with the coming of spring the people will begin to be back to church.

There has been a lot of sickness in the community. We hope for all the sick ones a speedy recovery.

The Sunday school has fallen back a little for the last few Sundays on account of sickness.

The Sunday school took up a collection for the Children's Home last Sunday. The collection amounted to $1.42. REPORTER.

Concord.—Last Sunday week ago was a fine day at our church. The Sunday school, even though it was very cold, had a very large attendance. The morning service was also well attended. As for the evening service, it would be very difficult to say too much in praise of it. The congregation crowded the building to capacity, a large female chorus delighted the audience with some fine singing. The pastor delivered a very inspiring sermon at this hour, using as a subject, "A Great Home." At the close of the service, as it was family night, a Bible was presented to the largest family present. Many commendatory words have been said about the service.

Wednesday evening "Church Night" was the best yet. The program was fine and the attendance a record breaker. It now looks as if our slogan or goal will be reached: "A prayer meeting that we would not be ashamed of if our Lord were to come."

The Sunday school orchestra gave another ten-minute sacred concert at the opening of the school. The largest attendance in the history of the church was present. The goal was three hundred. The attendance was 280. How many can beat it?

At 11 a.m. Mr. Hendry preached the first of a series of morning messages on "The Cross." The subject used Sunday morning was "The Glories of the Cross."

The Sunday evening service was "Brotherhood Night," at which time a large male chorus from the Brotherhood sang many old familiar hymns. Four young ladies from the Christian Endeavor society acted as ushers. A large crowd was present for this service.

Mr. J. M. Blackwelder, who fell from a building while at work in Rockingham and was slightly injured, is able to be out again.

BERNICE NASH, Reporter.

Denton Church.—Our Sunday school was well attended yesterday. Year ago attendance was 46, yesterday 70. Offering a year ago, $0.81; offering yesterday, $2.42; large attendance class 7, present 15; large offering classes, no. 1 and 2, .65 each.

The ones that miss the church services surely do not realize what they are losing.

We find the lessons interesting to the ones present. Sure they would be to the ones that are absent if they would come out. All are invited to come out next Sunday at 9:45 a.m. and enjoy the lessons with us. Our Christian Endeavor was well attended yesterday evening. The superintendent had charge.

Our superintendent called on Miss Mary Keans to make a talk which was enjoyed by all present. After the lesson he again called on Mr. W. E. Hill to make another talk which was enjoyed by all.

We are glad to say that the Junior class is taking a great interest in this work. They have members from the M. E. Church in their class. They have a large class every Sunday evening. Their leader is Mr. C. A. Hoover.

The three girls who received certificates from Rev. J. Elwood Carroll as Christian Endeavor Experts extend many thanks to him.

REPORTER.

Cleveland Circuit.—We are glad to state that three or four of the churches have put in better heating systems.

Our first quarterly conference convened at Oak Grove; a fine congregation was present. Brother J. M. Morgan preached a splendid sermon at eleven o'clock. At 1:30 conference went in session. Our pastor led the devotional service. A good number of officials were present and a fine spiritual and financial report was made. Pastor recommended to conference to try to place a church paper in every home on the circuit. It passed and the campaign is on. Conference was then requested to stand and pay a prayer of respect to J. H. Grigg for the loss of his companion. Brother E. M. Ivester led the prayer. Also Brother W. W. Covington of the M. E. Church, South, was present and made a fine talk.

Conference adjourned to meet with Kistlers Church for the second meeting.

We can state that we have some evergreen Sunday schools; some have gone in for the winter. We have our C. E. Society and it is doing a fine work.

CHARLIE GRANT, Conference Sec'y.

Haw River Circuit.—Our 10 inch blanket of snow is gone now and we are back to earth again. However, the snow did not hinder our church services. These are a people that it takes more than rain, wind or snow to keep away from church. Some of our people came two miles to mid-week prayer meeting at Brown Summit when they had to plough through snow to get here.

We have vacated the old church at Midway and are holding services in the school building while the good people like the goose and the harp are talking about building a splendid new church.

Our Sunday school at Fair Grove is taking on new life. Our new young superintendent, Brother Percy Bevil, is lining up the work in fine shape and the out-look is the best yet.

The finances of each church are coming up in the order as given below. Midway has forged to the front, Fair Grove is a close second, then comes Friendship, Mizpah and Brown Summit.

We doubt very much if some of the other churches will let Midway hold first place long.

We feel very keenly the loss of the fellowship of our dear Brother J. W. Hopkins, who has accepted a position at Stokesdale, Va. We trust that Providence will lead him back this way. We were glad to have Mrs. Thomas Butler worship with us Sunday after returning from Hospital improved in health but not fully recovered. W. D. REED.

Canaan, Denton Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, filled his appointment yesterday at 11 a.m. He delivered a very helpful sermon. His theme was "The Crucifixion of Jesus Christ," which he made so plain that it seemed impossible that an unsaved person could sit still and listen to him.

We are glad to say that Rev. Mr. Henderson and family are well liked by the people in our community.

We are also glad to say that our Sunday school is still moving forward. We have 130 on roll, and there were 75 present yesterday, while there were only 28 a year ago. Our preaching days are every second and fourth Sunday, and we have prayer meeting every first and third Sunday right after Sunday school; in which the young people take a great interest. We hope they will continue to do so. I don't think there is a greater thing for young people to do than to take a part in church work.

We are glad indeed to say that our church made the raise of the annual conference budget yesterday.

We ask the prayers of the Herald readers.

REPORTER.

Halifax.—We had splendid congregations at Hollister, Ringwood, and Bethesda churches yesterday and last night. The stewards of Hollister church are planning to make a special drive, or the every-member canvass at once. Mr. Gallaway, who has very recently come into our church, has been placed on the board of stewards, and is doing splendid work, and we are expecting good results.

The good people down here are still pounding us and we are not afraid to tell it. Since our last report Mr. Harry Lewis filled up our tank with gas, Mrs. Harry Lewis, and her mother, Mrs. Taylor, gave us a nice lot of canned fruit, and Mrs. Martin gave us a nice present which should have been reported before now. Mrs. S. A. Whitley gave us a nice lot of eggs, and Mr. Willie Hull gave us eggs, and potatoes, and Mr. F. M. Taylor, filled our tank with gas. These good people down here believe in feeding the pastor's horse. We want to thank every one for these kind remembrances.

With best wishes to the Herald.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Bethel, Alamance Circuit.—Since this is our first report to the Herald since the new year I will say that we are highly pleased that our same pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, was returned to us. Although he has been with us only one year, yet he has won a great place in the hearts of those he served. We look forward to the Sunday he preaches to us, and will be glad when he can come twice a month. Our last Sunday he gave us a very helpful sermon on "A safe investment," taking for his text. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth." We were shown that failure or success in life depends upon how one invests time, thought, energy, and opportunity—life's resources—failure coming to those who invest in the material world, success to those who invest in Christ.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the supervision of Mr. Lon McPherson. Next Sunday resolutions and a motto are to be adopted as goals toward and by which we may work during the year. We are planning to have new additions to our church for Sunday school rooms, which are much needed.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met with Mrs. J. M. Foust, January 2, for their regular meeting. The next meeting is to be with Mrs. W. A. Foust the first Sunday in February. The subject is, "Self-Sacrifice." The study book, "Moslem Women," is being used.

One of our members, Miss Olma Foust, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Foust, and Mr. Lonnie Duke of Tennessee, were married at the M. P. parsonage in Graham, December 11, 1926. Another member, Miss Eva Allen, and Mr. Marvin Scott of Rock Creek Church were recently married at the home of Rev. H. L. Isley. We wish for all these young people a happy and prosperous journey in life.

I am glad to say that my father, who has been ill, is improving.

BESSIE HOLMES.

Albemarle.—Sunday was a good day with us here; had a fine Sunday school. The collection amounted to something over $16.00; a certain per cent of that goes to the Children's Home.

We had a large and appreciative congregation at both the morning and evening service. Two joined the church at the morning service, and one at the evening service. Thirteen have united with the church since conference.

We visited one of the oldest members of our church Sunday afternoon, Brother Snotherly. I believe it is claimed for him that he is the oldest Methodist Protestant in the county. He will be 88 years of age in March, and has been a member of the Methodist Protestant Church seventy years. He is proud of his record and the church honors and respects him for his loyalty and faithfulness to the church. He has been in feeble health this winter, and desires the prayers of the people. J. R. ANDERSON, Pastor.

Calvary.—There were 182 present in the school last Sunday. That lacks only 22 of being three times as many as were on the roll when I became pastor here two years ago. I consider that splendid progress. The credit for this growth is not due the pastor or to any one individual, but it is due Brother Hester Causey, former superintendent, Brother J. W. Dixon, present superintendent, and the other officers and the teachers. We have a very fine corps of teachers and officers considering the enrollment of our school. Fine work is being done in all departments. Special enthusiasm is manifested in the Baraca class. A contest for new members and attendance has been on for past few weeks and is bringing good results. The young men are now planning to excavate under the church and fit them out a class room.

The work of all departments is moving along nicely. Christian Endeavor especially is picking up. We are now planning for our special evangelistic service to begin first Sunday in April. We are hoping for a successful meeting.

Miss Pinkie Waugh and Mrs. Roy Smith, two of our church members, who have been in the hospital, are improving nicely. Mrs. L. W. Jobe, who has been on the sick list for a few weeks, is also improving.

President A. G. Dixon will preach at the eleven o'clock service next Sunday, and at the evening hour a representative of the Anti-Saloon League will speak. A good audience for both these services is desired.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Orange Charge.—The holidays came and are gone, but the spirit of them remains.

We were remembered with a number of Christmas cards, also fresh meat and other things for the table, two checks; but the regular pounding came last Wednesday night when 25 or 30 persons visited the parsonage, and left a supply of groceries, which will reduce the parsonage family's expense for some time.

We leave off the mentioning of articles and names, God knows them all. May His blessings be upon each one. May we be of service to these kind people.

B. M. WILLIAMS, Family.

Mizpah Philathea Class.—The Mizpah Philathea class held its regular meeting last Sunday at church.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Miss Katherine Stanley, roll called and minutes read by secretary, Miss Ruth Hill. The purpose of this meeting was to elect new officers for the year. They are as follows:

President, Mrs. H. J. Jones; first vice-president, Mrs. Roy Stewart; second vice-president, Miss Katherine Stanley; secretary and treasurer, Miss Ruth Hill; reporter, Miss Pauline Crowder; teacher, Miss Katherin Stanley; assistant teacher, Mrs. D. H. Huffines.

The different committees are to be appointed by the president. Everyone be on the lookout to see what committee you are on; the president will post them at church. We are sure that every officer will do her part in making this a prosperous year. May God bless every member of the class.

—Mrs. John P. Coble, of Tabernacle, died on Monday, her birthday, at the age of 83 years. The funeral on Tuesday was conducted by Rev. T. M. Johnson, assisted by Brothers Millaway and Ashburn and the editor of the Herald. Mrs. Coble was highly esteemed by many friends. There was a large attendance at the funeral service. She leaves two daughters, three sons, and quite a number of grandchildren one of whom is Rev. H. F. Fogleman, pastor of Granville circuit.

—Nine hundred and thirty persons were helped by the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare during the past biennial period, an increase of two hundred over the number of cases in the preceding period. Of this number of cases, 460 involved dependent and neglected children.

—Rev. F. L. Gibbs has arrived at Westminster and is pleased with his prospects as a seminary student.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Pounds

Died at Cedar Falls on January 11, 1927, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Pounds, the wife of our Rudolph Pounds. Buried January 13th in Cedar Falls M. P. cemetery by the writer, which makes the second wife I have buried for Brother Pounds. I buried his first wife about 10 years ago. Lizzy joined the Christian church at an early age and lived a Christian life to the end. She leaves her husband and three step-children and father and mother and two brothers and four sisters to mourn their loss. She will be greatly missed in the home. May the God of Love comfort these two families in their hours of grief and may they so live that they can meet their loved ones where we never grow old.

The deceased was about 45 years old.

G. A. LAUGHLIN.

Henson

Near Giles Chapel Mrs. Mary Stephenson Henson. She was born May 1, 1873, died December 20, 1926. She was married to Henry Henson in 1912. She lived all of her life at the place where she was born, where she could look out and view the grave yard every day, where she was laid to rest on December 22nd by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. E. Pritchard. She was converted while a child and joined the church at Giles Chapel where she remained true and faithful until death.

Truly a good woman is gone. She leaves her husband and five daughters, Mrs. Lillie Shaw, Mrs. Magie Nance, Mrs. Daisy Underwood, Miss Ethel and Annie Henson.

G. A. LAUGHLIN.

Rich

It is with hearts full of sadness that we, the members of Bellemont Sunday school of Mt. Hermon Circuit, offer our tribute of love to the memory of our friend, Mrs. Bessie Buckner Rich, whom her Heavenly Father had called to her home on high, December 27, 1926.

Our hearts were sad as we thought of our friend who would meet with us no more. But while we grieve we must remember that for her it was a blessed change—Heaven for earth—and an abundant entrance unto that land—

"Where light is never dimmed by shade,
Whose fields are ever vernal;
Where nothing beautiful can fade,
But bloom for age eternal."

Hers was a beautiful Christian character and a kind and cheerful disposition. While she will be missed, we rejoice to know that she is happy in that home prepared for her; and we live in the hope that some time there will be a happy meeting where partings are no more.

To her loved ones who mourn her loss, we extend our most heartfelt sympathy, praying that their mother's God may have them in His keeping and when their earthly pilgrimage is over, that they may join her in that blessed land to which she has gone.

MISS RUTH TAPSCOTT,
MRS. CORA M. HARGIS.

Sharpe

We, the members of Bellemont Sunday school of Mt. Hermon Circuit, wish to pay this tribute of respect to the memory of one of our most faithful members, Mr. James P. Sharpe, who some time ago departed this life, when he heard the Master say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; come home."

To the all-wise Father it has seemed best to remove from among us an esteemed and earnest member who was always interested in the advancement of the Master's Kingdom.

He was always a consecrated Christian worker; faithful to the church, to the prayer meetings, to the Sunday school and to his church.

May we endeavor to follow his footsteps in consecration and service for the Master.

We extend to his dear wife, who is left alone, our heartfelt sympathy in this sad hour of bereavement, and commend her to our Heavenly Father, who alone can give comfort and consolation in all troubles.

MRS. CORA M. HARGIS,
MISS RUTH TAPSCOTT.

McDaniel

Gurney Lester McDaniel was born February 12, 1891. He passed from earth to his spirit's eternal home on December 25, 1926. Although he was not a member of any church he confessed Christ before his death. He leaves a mother, three brothers, Everett McDaniel of Julian, N. C., Wesley, and Walter of Greensboro, N. C., one half-brother, Cleveland Lacky, of the U. S. Army; and four sisters—Mrs. A. R. Harrington of High Point, Mrs. T. V. Kennie and Mrs. E. A. Thomas of Franklinsville, and Mrs. Harris Fields of Red Cross.

The funeral services were held at Grays Chapel on December 27, 1926, where his body was laid in the cemetery. May the God of all Grace comfort all the sorrowing ones.

Rich

Sarah Lee Bessie Buckner Rich was born October 8, 1883. Her early life was spent near Oak Dale. In early life she was converted and joined Mt. Zion Baptist church. On August 23, 1908, she was married to Ernest Rich. This union was blest with five children who survive. Sister Rich joined Belmont M. P. church to belong with her husband, about four years ago and remained a member faithful till the death angel came on December 27, 1926, and called her spirit home. I knew her as a school-girl, faithful, obedient, and earnest. She was a loving mother, a true companion to her husband, a friend to all, and a true and faithful servant of God.

She leaves a mother, two brothers, and two sisters, and a host of friends. On December 29, 1926, her funeral services were conducted in Belmont M. P. church, where her body was laid in the grave. May the God of Heaven bless her companion and her children, and bring them all home to Heaven, at last.

Bryan

Mrs. Margaret Catherine Bryan, the widow of the late Archibald Bryan, and daughter of the late Christian Isley and wife, was born October 11, 1844. In early life she became a follower of Christ, and joined Friendship M. P. church on Mt. Hermon charge, where she remained a member till her death on December 28, 1926. Her passing was at the home of her son William, in Burlington, N. C. Sister Bryan wanted to go home. So God permitted her to gently fall in death, as if going to sleep. Of eleven children, she is the tenth to pass over. Mrs. Barbara Isley, a sister, survives and is in her 91st year. Sister Bryan leaves two sons, William and Dixie, and two daughters, Mrs. J. W. McPherson, and Mrs. Z. M. Noah, and many friends who lament her passing.

Rev. John Permar of the Friends church, assisted the writer in the funeral services held at Friendship on December 30, 1926, where interment was made. May God bless her children.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Hinshaw

Frances Maxine Hinshaw was born April 5, 1920. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Hinshaw who live near Red Cross. After suffering for almost a year, the Death Angel came on January 1, 1927, and called Frances to Heaven. While on earth she was bright and cheerful. On January 2, 1927 the funeral services were held by the writer, at Providence Friends church.

The parents of this child have our deep sympathy, for even on the next morning after laying away the little girl, death claimed their baby of a few months. May these parents have God's sustaining Grace; and rejoice that they have two children safe in Heaven.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Bingham

Joann Almond Bingham, daughter of the late Madison and Laura Almond, was born July 5, 1886, and departed this life January 12, 1927. On February 13, 1920, she was united in marriage to Mr. Benjamin Bingham. She professed faith in Christ and joined with the Friendship church about 20 years ago. She leaves a husband, one son, five brothers, and one sister, to mourn their loss. Their loss is her eternal gain. She suffered lots. She bore her afflictions so patiently. I had not known her but a short while. When I visited and talked to her about the future a bright smile would light up her face, and she told me there was nothing in the way. Just before she passed away, she called her loved ones to her bedside, shook hands with them, and requested they meet her in Heaven. Near the end she was heard to say, Dear Lord take me home to Jesus, then passed away. On the evening of January 13, 1927, the funeral was conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. R. L. West of Albemarle. Her body was laid to rest in Friendship cemetery to await the Resurrection Morning.

C. H. HILL, Pastor.

Gladson

Mrs. Emma Glass Gladson was born August 10, 1867; passed from this life January 14, 1927, aged 59 years. On December 28, 1894, she was married to Thomas Gladson who preceded her to the spirit world by seven years. To this marriage were born two children, one daughter, Fay, and one son, Saxton. Both of whom are living. Besides these two children a boy, George Allred, had made his home with them and was as one of the family. Mrs. Gladson leaves also one sister, Mrs. R. C. Woods, and one half-sister, Mrs. S. R. Matlock.

She confessed faith in Christ and united with Moriah Methodist Protestant Church early in life and continued faithful to her church ntil death called her away. Her children aid she was a dear mother; her neighbors nd friends said she was a good woman. The steem in which she was held was manifested n the large offering of floral designs and he large congregation that gathered at her uneral. The funeral was held at Moriah hurch Sunday afternoon at 2:30, and was onducted by the writer and Rev. Mr. Millard f the Alamance Presbyterian Church.

May the God of all our comforts sustain ose whose hearts are bereaved by the going f the one whom they loved.

L. W. GERRINGER.

Braswell

A precious one from them has gone,
The voice they loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in their home,
Which never can be filled.
God in his wisdom has recalled,
The boon his love had given.
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in Heaven.

Satterwhite

On Thanksgiving last a great tide of grief read over our community when a cable-am was read, stating that Mrs. Pearl avis Satterwhite had passed to her reward. Mrs. Satterwhite was born October 19, 1892. ed November 25, 1926. She was youngest ughter of Mr. John W. and the late Mrs. becca Reavis.

On April 30, 1924, she was married to Mr. mes Fletcher Satterwhite and they left at ce for Shanghi, China, where Mr. Satter-white represented the Imperial Tobacco Co.

Mrs. Satterwhite professed faith in Christ in early girlhood and united with Flat Rock M. P. Church (Vance) of which she remained a faithful member till her death. Before her marriage she was very active in church work, having served at different times as organist, Sunday school secretary and treasurer, also teacher in the Sunday school. After she went to China she showed her interest by regular contributions to the finance of the church and she wrote several very interesting letters to the superintendent of Mission Band that she might use them in instructing the Band members of life and conditions in China.

Surviving are her husband and infant daughter, Doris Rebecca, also father, three brothers, Willie B., L. O., and L. P. Reavis, and three sisters, Mrs. Addie Jones, Mrs. H. L. Powell, and Mrs. J. H. Satterwhite.

Her body arrived December 21 and was taken to the home of her father.

Funeral services were from Flat Rock M. P. church. The pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter of the Henderson church, in charge.

A large congregation attended the funeral, attesting their love and she was laid to rest in Flat Rock cemetery near the new made grave of her mother.

Many expressions of sympathy were heard for the absent husband and the tiny daughter that will never know her mother's love and tender care, as well as for the father and brothers and sisters. Some time we'll understand, God alone can fill the aching void.

The floral tributes were the most beautiful ever seen in Flat Rock church.

Clark

On December 27, 1926, the sad news came to us that Mrs. Bettie had passed from labor to reward. Age 72 years, two months 25 days. She was married to James Clark April 6, 1887, who preceded her to the eternal beyond in 1917. To this union were born three children, two sons and one daughter. She was also mother of several step-children. She leaves eleven grand-children, many relatives and friends to mourn the loss of this good woman.

After the death of her husband she made her home with her son, Walter H. Clark, a near neighbor to pastor and family, at Triplet, Vo.

Mrs. Bettie was a victim of the most severe form of rheumatism for more than six years; lying flat of her back, drawn up, helpless, unable to feed or help herself in anyway for more than three years. Medical aid was sought, for a time in hospital at Richmond, but all to no avail, there was nothing that medical skill could do. Only the kind hands of her son and family waiting on her could add to her comfort.

In this helpless condition she exemplified patience, Christian courage. She fought for her life. She wanted to be well and attend her church. She was the most patient sufferer I ever saw. Her suffering was great, at times almost beyond human endurance. She was loved by everyone who knew her.

She was converted and joined Philadelphia Methodist Protestant church when a girl; and was faithful to her church and God till the Master said, Enough, come up higher.

Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, and her mortal remains laid to rest in the old family cemetery near where she had always lived.

Weep not, dear ones, as those who have no hope, for Mrs. Bettie is not dead but liveth. Her drawn and crooked form will be straightened and given youth and beauty.

May God bless the bereaved family and loved ones and give grace in this their time of need.

The Pastor, H. L. Powell.

AN EFFECTIVE SERMON

The Dog Comfort appointment was another log school house but there was a large and flourishing society there. My second service was at this place in the afternoon. I think I must tell of an amusing experience which I had at the Dog Comfort school house, without asking permission from Brother E. J. Wilson, who was "my superior officer," I being his assistant.

We were having a fine revival meeting at the Dog Comfort school house and on Saturday morning Brother Wilson went to fill the regular Sunday appointments, leaving me to take care of the meeting until Monday evening, when he should return. On Friday evening he had preached a good sermon from the parable of the lost sheep.

When I came to the school house on Monday evening, I noticed his horse hitched in the shed, and knew that he was already in the house. But when I went up to the door, standing on the top step was a large buck sheep, that challenged my entrance. I have always been disposed to see the funny side of things, as well as the serious, and the first thought that came to me was, here is Brother Wilson's lost sheep come back home.

The more I thought of it the funnier it seemed, but I had to wait until some boys came and chased the sheep away before I could get into the house. My first greeting to Brother Wilson was, "Preacher, your lost sheep has come back." I used to tell Brother Wilson that this was one of his sermons that brought quick results. If you can imagine that situation without a smile, then "your funny bone isn't working."—From The M. P. Church in West Virginia, By Rev. I. A. Barnes, D. D., Page 393.

—The ministers of Greensboro were honored guests at a supper (chicken-pie supper) given by the Lions' club on Tuesday evening. Subjects for discussion had been assigned to one minister for each denomination. Dr. S. K. Spahr represented our denomination in the speech-making. He began a very elaborate and learned discourse on "Why one swallow-tailed coat does not make a summen." It was regretted that the time at his disposal was not more than half enough. We wonder whether he would welcome the privilege to give the remainder through the columns of the Herald. If so, we offer him the space with the proviso that nothing of more practical importance claim right of way. We were so interested in the subject by what we heard that it would be personally gratifying to us to hear more.

MARRIED

Davis-Anderson

On Wednesday, January 19th, Mr. Arzie Davis and Miss Lorine Anderson, of the Pleasant Hill community, near Winston-Salem, motored to Henderson, in company with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Anderson, and were united in marriage by the writer at the M. P. parsonage at 2 o'clock p.m. The bridal party returned to Winston-Salem immediately after the ceremony.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Davis, of East Bend, Yadkin county, and the bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Anderson, who for a number of years have been prominent members of the Pleasant Hill M. P. church.

The writer joins the large host of friends in wishing for these splendid young people a happy and useful married life.

Sykes-Jobe

Mr. Carl Sykes and Miss Pattie Jobe were married October 20th at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jobe—a pretty home wedding. The happy couple spent some time in Asheville, now at home at Mrs. T. O. Plender's Mebane. T. M. Johnson officiated at the marriage.

Phelps-Qualls

At a Union Thanksgiving Service in the Methodist Protestant church, in Mebane, on Thanksgiving eve, Mr. Ralph Phelps, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Phelps, and Miss Beatrice Qualls, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Qualls, were happily married November 24th, T. M. Johnson officiating. They left immediately for Durham to spend the night, to proceed by motor the next day for Richmond and Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Phelps will be at home in Durham after December the 1st.

(We regret that an oversight caused delay in publishing the above.—Editor.)

Stewart-King

Mr. Finley Stewart and Miss Elsie King were united in matrimony November 20th by T. M. Johnson at the Mebane parsonage.

This happy young couple visited relatives in Greensboro and other parts in Guilford and are at home at Mrs. Mrs. Emma King's, the mother of the bride, in Mebane.

VOLUME XXXIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., FEBRUARY 3, 1927 NUMBER 13

The Seriousness of the Drink Evil

It has long been felt that the use of alcoholic drinks is a very serious thing for the individual that is so unfortunate as to have contracted the habit. When the ill consequences to himself have been called to his attention, he has replied by saying that these consequences are borne by himself and that nobody else need complain. It has never been true that the ill consequences of drink were confined to the drinker. The injuries to others, sentimental if not physical, always gave to others a right to protest. The drinker's wife and children, his parents, his brothers and sisters, all had the right to complain. The community that must take care of the impoverished family had a right to do more than complain.

But the changed conditions of our time have brought out into clearer view the right of others to be considered when the temptation comes to drink alcoholic liquor. Years ago it was seen that men who drink should not be allowed to stand in the engine and direct the power that drew long trains on the railroads where so much depended on a clear vision and a steady hand. Men were not willing to ride behind a drinking engineer. They were not willing to entrust their merchandise to the care of a man who was not sober. Laws were enacted requiring sobriety in the leadership of trains on the railroads.

Today there is the same need of sobriety at the steering wheels of automobiles on all our highways. The chief dangers on the highways are not from freight trains or passenger trains at the crossings, but from the unsteadiness of the hands and the recklessness of the spirits of those whom alcohol has poisoned in blood and in brain. The right of the road in this day of gas-engine travel demands that alcohol be ruled out.

And the same thing is true in all the avenues of life. No matter what a man's profession, he is under obligation to his clients and patrons to keep sober. A drinking man is an unreliable man. He is sure to err, and may err grievously for those who put their trust in him. A drinking doctor may bring death to his patients.

The right of men to make themselves crazy by drink and then go on acting their parts in life as if they were sober men may well be challenged. While the noisy minority of wets are shouting about the infringement of their rights, let the great sober majority stand firm in their demand that alcohol shall not be poured through human throats to make itself a curse to the whole world. Alcohol has been tried and found not only wanting, but terribly hurtful. After a fair trial, alcohol has been condemned and sentenced. Let the sentence be executed.

—The troubles in China become more serious. Missionaries are leaving their posts for places of safety. We have seen no report regarding our missionaries at Kalgan, and we are hoping that they will not be disturbed, but the opposition to foreigners has become so intense and so widespread that it would not be surprising if our missionaries suffer with the others. The United States Government is represented there by battleships and is preparing to send soldiers, but this may not prevent much mischief by the maddened population of China who do not distinguish between their friends and their foes.

Tests and Temptations

God cannot be tempted with evil, and he tempteth no man, we are told by St. James. He also declares that blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life. Paul teaches that our temptations are graded according to our strength, no temptation being greater than we are able to bear, and that with every temptation there is provided a way of escape.

In the light of these scriptures we must infer that the tree with the forbidden fruit was not placed in the garden to tempt men, but merely to test them. God did not try to induce men to eat of the forbidden fruit; on the contrary, He tried to dissuade them from eating of it. He told them that the consequences of eating would be most serious, even deadly. But Satan came upon the scene with a very different purpose and very different action. He tried to induce men to eat of the deadly fruit and by his misrepresentations succeeded. Satan is a tempter to evil, God is not.

Yet in the constitution and conduct of the world God brought in numerous tests—not to induce men to fall, but to strengthen them against falling. Temptations are pulls toward evil, whereas tests are means of guarding men and fortifying men against evil. God's tests are all the offspring of benevolence and all are meant to be the means of moral good to men. Temptations spring from malevolence and are meant to bring moral evil, when Satan is the tempter. Sometimes men become tempters of their fellowmen, and in such case are always moved by selfishness if not hatred. In temptation deception is employed. Things are misrepresented. God in providing tests does not deceive men. He always represents things as they are. There is a world of difference between God's tests and the devil's temptations. God is aiming at our best. The devil is aiming at our worst.

Paul's Thorn in the Flesh

Nobody knows what it was. There have been many guesses —affection of the eyes, nervous trouble, etc., etc. Everybody knows that Paul prayed three times that it might be removed, and yet it was not removed. That seems strange. Paul surely had troubles enough, it would seem, without this one. It was disagreeable to his feelings. It took part of his attention from his great work. Paul was, like Abraham, a friend of God. Surely Paul would be answered when he asked for a personal favor like this. And his prayer was answered, but not in the way he expected nor in the way you would have expected. The answer was God's assurance—"My grace is sufficient for thee." And that answer has been a comfort to every afflicted child of God from that day to this. Those who have troubles to bear year after year are assured that God is trying to do for them or through them some greater thing than He would do by removing the trouble. God has a gracious design in our afflictions. They are going to work out for us and for others "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." The time will come when we will thank God for what seems so grievous now.

—Every day brings to us some opportunities for service, if we are alert and looking for them.

I HAVE BECOME ORIENTED—THE SUN NOW RISES IN THE EAST

By Rev. Luther K. Long

In my childhood I frequently went with my father into the woods, out onto the wide prairies—into many, to me, strange places. I never knew my father to be "lost" or "turned around"—he always seemed to know where he was, and he could at any time take the proper course for home. As for myself, I have often been "turned around," "lost," so far as direction was concerned.

It was of much advantage to me that our house was set square with the world. I have always been glad that my father saw to it that the fences enclosing the fields on our Illinois farm, were built to the cardinal points of the compass.

Many a time have I drilled myself in the matter of direction by turning to the east and facing the Webster home where lived a little girl two years younger than I was. At my left would be the Stewart farm toward the north; at my right the Deming home could be seen toward the south; while back of me was our west pasture in which grew three fruitful persimmon trees and a favorite shell-bark hickory.

When, at the age of nineteen, I went to Michigan to school I found that the roads and the streets there were not so universally laid out on the checker-board system as they had been in Illinois. Often I was "turned around." Somehow I would find out where the east was, then, facing it, I would work out the other directions as I had done in former days.

With much travel and shifting of residence from state to state I almost lost the "feeling of direction" and have become more than ever dependent on the sun, on maps, and even on hear-say. Occasionally the points of the compass have seemed all right, and in such a place I enjoy an especially delightful feeling of comfort.

Last May I drove from south-western Michigan to southern Maryland, where I am now making my home. Because of all the twists and turnings of of the road encountered in that long journey I was not surprised that directions were all mixed up when I reached my destination. And when I observed that almost all the fences and roads in this country, and very many of the houses and barns, utterly disregard the points of the compass I despaired of ever having a comfortable feeling of direction.

East is East, and West is West

One afternoon I was driving home as the sun was about setting. Looking at the gorgeous coloring, all at once it came over me that the sun was really setting in his proper place—and I was thoroughly delighted. Turning to the opposite direction—the direction from my boyhood home to the one in which Phoebe used to live—I knew I was facing toward the east. Looking at the home in which I now live, I saw that the plum trees, the laden branches of which had furnished such a delicious fruit in the summer, must be on the north side of the house. The big oak in front of the house was toward the south; while the large holly tree, whose shiny green leaves and bright red berries gave it a Christmasy appearance that I had greatly admired from the dining-room window, must be on the west side of the house. On the spot where I live I am now oriented, and I am gradually bringing other places in this region into harmony with the cardinal points of the compass.

Orientation Includes Much

I suppose that orientation may be defined, in a larger sense, as such an adjustment of one's mind and feelings to a new situation and condition in life as to produce in one a sense of being at home. There are many other things that contribute to this sensation of being at home besides the right feeling of direction.

I have already referred to the persimmon trees in the west pasture of my father's farm in Illinois. Yesterday I picked and ate a lot of fine persimmons from trees on two adjoining farms near here, and there is a dish of the fruit beside me now as I write. They taste the same as did those I liked so well in boyhood days; and I am hoping for a repetition of the youthful pleasure of picking some more of the fruit from the holes they make in the snow as they fall from the trees.

I shipped many gladiolus bulbs here from Michigan. Some of them are from seed I produced by hand-polinating. They gave me a wonderful crop of flowers the past summer. They are mine in a special sense, and I am at home wherever they are. I was very fond of the mountain laurel when I lived in Connecticut. It grows abundantly here in the woods along the roadsides, and I have transplanted some of it to one side of our front yard.

The many water-fronts and the great quantities of fish in this region make it seem much like some parts of Michigan, while the salt-water and many sorts of sea-food make me think I am in Connecticut where I spent five happy years. Fried chicken—so constantly on tables here—was familiar in Illinois during my boyhood years and, later, during several years spent in southern Georgia.

People

People, however, concern me most of all. While they differ in customs and ideas at various times and in various places, they are yet very much the same always and everywhere. Their lives and problems, their likes and dislikes, their friendliness and desire for good, are quite similar in far-separated parts of our common country.

Here is a widow living happily with her youngest son, while the other children are away in homes and business of their own. Here is a daughter living in fine fellowship with her aging father and mother—her devotion to them equalled only by their love for and enjoyment in herself. Here are men and women doing their work steadily that they may provide for themselves and those dependent upon them, and that they may have whereof to give for the support of the church and its great missionary and educational enterprises.

Especially are children to be relied upon for friendship. "Children readily recognize their friends," said a lady on a train when a strange little child came to my arms and soon contentedly rested its cheek against mine. I have already made a good start in friendly relations with children here. With plenty of birds, flowers, grown people, and little children, a person cannot well be discontented—they orient him, making him feel at home.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 13

Expressing the Missionary Spirit—Matt. 9:35-38

A few years ago a man of large wealth, becoming impressed with the Scout ideal of "doing one good turn a day," adopted that as his own motto. He received a good deal of publicity in the newspapers for the rather dramatic way in which he used to arise from the table at an expensive hotel where, with a group of congenial friends, he "fared sumptuously," announce the fact that he had heard of someone in distress, and then drive out (in his comfortable limousine) to do his "good turn" for that day.

Of course this man might have spent his time in a less commendable way. The help he gave from day to do was a real blessing to some needy family. But back of the need in those few families whom he reached were general conditions affecting hundreds of families that, with the time and wealth this man had at his disposal, might have been changed. He never made a study of the underlying causes of poverty which made necessary the special appeal to which he responded. In this respect he was not a follower of the Master who was moved with compassion for the multitude.

Today in many parts of our own land and in lands where there are missionary enterprises, efforts are being made to follow Jesus in his desire to help the multitude. Important as it is to touch individual lives and give temporary relief, we are endeavoring to do more than this. We want to remove causes of distress and build larger and better life. An outstanding example of an effort to deal with a missionary problem in a really large way, so that a distressed multitude might receive, not only immediate, but permanent, constructive aid, is found in the work of Near East Relief.

How the Work Was Begun

Let us remind ourselves of the dark days of the war when a group of Turkish officials took it upon themselves to drive out or exterminate the Christian people, who had inhabited the country we now call Turkey for a thousand years before the Turkish tribes came down from the mountains and conquered them. A million people lost their lives by the sword, by starvation, or from the hardships of the long journeys when they were being driven out of the country. Another million were in dire distress when the American Ambassador to Turkey, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, cabled to the President of the United States, to Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge, Dr. James L. Barton, and Rabbi Wise asking that an American Committee be formed to send relief to those homeless Christian people.

The committee was formed. Money was cabled to Mr. Morgenthau, and with the help of missionaries, soup kitchens were opened and food was given to the starving. Then came the Armistice, and in February, 1919, the good ship Leviathan sailed for Constantinople carrying 245 doctors, nurses and general relief workers. These Americans were sent throughout the regions of Turkey, Transcaucasia, and Syria to heal the wounded and diseased, and to gather up the children who had been left behind in the ruined villages, or who had dropped out by the wayside when their mothers were driven on over the long, long roads to the Syrian desert.

Giving Health and Hope

Imagine the problems presented by a vast company of orphans gathered in after months of fending for themselves, having had no care, no change of garments, no food except such as they could find for themselves. Seldom in the world's history has such a task been confronted. But clean water, soap, regular meals, even though frugal, clean clothes and clean beds can do the work of magic. And the old fear which had taken possession of these helpless children was removed because they were under the care of the Americans, and under the protection of the Stars and Stripes which floated over their orphanage home.

Beginning Again in New Lands

Once more war broke out in the Near East. There was no future for Christian children in that troubled land, and their American guardians arranged to remove them from Turkey—thousands of orphans being taken westward into Greece, other thousands southward into Syria and Palestine, and still other thousands into Russian Armenia. New orphanage centers were established. In Greece the children were taken to Athens, Corinth and to the Island of Syra in the Aegean Sea; in Palestine to Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth; in Syria to ancient Sidon, and to various towns clustering around Beirut, while in Armenia one great center was formed at Alexandropol, now called Leninakan, the place which recently suffered so much because of the severe earthquake, but from which all the 10,000 children now in the orphanage escaped unhurt.

Working Together

When a company of many thousands of children are restored to health and happiness, however, the problem of their future is only partly solved. What will they do when they are old enough to leave their orphanage homes? What can they do to earn their living? We who have saved their lives can not now abandon them. They still need our help and our encouragement in order to become an asset—not a liability—to the lands that have given them shelter. So they have been sent to school. We Americans would not wish to have children under our care remain illiterate. So we may picture to ourselves the great company at the orphanage divided into two groups and one group seated on the floor, schoolbooks in hand, while the other group is further separated into many groups who go to the shops or the farm or the gardens. Good tradesmen of the neighborhood who can take in apprentices are finding our boys capable and trustworthy. The girls are learning the arts of home-making, and, like their mothers and grandmothers, they are also learning to make beautiful lace and embroidery and oriental rugs which gratify the oriental woman's love of beauty and also add to the family income.

Becoming Economically Independent

In Russian Armenia teaching is a highly respected calling and has attracted many brilliant young men. But with the terrible loss of life in war teachers could not be found for all its village schools.

Near East Relief workers saw in this field opportunities for girls and they were given the training. Now for the first time in that ancient eastern land, young women are serving as teachers in country schools and are not only doing their work well, but have opened for women another occupation by which they may become economically independent.

The Nurses' Training School has also attracted many of the older orphan girls. Its graduates have found positions not only in the hospitals, but they have gone out into the country districts to care for patients in homes, to give health talks in schools, and before neighborhood groups. Schools have been established for the blind and the deaf that they also may achieve at least a measure of independence. These are some of the results that have come from the work of a group of Americans, with western initiative, whose accomplishments have been made possible by those of us at home who have supported them by our interest and our gifts. Surely our country is able to send these messengers of good will and helpfulness to the peoples who have suffered so greatly through no fault of their own.

Learning to Be Good Christians

In the orphanages no effort has been spared to give the boys and girls who are the children of martyrs a high ideal of Christian living.

The orphanage at Antilyas, near Beirut, houses approximately 1,000 boys. They have the plainest of meals, with very little variety. A wonderful orange orchard adjoins the orphanage grounds, yet never once has there been complaint about loss of fruit.

In Greece some of the children from the Near East Relief orphanage saw an automobile accident and were asked to testify in court. A lawyer spoke sneeringly of the statement of the children, which caused the color to mount to the cheeks of a little girl, but she replied, "Sir, we are from the American orphanage and there we are taught to tell the truth!"

But the Americans who deem it their responsibility to give the children the best possible preparation for lives of Christian usefulness and for participation in the churches of the communities in which they live are making plans for a definite course of religious instruction. A short time ago Rev. John R. Voris paid a visit to all the orphanages and to the prelates of the Eastern Churches, and secured the co-operation of the Eastern Church leaders and orphanage directors in planning a course of lessons to be used in the orphanages and in the churches. This is a new venture for the ancient Churches of the Near East, and it is confidently hoped that the boys and girls who are among the first to receive a religious education combining the best features of Eastern and Western Christianity will have a large and distinctive contribution to make to that land which gave Christianity to the world, and to the work of the Master who taught us to have compassion on the multitude.

Are we doing our part in this very important work?

Prepared by Minna McE. Meyer.

TEACHING GOOD HEALTH TO 10,000 ORPHANS

By Pauline Jordan

In Alexandropol, Armenia, that "City of Children" where the Near East Relief orphans are housed in former Russian army barracks, I used to stand before a group of a thousand children and give health talks. Of course, many things I had learned in my nursing course as important to good health had to be omitted from these talks. For instance, one could encourage an American child to take a daily shower or tub, but when there is a shortage of water in the Orphanages, so that at times the children cannot even get the usual weekly bath, and in a city that has only two or three bathtubs, with none at all in the country districts, one must talk about sponge baths. Then in teaching how to balance foods in the daily diet, one must be careful not to criticise the orphanage menu. It is impossible to insist on tooth brushes, as the orphanage does not furnish them. In a country where the thermometer goes down to twenty below zero, where the children sleep in dormitories that are never heated, and where some children sleep with only two thin cotton blankets on their beds, it would the difficult to insist on having all the windows open at night, American style. Such vigorous ventilation is for people who can afford to have enough blankets to keep them warm. It is hard to insist on all the necessary rules of hygiene, not criticize our own orphanage department, and still be thoroughly practical. We must not try to insist on the children doing things which are physically impossible in the surroundings in which they live.

Hygiene was taught, of course, for the purpose of changing the habits the children had formed when they were homeless and without care or training. I soon realized that with so large a group it was almost impossible to check up on the children and discover whether the knowledge being imparted to them was really functioning. Then a new idea came to me. Out on the land which has been assigned to Near East Relief for its agricultural work we had built a very small "model village" of houses similar to those of the people of that country, in which one roof covers both the home for the family and the stable for the cattle, sheep and chickens. We had separate doors, and a wall between the home and the stable. To this village, children from the great orphanage were sent in groups and were given actual experience in taking care of the cows and the chickens, in making butter and cheese, in cookings meals for a small family, and in keeping the home and habitation of the animals clean. Why not give our hygiene lessons to the children as they went out in these smaller groups? It was done, and this village was the place where we actually got results from our teaching of hygiene. We found it possible to really arouse the interest of the children, not merely give them something to memorize. We scored personal tidiness. We gave little demonstrations to emphasize the results of observing the laws of health, having a special costume for the child who took the part of the old witch Ignorance, who was the greatest trouble maker.

When winter came and the weather became so cold that the water mains froze and we had to send the ox-cart to the river and break the ice to get water to fill the barrels, it became very difficult to keep the work up to the required standard of cleanliness—especially as the children did not have clothing warm enough for such weather. But we thought it would not be wise to lower the standards if we could encourage the children to work rapidly, and through exercise keep themselves warm. So a Saturday evening party was arranged, at which the orchestra of blind boys played, and simple refreshments were served. All the children who had worked satisfactorily during the week received invitations, while those who were slack in their work or had run away were not invited. After the first party the number of slackers went down almost to zero, and those weeks in the model village made a decided change in the habits of children.

THE CONVERTING POWER OF THE TRUE GOSPEL

John Wesley's Journal tells many a wondrous story of the redeeming and converting power of the Gospel. Men who went to Wesley's congregations to curse and blaspheme stayed to pray; men with stones in their hands to fling at the preacher were seized with sudden fear, and cried, "What must we do to be saved?" Men who had been the pests and plagues of their towns became very saints. "What have they done?" asked one magistrate near Epworth, when John Wesley and his friends were brought before him. "They prayed from morning till night," was the reply. "But have they done nothing besides?" "Yes, sir," said an old man, "an't please your worship, they have convarted my wife. Till she went among them she had such a temper and a tongue, but now, she is as quiet as a lamb." "Take them back," said the magistrate, "that they convert some more."—Rev. J. D. Jones.

WHAT IS YOUR LIFE?

Is the "outer man" practically in charge? Are you spending your strength "getting things?" For that is all the outer man can do. Yet the day is fast rushing upon us when the value of "getting things" will have passed. There comes the fatal day, soon, too soon, when the verb "to have" will have lost all its meaning and value. And each will stand stripped and naked before God. Then it is, that only the verb "to be" will have any value and meaning. What we are, and have become through grace, and how we have ripened into the image of God, will be all that matters, that retains any value. Then the short-lived "pride of life" and the puny pomp of man, that so fills the stage of life today, will have become the tragic memory of a pathetic blindness.—Northcote Deck.

NOT AFRAID OF THE TRUTH

We see it stated in the daily press that a professor in one of our colleges said that he was opposed to the passage of an anti-evolution bill by the legislature, as it "would hinder religion by representing it as afraid to face the truth, and unable to stand in the presence of truth unless backed by the authority of the state."

This professor assumes that evolution is truth, and that the church is "afraid" of it. It's not "truth" that the church is "afraid" of, but error. This professor must know that evolution, at best, is an "unproved hypothesis, existing entirely in the realm of speculative philosophy, and that he nor anyone else has any right to call it truth." That is what stirs the righteous protest of some of us who have children to educate. If these professors would teach this as a new hypothesis, which it is, it would not be so serious. But this they do not do. And if they knew the Bible as well as they knew some things that are not true, they would be forced to see that evolution and the Bible are as contradictory as cold and heat, light and darkness, truth and falsehood. And to attempt to harmonize the Bible and evolution is as impossible as to harmonize God and the devil. When evolution comes in, miracle goes out. The fall of man becomes a myth. Sin no longer exists—just a lack of development. No fall, and, of course, no atonement is needed, and of course we have none, Jesus being a mere man.

To teach the plausibilities of evolution to immature minds, until these fallacies and sophistries become convincing—only one side being presented—and for these youthful minds to awaken to a realization of the fact that the whole theory flatly contradicts the Bible, must seriously shake, or overthrow their faith. It's as inevitable as the law of cause and effect. This is why intelligent, well-informed persons all over the country are protesting against this teaching. And they have an inalienable right to protest. And these persons are not fools, idiots, nor ignoramuses. Some of them have more natural ability, of wider reading, deeper thinking than many of these professosr. Who gave those evolution professors their "seat and great authority"? Who made them the Alpha and Omega of all wisdom and knowledge? Can not other persons who do not have professor before their names, or A. M. or Ph.D. after them, buy books and read, think, and inform themselves? Of course they can and some do, and know whereof they speak.

"Hambone's Meditations" in today's paper is so pertinent and true, we give them at this point: "Jes' quick ez some folks gits to runnin' wid de debil, day stahts talkin' 'bout day's 'broad-minded.' "

There is more true philosophy and common sense in this statement of Hambone's than in all the evolution fallacies and sophistries in the world.

No, the church is not "afraid to face the truth." And to say that it is "afraid" is a misrepresentation of the church, and is only playing into the hands of her enemies. She's afraid of falsehood. She's afraid of error. She does not want her boys and girls in the plastic, immature state, taught these unbiblical, anti-Christian hypotheses before they are able to wrestle with them. "There is a time to all things," said the wise man, and Jesus said, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now."

Even if evolution were true, nobody loses anything by not knowing about it. The world has survived ever since its beginning without it, until the last few years, and can continue on indefinitely without it. It's never been of any practical use to the world—never produced anything—but confusion and doubts about the Bible and religion; never made a yard of cloth, a foot of lumber, a pound of steel, a bushel of corn, nor a pound of cotton—nor anything else—but, confusion and doubts about the Bible and religion. Then why be so rantankerous to display the questionable thing, to put it mildly, before the unprepared, unsophisticated youth? If it is true (and I'd sooner think the moon made of green cheese) they will learn of it later in life, after they are "able to bear it." And if they never learn of it they will be none the worse. Where "ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise," in this case.

Why do we quarantine against contagious and epidemic diseases, even to closing houses of worship—diseases that affect the body only, but permit, encourage, and insist on scattering the seeds of error, doubt, and question of the Bible broadcast over the land? Why is this permitted and insisted on? Something that cannot be conducive to anyone's salvation—nothing in any wise essential—but may be conducive to the damnation of thousands?

Is not this giving the devil the "benefit of the doubt?" Why not take the safe side? Why not make haste slowly on questionable ground, to say the least? To us there is no question, but granting that there is a question, it's safe to go slow and wait, as there is nothing vital at stake in not knowing this hypothesis, but souls may be set adrift on the sea of doubt by coming in touch with this theory prematurely, never to find their bearings again.

No, the true church is not "afraid to face truth," but does not want to be a party to the dissemination of error. To say, intimate, or insinuate, that the church is "afraid to face truth" because it opposes error, is false to the core. It is a slander on some of the best and bravest persons we have. Why not insist on teaching Russelism, Universalism, Bolshevism, Free-loveism, Communism, or any other ism of error? But some of these superficial professors may say, as some have said, "O, the young will learn about it anyway." But hearing about a thing is quite different from having a professor to teach a thing and insist on its being true. Using all his ability to make an impression on the student favorable to this theory by fallacy, sophistry, derision, and sneers, etc., ad infinitum.

Should a professor attempt to make an impression upon his pupils favorable to Communism, Free-loveism, or any of the above-named isms he would subject himself to reprimand or dismissal. We all hear about "bootlegging," but that is quite different from being taught that "bootlegging" is right. If these professors will stand before their classes and teach the falsity of evolution—giving the overwhelming proofs against it, which can be done, then no one would object to this false, baseless hypothesis being brought to their attention. Falsehood, evils, untruth, criminality of all kinds and degrees, are being brought before the young continually, but not commended to them for their acceptance and practice, but to be avoided. But this evolution falsity is commended and insisted upon with all the subtleties of false logic, and the personal magnetism of the teacher. Teaching falsehood instead of warning and admonishing to avoid it.

Have not parents and tax-payers a right to protest? Those why pay the bills and furnish the students? This is the very quintessence of autocracy and tyranny. A death-stab at the very heart of democracy and individual rights and personal liberty. To forbid this teaching in the schools does not infringe on the right of the professor to believe as he pleases, and to teach his own children this theory, and the children of anyone else who wishes it done, but to teach mine over my protest is a flagrant violation of my God-given rights, and he ought to be subject to punishment for such violation. If he had the spirit of the Master he would not ruthlessly violate my rights.

—February is here, and we are beginning to think of spring again. What a great variety God has set before us in the change of the seasons. When we begin to grow tired of one scene, God changes it and gives us another. God is the great Entertainer and the great Educator. Our petty shows seem like child's play in comparison with God's great show of "The Seasons." Our greatest colleges and universities are but kindergarten schools in comparison with God's great school of Nature. What a great and good God our God is!

The WORK and the WORKERS

Because of unexpected and unusual duties calling for immediate attention we are a bit behind with these notes.

Sunday, January 22nd, was spent in High Point at the First Church and at Welch Memorial, and in spite of the rain and heavy fog good congregations greeted us at both places.

At the First Church in the morning there was a splendid congregation of earnest listeners, and at the same time, Rev. E. L. Ballard, the associate pastor, was speaking to the junior congregation of one hundred or more. The work at this splendid church is moving along in fine shape. The people are pleased with both pastor and associate. It is always a joy to visit these people.

At the evening hour we were at Welch. This church is steadily growing in numbers and in usefulness in this section of the city. Brother Pierce, the pastor, extends and increases the usefulness of his church by holding frequent noon-day meetings at the factories in his immediate neighborhood. The people here have recently made extended improvements on the parsonage, which adds much to its comfort and attractiveness. They spent about $800 on the parsonage.

Sunday, January 30th, at 11 a. m., we were with Rev. L. W. Gerringer and his people at Calvary Church. We found 183 in Sunday school, and there were nearly that many for preaching. It is delightful to watch the steady growth and development of this, one of our youngest churches in the Conference. They have one of the most beautiful church sites in the city, and it is being kept in a most attractive appearance. Brother Gerringer is a faithful worker and he is surrounded by a group of splendid workers.

Sunday evening we had promised to be at St. Paul, and regretted to miss the appointment; but word came that my brother's wife, Mrs. J. W. Dixon, near Summerfield, was critically ill and would likely not live through the day. So Rev. W. F. Ashburn was secured to go to St. Pauls and we went to brother's home. His wife rallied, and is living at this writing, but cannot possibly live long. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Carroll, long time members of Midway Church, Haw River Circuit.

Funeral of Mrs. D. A. Braswell

On Monday afternoon, January 24th, we stopped in Concord for the funeral of Mrs. D. A. Braswell. A large crowd gathered for the funeral, and the floral offerings were beautiful. Mrs. Braswell passed through a long, lingering illness and suffered much. She could never have been well again in this life, so her call home came as a release from the infirmities of a frail body. We feel to congratulate her. Brother Braswell and his loved ones were broken up, because death always brings sorrow; but after the clouds have cleared a bit they will realize how much better it is for wife and mother and grandmother.

Brother Braswell, of course, will have the prayerful sympathy of his brethren in the ministry, and of his many friends throughout the Conference. May God bless and keep him and his.

Quarterly Report Blanks

Pastors will perhaps receive quarterly report blanks this week, if not then, certainly at the first of next week. Please be prompt in returning them as three months of the Conference year have already passed.

February

February is the month set apart by most Protestant churches as a time to stress Stewardship, and to teach the Bible principles of handling our possessions. Please present this important theme to your people. Kingdom progress awaits the consecration of our dollars to Kingdom service.

February is also set apart by our Annual Conference as "Church Extension Month." During the last 25 years the money we have expended through Church Extension channels has worked wonders in the development of our church life in North Carolina.

By reference to page 76 of the Jonrnal you will find that a little more than one-third of our Annual Conference Budget is allotted to Church Extension. And then by calculating a bit you will understand that when the last of February comes one-third of the Conference year will be gone.

So, at the end of February all the churches on all the charges should have in the hands of our Conference Treasurer, Mr. V. W. Idol, at least one-third of the A. C. B.

Several pastors are planning to try to raise the A. C. B. in full during February. Also, please remember the College Assessment. That is needed now.

Get these two off early in the year so as to give plenty of time for raising the G. C. B.

Easter

We are rapidly approaching the Easter season. Every pastor and every Sunday school superintendent should begin planning early for Easter. Two things should be accomplished:

1. Every church should wisely plan a campaign for a splendid ingathering of members at Easter.

2. Every church should plan early for the Easter-day services with a good offering for Home Missions. Order supplies from Rev. J. M. Sheridan, D. D., 616 North Charles street, Baltimore, Maryland.

Sparkles From the Field

Weaverville: "New piano in Clarks Chapel, and a new garage on parsonage lot."

Bellmont, on Mt. Hermon: "We are having electric lights installed in our church, and hope to have them ready for use within a week."

West End: "In the near future we expect to see an adequate Sunday school building erected on our church lot."

Dulins, Mocksville: "We have one church newly covered, planning to build cement steps, and paint the church inside."

Albemarle: "We had 137 in Sunday school last Sunday. Our church services are being largely attended by visiting friends. We have received 13 new members this year, and are going to make it the banner year for Albemarle."

Mt. Hermon: "Bellmont, Friendship and Cedar Cliff have paid College Assessment in full."

Haw River: "The old church at Midway has been vacated, and services are being held in the school building preparatory to building a new church."

Denton: "We are glad to say that Canaan Church raised the A. C. B. yesterday."

A Wedding of Interest

On Wednesday morning, January 26th, Mrs. Dixon and I started for the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Ferguson to perform the marriage ceremony for Rev. H. L. Isley and Miss Oda Lillian Ferguson. We had a most delightful experience on this trip. It was raining and the dirt roads were muddy, so when we reached the home of Brother Curl near Concord Church he very kindly loaned us a horse and his neighbor loaned us a buggy. So, leaving our car, we drove for about four miles through deep mud with "Old Charlie" pulling the buggy. It was truly a "joy ride," and we reached the appointed place only a few moments late, performed the ceremony with the assistance of Rev. Elwood Carroll, partook of a very fine dinner, and started on our return trip. See in another column a more extended notice of the wedding.

Appointments

February 5th, 11 a. m., West Forsythe quarterly conference.

February 6th, 11 a. m., First Church, Winston.
February 6th, 7 p. m., Lebanon.
February 13th, Burlington, 11 a. m., First Church, and 7 p. m., Fountain Place.
February 20th, Siler City.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. Dixon.

FOUND IN REV. FRED C. KLEIN'S DESK

Rev. Fred C. Klein, D. D., secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, and of the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration, of the Methodist Protestant Church, worked at his desk until a few hours before his unexpected death on December 27, 1926.

For many months he knew that his affliction would prove fatal, but I advised him to hold on, and keep the nature of his illness within his family, and this he bravely did.

After his burial, while cleaning up the desk, Mrs. Klein found the following unfinished soliloquy written in pencil—apparently just before leaving his desk for the last time.

As I write this I have the original before me, and the "traveler" is my friend, Fred.

"The road still runs on through valleys and over hills, but the traveler has suddenly stopped.

"It was not his will to do so, for he had come a long way, and hoped to reach a famous peak just beyond (the Centennial General Conference of his church), and afterwards he could rest in the shade.

"His mind and heart yearned to go on, but a relentless, incurable disease seized him, took away his voice, but did not dim his mental power nor his faith, and incited him to act the man in all that is to come.

"Thus alone, as he sits in silence, with things swirling through his mind, seeking vocal utterance, forced to realize that life's work was done, when mental and physical vigor remain, is beyond his power of description.

"Yet the traveler utters no word of complaint, for far too many rich blessings he has had, far too honored and privileged his position.

"Far too many things has he been privilege to achieve for God and his church and too much happiness has he had in the years of his long journey. Then he faces what is better, and could not reach or attain unless he stopped on the road. He knows so many who have gone, and prays for equal faith and devotion and submission to all in store for him of pain, or . . . "

This sentence will forever remain unfinished. Dr. Klein slipped away so silently in the night, that his devoted wife does not know exactly when he left.

In the private drawer of his desk she found the following prayer, written by Miss Fannie E. S. Heck:

"Lord, grant me if thou wilt
To slip away
As slips the night
Into the dawning day
So soft,
That e'en the watchers, watching,
Can not say,
Here ends the night
And here begins the day,
But only know
The night's thy night,
The day, thy day."

Speaking for her departed husband, Mrs. Klein has written over the above prayer, "My Prayer Answered."

A YOUNG MAN'S ATTITUDE TOWARD GOD

(Written by Dr. F. A. Shepard while in college at Nashville, Tenn.)

There is but one God. Those who worship him must believe that he is God and that he is the rewarder of those who diligently seek him. Man's longings for God are presumptive proof that he is God. The presumption is that from God man came, needs him now, and must come to him at last for judgment. Among all the debris of science, infidelity and atheism, do not stop but pass right on at once until you rest your mind and heart on God. This will save you time, trouble, sorrow and maybe character. Have absolute faith in God as your creator and trust him as your guide through the affairs of life. One whom you need more than parental love, or wealth, or fame. With Him to guide you, you will have all your real needs supplied, without Him all else is unsatisfactory to the soul. If you undertake the journey of life without this, it will be as though you were going through a jungle of wild animals without a light or any protection. God has not left your soul simply to its longings. He has given us the Bible. The Bible is a revelation of God, not of all of God, for our limited capacities cannot grasp all of Him. But He has revealed enough of Himself that we can grasp to assure us that in Him there is all we need. The Bible is very different from other so-called sacred books. The sacred books of India, the koran of the Mohammedans, the book of the Mormons, are unlike the Bible of God. Furthermore, the God of the Bible is unlike the gods of other so-called books. The best scholars of the world believe that the Bible is the revelation of God and have practiced its precepts. Most of its opponents have exerted evil influences on the world. Socrates and Plato were the best results of the Grecian idea of God. Seneca and Caesar were the best results of the Roman idea of God. Compare these with Abraham, Isaiah, John the Baptist, Luther. Wycliff, Wesley, Spurgeon and a host of those who worship the living God. Defamers of the Bible of God and of his worship have hardened human hearts, blunted human sensibilities, blighted human hopes; frosted the flowers of human beauty; and sent human souls out in the dark to perish. While on the other hand believers of the Bible have sent forth influences that have sweetened human hearts; quickened human sensibilities into nobler aspirations; inspired human hopes; enriched the flowers of human beauty, and sent forth human souls through the world as shining lights for good. Belief made Gladstone, "Stonewall" Jackson, Robert E. Lee and Henry W Grady and their immortal comrades in the galaxy that uplifts the world and kisses its flowers with the fragrance of divine love through the human heart. In Hampton Court there is a labyrinth of flowers. It is so intricate that few who enter it can come out of it without a professional guide. This world has a labyrinth. It may seem to you a maze of flowers whence come fragrance and music to charm you. But Satan is the author of this labyrinth, but be not deceived; compare the best of each system with the best of the other, and strike the average. Then put yourself with the best and greatest. To do this is common sense.

GOD'S WAY

God doesn't choose scholars to meet scholars when He is in a fight. He didn't choose a giant to meet Goliath; He chose a boy. He didn't choose scholars to meet the Jewish ecclesiastical machine; He chose ignorant fishermen. The Son of God said that His Father hides things from the wise and prudent and reveals them unto babes. Paul said that God chooses foolish things to confound the wise and mighty. God does not rely upon scholars. He would never hear the last of it, if He did. They would brag forever about their victory. Unbelief chooses scholars; God chooses humble men of faith. God doesn't use argument. God uses testimony. Scholars use arguments; God's men use prayer, the Bible and testimony.—Selected.

OUR THREE MISSION FIELDS

During the World War we talked much of the extent of our eastern and western battlefronts. In spits of the fact that they stretched from the Baltic to the Caspian seas, and from the Swiss Alps to the North Sea, they can not be compared in extent with the battlelines of the Kingdom of God which encircle the globe. With tremendous interest we followed the flights of our airmen around the world, but with even greater interest we ought to follow the movements of our sky-pilots who are pushing the skirmish lines of the Kingdom into new territory. Approximately 29,000 of these sky-pilots are in the front line of battle, and $55,000,000 are being expended annually on their support. It is fascinating to follow this line of battle as it reaches into all lands, but the limits of this article compel me to confine my observations to the sections of the line where we are engaged.

Japan

Of all the fields in the missionary world Japan is possibly the least heroic, hence the most difficult, and yet the most strategic. The difficulties in this field have been greatly increased by our recent impolitic immigration legislation relating to the admission of Japanese citizens into this country. Dr. K. Ibuka, dean of one of the oldest Christian colleges in Japan, said recently, "American missionaries in the Far East, not only in Japan, but in China and India as well, will experience a serious handicap in their work, especially when they attempt to present such great truths as the brotherhood of man, principles of humanity, international justice and world friendship." Baron Sakatani said, "Personally, I still have faith in America. All the Americans I know are true to the nation's past ideals. Eventually America will do the right thing."

In spite of the fact that Japan at present is obsessed with modern science and gross materialism, she can be regarded as a nation seeking a religion. Yes, she is manifesting a spirit of abandon, and is breaking away from her old social conventions, and former moral standards, nevertheless, there are many hopeful signs appearing on the horizon. President Ebina has said, "Japan is like a chick breaking through its incrusted shell of feudal militarism; but in Japan there is a growing consciousness of the value of the individual, and that is a Jesus principle."

China

There is no more interesting and promising missionary field in all the world than China. Big—yes, every fourth person in the world is from China; persistent—yes, no other people in all the world can present a history in point of years comparable with theirs; disturbed—yes, all republics in their establishment have been; awaking—yes, a renassance movement is recognized throughout China today. They want to know God in terms of their own experience. There are signs of revival in the old religions of China, and Christianity is becoming more and more indigenous, fitting into the environment and atmosphere of the Chinese people.

The new spirit of nationalism that is sweeping over China at present and manifesting itself in an abnormal way, will soon rid itself of many of the extravagances that are appearing, and will come to recognize missionaries as their real friends, and Christ as the Saviour they need.

India

When we think of India we must think of a number of Indias. There is the Hindu India, the Mohammedan India, the Christian India. There is an India of highly educated people, and an India of the most illiterate; there is an India of the priests, and an India of the untouchables. There is an India of the caste-system, and an India of the mass-movements. India, with her 319,000,000 people, and her 147 languages and dialects, is more like a continent than a country. Today this great mass is seething with unrest. Yes, it is political, it is economic, and it is social, but above all else it is religious. India is seeking the "Christ of the Indian Road." In India we have one missionary to every 55,000 of the population. "What are these among so many?"

In these three lands, as in all missionary lands, a new individualism and a new nationalism are everywhere in evidence. In them we see the beginnings of a new and all-embracing humanity; and on all sides we find an increasing appreciation of Christ and His program for the world. For these things we ought to thank God, and express our thanks in a larger support of our work and workers in these fields that are ripe unto the harvest.

J. C. Broomfield.

A GOOD CONSCIENCE

I have to live with myself, and so
I want to be fit for myself to know.
I want to be able, as the days go by,
Always to look myself straight in the eye;
I don't want to stand with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things that I've done.

I don't want to keep on a closet shelf
A lot of secrets about myself,
And fool myself as I come and go,
Into thinking nobody else will know
The kind of man I really am;
I don't want to dress myself up in a sham.

I want to go out with my head erect,
I want to deserve all men's respect;
But here in the struggle for fame and pelf
I want to be able to like myself.
I don't want to look at myself and know
That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show.

I never can hide myself from me;
I see what other folks never can see;
I know what other folks may never know;
I never can fool myself, and so,
Whatever happens, I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free.

JOEY LED THE WAY

Mr. Rhodeheaver, evangelistic singer, says:

"At one place where we held meetings, a boy sang in my choir who was not quite bright. He would never leave the tabernacle at night until he could shake my hand. It did not matter how many people were waiting to see me, nor how important the conference might be, he would come and stick around until the last man in the tabernacle had gone, in order to have the last chance to say good-bye. It was embarrassing at times, and it wasn't always easy to be patient with him.

"About the next to the last night of the meetings a man came forward to speak to me at the close. I had seen him come down the night before with his wife and five children.

"After the service he came to me and said, 'I just want to thank you for being so kind to Joey. He isn't quite bright, and has never had anything he has enjoyed so much as coming here and singing in the choir. You have been so kind to him, and he has worked so hard during the day in order to be ready in time to come here at night. He has urged and coaxed us to come, too, and it is through him that my wife and I and our five children have been led to the Lord. His grandmother, and grandfather, 75 years old and an infidel all his life, have come tonight, and now the whole family are converted.' "—Selected.

THE WISHING GATE

Bobby and Madge were out in the meadows together.

"We had better enjoy these lovely flowers and grasses while we can," said Madge, "for we'll soon be carted away home."

"Oh, what a shame!" said Bobby, "I wish we didn't have to go back to school. Holidays are much too short. It would be so much nicer to stay out here."

"In some ways it would," said Madge, "but, you see, children aren't meant to live in meadows. They're meant to live indoors at home, and do lessons, and so on. Or else what would happen when we grow up?"

"But lambs, and birds, and butterflies don't have to learn lessons," grumbled Bobby.

"I'm not so sure about birds," remarked Madge. "I've seen their mothers teaching them to fly."

"Well, anyhow," said Bobby, "I only wish I was a lamb. Just think what a jolly time it has, frisking about all day with nothing to do but play."

"Yes, that's all very well," answered Madge, "but what becomes of that lamb?"

"I expect it grows up into a sheep," Bobby said.

"Not always," Madge told him. "Perhaps a butcher comes along with a sharp knife, just when the lamb is feeling very merry."

"Ugh!" exclaimed Bobby with a shudder. "Well, anyhow," he continued presently, "I'd like to be a butterfly. He doesn't have to learn anything; and the butcher wouldn't come after him. I call that splendid; having lovely colored wings, and going as fast from one flower to another, with as much honey as ever you like. I wish I'd been a butterfly instead of a little boy!"

"Yes, very nice, of course," replied Madge, "but what becomes of the butterfly?"

"Dear me, how should I know?" said Bobby. "I suppose he goes on living for a hundred years or so, till he gets too old to fly."

"Nothing of the sort!" exclaimed his sister. "He only lives one day! By night-time he is quite old, and dies. How would you like that? Really, Bobby, I think you're rather silly! What will you want to be next?"

"I can tell you right away," said Bobby, hastily. "I wish I could be a skylark, going up and up like an aeroplane—only an aeroplane can't sing—till it's so high you can't see it, and then dropping down into a dear little nest. And here I have to go walking about with no wings. Very poor fun, I call it! So slow. Always the same."

Madge remarked rather gravely.

"I once saw a lark coming down to his nest in a great hurry, because a hungry hawk was hovering overhead."

"And what happened?" inquired Bobby.

"The hawk got him," said Madge. "It was simply dreadful."

"O, bother!" cried Bobby, "everything I wish to be you tell me something horrid about it. Surely you want to be something or other different, don't you, Madge?"

"Well, I don't," she said. "I've heard an old saying that 'The Wishing Gate opens into nothing,' and I suppose that means you never get any further by wishing. If I'd been meant to be something else I should have been made as something else, that's quite plain. As I've been made a little girl, God must have meant me to be a little girl. As a matter of fact," said Madge, very seriously, "I should have wished to be a little boy more than anything in the world."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed the astonished Bobby. "Why? Why?"

"But as I'm not, you see," she continued, "I'm going to try and make the best of it. A girl I am, and a girl I shall have to stay. 'The Wishing-Gate opens into nothing.'"

"Children," cried mother in the distance, "are you never coming in to dinner?"

"What is there for dinner?" asked Bobby, anxiously.

"Roast pork and apple pie, I believe," said Madge.

"Ah!" said Bobby, "I don't believe butterflies have anything as good as that! Come along Madge. After all, it's not so bad to be a boy. Roast pork and apple pie. . . I don't think I shall go on wishing any longer."—By May Bryon, in The British Weekly.

A NEGRO WHO DIED THAT OTHERS MIGHT LIVE

For the first time in history the Pullman Company has named one of its cars after a porter. The porter was Oscar J. Daniels of Chicago, a negro, who died in an effort to save the lives of passengers on his car when a train carrying excursionists from Chicago to New York was wrecked near Rockport, N. J. The sleeping car Sirocco will bear the name Daniels when it emerges from the repair shops. At the time of the wreck Daniels was seated in the forward end of the first pullman, which left the rails, halting near the locomotive from which dense clouds of steam poured in through a door. Daniels braved the steam to close the door. He succeeded but fell mortally injured. His lungs were literally cooked with steam. He still was alive when rescuers entered the car, but after being taken outside, he refused first aid, saying, "Attend to that little girl first." The doctors obeyed, and when they returned they found Daniels dead. This colored man demonstrated anew that the color of a man's skin has nothing whatever to do with that spirit which distinguishes a man from his fellows and gives him a place apart in God's hall of fame. He was a negro who reflected glory on his race. He was a man who demonstrated the spirit of true manhood. He was a king in a porter's coat. He knew how to die gallantly and ungrudingly. He died that others might live. "Greater love hath no man than this."—United Presbyterian.

NOT A DISAPPOINTMENT

"He is not a disappointment!
Jesus is far more to me
Than in all my glowing day-dreams
I fancied He could be;
And the more I get to know Him,
So the more I long that others
Should be led to know Him, too.

He is not a disappointment!
He has saved my soul from sin;
All the guilt and all the anguish
Which oppressed my heart within
He has banished with His presence;
And His blessed kiss of peace
Has assured my heart forever
That His love will never cease.

He is not a disappointment!
He is all in all to me—
Savior, Sanctifier, Keeper,
The unchanging Christ is He!
He has won my heart's affections,
And He meets my every need;
He is not a disappointment
For He satisfies!"

TO ALL C. E. SOCIETIES IN REACH OF THIS MESSAGE

This morning's "Greensboro Daily News" carries a news article with this heading: "Anti-Religious Movement Has Secured Devastating Foothold Among Chinese." The authority for this statement is a Presbyterian missionary doctor. A nationalist campaign against religion is on, he says, in southern China, similar to that of soviet Russia. This is a movement "among the youth of China that respects neither its ancient religions nor Christianity but preaches a philosophy of materialism and absolute freedom for everyone in everything." This missionary doctor, in reporting to his board, stated that the anti-religious movement was directed by the nationalist government in Canton which has for its avowed object the destruction of spiritual things of all kinds among the people.

Now the Christian Endeavor topic for February 13 is "Expressing the Missionary Spirit." I have been appointed to lead that meeting at Calvary church. I wish that all our societies may unite in immediate and persistent private and public prayer for China, that the knowledge of the real God may cover the Chinese earth as the waters cover the sea; that the Christians in China may receive courage to stand publicly and may make the glory of God to be felt in China as never before.

O. T.—Over the top.

The above is so far as we know a correct statement of Conference finances to date, except for the Foreign Missionary Society. Those figures are not in our hands. It is our purpose to publish a statement like this at the end of each quarter.

Our plan of church finances calls for monthly payments on these various budgets, but a study of the above report will show that none of us are measuring up to that. There are many blanks, and that ought not so to be. Some charges are absolutely blank all the way through, and many others are nearly so. Let us see what we can do to fill up these blanks during the next quarter.

"Must I go and empty handed,
Must I meet my Savior so?"

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

CAN YOU ANSWER THESE QUESTIONS?

What device was recently invented by an Austrian which it is claimed can be strapped to a man's shoulder so that he can fly like a bird? What was Mark Twain's most amusing lecture-platform story? What are the best current motion pictures for a young person to see? What are the important issues before the Sixty-ninth Congress? What is the best waterproof glue to use in building model yachts?

What was the best system of attack for a boy's basketball team? How can a kitchen smock and cap be made for $1.65? How can a boy or girl win a live puppy?

These are only a few of the questions which are answered in full in ONE ISSUE of The Youth's Companion. In addition, each issue contains at least five complete stories, a Children's Page, and many other entertaining features. The Companion has been published once a week—fifty-two times in a year—for one hundred years—a record unsurpassed in the annals of American magazine history. Subscribe now, for the greatest young people's magazine in America. Subscribers will receive:—

1. The Youth's Companion—52 weekly issues, and

2. The Hundredth Anniversary Souvenir Picture, "A Yard of Youth" (sent on request.)

We are most grateful to our kind friends throughout the state, and those in other states who help us at the Home. And surely we are thankful for such people as the Asheboro, Concord, and Calvary, Greensboro, people, and others who are not afraid to pledge their money to the Lord. It may be a little hard for them to raise this money at times, but I believe when we pledge to the Lord, He will see us through. We again pledge our prayers for the work and the workers.

Your servant,

J. A. DIXON, Farm Manager.

THE DUTY OF AMERICA

"What is the duty of America?

"Is it not the duty of editors of the great newspapers, and of all citizens everywhere, utterly regardless of the policy or wisdom of the policy of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, in the interest of the social order, and of their homes, and of their children, to rally to law enforcement everywhere throughout the land?"—Colonel Raymond Robins of Chicago at the Annual Meeting of the Citizens Committee of One Thousand at Washington.

"The more religion a man has, the less will he seek to glory in it. Growth in grace is sure to be followed by a growing humility."

"It does not pay to lose our temper at the expense of losing a friend."

"It does not pay to be discourteous, irreverent, cynical, cruel, or vulgar."

"Prayer is like a tree, its roots are faith."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pine Hill Church.—We are still progressing some. Our Sunday school is growing and I think when the weather gets warm it will still get better. We are glad that conference sent our pastor back, Rev. C. E. Ridge. He brings good messages to us.

We are planning to have some work done on our little church, and hope we will see it completed. We want the prayers of all you good people.

Flint Ridge Church.—Rev. C. G. Isley preahed a good sermon Sunday afternoon. very good congregation for the damp day. Two new members were added to our church by letter. Mrs. Ellen Fogleman, one of our members, is sick. We hope she will soon recover. We are a new subscriber to the paper and like it very much.

EVELYN TEAGUE, Reporter.

West Forsyth Circuit.—The first quarterly conference will meet at Baltimore, February 5th, at 11 a.m. President Dixon and Brother R. N. Hauser expect to be there. The morning hour will be spent in a "talk-fest." The business will be taken up after luncheon. Dr. Dixon will preside. Let's have a large attendance. Let's come to attend to the business of the kingdom for the king. Let's pray and plan that this will be the best year West Forsyth has ever experienced.

C. H. WHITAKER, Pastor.

State Street, Lexington.—Silence is no indication of inactivity in this case, for since the building of our Sunday school rooms began here this writer has gotten considerably behind.

As to the architectural beauty I need say nothing, for you had a chance week before last to see the cut in the Herald. Or at least I hope you did, for it was put in as news or in that space, and those who do not look at that part of the Herald might have missed it, as some have already told me they did. But let that be as it may, you missed something if you did not see it.

We made many changes in the plans as we progressed, but with such a builder as D. A. McLaurin of Concord, and his foreman, Brother Blackwelder, another Methodist Protestant, we were in a position to make from time to time just such changes as we thought wise. This building is a good recommendation for Brother McLaurin, as some of our shrewdest business men who are not members of our church give him the highest praise for the quality of the work at the price.

Our people are very much encouraged now and we are expecting greater progress as the days go by. Our Sunday school is doing good work and in fact every part of our work is encouraging. We have nearly one hundred percent faithfulness on part of our membership and I believe those who come could be counted such. Our congregations are better since getting into our new building.

We are not receiving the kind of poundings that some of our brethren are getting, but enough of the substantial kind that makes a fellow feel that he is not left out in the cold in such things. The congregation gave us a nice set of silver candle stands for Christmas, and Mrs. C. F. McCreary, Mrs. J. F. Burkheart, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Petree, J. A. Walser, Mrs. J. W. Lindsay, Mrs. A. H. Evans, Mrs. B. F. Lee, Brother Clem Sink, Brother Hinkle, Miss Lucy Owen, J. B. Hayworth, and Mrs. J. N. Garrett have given us donations that have helped in many ways. We thank you, kind friends.

We are planning a bigger program for this year and with increased facilities are hoping to get in a fine year's work. Pray for us, please.

Sincerely, N. G. BETHEA.

Yadkin College.—We have preached three times at this old land mark of the church and also held the first quarterly conference. They have much to discourage them here and it will take hard work and plenty of faith to get things going well. The pastor is willing to work, have never known anything else. Will you please pray that his faith fail not? There are some of the best people here and they need encouragement. We are doing our best for them. The times we have been there to preach there has been a marked improvement in the congregation except one afternoon when there was a funeral out at the cemetery.

We are hoping to have a reporter at this place and then you can get the news as seen by one on the grounds. The appointment here is first Sunday afternoon 3:00 in each month. More later. Pray for us here.

N. G. BETHEA.

South Lexington.—The Sunday school broke all previous records for attendance last Sunday. There were 257 persons present, and the offering was $8.23. There had been no special effort to have a large attendance, but it was just an ordinary occasion. The record of the men's class attendance was also the largest since the class was organized, there being 63 present. One side of the church auditorium was used by the class, as it was impossible to get all of them into the class room.

The record for Sunday school attendance one year ago last Sunday showed 104 persons present. The offering one year ago was $3.30. Pastor Ridge stated to the Sunday school that he thought they would have to do like Elisha and the sons of the prophets who went out and secured material to build larger houses for their religious worship. The church auditorium was completely filled with the Sunday school and many were compelled to stand. Plans are being discussed for enlarging the capacity of the Sunday school by the erection of an additional room. Definite information concerning this will be given later.

Last Sunday being the fifth Sunday, Pastor Ridge enjoyed a rest from his regular pulpit work. At the morning service this writer had the privilege of trying to preach to the congregation, and it was an inspiration to speak to an attentive congregation. In the evening a musical organization known as the Charles Gate Chorus rendered a program of vocal music. The organization is composed of about twenty-five men and their program was a splendid one, consisting of a number of songs as a chorus and a number of quartette selections. One duet selection, "Whispering Hope," was rendered very effectively. The church was filled to overflowing for the program, many standing in the rear of the church. An offering was taken for the organization.

Pastor Ridge will be absent next Sunday morning, going to Mount Carmel for his regular appointment. We will have Sunday school in the morning and preaching at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Brother C. B. Yates, president of the men's class, is confined to his home with a peculiar malady. Pray for his recovery.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

English Street Church.—English Street people are on fire with enthusiasm for the Lord. People from all parts of the town flock to hear Brother John H. Moton as he proclaims the word of God in mighty power and the conviction power has come abundantly, there having been thirteen converted, seven united with the church and others praying for mercy.

Sunday school is doing splendid work by the teachers' cor-operation with our noble superintendent.

Christian Endeavorers are also doing great work both Seniors and intermediates, as you always find the programs very interesting.

Our Ladies' Aid is planning wonderful things for 1927. Also in the mid-week prayer meetings everyone receives many blessings and our prayers are for everyone who is not a Christian to take Jesus Christ as their personal Savior.

REPORTER.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—The work at this church is moving along splendidly considering the amount of illness and bad weather. Rev. W. T. Totten has been regularly filling his appointments with helpful and inspiring sermons. May God bless him in his work here and may we do our part in answering this prayer by cheerful and hearty co-operation. I fear many of us are too prone to be satisfied. May there be stirred up in us a more urgent desire to work for the Master, to grow in grace and in the knowlege of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. When the above happens I feel sure that there will be a little less worldly pride among us, and that we shall be willing, not only to help lift our brother, but to have him work with us regardless of his past social and financial standing. May we, through the grace of God, develop a stronger love for our fellow man.

REPORTER.

Thomasville, First Church.—Our work has been going along as well as could be expected. The church is thoroughly organized and is doing some of as good work as I have ever seen. In spite of the fact that there have been two churches organized from this church within the last five years, there remains a band of the most loyal to be found anywhere.

One of the most encouraging features about this work is the feeling of brotherly love, co-operation on the part of the entire church. During the months we have been here there has been one of the best working and serving spirits manifested that I have ever seen. These folks are not rich, neither are they trying to get rich, but they are trying in the best possible way to perform the tasks of the Kingdom that are presented to them. This is shown in the spirit of the Board of Stewards. At a recent meeting, the stewards decided that the parsonage phone, and the church light bills, should be paid by the individual members of the Board, and each man was assigned a month to pay these bills, and so far as I have been able to learn not one has failed to meet his pledge when his month came. Another instance was seen in the Junior Baraca class when a stove was needed, instead of asking the church trustees to be responsible, the boys paid the money out of their pockets. The Ladies' Aid Society has money enough in hand to put new carpet on the floor of the main auditorium, and it is their desire to have the carpet down by Easter. They are waiting for Easter, so the church can come out like everybody else then, have a new dress.

We are needing room very badly. For more than a year now one Sunday school class has been holding their sessions at the parsonage, and even though all the class rooms are occupied, we could use at least six more and we are hoping to get some arrangement made soon whereby we can take care of our Sunday school.

The Sunday school enrollment is around 300 regular members, with a Cradle Roll of fifty or more. Some of the teachers have as many as two teachers ought to have in charge, and with the opportunity we have, there should be something done for our relief.

One of the leading business men of the city told me the other day, "Trollinger, you have the greatest opportunity of any church in town." So the readers of the Herald can see from this that we are not asleep, even if we haven't written.

Yes, and they pound the preacher too. Last year when we came, they pounded us, and we thought it was the fashion to greet the new preacher with a pounding, but this year they went farther than they did last year. I do not call that a pounding, I call it a "Heaping," and the good wife and myself are very grateful for the good things brought.

Quite a number of our folks are sick: Mrs. J. J. Watts, a former teacher, is now under the care and treatment of Dr. Burrows of High Point, and has been for some time. Mrs. Myrtle Barber, also a teacher, has been ill for some time, and she in taking treatment from our own Dr. Yokely and Dr. Lawrence of Winston. These good women are missed from their places, and as we labor on we ask for the prayers of the church, and especially of the former pastors in their behalf.

Our church is working to the end that we will be a full banner church this year, and if we continue as we have been going, I am sure that the goal will be realized.

J. L. TROLLINGER, Pastor.

High Point.—The Food Sale, conducted last Saturday by the Foreign Missionary Society, was a great success. All the food was sold out by 2 o'clock p.m., and the sum of $60 was realized. This amount will be sent for a Scholarship for the children of Rev. Mr. Obee, one of our misionaries.

At the morning service Sunday Rev. P. E. Lindley delivered an able and inspiring sermon on the subject, "Have you been called?" He said that many people have an erroneous idea that God speaks to certain men in a marvelous or spectacular manner and "calls" them to preach, but such is not the case. The need for service is a call to each one who professes to be a follower of Christ, and all who heed that silent call are His ministers. May each one of us look about, and find in the great field of usefulness some avenue of helpfulness, and heed the "call" to larger and broader service. At this service Mr. Clarence Schultheiss delighted the congregation with a beautiful vocal solo, "The Publican" by Van de Water.

On Sunlay evening a delightful musical program was rendered by the choir, assisted by Mesdames Jack Owen, John R. Peacock, and Mr. Norman Fidler. A lovely anthem, "Hail, Gladdening Light" was rendered by the choir. Mrs. John R. Peocock sang a charming solo, "O Lord, Have Pity" with fine effect, and the exquisite cantata by Staughton, "The Woman of Sychar," was rendered by the choir in a most pleasing manner. Many compliments have been heard on all sides for this delightful evening of music.

We have been called upon to mourn the passing of another of our members, Mr. George Purvis Pitts, who died early Saturday morning at his residence on Cedar Street after an illness of a few days. Funeral services were conducted at the First church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by Rev. P. E. Lindley and Rev. E. Lester Ballard. The church choir rendered three favorite hymns of the deceased, "Jesus, Lord of My Soul," "Nearer My God, to Thee," and "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me." Pall-bearers were selected from the Junior Order, of which Mr. Pitts was a member. Flower-bearers were the following: Misses Mary Sheppard, Selma Clapp, Katherine Askew, Ira McAdams, Grace Koontz, Mary Adams, Myrtle Davis, and Dennyee McAdams. A throng of relatives and friends were present for the last rites. Interment was made in the Lebanon cemetery. Mr. Pitts was married twice, his first wife having been Miss Mary Montgomery, a sister of Mr. Pickett Montgomery, who died several years ago. His surviving wife was Miss Stephenson, and there are five children, two sons and three daughters. His age was 60 years. The sympathy of a large number of relatives and friends is extended to his bereaved family.

At the regular prayer service Wednesday evening, each one who attends will be asked to give a chapter or verse that has been most helpful in his or her daily life; in other words, "The Bible Passage that has meant most to me."

Mrs. H. A. Garrett and Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell will go to Greensboro tomorrow to attend the quarterly meeting of the Executive Board of the Missionary Societies.

We were pleased to see Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Harris of Henderson in the congregation Sunday morning. They were guests of their daughter, Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

Mr. Clifton L. Whitaker of Gastonia was the week-end guest of his mother at High Point College.

Miss Alice Faulkner of Henderson is spending a few days with Miss Virginia Pickens. She was a former student at the College.

Miss Daisy Lee York, student at N. C. C. W., Greensboro, spent the week-end with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York.

Miss Frances Wray of Reidsville has been visiting friends at the College. Miss Jennie Scott, one of our loved "Y" workers, has been called to Westminster, Md., on account of the illness of her sister, Mrs. C. E. Forlines.

Friendship, Stanly.—We have been doing a great work here this year with our dear pastor, Mr. Hill, as a great leader before us.

Rev. Mr. Hill has delivered to us wonderful sermons. He has preached to us every Sunday this year each time bringing out great thoughts.

Owing to the changeable weather there has been and is a great deal of sickness in our community. Pray for the sick ones that they may be able to be back at church again.

Our Sunday school is improving in attendance and teachings.

MARTHA ANN HOWARD, Reporter.

Concord.—One of the things of promise in our church is the Men's Brotherhood. Only a little more than two months old but we have fifty men in its membership. Our last meeting which was held Thursday night, January 13th, was a most delightful and helpful occasion. Forty men had supper in the baraca room which was followed by the monthly program. Rev. N. G. Bethea of Lexington was the principal speaker, and he delighted us both with his keen sense of humor as well as the profoundity of his stirring message, which was styled "Three Ships," Friendship, fellowship, and pushership. Thirteen new members was received at that meeting.

The choir has been recently remodeled and enlarged so that we can now have a chorus choir of fifty voices.

Our congregations are on the increase. Both morning and evening congregations are taxing the capacity of our building and it looks like we will be held up in this line of advance unless more room is provided. Sunday night, January 16th, was "Family Night." A female chorus of fifty voices, all dressed in uniform, furnished the music to the delight of all present. Sunday night the 23rd, was "Men's Brotherhood Night," at which time a male chorus of fifty voices sang until the building fairly echoed a response of delight. At both of the services large congregations were in attendance. Next Sunday night, January 30th, has been styled as "Antiphonal Song Night." A great service is expected.

Our Sunday school is also outdoing itself. January the 9, the Superintendent announced that there were ten more in attendance than ever in the history of the church. Last Sunday exceeded that, there being 281 there in time to get on the report.

A few evenings ago thirty-five members of the Ladies' Aid Society came marching into the parsonage, two and two, the first couple bearing a beautiful cake surrounded with candles on which was the words "God Bless Our Pastor," and all were singing them. They also gave the pastor a nice pair of maroon house shoes. A most delightful hour followed and the good cheer and the precious sentiments were such that pastor would not mind having two such birthdays each year, for a while at least.

Our mid-week services deserve mention. Our attendance was about fifteen at the Wednesday night meeting. One of the goals adopted for the year was "A prayer meeting that we are not ashamed of." A committee was appointed upon the adoption of this goal and plans were at once in motion with the result that we have had a steady increase in numbers and interest in the "Church Night" program as it is now called. The last three Wednesday evening attendance were as follows: 73, 83, 83; our goal of a hundred would have been reached this week but cold, and rain at church time prevented some.

The Ladies' Aid Society continues to secure nice and useful things for the parsonage. Recently they have put in two additional rugs, new window shades etc, all of which add greatly to the comforts of the parsonage.

Financially the work is going on. Our College assessment is paid in full, and a nice payment has been made on each of the budgets—Annual and General conference. All local expenses are paid to date.

Beginning the First Sunday in February we are to run a few days evangelistic meeting. We desire your prayers for God's blessing upon our efforts. G. H. HENDRY.

Midway, How River Circuit.—Our pastor, Brother Reed, has filled all his appointments since conference; he comes to us the fourth Sunday at 11 a.m., and the second Sunday at 2:30 p.m., in each month. Always brings good messages, something that will lift each one on higher grounds.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely, under the leadership of Brother R. P. Butler. We have had good attendance during these cold winter months. The C. E. Society is also holding on through the winter. We are now having our meetings in the homes which proves to be very satisfactory and seems to draw us closer together. After the C. E. Society closes we enjoy singing, and learning new songs. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Butler have been sick but am glad to report them improving. Miss Nina Waynick of Greensboro, and Miss Estell Williams of Kittrell, are visiting relatives in our community.

Hope to have something good to report soon in regard to our new church. Pray for us.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Mebane.—Last Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock service our pastor, Rev. Edward Suits, delivered an interesting message to an attentive congregation. The attendance at both Sunday school and church services being good. 174 present for Sunday school. Monday night, January 10, the Home and Foreign Missionary societies met with Misses Lula and Mary Jobe. A very interesting program was rendered.

During the social hour refreshments were served. Monday afternoon, January 17, the Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Mrs. H. C. Nicholson; 25 members present. Three new members were added at this meeting. A very pleasing report was given of the past year's work by Mrs. Nicholson and Mrs. Pender. We hope to do even greater things through this society this year. At the close of the business meeting Mrs. Nicholson served fruits. Monday afternoon of last week at 3:30 the William Nicholson Mission Band met at the church, 16 little folks present. A very interesting program prepared by the president, Lois Wilkerson, was given. We note increased interest and attendance in this Mission Band. We hope more members will be added. REPORTER.

Enfield Charge.—We have been kindly received on our return to this charge. We have been pounded before Christmas, remembered in many ways at Christmas, and are still kept in the "receiving line."

Three new members have been received this year. The Sunday schools are holding up well and church attendance is on the increase, it seems.

Low price cotton has blocked our financial channels and we are living on "Things hoped for" until times are better. Even the young people are postponing matrimony till the cotton market changes.

Our church at Enfield has replaced the pipeless heater system with a Radiola system which is found to be much more satisfactory.

The Enfield church has two exceptionally large classes of boys in Sunday school; these classes are taught by Mr. Eli Bellamy and Mr. Ralph Rives.

We are now planning to hold a mid-week Bible class at Whitaker Chapel and much interest is being shown in the organizing of the class. R. C. STUBBINS.

Pine Bluff, Midland Charge.—Our community was made sad to hear of the death of Brother S. J. Moore. He was a charter member of Pine Bluff church and did much for the church in its early days. He was a regular attendant at the church as long as he was able to get out. One thing he enjoyed much was good singing. The writer often heard him say, "There's no music on earth sweeter than human voices." He has now passed on to his reward to await the coming of his dear wife and other loved ones, including a host of friends.

Our Sunday school is progressing. Good attendance all the winter.

Our pastor, J. W. Hulin, has met all appointments and every one seems to be deeply in love with him and enjoys his gospel sermons more each time.

Brother Braswell, our hearts go out in sympathy for you in your lonely condition; but we are glad that Jesus will help you bear. May these last days be the best of days for you, you have the interest of our prayers.

Our C. E. Society has been able to keep up a good interest, and consequently, a good attendance all the winter; the number present last Sunday night was fifty-four.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. REPORTER.

Denton Church.—There is a steady growth and improvement here now. Our attendance a year ago was 38, attendance yesterday 97. Offering a year ago, $0.99, yesterday, $2.84.

The Sunday school was in charge of the Bible class no. 1, 18 of their members were present. The devotional reading was read by Mr. W. F. Wall.

Our Christian Endeavor was well attended yesterday evening. The lesson was interesting. Those not there don't realize what they missed.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the church the first Saturday in February at 3 p.m. All members are requested to be present.

Rev. Mr. Henderson has been sick the past week; is better this morning. Hope he will be out by next Sunday. REPORTER.

Bethany, Randolph Circuit.—We welcome our pastor, Brother A. O. Lindley, back. He always brings us helpful and inspiring sermons.

We have a splendid Sunday school at this place. Mr. D. T. Gaster is superintendent. He is always at his post of duty. W. P. Julian is secretary.

We had Christmas exercise, but owing to a down pour of rain only a few were present.

The Ladies' Home Missionary society raised about $175 on a quilt and painted our church, then we presented the quilt to our pastor and family.

Mrs. George Julian, one of our faithful members, is sick at this time, we wish for her a speedy recovery. MRS. C. E. JULIAN.

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. Kennett, Editor

For twenty-five years and more The Postal Card has appeared in the M. P. Herald at the pleasure of the Editor of the Card and the publisher of the Herald. A larger time has elapsed since the Card appeared than usual. This is due to the fact that the Editor of the Card now sustains a different relation to the Church and conference than formerly. The change from an active pastor to that of a retired minister. It has occurred to us that some of our friends might wish to know how we are standing this new relation. If there be such friends we would say—very well indeed—thank you. To begin with we have never, through all the years of our active work, had any doubt about having been called to the ministry—and now we are just as sure that we are not responsible for being a retired, or superannuated minister. This leaves us with a good conscience—and that means much—very much. And then we are located here in the beautiful city of Greensboro and see many old friends and have the pleasure of making some new ones—and to watch the city grow. And then the hospitals are here and we have the pleasure of ministering to the sick, and they do enjoy it so much. And then the Public Library is near by and we find books old and new and find much pleasure in reading them. And then—twice we have been called upon to preach—once at the Forest Avenue Baptist Church, during the absence of the pastor. The congregation was fine, the attention all that could be desired and the expressions of appreciation numerous indeed. Once at Moriah where great difficulty has been found in finding a man to fit the place, so three months have passed and we are yet alive and friends declare that we are looking well and growing fat—why not? My wife is good to me and takes the very best of care of me—our friends are kind and thoughts of the past are pleasant—and the Lord has been good to us always—then why not feel well, look well, and grow fat?

Christmas

It is a little late, but we wish to thank kind friends for so many beautiful Christmas cards and letters extending to us the season's greetings—and then there were presents also, this retired minister will not need to buy a neck tie or pocket handkerchief during the year 1927. And then there were other presents which cost more and were equally as necessary. One present came from our friend, Mr. L. F. Ross, of Asheboro, which is the richest Christmas present we have ever received and which will add to the comfort of this retired minister every cold morning during the present winter. If you just must know what this present is send self addressed and stamped envelope and you shall know.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Satterwhite

Death has again visited our community. On January 19, James Wade Satterwhite, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Will J. Satterwhite, was called home to live with God. James was loaned to the fond parents for just two years, four months, seven days. During this time he has so brightened their home and entwined himself into their hearts, it seems more than they can bear to part with him. Let us remember God has promised, "My grace shall be sufficent." Let us look to Him and say, The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, Blessed be the name of the Lord. James was sick for more than a month. Nearly half of that time was spent in the hospital where he might have every care that medical aid could give him. But this, with the constant care of his devoted mother and the prayers of many friends, did not stay the hand of death. God knows what is best for his children, so took little James to himself, thus adding to the beauty of Heaven. From strife and sin he is free; nothing can ever mar or blot the purest of God's creation.

Here our fondest hopes are vain,
Dearest links are rent in twain
But in Heaven no throb of pain meets him there.

Heaven seems nearer and is dearer since we have James there, waiting for us. Life at most is short, only a few more trials, only a few more tears.

Surviving besides his parents are four brothers: W. J., Jr., of U. S. A., Robert L., Walter and Albert; two sisters, Sallie Hunter and Mary Jane.

Rev. M. P. Chambliss conducted the funeral from Flat Rock Church, and he was laid to rest under a mound of flowers in Flat Rock cemetery.

When we see a precious blossom
That we tended with such care,
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our aching hearts despair!
Round its little grave we linger,
Till the setting sun is low,
Feeling all our hopes have perished
With the flower we cherished so,
We shall sleep, but not for ever
In the love and silent grave,
Blessed be the Lord that taketh,
Blessed be the Lord that gave.

M. V. W.

Patterson

Mrs. Bessie T. Scotten Patterson was born February 28, 1880, and departed this earthly habitation January 21, 1927. She was the second wife of E. Patterson of Alamance county. She leaves, to mourn the loss, a husband, E. Patterson of Burlington; five children: W. W. Patterson of Washington, D. C.; Dean, Walter, Irence, and Audrey all of Burlington, N. C.; two step-sons: Earl Patterson of Burlington and W. H. Patterson of Raleigh; and one sister, Mrs. Flora Steel of Stanley, N. C.

The funeral was conducted January 21, at 3:00 o'clock at Friendship M. P. Church by Rev. J. A. Burgess of the M. P. Church; assisted by Rev. D. I. Offman of the Lutheran church and the pastor of Mt. Hermon charge. Interment followed in Friendship cemetery.

Mrs. Patterson has been a church member from her early childhood. Soon after uniting in marriage with E. Patterson, on May 31, 1905, she moved her membership from the Baptist church near Staley to Friendship church. She was indeed a good church member, a good wife, a good neighbor, and a good step-mother. A few months ago she said, "If I ever have to live with any of my children I had just as soon live with my step-son as any of my own children." Such love must be the kind that the Master spoke of. With such a love for people and an unfaltering faith in Christ that she had, without a doubt, she has received a crown.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

Sharp

Emanuel R. Sharp was born August 22, 1845, and died January 22, 1927. He is survived by a wife—Mrs. E. R. Sharp; two sons, I. E. Sharp and E. D. Sharp; and two brothers, Isaac Sharp and William Sharp, all of Burlington.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor at Mt. Hermon M. P. Church January 23, at 2:00 o'clock. Interment followed in the Mt. Hermon cemetery.

Brother Sharp confessed faith in Christ and joined Stoner Reformed Church, situated near Bellemont, while he was in his early teens. About 1900 he moved his membership to Mt. Hermon church where it remained until his death. He has made a success at rearing his children, for they too are members at Mt. Hermon. We greatly feel the loss of one of our fathers, for truly he was a follower of Jesus and attracted many others to Him.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

Satterwhite

On November 21, 1926, the writer received word that Mrs. J. F. Satterwhite, daughter of Mr. J. W. Reavis, was critically ill, in a hospital at Saikwan, China. On November 25 Brother Reavis received a cablegram advising him of her death. Mrs. Satterwhite was the wife of J. Fletcher Satterwhite, who is connected with the British-American Tobacco Company in their interests in China. She was married in the spring of 1925, and accompanied her husband back to China. The body was shipped from Shanghai on November 28, and arrived in Henderson December 21. Mrs. Satterwhite professed faith in Jesus Christ during her childhood days and united with the Flat Rock M. P. church where her membership remained until her death. Mr. Satterwhite was loyal to her church and loved by the whole community.

She was always mindful of her sacred obligation to the church, and while making her home in China she was thoughtful of her church, and kept her dues paid up. She will be missed by her many friends, but we feel that our loss will be her gain.

The deceased was 35 years old and is survived by her father, J. W. Reavis, of the Flat Rock neighborhood and an infant daughter. Several brothers and sisters survive as follows: W. B., L. O., and L. P. Reavis, Mrs. J. H. Satterwhite, Mrs. D. J. Jones, and Mrs. H. L. Powell. All residents of Vance or Warren counties with the exception of Mrs. Powell who resides in Virginia.

The funeral was conducted at Flat Rock church, December 21, 1926, by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter of the Methodist Protestant Church, Henderson, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Flat Rock cemetery. The beautiful and immense floral designs were evidences of the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends. Our sympathy goes out to the heart-broken husband and family in this sad and unexpected bereavement.

Safe in Heaven

"I spoke to my God
As I knelt in prayer,
And I said, 'Thy care
Is our guard and guide
Is she 'neath the sod
Who they said has died?'
And the answer came as a trumpet calls,
She abides with me in the heavenly halls."

M. P. CHAMBLISS, Pastor.

—Rev. Wm. M. Cox, Quaker minister, died suddenly from an attack of indigestion. He was pastor of Holly Springs Church.

—Harris Heath, son of Rev. J. W. Heath, last week underwent a serious operation in a Greensboro hospital. He is improving as fast as could be expected.

—Calvary church people were highly pleased with the address of Mr. Ire Champion last Sunday night against the maneuvers of the liquor men. He understands their moves and is able to circumvent them.

—President Dixon preached one of his best discourses to Calvary church people last Sunday morning. He expressed his pleasure with the progress this church has made since its organization nearly three years ago. He was accompanied by Mrs. Dixon.

—A rare coincidence occurred in Calvary Church last Sunday. The speaker of the morning and the speaker of the night service unwittingly used the same scriptural text.

—The newly elected United States Senator from Kentucky, Mr. Barclay, spoke for prohibition in Greensboro last Sunday. He is a very effective speaker. Good for Kentucky, formerly so given to whiskey.

—Brother J. S. Lewis, of Asheboro, is in ill health and is under treatment. We hope the disease will yield to treatment.

—O. F. Cox, father of Miss Cora Cox of West End Church, died suddenly last Monday, aged nearly 81 years. He had been in ill health a long time.

—The sheriff of Lee county and one of his deputies were shot by boot-leggers near Sanford a few days ago. The men who did the shooting have been arrested. It is hoped the wounded men will recover. The crime of the rebels against authority is a very serious one.

—The First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro has decided to sell its plant and build a larger and better church on North Elm Street. This church was organized in 1824 and has had a successful career. It started with twelve members, six white women, two white men, and four colored slaves. It now has 1,700 members. It has grown rapidly under the care of the present pastor, Rev. Charles F. Myers, D. D. One of the greatest objections to removal arose from consideration of the dead buried in the church yard. It is said that the dead will be removed to another cemetery.

MARRIED

Ferguson-Isley

A wedding of unusual interest was solemnized last Wednesday when Miss Oda Lillian Ferguson became the bride of Rev. Hubert Lee Isley, at the delightful country home of the bride's parents near Orange Chapel in Chatham county.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. G. Dixon, President of the North Carolina conference of the Methodist Protestant church, assisted by Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, the groom's pastor and a student in High Point College.

The color scheme for the decorations was green and white. A lovely bower and altar of fern, flowers and trailing pine was arranged at one end of the room near a great open fire place

"Up whose roaring draft
The great heart of the chimney laughed," in unison with the happy guests of the occasion.

Music was rendered by Mrs. C. V. Ferguson, sister-in-law of the bride, who played "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin as the ministers took their places and the bridal party entered from an adjoining room. During the ceremony Mrs. Ferguson played very softly "Traumerie" by Schuman.

Mrs. Isley is the very attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Ferguson of Chatham county. She was educated in the local schools near her home and is very much interested in church and Sunday school work and will be of great help to her husband in his ministry. She wore a gown of rich orchid crepe the charm of which was enhanced by its extreme simplicity and gracefulness.

Rev. Mr. Isley is the son of Mrs. E. A. Isley of Alamance county. He is a graduate of Elon College and for the past four years has been the very popular and successful pastor of the Saxapahaw Charge of the Methodist Protestant Conference.

Those who witnessed the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Leaton Harris, Mr. Floyd Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Perry, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. Dode Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Isley, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Isley, and Mr. and Mrs. Foust Thompson, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, and Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

For the present Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Isley will make their home at his old home in Alamance county.

Osborne-Brown

At the home of the writer on January 15, 1927, Miss Gertrude Brown of Millboro, N. C., became the bride of Roy Osborne of Greensboro, N. C. May happiness be theirs through life. A. O. LINDLEY.

Cumbie-Rudd

On December 23, 1926, at the home of the bride, Mrs. M. T. Wagoner, Mrs. Esther Rudd and Mr. J. E. Cumbie were united in marriage by the writer. Mrs. Ester was educated at Elon college and for some time has been teaching at Monticella High School. She is a member of Friendship church.

Mr. Cumbie is a young man of sterling qualities and we predict for them a happy voyage over life's sea. W. D. REED.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Ferguson announce the marriage of their daughter, Oda Lillian, to Reverend Hubert Lee Isley, on Wednesday, January 26, 1927, Teer, North Carolina.

Should Ministerial Bodies Address the Legislature?

The Ministerial Association of Greensboro was asked to endorse some recommendations to be presented to our state legislature in the interest of children. Rev. Mr. Shenk objected on the ground that that would be in violation of a proper separation of church and state. Mr. Shenk is a Lutheran and came by his opinion honestly. The Lutherans have fought a great fight in the past to deliver the state from bondage to the church. They wish to be fair and equally oppose the domination of the Protestant Church as they opposed the domination of the Roman Catholic Church.

But there is an important difference between legal control and the exercise of a moral influence. Because the church should not control the state, does it follow that the church should not try to influence the state? By no means. On the contrary, Christian people are under obligation to try to secure legislative action the most beneficent. Christians do not cease to be citizens of the state when they become citizens in the kingdom of heaven. The greater affairs of the other world do not relieve them of the obligation of giving some attention to the affairs of this world. They are bound to see that right is done here. When legislation is needed to save children or other people from injury and oppression, Christian people are called on to do their part in influencing the legislature to frame laws to meet the demands of the case. Ministers as Christian leaders are under special obligation to interest themselves in such matters. Ministers have the same right as other citizens to petition for such legislation as they think is called for. Can they not combine and save time by presenting in a body their petitions and recommendations? Surely no American legislature will regard such action as in the nature of dictation. We believe most of our legislators are glad to have for their guidance expressions from the thoughtful ministers of the state. The confidence put in ministers requires that they give honest and earnest consideration to the matters in question. If they should get into the habit of merely "signing on the dotted line" in behalf of whatever measure might be advocated in the name of reform, they would soon make themselves objects of contempt. But there is no class of our citizens that have better facilities than ministers have to form correct judgments regarding most questions that engage the attention of the legislature regulative of the life of the people. We believe that as a rule ministers in North Carolina put forth too little effort rather than too much to influence the action of the legislature.

—We fail to see how the search for truth would be hindered by forbidding teachers in the schools to teach error or undemonstrated theories as the truth. Is the search for truth promoted by the practice of untruth?

—We would call special attention to the very wholesome test of will power that our High Point correspondent describes in her report. If you can meet it, you will not only have the satisfaction of being assured that you have will power, but you will likely receive other benefits much greater.

God's Way

"God doesn't choose scholars to meet scholars when He is in a fight. He didn't choose a giant to meet Goliath; He chose a boy. He didn't choose scholars to meet the Jewish ecclesiastical machine; He chose ignorant fishermen. The Son of God said that His Father hides things from the wise and prudent and reveals them unto babes. Paul said that God chooses foolish things to confound the wise and mighty. God does not rely upon scholars. He would never hear the last of it, if He did. They would brag forever about their victory. Unbelief chooses scholars; God chooses humble men of faith. God doesn't use argument. God uses testimony. Scholars use arguments; God's men use prayer, the Bible and testimony."

We published the above paragraph last week out of deference to the brother who selected it. But as we read it again, somehow it does not ring quite true. Does God have no use for scholars in His controversy with men? How about Moses? Was he not a scholar, "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians?" How about Ezra? Was he not a scholar? How about Paul? Did he not sit at the feet of Gamaliel? And did not God mightily use him against the Jewish ecclesiastical machine? How about Martin Luther? Was he not a scholar? And did not God mightily use him against another strongly entrenched ecclesiastical machine? How about John Wesley? Was he not a scholar after he had spent all those years in Oxford? And did not God choose him to stir up a great revival in England?

We do not know who was the author of the paragraph quoted above, but we think he made his statement without due consideration. God has fostered schools, and it must be that He has some use for scholars. Men cannot honor God or serve God with their ignorance. David was skilled in the art he employed to slay the giant. Let us not err by putting a premium on ignorance. It is not learning that is to be discounted, but the self-sufficiency of learning. A little learning is a dangerous thing if it puffs up, but profoundly learned men are usually humble as Moses was, and God can and does use them.

Who Will Use Radio?

One has only to listen for a few nights to what is passing in the air from radio broadcasting stations to be convinced that this wonderful invention lends itself to the propagation of error as readily as to the spread of the truth. The radio has no conscience. It will say whatever you tell it to say. The songs it sings may be noble and inspiring or they may be of a different character. But millions of people are hearing every night what the radio is saying. Those who use this device are exerting a wide influence. We hear some inspiring gospel sermons from the great preachers in the cities, and we hear some addresses that startle by the doctrines they are trying to inculcate. Persons who listen should take heed how they hear. And they who are called to do what they can to make the truth prevail may well consider how they may employ this wonderful new device to amplify their teaching of the truth.

On page three of The Herald for January the twentieth was a communication signed by "A Reader."

I was very much interested in this communication, and in the comments of the editor. Perhaps some further remarks will not be out of order.

That a young person should have had a somewhat clear and strong impression as to a career—to which she believed herself called of God—and then to have been prevented from gaining the education necessary to the successful working out of that career, is certainly cause for regret.

But it is even more sad when such a person has been unable to do any of the work contemplated—though her labor, because of a lack of training, must have been recognized as largely unskilled—or even to serve in what might seem to her a somewhat satisfactory related sphere.

The Call

Of course it is possible, as the editor remarks, that "she may have been mistaken as to her proper sphere." That neither her father nor any other member of her family had spoken to her of the career on which her heart was set, and that no one else in the church had been sufficiently impressed with her gifts and possibilities to mention the subject to her, would rather seem to indicate this.

I think that in very many instances the call to the ministry comes through the father or mother, the pastor, or through certain discerning members of the church. Latent preaching talent is usually so out-standing as to attract somebody's attention.

However, it is altogether possible that parents, pastor, and church members may miss seeing in a young person the qualities that might be profitably developed for the work of the ministry. And the soul of a boy or girl may be more open and frank toward God than toward the family or the church. So that the counsel of those persons ordinarily thought of as capable of giving advice is not sought.

Diffidence and Press Agents

I am quite sure that the reputed success of many a minister is very largely due to the constant boosting of one or more active friends. They encourage him to try. They open doors of advancement and shove him along. They speak well of him to others. They keep him in the public eye.

On the other hand, I am just as sure that certain ministers of real ability fail of the largest success because they do not have the aid of friendly boosters—and they are too diffident and retiring to lunge ahead under their own steam, the power that God has graciously given to them.

The habit of some promoters who are always thrusting forward favorites whose talents may be ever so meager, and whose characters are not of the highest, is to be unsparingly condemned. And I am sure that no one likes the young person who is constantly singing his own praises, blowing his own horn.

However, I should like to impress it upon those young people who are looking toward any form of Christian work that they are under obligation to know themselves and their their powers. They should entertain a just appreciation of their talents and possibilities. They should practice standing upon their own feet. They should learn to appreciate and co-operate with all sorts of workers and take advantage of their good will. And they should count upon finding and doing their own work in the world, whether someone boosts and shoves them along or not.

Two Privileges

It certainly is a privilege—to say nothing of the obligation—for parents, teachers, ministers, and old church folks generally, to be helpers of children and young people in their choice of an occupation, in the pursuit of an education, in the development of their characters, and in their getting a fair start as they begin careers of service for the church and the world. The kindly look, the appreciative word, the helping hand, count for much here.

Also, every young person should count it a privilege to make use of what our good Quaker people call the "Inner Light." God, they believe, communicates with the individual soul. His light shines in and gives courage. He stands by His servants. He helps to overcome difficulties. He aids the individual to develop the resources of his own heart and mind, so that his career will be in large measure a matter of that individual's personality and power. The ideas of the freedom of each individual, his independence and self-determination under God—these are important for everyone who is looking toward a career.

A Better Day

It is cause for gratitude that the number and variety of spheres in which one may do Christian work are much larger than formerly. A person does not have to be a preacher, occupying a pulpit, in order to give his life to the service of Christ. Many churches now require assistant pastors who have charge of religious education, community recreation, pastoral visiting, and other duties requiring little or no pulpit work. Teaching, writing, editing, nursing the sick, missionary service, various tasks of administration—all these, and many other things, are as truly the "work of the ministry" as is preaching.

As time goes on there is not only this increasing of the sorts of ministerial service; there is also the commendable tendency to regard all honorable occupations as spheres in which a child of God may devotedly serve Him. So, if a door is closed in one direction, another leading to equally honorable work will be opened somewhere else, and the consecrated servant need never be outside of a sphere of useful activity. In an unusually extreme case one can always fall back on Milton's line:

"They also serve who only stand and wait."

A STATEMENT BY DAN POLING

(Sent by A. G. Dixon)

There is so much foolishness being engaged in these days in re prohibition, and the government poisoning people and other things touching the whiskey evil that I am anxious for many of our people to read the attached clipping from the Christian Endeavor World. It is taken from the "Radio Talks Given by Dan A. Poling, D. D., LL. D." It is a very clear-cut and timely expression:

"Are you in favor of poisoning alcohol to make it undrinkable? Do you believe that the Government murders in the case of those who die through wood alcohol?

"I do not believe that the Government murders in the case of those who die through wood alcohol. Industrial alcohol has always been a poison. Prohibition has not made it so. A lot of talk in Washington and elsewhere about this matter rings loudly insincere. Why were not these tears shed before prohibition went into effect, when there were so many more deaths from alcohol? For five years immediately after prohibition went into effect the death-rate from acute alcoholism in New York City fell from an average of 619 in the preceding eight wet years to 184. The increase since 1922 is therefore not chargeable to prohibition, but to organized opposition, opposition that has repealed local and state means of enforcement. Even a return to conditions as they were in 1920, when the death-rate fell to 98 in the city of New York, would approach the remedy. Certainly the Government does not murder. All industrial alcohol with dangerous elements in it is labelled 'Poison.' The bootlegger who removes that label is the man who is the murderer if death results. A number of states so regard him. Judge Gemmil, of Chicago, has again and again pointed out that these deaths have been hugely exaggerated by wet propagandists.

"No, the Government does not murder, and it is an inexcusable thing for men of information so to suggest. On the other hand, I am absolutely committed to the substitution of a formula that will, in so far as it is humanly possible to do so, protect children and foolish people, and also possible innocent victims of the bootlegger, these last who may have secured for medicinal purposes alcohol tampered with by the bootlegger."

DON'T UNWITTINGLY JOIN THE ENEMY'S FORCES

(Extracts From a Great Address delivered in Chicago by Bishop Nicholson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church)

We have a greater struggle ahead than we have yet encountered. We are now in the greatest struggle since the Civil War for effectuation of Democracy. We have gone beyond the question as to what we think about the liquor traffic or about prohibition. We are face to face with the problem as to whether, when through the proper uses of all the legislative processes known to our republic we have achieved a signal victory over a great evil, we are to be deterred from the enjoyment of that victory by an unscrupulous minority whose one slogan is, "You can't enforce that law."

It is the greatest test of the validity of our republic's institutions. It should stir every drop of blood in the veins of every patriot. It should challenge the Christian Church to such an effort as it has never before made in its history.

Attempts to Discredit

No wonder there are such stupendous efforts to discredit the Anti-Saloon League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. They are human organizations. They have never functioned one hundred per cent, but what they have achieved is little short of a miracle. They are under the electric searchlight all the time. It is little short of a crime against our government to join the forces which weaken them. Nothing could delight the wets more than to have the Anti-Saloon League put out of business or to have its influence so weakened that it could not keep up the vigor of the fight it has put up for a quarter of a century.

"Best Apples"

The most sticks are fund under the tree with the best apples. The wets know that the Anti-Saloon League has been their ablest and most efficient foe. Their most implacable hate and their supreme efforts at detraction and vilification are directed against the League. If there is one thing above another which we must not allow, it is a division of our prohibition forces. We must stand together.

The Opposition—Whence Comes It?

1. It is the most far-reaching and the most highly subsidized attempt at nullification ever known in human history.

2. It is an appeal to every unworthy motive. This crowd appeals to the appetites of men. They appeal to the rich to show their power to ignore the law because they are rich. They appeal to the cupidity and lawlessness of unprincipled and criminal men. The whole bootlegging business is a disgrace to and a travesty upon the validity and the excellence of our boasted civilization.

3. It is a prostitution of a sacred thing. Has anything more reprehensible ever been exhibited than the misuse of communion wine? What must be the condition of the conscience of men when they will turn the sacred things of some of the great church organizations of the republic into a grim joke and into a travesty on worship?

4. The opposition is the most lawless revelation of official malfeasance ever dreamed of. What has become of oaths of office? What has become of the American theory of public office as a public trust? What has become of official honor? The revelations of graft and bribery are almost unbelievable. It only argues that the leopard has not changed his spots.

What Are We to Do About It?

The churches show an alarming indifference. They should be alive as never before. Everything for which we stand is challenged. Their patriotism is impugned. Their power as a vital force is ridiculed. Let them awake.

There is an alarming tendency on the part of the churches to begin things and fail to see them through. If there is any vitality, if there is any loyalty to truth and morality, if there is any pride in achievement, surely here is a tremendous appeal. The churches have everything to gain. They have increased membership. They have increasing crowds of young people. They have increasing contributions. They are the greatest kind of debtors to prohibition. Under prohibition they have been adding from three-quarters of a million to nearly a million and a quarter a year to their membership.

It is a crucial time. God expects every man and every woman to do his or her duty and with that in view what shall I say of the alarming apathy of voters? A mere fraction of the good people go to the polls. It is not only on the liquor question. It is on all questions. This is one of the most alarming things in our democracy. I make bold to say that in such a time it is criminal and unpatriotic for good people to stay away from the primaries without an absolutely sufficient excuse. The election booth should become as sacred as their church building. It is little short of treason to decline to support organizations like the Anti-Saloon League, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the church temperance societies which are leading in this life and death struggle with the greatest single evil of the ages. Put their methods under the searchlight if you will. They have nothing to conceal. They are set for a fair trial in the open field. The appeal is to the merits of their cause. They are fighting with the most unprincipled, the most unscrupulous, and the most Satanic forces possible to conceive. They need every ounce of your strength and every possible support. Let them have it without grudging and without stint.

THE EVERLASTING ARMS

A girl of sixteen years was telling her mother of thoughts and feelings that had come into her heart. "Mother, on my eighth birthday you took me in your arms and told me of the love of Jesus—dying for us on Calvary—and you asked me if I would not like to thank Him for dying in my stead. So I just said, 'Jesus, I love you for loving me so much as to die in my place. I want you to take me into your family that I may be like you as I am like father, mother, and the boys.' And then I added, 'Take me in your arms, and hold me tight.' You said, 'I think we all might make this our prayer: "Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe." ' Soon afterwards I joined father in skating on the pond. Father held me up, or my feet would have gone under me." "Joy, there are worse things than a tumble on the ice or even going under the ice, dangers from which God can alone save you. Make this your prayer, dear child: 'Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe.' "

In these days when dangers continually surround us—dangers to the body and to the soul—how greatly we need the simple faith of this little trustful child. It is such prayers as these that the Father loves to hear coming from the heart and lips of all His children, young or old, great or small.—Christian Union Herald.

—Our reports reveal better interest in Sunday school work during the winter than in former years. There are fewer schools that suspend in winter. We hope the time will come when all our schools can be "evergreen."

A NEW YEAR'S LETTER TO THE PASTORS AND MEMBERS OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I greet you all, in every place, for I count you all as in my parish, and I pray for you all a new blessing from Him who gives all blessings. Will you not all unite with me to pray that every member of our Beloved Church may receive in this new year a new zeal, a new consecration, and a new prosperity? Amen.

Perhaps I cannot give you much new information, but I will mention some of the things which will be good for you to consider.

Our Membership

Last year our churches reported accessions to the membership exceeding ten thousand. The report for this year is not published, but there are indications of still better things. The spirit of evangelism is amongst us and if we are faithful to it we may expect that our membership will be increased to two hundred thousand in our Centennial year.

Unfortunately, accessions are subject to decreases due to deaths, removals, and sometimes to illegal or unwise corrections of the register, so that our net increase in membership last year was a little above two thousand.

Our Budget

Some of our people are so slow to learn new things among us that it has to be explained that by "Budget" we mean the amount of money apportioned by the General Conference to the Annual Conferences, and by these apportioned to all their churches, to pay the expenses of carrying on the work undertaken by our Denomination in obedience to our Lord's command for missions, education and benevolence. The total sum apportioned is $500,000 a year. We have not succeeded yet in raising quite half of this sum, but the amount raised is increasing a little every year. This deficiency keeps us back from doing the work we are well able to do. How can any member of our Church be satisfied to give nothing? How splendid it would be to raise our budget in full this Centennial year Will you not read the second verse of the sixteenth chapter of first Corinthians, and find out how it can be done? And just reflect that "every one of you" includes you.

Our Centennial

We will celebrate in Baltimore, Maryland, at the General Conference to be held on Wednesday, May 16th, 1928, the close of the FIRST CENTURY of the existence of the Methodist Protestant Church.

It will be an experience never to be repeated in our lifetime. You must try to be there, even if you are not elected a representative. You will be welcomed and treated as an honorary member, and you will enjoy the great program the committee is now preparing.

Our Gratitude Gift

The details are not yet settled, but we are going to ask our entire membership to join in making a gift to the Church in recognition of God's goodness in preserving our Church through its First Century. You will be fully informed in due time of the details of this plan, and we think you will want to enter your name as one of the grateful children.

Our New Year Resolutions

Let us help God to give us the new blessings we desire by making some new resolutions. It may be the last year many of us will be privileged to spend in this Church, so that what we do must be done quickly. And we must not forget that what we do often determines what God will do. Therefore,

Resolved

That we will, each one, give ourselves unreservedly to Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour, living in Him and for Him every day, striving always to be what He wants us to be, to do what He wants us to do, and to give what He wants us to give, remembering how He Himself said, "If ye shall ask anything in my name I will do it."

Resolved

That we will, each one, earnestly and persistently endeavor to lead at least one other soul to Jesus this year, praying that our Church may report at the next General Conference a membership of two hundred thousand.

Resolved

That, since His Word is a lamp to our feet, and He has said that men ought always to pray, we will make it the rule of our life to read a portion of the Bible and to pray every day, remembering to pray for our Church as well as for our own affairs.

Resolved

That as Jesus warned us "The harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few," we will each one undertake some definite task in our Church this year, and be diligent and faithful in it, lest we incur His curse, "Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness."

Resolved

That since we are only stewards of whatever we possess, we will devote a fixed portion of our income to the Lord's work. We will fix this portion now, and we will henceforth regard it as a sacred deposit for God.

Resolved

That we will support our pastor in his plans for the church, attending regularly the public services, and, so far as lies in us, living in peace and good fellowship with our brethren.

Resolved

That we will seek to know more about our Church, subscribing to its official periodicals, attending its conventions, conferences, and other such meetings, and thus giving our intellects to the Church as well as our other possessions.

Resolved

That we will join our brothers and sisters throughout the denomination in making a Methodist Protestant Centennial Graditude Gift in recognition of God's goodness in preserving our Church during its First Century.

And Now

Being only a fellow-servant, loving our Church, and praying and working for its prosperity, even as you also, "I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." Thomas H. Lewis,

President of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Washington, D. C., January 1st, 1927.

There is a notion abroad that laymen do not need to be as religious as preachers. Such a view is erroneous and hurtful in its effect. The moral law is over all alike, and the obligation to keep it is equally binding upon both sexes and people in every occupation.—Selected.

The churches are having many celebrations these days, but it is to be feared that they are not giving Heaven occasion to celebrate as frequently as in former times. The one earthly event that most concerns our ascended Lord and the shining hosts above is the salvation of a lost soul.—Selected.

THE MISSIONARY CHALLENGE

Last week I interpreted for you in a very general way conditions in Japan, China, and India, as they relate to our work in these lands. This week I want to say something to you about the CHALLENGE OF MISSIONS.

First, it is the challenge of the WORD, and that is threefold.

It is the challenge to study—"Lift up your eyes and behold the fields already white unto the harvest." In our study we are not asked to make bricks without straw, for the ever-increasing amount of missionary literature makes it easy to meet this phase of the challenge.

Again, it is a challenge to prayer—"Pray ye therefore of the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest field." Missionary intercessors are being enrolled everywhere.

Again, the challenge is to obedience—"Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature." Our obligation is not to explain why we don't go, but why we stay.

With adequate knowledge, prevailing prayer and willing obedience, we can meet this challenge of the Word.

Second, it is the challenge of the SUPERNATURAL in modern missions. As a Christian your normal desire is to be lined up with God, and to be deeply interested in those things in which he shows special interest.

The presence of the supernatural is revealed in raising up missionaries specially prepared for work as obviously prepared for them; and in the removal of obstacles and synchronizing of crises, for which no rational explanation can be given.

For example, the reading of the autobiography of John G. Paton is as convincing of the presence of the supernatural as is the reading of the Book of Acts, in which the labors of Peter and Paul are set forth.

Third, it is the challenge of the MISSIONARY in his achievements, his satisfaction and his sacrifices. In what department of the church can we find achievements in the past 50 years comparable with those of the foreign field?

Volumes have been written in these years setting forth the achievements of Christian missionaries in the realm of literature, sociology, economics, science and religion.

Think of Livingstone in Africa, Paton in the New Hebrides, Hannington in Uganda, Zwemer in Arabia, Zindendorf in the West Indies, Judson in Burma, Morrison in China, Verbeck in Japan, and Titus Coan in the Hawaiian Islands.

Cannibalism, slavery, foot-binding, polygamy, witchcraft, superstition, illiteracy, suttee, etc., have disappeared, and are disappearing before the story of the gospel as told and lived by the missionaries.

During my recent trip around the world, I met many missionaries, of many churches, and each seemed to feel that he was in the place where God wanted him to be. I found them facing the loneliness of Mongolia with a smile, and the hatred of the lands of Islam, with good cheer. This contrasts vividly with the anxiety we often find in the homeland to labor in some other field.

When we think of the sacrifices of the missionaries we find ourselves believing that the modern acts of the apostles are being written with more blood than were the New Testament Acts of the Apostles. In my judgment, the missionaries of our church challenge us in their achievements, satisfaction and sacrifice as vigorously as do those of any other church.

Fourth, the challenge of the LOST BILLION. There are approximately 1,600,000,000 people on the earth, and of these 600,000,000 are credited with being Christian.

This leaves a thousand million out of the fold, and of this lost billion, five hundred million will go into eternity during your lifetime without ever having had an adequate opportunity to hear the gospel. What a challenge this solemn fact provides .Will we meet it?

J. C. Broomfield.

RATIONALISM AND RITUALISM

Dr. A. C. Gaebelein, in "Our Hope"

Ritualists and Rationalists were here when our blessed Lord walked on the earth. The Pharisees were Ritualists. The Sadducees were Rationalists. The Pharisees added to the Word. The Sadducees took away from the Word. The Pharisees with their outward and strict religious observances, claiming authority, were called by our Lord "serpents, generation of vipers," and He asked them, "How can ye escape the damnation of hell?" (Matt. xxiii:33). With all their religious doings, their long prayers, their broad phylacteries and their enlarged garments, they shut up the kingdom of heaven. The Sadducees rejected the miraculous; they did not believe in the existence of angels, nor in the resurrection of the body. They sneered at the revelation of God. They hated the Pharisees and the Pharisees hated the Sadducees. But one thing they had in common, they hated the Lord Jesus Christ. One common cause they had, rejecting the Lord of Glory.

Ritualism and Rationalism, Pharisees and Sadducees are still here. They are more powerful today than ever before. Higher critics, the men and the women, who reject the Word of God, the virgin birth, the Deity of our Lord, His sacrificial death, His physical resurrection, are the legitimate offspring of the Sadducees of old. They are the rationalists. Ritualism is here. It has its stronghold in that great apostate system which makes the highest possible claims of being the Church, the only Church outside of which there is no salvation; but God's Word has long ago branded her a harlot and the mother of harlots.

A brother wrote us recently that if he had the choice between uniting with a Unitarian "church" and the Roman Catholic Church, he would prefer the latter. But the Word of God does not ask him or any other believer to unite with either the one or the other. The statement is fundamentally wrong. The Sadducee, the Rationalist who denies the doctrine of Christ, is an enemy of the Cross and his end is destruction. The great Ritualistic system may claim to believe in God, in the Bible, on the Lord Jesus Christ, but in reality it denies the Gospel of Grace. One who wrote in the divine energy of the Spirit of God, "our beloved brother Paul," speaks of ritualism, which requires ordinances and works as necessary for salvation, as being a perversion of the Gospel. In that wonderful defence of the Gospel of Grace, the Epistle to the Galations, the Holy Spirit pronounces His divine anathema upon the Ritualism of Christendom. "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Gal. i:8.) And this solemn statement is repeated. The curse of God rests upon any system which has perverted the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The curse rests upon both Rationalism and Ritualism.

Beloved reader! Rationalism and Ritualism sweep on through Christendom like two irresistible currents. Keep your eyes open that neither may touch you. Only by constant reading of the Word of God and earnest prayer can we be kept clean and separated unto Him who has called us into His own fellowship.—Selected.

We should give God our best gifts because He gives us His best. To save us He spared not His own Son, and with Him He freely gives us all the things that we need: food, raiment, shelter, the beauties and glories of earth and sky, the uplifting truths of His precious Word, the Holy Spirit to cleanse, comfort, and strengthen us, and finally a place in the Heavenly Home, where there are treasures forevermore. Surely, we ought to keep back nothing from One who showers His blessings upon us in such rich abundance.—Selected.

The WORK and the WORKERS

First Church, Winston

Sunday, February 6, we were with Rev. C. M. Compher and his people in Winston for both the Sunday school session and the morning preaching service. The Sunday school is moving along splendidly and doing good work for the Master. Brother Compher has been sick for some two weeks, and was really not well enough to be at church at that time, but he was there and taught the Men's Bible class, and taught it well. There were about thirty men present in the class.

We were greeted by a good congregation of earnest listeners at the church service. It was a pleasure to preach to them. Following the preaching service the Lord's Supper was administered and nearly all present partook of the elements in memory of His death until He come. It was a very precious service.

We were delighted to find the church building thoroughly renovated and repaired, and freshened up following the fire of a few weeks ago. Since Conference all indebtedness was paid on the building, but this fire has placed another small debt on the church.

We ask all earnest Christians who may read this, who have the interest of the Kingdom at heart, and who believe in the power of prayer, to unite with us in prayer for our church here. The pastor is doing a fine piece of work under a very great handicap. Pray that Kingdom interests may prevail.

Lebanon, High Point

At the Sunday evening service we were at Lebanon, where we were greeted by a good congregation who gave earnest heed to the Word. Rev. J. R. Hutton, the pastor, was not permitted to be present because of the illness of his wife. A phone message from Brother Hutton today says she is some better. We wish for her a speedy recovery. I am sorry Brother Hutton could not be present, but was glad to be able to fill in for him in his absence. It is always a pleasure to visit and preach to the Lebanon people. One of the outstanding opportunities of the Conference, at present, is here at Lebanon. Brother Hutton has a large number of people to work with, and many of them have a mind to work. This community is continuously and rapidly building up, and this gives us a growing opportunity here.

Sparkles From the Field

Flint Ridge, Chatham: "Two new members added to our church."

State Street: "We have nearly one hundred per cent faithfulness on the part of our membership; 141 present in Sunday school yesterday. A. C. B. and College Assessment paid in full."

South Lexington: "There were 257 present in Sunday school last Sunday."

English Street: "People from all parts of the town flock to hear Brother John H. Moton as he proclaims the Word of God in mighty power, and the convicting power has come abundantly. Thirteen have been converted, seven have united with the church, and others are praying for mercy."

Thomasville, 1st: "The Ladies' Aid Society has money enough in hand to put new carpet on the floor of the main auditorium. The Sunday school enrollment is around 300. The pastor gave a fine stewardship discussion recently from the slogan: 'When does M-I-T-E become M-I-G-H-T-Y?' "

Concord: "281 present in Sunday school last Sunday, and 73, 83, and 83 in prayer meetings the last three Wednesday evenings."

Mebane: "174 present in Sunday school last Sunday."

West End: "A crowded prayer meeting room last Wednesday evening, and 204 in Sunday school last Sunday."

Orange: "20 subscriptions to church papers."

Liberty and Siler City: "HERALD, 52; Missionary Record, 2; Hi-Po, 2; Methodist Protestant 10. Total church papers, 66. College Assessment paid in full, and $112.50 on A. C. B."

A Letter to Pastors

"My dear Brother:

"The Conference year has started off well. Our books show that payments to date are much better than this time last year. Please urge your people to keep it up, and thus help to make this the greatest year in the history of our Conference.

"Five great things should be accomplished this year:

"1. The largest ingathering of church members we have ever had in one year.

"2. The largest amount paid on budgets of any one year.

"3. The largest attendance ever at our Summer Conference, July 18 to 24.

"4. Cash and pledges secured during the year to cover all indebtedness on the High Point College.

"5. A greatly increased enrollment of students in the High Point College this fall. At least two boarding students from each charge should be our minimum undertaking.

"February is Church Extension Month. The Board has no money in hand now with which to meet obligations. Please present this matter earnestly to your people and collect Church Extension funds in full, if possible, by March 10th, and forward to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C. One-third of the Annual Conference Budget will be due by March 1st, and the Church Extension apportionment covers a bit over one-third the A. C. B.

"Some pastors are planning to raise the entire A. C. B. during February. It will be fine if all can do this, and thus leave more time for other things.

"God is giving us wonderful opportunities in these days, and with these opportunities He is expecting great things of us. Let us not disappoint Him.

"May God richly bless you in all your work for Him this year.

"Faithfully yours in His service,

"A. G. DIXON,
"C. W. BATES,
"V. W. IDOL."

The above letter was mailed to all pastors last week, and we trust all laymen will help pastors to work these things out.

The circumstances of our lives are not unmeaning, but infinitely otherwise. This we very often do not see for want of vision. High as heaven and wide as the earth, is the atmosphere of holy opportunity in which our souls have their being. Is it not felt? Then it is only because it is not wished. Not every hour, nor every day, perhaps, can generous wishes ripen into kind actions; but there is not a moment that cannot be freighted with prayer.—William Mountford.

AUNT JENNY'S TAFFY PULL

"Aunt Jennie will have a taffy pull! A taffy pull! A taffy pull!" sang little Elizabeth Murray, dancing up and down until all her curls bobbed.

"Elizabeth! Elizabeth!" said her mother gently, "remember, you are a little lady."

Elizabeth smoothed her skirts and walked demurely out to her cousin's next door, to spread the glad tidings about Aunt Jennie's taffy pull.

"The barrel of molasses is empty at last," she told cousin Joshua. "There are three buckets of molasses sugar in the bottom of Aunt Jennie's molasses barrel. She's going to have a taffy pull."

Joshua Miller, Elizabeth's cousin, was just her own age, but he was a boy and could shout when he was happy; so he shouted at the top of his lungs and tossed up his cap, and his little brother, James, who was five and still in petticoats, shouted, too. Then Elizabeth picked up her skirts, so her pantalettes showed where the ruffle was buttoned on, and she did a little dance of her invention.

"I've got a three-cent piece," said Joshua. "Let's go over to Mrs. Jones' store and buy a patty-pan of taffy now!"

"No," said Elizabeth, "let's wait for Aunt Jennie's taffy."

Aunt Jennie lived in a neat frame house on Hamilton street, and her house was full of attractions. There was a spinet to play on and Aunt Jennie was always quilting. Under the quilting frame the children liked to crawl and play house or Indian.

Of course, Indians were not as common as they had been when Aunt Jennie was a girl, but now and then a redskin appeared. The days of Indian raids were not so far distant in the past that the children and older people stopped and listened at every strange sound after dark.

Still it was really quite safe, every one thought, for had there been any doubt, Aunt Jennie would not have gone to help Mrs. Tabitha Forey with her quilting on the very night of the taffy pull.

Elizabeth and Joshua had invited several neighbors' children and they had all gathered in the old-fashioned kitchen. Aunt Jennie boiled down the molasses sugar for them and spread it on plates to cool. Then with many words of advice and requests not to muss up the place, she put on her shawl and went over to the Foreys'.

My! that taffy was a long time getting cool enough to pull! Lottie Aimes, who was seven and taking lessons on the spinet, slipped away to the parlor and began to practice a little. She was just learning a new piece and she softly played what she remembered of it. The parlor was dark but there was a patch of moonlight on the carpet. At first she wasn't a bit afraid, then she began to have creeps up and down her spine. She felt that somebody was behind her, looking at her.

You know what a scarey feeling that is! She wanted to look around, and yet she didn't like to. She went on playing. Then suddenly she wheeled around and faced the window through which the moonlight was pouring.

Well, you should have seen her face then! For just as she wheeled about something ducked down from the window. It was something black and round. Lottie had only a glimpse of it, but you know how quick the eye is. In just that half a second, she saw that the thing had been somebody's head. Somebody had been looking at her!

She could not scream, she was too scared, but with quick, silent steps, she slid out of the room and rushed to the kitchen. The other children were all there, Elizabeth was poking a pan of taffy with her finger to see if it were cool enough to pull.

"Why, Lottie!" exclaimed John, her brother. "You look awful scared!"

"Sh-sh!" cautioned Lottie. "There's somebody outside! I saw him."

Her voice and expression more than her words frightened the others stiff. The littlest ones ran and got under the quilting frame by the window, the rest gathered in a knot about Lottie.

"What did he look like?" asked John, who was the oldest.

"A-a Indian!" whispered Lottie in a fearful tone.

John looked around at Joshua and Dan and James, the other boys. He asked if Aunt Jennie had a gun. Joshua pointed to an old-fashioned shot gun standing in the corner by the door. It wasn't loaded, though, and they didn't know where to look for the powder and shot. The boys began to look, and presently Joshua found a powder horn and a bag of lead shot. They then loaded the gun.

"But you mustn't shoot until you are sure who it is," said Elizabeth. "S'pose it wasn't an Indian. S'pose it was somebody like Uncle Ben."

Uncle Ben was an old black slave belonging to the Foreys, and while he was getting old and queer in the head, he was kind to the children and told them stories.

John hesitated a moment. Then he said bravely: "Who will go out with me and scout?"

Joshua and Dan said they both would, but John only took Dan, because he was older than Joshua and was in the same class at school.

The boys crept cautiously into the darkened parlor and keeping in the shadow, they went to the window. Nothing was in sight, so they slipped out of the window and stood a while outside in the dark shadow of the house, listening.

Suddenly they saw a form cross the moonlit space around the side of the house. John pointed the gun in that direction and shouted, "Halt, or I'll fire!"

The figure seemed to melt away into the shadow. John whispered to Dan, "Jump back under the porch when I fire." Because he knew that when he fired the lurking person would know where they were.

Then he raised the old gun and fired. He had meant to dodge back, too, but the gun attended to that for him. It kicked so hard that the boy was thrown down.

In an instant a voice called, "No shoot!" and out into the moonlight came a tall figure with hands raised.

John quickly scrambled to his feet. "Open the door!" he called, and Joshua, waiting tensely at the front door, threw it open. John then said: "March along in, you! and don't dare to put down your hands."

Luckily his prisoner did not know that there was only one gun and that one empty. He marched in and John marched him into the lighted kitchen. Then you should have seen the children stare! He was an Indian all right, with long black hair and buckskin clothes. He looked around at the children, and at John standing sternly with the gun. Then he began to sniff the air.

"Yum! Yum!" he grunted. He crossed over to the pans of taffy and sniffed. Elizabeth didn't think he looked dangerous.

"Let's let him stay and pull!" she cried.

The taffy was ready, the Indian smiled. They showed him how to pull the stuff, and soon they were all at it, except John, who sat in a corner loading the old gun.

It was thus Aunt Jennie and Mrs. Forey found them. The Indian proved to be friendly, just traveling through to visit relatives in a Reservation 12 miles away. He ate the taffy with great relish and made friends with every one, in his odd way, all except John, who held his gun in readiness and scowled, and was heard to remark, that the only good Indian was a dead Indian.—Selected.

The reports from the Missionary Societies did not get in in time for this report, so the Home Society's report is the same as it was last week and we hope to have both in for next report. Three more charges went over the top on college assessment. Several very near and we hope a goodly number will go over next week.

I am sure no one liked the blank spaces in the budget report last week. Let's every one get busy and by the time the end of the next quarter comes have every space occupied. Some pastors must have been very proud of their charges and the cooperation they are receiving from their people as they saw every space occupied. Then too, those who were over the top on any of the budgets, that was a real joy, I know.

A new week and a new chance. February is Church Extension month.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE ITEMS

High Point College has received from the State Board of Education of North Carolina an A-Grade Rating. Already the students had received from the State Board full credit for the number of hours work they did here and sixteen of them are now teaching in the public schools of North Carolina. But the matter of a permanent rating could not be settled until the college had secured either $500,000 in endowment or an annual stable income of $25,000, all other conditions of rating having been met. So recently the required stable income was assured and the college was visited by Dr. Hillman and Dr. Highsmith who gave the rating as above stated, except that the graduates this year must attend summer school in order to secure an A-Grade certificate if they plan to teach in the public schools next year; of course, this does not apply to any who will not teach.

We feel very much gratified at this achievement and are going forward to enlarge our curriculum and will this coming year add three additional instructors. Besides the department of Expression, a School of Commerce will be established in which all those desiring to take any commercial subjects will have that opportunity under the most competent instructors.

The Concert Course has proven this year to be most satisfactory. Every number has been good, but the last, which was the Cherniavsky Trio, was exceptionally fine. We are expecting to have them return next fall.

High Point College has entered the Forensic Inter Collegiate Council and will hold triangular debates with several leading colleges of the state this spring.

Professor Dan Smith is preparing to give again the "Rose Maiden" which was so acceptably rendered the first year. He will have a larger number in the chorus and it will no doubt be most splendidly rendered.

The college band has increased its number of instruments to fourteen and is rendering most acceptable music.

The student enrollment is now 227 and we are glad to say that the health of the student body has been exceptionally fine and the grade of work done has been very gratifying.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MISS ESTHER ROSS, Editor

EXECUTIVE MEETING

The Home Missionary Society held its third quarterly session Tuesday morning, February 2nd, at Grace church, Greensboro, N. C. Mrs. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, led the devotional in a most impressive and inspiring way, taking as her scripture lesson the 91st Psalm. Mrs. A. G. Dixon followed this with a most earnest prayer pleading for more consecration and greater service. Fourteen officers of the executive meeting responded to roll call. There were about fifty visitors and members of the Foreign committee present also.

The Treasurer reported total since last meeting, $3,652.46. This report showed full budget in some lines and a deficit in others. Suggestions were made to remedy this situation. Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Nicholson, gave a complete report which showed much interest, and good work being done in the various auxiliaries.

Mrs. T. L. Speas, Secretary of Young People's work, told of the new society that has been organized at Henderson, R. 4.

Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Secretary of Student Loan Fund, proudly reported her fund over paid. Seven students are using this fund. At the beginning of the school year two students were refused this aid because of lack of fund, but the money has been procured since. This was the only fund overpaid.

Mrs. D. S. Coltrane, Secretary of Blessing Boxes, reported 41 boxes sent out since last meeting.

The Secretary of Literature, Miss Pearl McCulloch, gave a good report.

In the absence of Miss Esther Ross, Mrs. Hammer reported for her.

Dr. Glascock, Stewardship, reported progress in interest. She expects to visit all auxiliaries and make talks urging that every church have something on Stewardship in their program.

Upon Mrs. Bates' suggestion it was decided to send a six months subscription to the Missionary Record to every new auxiliary organized.

It was pointed out that our deficit to Pine Ridge is nearly $900. Also behind in Pittsburg, Baltimore, Ohio, and Bethel Home. It was decided to notify each auxiliary of the facts and make a special plea for the deficit. Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Andrews were asked to do this.

Mrs. Dixon spoke on the latest news from our various fields.

The old Pittsburg Mission has been closed but a new one opened a few blocks from where the first one was located. The Ohio work, under Miss Brown, has been handicapped because of her sickness, but it is growing steadily and surely. New work has been opened at Port Homer, a place where no church or Sunday school exists. Pine Ridge, partly due to a legacy, is in good shape. The debt has been reduced to less than $1100, and the work progressing nicely. The boys dormitory almost filled, and several girls have been turned away because of lack of dormitory space.

Mrs. Bates spoke of the Bethel Home, telling of the serious illness of Mr. Altman. During the year that he has been there his cheerfulness and the influence it has on others in the Home has been noticeable. Mrs. Hammer asked that all present send Mr. Altman a card cheering him on his sick bed.

Mrs. Dixon suggested a Home Circle in every church, composed of young men, to help support this splendid work that is being done at Bethel Home.

Since there was no further business the Society adjourned to be served lunch by the ladies of Grace church. After lunch the Foreign Society held its third quarterly session in the chapel, after which a short joint session of both Societies were held.

An S. O. S. Call

Not quite two months now, and our books must close. Our budget of $6,250 is just half raised, and what we do, must be done quickly.

If every auxiliary raises its budget and stops there, our Branch budget will still be short, so let each auxiliary go as far as it can beyond its budget. Some auxiliaries have not been heard from this year. Won't you please let us hear from you at once in a substantial way?

Remember nothing will count on your budget for this year after March 31st. Who will be the first to go "over the top?"

Auxiliary Treasurer, we are hoping to hear from you very soon.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treasurer W. F. M.S.
Burlington, N. C.

Some Startling Facts to Be Faced by the W. H. M. S.

The auxiliaries of the N. C. Branch W. H. M. S. must send in to the State Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, between now and March 31, 1927, $1354.75 in order that she may have sufficient funds to complete our payments for the Branch.

We are in arrears at present to Bethel Home $286.00. To Pine Ridge Mission and School $815.80. To Pittsburgh Mission $24.80. To Baltimore Girls' Home $71.03. To work among foreigners in Ohio $56.28, to the General Fund $100.00.

We are glad that the apportionment for the Scholarship Loan Fund has been met already, and when all dues for the year are paid the Children's Home apportionment will be met also. The Children's Home is very dear to the heart of your Treasurer, and it never gets too much money, but if each auxiliary sends in money for the Children's Home to the exclusion of all other interests, she is embarrassed for funds to meet our other assessments. And while the actual amount lacking to complete our budget is only $847.00, so much of the money has been sent in for specially designated causes that we must raise $1354.75 to complete the payments to all the other interests assessed upon us by the Executive Board of the W. H. M. S.

Your Treasurer must turn your money into the channels you direct, but she would be much less embarassed if more money came in "To be used where it is needed." In taking a Thanksgiving offering, which goes to the Children's Home, we often raise a large part of our apportionment, and we are glad this is so, but in order to keep in good standing with the Executive Board we must be true to the obligations placed upon us by it. And so each auxiliary is asked to bear a part of the burden of the work outside our state. If we expect other Branches to help us in support of Our Children's Home we must make an honest effort to meet the Board's requirements.

If is unthinkable that we will go to Branch meeting without having met the assessment we laid on ourselves for Bethel Home. The people in this home are sick and it was of such as they that Christ said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

I feel sure that if each one of us puts forth her best effort during the next two months we will not be far short of our goal.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS.

An Appeal

This may seem like a strange request, but upon reflection I am sure you can see the reasonableness of it. I am asking every church in N. C. that has no W. F. M. S. to hold a thank-offering service either this month or in March. Even if you cannot have a program please take the offering any way. Of course we are counting on the auxiliaries to hold the services, but if you have no organization you still have cause for gratitude for the W. F. M. S., and I believe many of you will be glad to express your appreciation in this helpful way. The money is much needed by our workers, and I know no better way for your local church to raise her budget than for the women to lend their assistance. If you have already raised your budget you are certainly able to make a thank offering. We are depending on the pastors also to lend their support.

When you have taken the offering send the money to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Burlington, N. C., and advise me of the amount received. I thank you for what you are going to do.

VELNA McCULLOCH, Thank-Offering Sec.

Notice to Auxiliary Presidents

Some weeks ago I advised you by letter that Thank-Offering envelopes would be mailed you, but the supply received from the executive secretary is so limited that I am going to ask that each of you who is planning to hold the service write me a postal card telling how many you will need. It is not necessary to send to those who will not use them.

VELNA McCULLOCH, Thank-Offering Sec.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Henderson.—The associate meeting of the Young Ladies' League and the Missionary Societies was held Monday evening, January 24, at the home of Mrs. Fletcher R. Harris, with Mrs. E. C. Kittrell assistant hostess. It being the regular business meeting of the Missionary Societies, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, president, called the meeting to order. All present joined in singing the Missionary Hymn, followed by prayer, offered by Mrs. Sam R. Harris. Reports from the various committees were given and dues and offerings were taken. Mrs. Sam R. Harris suggested that the society make some special plans for the day of prayer which will be held March 4. The president also reminded us of the Branch Meeting which will be held in Henderson this April, and asks our prayers and support in making it a success. Committees to be appointed at the next meeting. Mrs. O. O. Young then read a general review of the past chapters of "Moslem Women," the study book of the Society. This was very interesting and indeed presented a great opportunity and responsibility to our Christianized world of today. Rev. R. A. Hunter dismissed the meeting with prayer.

A splendid program had been prepared and was then presented by the Young Ladies' League. They gave the play, "The Five Wise and the Five Foolish Stewards," taken from the December Record. It was well rendered and the solo parts taken by Miss Julia Searcy were greatly enjoyed. Six members of the Missionary Society then gave the play, "Tithes and Offerings," also in the December Record. Mrs. John B. Fox, Mrs. S. R. Watson, Mrs. Henry T. Powell, Miss Page Gooch, Rev. R. A. Hunter and Mrs. Clyde L. Finch were the characters. This was very much enjoyed and indeed brought out a splendid lesson on stewardship. At the conclusion of this, the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

The Philathea class held its regular business meeting at the home of Miss Myra Hight, last Thursday evening, January 27. Misses Helen and Etta Hight were associate hostesses. The meeting was callel to order by the president, Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Jr. She urged the members to help and co-operate with her for the coming term. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. Chairmen of the different committees gave their reports, and much work has been accomplished since the last meeting. The treasurer was ordered to pay part of the remaining debt on our class room chairs and make collections from sale of Christmas cards. A committee was appointed to have charge of the tables, the making of the coffee and serving the lunch at the Fifth Sunday Rally. There being no further business, the meeting was dismissed by repeating the class platform. The hostesses then served delicious hot coffee and sandwiches.

Yesterday was the Fifth Sunday Rally at our church, and one that will be long remembered by all present. The president of the Rally Day services, Mr. Pope Garrett, took charge of the morning session at 11 o'clock. In response to the "roll call" of the various churches, a large delegation stood, and it was pleasing to note that each church was represented. The M. E. church of our city dispensed with their morning church service and a great number of its congregation and pastor attended the Rally Day services. This we appreciate very much.

The services were opened by congregational singing. Mrs. Clyde L. Finch read the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians, followed by prayer offered by Prof. G. C. Davidson. A splendid paper was read by Miss Mary V. White, on "Home Missions." The Misses Bolts and Julia Searcy favored the congregation with a beautiful trio. This was followed by a recitation by Miss Paschall of New Hope church. The principal address of the morning was given by Hon. D. T. Brummitt, of Durham. He very forcibly brought out the need and importance of the children in Sunday school and their early training also in the home. The next on the program was a duet by Miss Julia Searcy and Mr. Pope Garrett. A paper on "Foreign Missions" was then given by Mrs. H. A. Jordan. Much valuable information was given concerning the work in the foreign countries, and the great responsibilities and opportunities also stressed. A solo by Mr. J. C. Hart concluded the morning session.

Mr. R. A. Hunter then invited all to come to the basement of the Sunday school, where lunch was served. Six long tables were covered with an abundance of good things, and I believe I can safely say that over two hundred persons were guests at this occasion. Grace was said by Rev. H. F. Fogleman, and the next hour was spent in a very enjoyable manner. The members of the local church responded beautifully to being hostess at this event, and all present felt that we were indeed equal to the occasion.

The afternoon session began at 1:30 and the program was as follows: 1. Congregational singing. 2. Paper by Mr. C. B. Basket of Spring Valley. 3. Paper by Walter Stone, of Union Chapel. 4. Solo by Miss Dora Macon Garrett. 5. Address, Rev. H. F. Rogleman. 6. Congregational singing. 7. Open discussion of Sunday school problems. 8. Collections and adjournment.

Mr. C. B. Basket invited the churches to attend the next Fifth Sunday Rally at Spring Valley, May 29. We feel greatly helped and inspired by this Rally Day Service and we are glad to have had you and hope you come again. It is only when we get together and work and plan for greater things that much is accomplished. "United we stand, divided we fall," so let us continue to work together and thus help each other.

MRS. CLYDE L. FINCH.

South Lexington.—The South Lexington Sunday school is still growing. Last Sunday there were 281 persons present. This was an increase of 14 over the previous Sunday, and was the largest attendance in the history of the school. It was another record breaker. The offering, which was for the Children's Home amounted to $10.68. The men's class had an increase of five over the previous Sunday, there being 67 present. There were 22 members absent. Eleven new members were enrolled in the class last Sunday, making a total enrollment of 89.

Mention was made in our report last week that plans were being discussed for enlarging the Sunday school department of the church. A meeting was called for Monday night of last week for the purpose of determining what to do to take care of the rapid increase in the men's class and the Sunday school. The church decided to erect an additional Sunday school room and a building committee was selected with authority to proceed at once to have the additional room built. By Wednesday at noon of last week two carpenters were busy with hammer and saw and by Saturday noon the room was built and was used last Sunday to accommodate the large class of men. Two rooms are thrown together for the men's class, and it was full last Sunday, with possibly three or four unoccupied chairs. The new room was erected at a cost of approximately $125. A good amount of the money for the new room was raised in the Sunday school last Sunday.

The women's adult class has been increasing rapidly for the past few Sundays. There were 55 present in that class last Sunday. Brother W. C. Gibson is the very able teacher of the class, which now uses the room formerly occupied by the men's class.

Only one preaching service was held last Sunday, that being at 7 o'clock in the evening. Pastor Ridge filled his regular first Sunday appointment at Mount Carmel at 11 o'clock and a large congregation attended. At South Lexington the church was almost filled and Brother Ridge delivered a helpful sermon of convincing truth. The sermon was on stewardship and in observance of the month of February as "Stewardship Month," as designated by the Annual Conference. The music for the service was augmented by the presence and performance of two members of the First Baptist orhestra, Messrs. Myers and Cooper. A special selection of vocal music was rendered in the form of a duet, by Fonse Bean and Mrs. Shore.

Brother C. B. Yates, president of the men's class of the South Lexington Sunday school, was taken to Charlotte Thursday of last week and entered a hospital in that city for treatment. He was accompanied by Pastor Ridge, and two of the brethren, W. C. Gibson and J. H. Yates, the latter being a brother of the patient. Brother Yates' ailment is a peculiar one which somewhat baffled physicians. A report was made by the Sunday school superintendent last Sunday that Brother Yates was slightly improved since entering the Charlotte hospital.

We will have regular preaching services both morning and night next Sunday, with Pastor Ridge as the preacher.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Bessemer City.—Pastor Carson preached Sunday morning a very plain and interesting sermon. We had a good Sunday school, but are going to work for a better school in the future, with the Master's help.

C. E. Society is still very much alive; also Ladies' Aid is busy trying to push forward. We can do many things through Him that loved us and gave himself for us. Pray for us that we may succeed.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Circuit.—The Myra Crawford H. M. C. held their regular monthly meeting at the church Saturday p.m., February 6th. The program consisted of songs and recitations by the children and a reading by the leader in charge of meeting. We are expecting to hold our annual Thank-offering service the first Sunday in March, at 2 p.m.

We were delighted to have our pastor and wife with us in Sunday school the fifth Sunday in January.

Brother Furr of High Point College preached for us Sunday at the regular preaching hour, and brought us a very helpful message, which was enjoyed by all present.

We thank him very much for his help in the choir and will be pleased to have him visit Orange Chapel again.

We are very sorry to say that Mr. Herbert Williams is still confined to his home by sickness. MRS. FOUST THOMPSON.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Brother M. C. Henderson, and wife and three lovely children accompanied by Mr. Ed Hill of Denton were on time at Cid Sunday. But as Brother Henderson was not able to fill the pulpit, Brother Ed. Hill accepted the call for a message. It was a good one. Blessed is the man who when called will answer. Come again. We had a very good congregation with a number of visitors. Among them were: Mrs. Loyd Wright, Mrs. Eugene Hill and three daughters of High Point, Mrs. Harvey Easter and Mrs Bud Leonard and two children of Thomasville. Our Sunday school is moving along with increasing interest, but not what we would like to have.

Our prayer service is moving along with fine spiritual interest. At Mr. Ben Parrish's two weeks ago just had an old-time revival, had one converted, and several shouted the praises of God. It goes to Mr. Ivey Leonard, near Thomasville, next Saturday night, and the next Saturday night comes back to Mr. Sam Lambeth.

If not providentially hindered Brother M. C. Henderson will preach at Cid next Sunday night at 7 p.m. We are glad to note that a lot of Thomasville people have become interested in our prayer services; about two carloads come down when weather is fit. We are hoping now that Brother Henderson and family will all regain good health again.

The people are very much impressed with Rev. Mr. Henderson. We are looking forward for a prosperous year. Our church has been a lucky one in one respect, for we have lost by death in the last twenty years only three members of our church and one cradle roll member of the Sunday school. We are not boasting at all but do feel so thankful for the mercies of the Lord.

Rev. C. B. Way and brother-in-law were pleasant callers at N. W. Lanier's. We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Jennings Ward and two bright children to worship with us Sunday, also Miss Johnson, a teacher in one of the public schools.

A well wisher to the Herald and its readers.

Denton Church.—Our pastor filled his appointment here yesterday morning with a fine sermon which was enjoyed by a large number.

Also last night he delivered another great sermon.

The more we hear Mr. Henderson the more we want to hear him. The ones that have not been coming, come out the third Sunday and hear him preach. You will want to come again to hear.

Our Sunday school was well attended yesterday. Attendance year ago, 68; attendance yesterday, 109; offering year ago, $3.35; offering yesterday, $5.35.

This goes to our Children's Home at High Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson are doing a great work for our Sunday school as well as the church.

If our members would work as those good people do we would have large attendance every Sunday morning.

Our Christian Endeavor was well attended yesterday evening at 6 p.m. It was a great lesson. REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—Mr. O'Briant gave us a good sermon yesterday. We adways enjoy his sermons.

Since I have been elected as reporter from Corinth church Mr. O'Briant said I must report whether there was any news. So I guess the readers of the Herald will tire of "news" from our community.

Our Sunday school hasn't done much since Christmas on account of bad weather, but we hope when spring opens up to do good work, and get more interested in Sunday school.

Sorry to say some of our members have moved away. Mr. C. C. Crickmore and family have moved to Speed, N. C. Mrs. J. A. Carter and Miss Mollie Carter moved with them. We hate to have them leave us but wish them much success in their new home.

Mrs. B. F. Morris and Mrs. Hettie Carter spent Tuesday in Norlina with Mrs. Morris's sister, Mrs. Insco. Mrs. Sallie Walker is spending some time in Richmond, Va., with her son.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. MRS. B. F. MORRIS.

Denton Charge, Denton Church.—Our work is going fine and the church is thouroughly organized and is doing some of as good work as I have every seen.

Our Sunday school is increasing each Sunday. One of the most encouraging features about this work is the feeling of brotherly love; co-operation, on the part of the entire church. We have some of as good people as I have ever met, so eager to work and do their part. Our Baraca class is putting on a drive to secure as many new members as they can and our Christian Endeavor is getting along nicely under the leadership of Mr. J. U. Lanier. Our churches are increasing each Sunday and prospects are bright for this year. May we ask the prayers of the Herald readers.

M. C. HENDERSON, Pastor.

High Point.—On Sunday morning Mr. Lindley delivered a splendid sermon on "Why Join the Church?" to a large congregation. He gave four excellent reasons which make it highly desirable for a person to unite himself with the great ranks of the "salt of the earth." First, join the church to be fair with yourself, and to learn something because you do not know it all. "As out of the dusk comes dawn, so out of the church, comes civilization." Second, join it because the best people of the world are members of it, and with the least investment it brings the biggest return. Third, join it because it gives you a big moral support. When a stranger moves to a city, one hardly knows him unless he is a member of some church. Fourth, join the church on account of what you can do for it, and the larger and better service you can render as a member. It needs you, and in return wants to serve you.

Many compliments are being showered on the Junior church and the very splendid work it is doing for the children as it meets every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in the Sunday school assembly room with Rev. Lester Ballard as leader.

Our denomination is the first in the city to introduce this innovation, which is a long felt need. Young children who are not mature enough to grasp a sermon for adults, do not enjoy a church service, but now the little tots are much interested in services of their own appropriate to their years, and there is a splendid attendance every Sunday. Their singing is very hearty and lusty too, as the grown-ups about them can testify. This is a forward step which is very worthwhile, and deserves the praise and cordial support of every one of our members.

It has been announced that Sunday, February 20th, will be observed as Baraca Day, and the services will be in charge of the large and growing Baraca Class.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies held their monthly business session Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker presided in the Foreign Society, and conducted the devotionals. A committee was appointed to present names next month for officers for the ensuing year. It was decided to hold our Annual Thank-offering service for the Foreign Society on Sunday, February 27th, for which a competent committee has already been named. The pastor will be asked to deliver a sermon on the subject of Foreign Missions at 11 o'clock a.m., and in the evening a program will be presented by the Society. The collection will be devoted to our Missionary work.

Tomorrow (Tuesday) evening Rev. E. Lester Ballard, the associate pastor, will give a stereopticon lecture on "A Trip to the Orient" at 7:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. One hundred twenty-five colored pictures of Gibraltar, Algeria, Egypt and the Nile country, Holy Land and Jerusalem, Turkey, and sunny Italy will be shown, and a few curios may be seen after the lecture. Mr. Ballard will dress in Oriental costume, and will sing two appropriate solos, "The Son of the Desert Am I" and the old favorite, "Holy City." A silver offering at the door is requested.

The Brotherhood held a meeting last week for the first time since last summer, and were served supper at the church. Dr. Coe was re-elected President. This Men's Club is expecting to meet regularly in the future.

At the morning service last Sunday, the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Fierce were the Billows" by Camp, and Mrs. J. H. Allred sang an exquisite solo, "Consider the Lilies."

The associate pastor thinks the mid-week prayer meetings are improving. Last Wednesday a number gave their favorite Bible texts, and next Wednesday evening a study of the Book of Ruth will be given. Every one is asked to read it, and to come prepared to ask questions or make suggestions.

Two popular young members of the Christian Endeavor Society, Mr. John Armfield and Miss Louise Koontz, were married last Thursday, February 3rd, at Kershaw, S. C. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Armfield, who reside near Jamestown, N. C., while his bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Koontz, who live on Fourth St., this city. Mr. Armfield holds a responsible position with O. E. Kearns and Son Knitting Mill, and the newly married couple will have rooms for the present at the home of Mr. C. E. Frazier near High Point College. The congratulations and good wishes of a large circle of friends and relatives are extended to this worthy and popular young couple.

Friday, March 4th, will be observed all over the world as a Day of Prayer for Missions, and the advisability of observing it in our church is being discussed by the women.

John Andrew Holmes says: "A man's success is determined more largely by his will power than by any other one thing. The following test of your strength of will is suggested: Resolve to attend church ten Sundays in succession, come what may. Then mark yourself ten for every Sunday that you succeed in carrying out your resolution. If you can earn 100 in the ten weeks, you can make a success of life." Suppose you try it!

Mesdames E. L. Ballard, C. L. Whitaker, P. E. Lindley, W. P. Pickett, Minnie P. Harrell, E. L. Douglas, R. M. Andrews, and H. A. Garrett went to Greensboro last Wednesday, February 2, to attend the meeting of Executive Board of Missions.

Mrs. Chas. C. Robbins has gone to Richmond, Va., to attend the Silver Wedding anniversary of an uncle and aunt. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. S. A. Holleman.

We are pleased to note that the condition of Mrs. Cook, one of the efficient teachers at the Children's Home, who has been quite ill for two weeks, is improving.

Asheboro.—One week ago we received two new members by certificate, they being Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Henley. These splendid people came to us from the Polkton M. E. Church, South. Mr. Henley was brought up near here but has lived in Anson county most of the time for several years. Mrs. Henley was originally from Mt. Gilead and both joined the M. E. Church while they were living where there was no M. P. Church. We are glad they could come back home.

While we cannot report any such congregations as some of the brethren seem to be having, yet the congregations have been very good for the past several Sundays. Yesterday we had 184 in Sunday school and the house was fairly well filled for the eleven o'clock service. Stewardship was the theme stressed yesterday morning. The chairman of the Board of Stewards called a membership meeting immediately after the morning church service to talk finances for a few minutes. Owing to the fact that we have been paying for the pews and carpet and owing to the fact that the membership generally have not kept up with their church dues, the finances are badly behind, however we are hoping they will pick up soon.

Mrs. R. R. Ross is rather seriously ill and we are praying for her. Special prayer was offered for her at the morning service yesterday. Mr. J. S. Lewis and Troy Gaddis who have been sick for the past two weeks seem to be improving some.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Rockingham.—Our Sunday school roll has now increased to 166 pupils. This is a rise of 15 in two weeks. We hope to have an increase every Sunday in the number on roll and in the spirit of our Heavenly Father.

Next Sunday will be our special offering Sunday for the indebtedness of our church. We hope to make a show this time and hope to soon have the debt paid off.

February 8, the teachers and officers of our Sunday school will meet at Miss Pauline Philips' for their second monthly meeting of the year. We hope for this group of God's workmen to accomplish a good piece of work by the aid of these meetings.

Rev. J. H. Trollinger, our pastor, gave us a five-day Bible study last week. I think this work was enjoyed by all who attended. We were studying in Matt. We reached the 20 chapter, which we will take up on the fourth Sunday night in this month.

The members of our church gave our very much appreciated pastor, Mr. J. H. Trollinger, a pounding on last Wednesday night. I think he was taken by total surprise. He received a very nice one which he expressed very much appreciation for.

Our pastor delivered to us a very inspiring sermon on Sunday morning. He also expected to preach to us on Sunday night, but one of the former pastor's of our church took his place and delivered a very helpful and inspiring sermon to us. Just as our pastor reached the church and was about to open the service in walked Mr. D. I. Garner, a former pastor, which was a great surprise to all of us. Mr. Trollinger then asked him to preach that night which he did and was enjoyed by all present. We were glad to welcome him at our church again. And at any possible time we will be glad to have him come and be with us.

Best regards to the readers of the Herald and its Editor.

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Yarborough Chapel Christian Endeavor.—We had our meeting Sunday evening at the usual hour, with a very large attendance. Each member present took a part in the work. The program was carried out by our pastor, Mr. Cowan.

As our former president, Mr. Dickson, has moved away, we elected Miss Gladys Wilson in his place.

Our work has started off nicely and we are looking forward for a good year.

West End.—The various organizations have been quite active the past few weeks.

A successful contest has just ended in the C. E. Society in which about twenty-five subscriptions were secured to the church and C. E. papers. Another contest started on February 6; the purpose of which is to promote interest in the society. Quite a goodly number attended the meeting last Sunday and heard the splendid talk by Mr. E. F. Craven.

The friends of one of our most faithful members, Miss Cora Cox, were much grieved at the news of the sudden death of her father. The funeral was conducted on Wednesday morning (February 2) at Shiloh church by Dr. J. D. Williams, assisted by Rev. G. F. Millaway.

Our Sunday school attendance has increased during the past few Sundays. There were two hundred present on January 30, and on February 6, the number came up to two hundred and five. Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., addressed the Sunday school council at its regular meeting on January 31.

A scout troop has recently been organized for the boys of the church and the community and plans are being made for both a junior and senior basketball team to enter the city league from our Sunday school.

Efforts are being made by the missionary societies to raise their budgets before the branch meeting in April. We are glad to learn that they are almost paid up.

The Philatheas held an apron party last Friday night to secure funds for the new Sunday school building. This class is very enthusiastic in its work along this line and it is hoped that its efforts will soon be rewarded, as the Building Committee is now working on some definite plans.

Calvary.—Since our last report, we have had several visitors and visiting speakers.

Sunday morning, January 30, Dr. A. G. Dixon made his official visit and preached a splendid sermon on "Christian Stewardship."

At the evening service Mr. Ira Champion, a representative of the Anti-Saloon League made an address. He is a loyal Methodist Protestant from Alabama but is now living in Washington, D. C.

The Christian Endeavor City Union met at our church recently. Rev. Milo S. Hinkle, pastor of the Friends church, delivered an address and installed the new officers. Mr. Roy Barber was elected president of the City Union to succeed Rev. Lester Ballard, who is now living in High Point. After the business session, a delightful social hour was enjoyed in the hut.

Our pastor brings us splendid messages at every service. Last Sunday morning his theme was indifference. He compared the slacker in the church to slackers in war; the government court-martials one, while the other goes free. He said the greatest enemy in the church today is indifference to the teaching of Jesus Christ. It was just such a message as many present-day church members need.

The evening hour was given over to the celebration of the anniversary of Christian Endeavor. Each of the societies, Juniors, Intermediate and Senior, attended in a body. The president of the Senior Society presided and the Intermediates gave songs and readings. Mr. Paul Rawlins, former state and city union president, spoke on the Christian Endeavor pledge and Mr. Gerringer on the relation of Christian Endeavor and the church.

Our Sunday school is growing very rapidly. For the past two Sundays we have had almost two hundred in attendance. We took our usual first Sunday offering for the Children's Home of $20.00. The Primary and Junior Departments have out-grown the enlarged hut. We are badly in need of more Sunday school rooms.

We are glad to report that the member of our Sunday school, Miss Agnes McPherson, who is in the hospital, is recovering nicely from an operation for appendicitis. Two other members, Miss Pinkie Waugh and Mrs. Roy Smith, are away from the hospitals and are convalescing at home.

The Wednesday evening prayer services are well attended. The subject of evangelism is being discussed in these meetings. The pastor in his earnestness is endeavoring to get the members to pray and work in preparation for the revival which is to be in the near future. We need to be more in earnest about the work of the Kingdom. REPORTER.

Liberty-Siler City.—From Pastor: My stay so far at the Seminary has been far beyond my expectations. The students are of a high type. There is nothing too good for them to do for a new student. The Faculty far surpasses the average, and the building and equipment makes everything convenient for those here.

Not only is the stay here pleasing, but the many good reports from the churches back home are a source of joy to me. In my absence a very successful paper campaign has been promoted by the churches resulting in many subscriptions. Both churches have continued the prayer services with much enthusiasm, and the Sunday schools have reported good work. As a general rule church people rest in the absence of their pastor, but not so with those at Liberty and Siler City. May God bless each of you for continuing faithful.

It is with great joy that I look forward to seeing N. C. the 12th. I will arrive in Greensboro the 12th. Will preach at Liberty 11 a.m. Sunday morning of the 13th; preach at Siler City the same day in the evening at 7 p.m. Will return to Westminster Monday. I wish to visit in as many of the homes as possible. Especially in those where there is sickness.

May we plan and pray for wonderful services the 13th in all departments of our churches. F. L. GIBBS.

Westminster, Maryland.

West Forsyth Circuit.—The first quarterly conference met at Baltimore Saturday, February 5th. We were disappointed that President Dixon was prevented from being with us. We were glad to have Brother R. N. Hauser, and Rev. G. L. Curry, and thank them for their talks.

A bountiful dinner was prepared by the ladies. An interesting session of the quarterly conference. The following recommendations by the pastor, were discussed in a lively manner, and adopted unanimously.

1. Pray that there may be a revival in every heart.
2. Try to get every member of all our churches interested in the work of the church for the Kingdom's sake.
3. Try to bring into our Sunday schools all who ought to be there.
4. Try to reach the unsaved in the communities where we work; by prayer and personal effort.
5. Try to induce the members to pay monthly.
6. That this quarterly conference go on record as favoring and recommending the adoption of the General Conference program in reference to the three special days; namely, Children's Day, Easter day, and Rally Day.
7. That we will at least double the number of subscribers to the Methodist Protestant Herald. C. H. WHITAKER, Pastor.

Spencer.—We had a good day Sunday. Mr. H. A. Garrett gave us a good talk on Christian Stewardship, also on the several activities in which the W. H. M. S. are engaged, encouraging us to go on though small in number. And at 7:00 p.m. our pastor gave us a good sermon on The Wages of Sin is Death. He always brings us an interesting sermon. We are very sorry to report that our pianist, Mrs. J. C. Lloyd, is in hospital. We wish for her a speedy recovery. We made another one hundred dollar payment on our church lot last week. A. C. B. and college assessment paid in full. Attendance at Sunday school and C. E. very good.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Pilot Church.—Pastor Hunter Sunday at eleven o'clock gave us a good sermon, as usual. We are hoping to have better attendance at church and Sunday school when spring opens up. Communion services were observed Sunday.

Mr. Ira Hauser of Shoals church met with the board of stewards after preaching.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. P. L. ASHBURN, Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, South Lexington.—Our Christian Endeavor met February 2, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Hedrick and rendered a very helpful and interesting program.

Our Sunday school is getting along fine with almost one hundred percent at Sunday school Sunday. Our pastor, Brother Ridge, filled his appointment the first Sunday. He gave us a great and inspiring sermon and pointed out our responsibility as individuals for our stewardship for what God has entrusted to us.

We are glad to see our congregation growing both in number and interest. Brother Ridge threw out a challenge to the members and congregation for the A. C. B. and raised the full amount to be paid by our next regular appointment which is the third Sunday of this month. We took an offering in Sunday school for Brother C. B. Yates who is in a hospital in Charlotte. Our prayers go out for him. N. V. S., Reporter.

Liberty M. P. Sunday School.—As there has not been a full report from our Sunday school for some time I feel as Superintendent that I would like to let our people know that our Sunday school is progressing nicely.

The Sunday school attendance has held up fine during the winter months, the average being 115.

The fifth Sunday in January the B. C. class furnished special music for us, a quartet by four little girls; Mary B. Shepard, Katheryn Underwood, Lucile Ward, and Dorothy Elkins, which was enjoyed by every one present.

We had 128 present the past Sunday. The music was furnished by the Junior Philathea and Junior Baraca classes which was enjoyed very much and I certainly do thank these young women and young men for the splendid music. These young people are doing fine work under their teachers, Miss Watt and Mr. T. L. Smith.

The Cradle Roll Department organized some time ago is doing nicely under the leadership of Mrs. T. L. Smith. There are 20 on roll.

We have a good live Worker's Council, which meets the first Tuesday night in each month. The last meeting was held at the writer's home, the principal speaker being Prof. D. C. Holt, president of Township Sunday School Association, the subject, "How to keep the pupils in Sunday School."

Nearly all our teachers and officers were present, taking part in all discussions. We have a very competent corps of teachers. We have six organized classes and three primary classes and all doing splendid work. With the coming of spring we hope to have a much larger attendance.

We greatly miss the presence of our pastor, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, while he has been away in the Seminary, but we are looking forward with pleasure to his being with us Sunday in Sunday school and to preach for us 11 o'clock service.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. H. BOYD REITZEL,

State Street Church.—Since moving into the new church our Sunday school has increased very rapidly. Yesterday we had the largest attendance we have ever had.

We are very grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Siceloff for the gift of a new piano. This generous gift was given as a memorial to Mrs. Siceloff's mother who was a devoted member of the Methodist Protestant church for the greater part of her life. A unanimous rising vote of thanks was given Mr. and Mrs. Siceloff at the morning service yesterday.

The City Christian Endeavor Union held their quarterly meeting with us on Wednesday night of last week. There was a large attendance, all the societies of the town being represented. The Dakota Presbyterian society and also our society had an attendance of one hundred percent. We gladly gave the banner to the Presbyterians. This was the third time in succession that our society had won the banner by perfect attendance.

The ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society are preparing to give a pageant for the Thank-offering service which will be held the third Sunday night of this month.

Mr. Bethea is giving a series of sermons Sunday nights on the subject of Christian leadership that are instructive and very helpful. REPORTER.

A Card of Thanks

We the undersigned wish to take this means of thanking the Henderson Church for the splendid way they entertained the Vance County, fifth Sunday Rally. The bounteous lunch will long be remembered.

We wish them success in their every effort for the Master.

MRS. R. W. HARRIS, Rehoboth Church.
MRS. N. F. PARHAM, Union Chapel.

Social

Our last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. E. Jones the Philathea class of Mizpah M. P. Church entertained the baraca class. Many interesting games were played, which were enjoyed by every one present.

Aafter several hours of merriment the guests was invited into the dining-room where coffee and sandwiches were served.

REPORTER.

—Sheriff Turner of Lee county has died from the wounds inflicted by boot-leggers whom he was trying to arrest a few weeks ago. Another name to be added to the honor roll of law-enforcement martyrs. It seems a pity that some men must die that the rest of us may life. Are we standing by the officers of the law as we should?

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

James R. Brown

On the 25th of January the Spirit of James Brown took its flight from its mortal bodily confines, and silently soared to regions beyond. Mr. Brown was 84 years old, and had been rapidly declining for more than a year. His companion at 75, went on less than three months ago. He joined Mt. Lebanon church several years ago. He and his wife came over from the M. E. Church.

On Thursday afternoon funeral services were held from St. Paul church. The writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Penn and Rev. J. H. Brendall, had the service in charge. An interesting character, and a good man has gone on.

Sanford Newton

Little Sanford Newton was born January 5, 1924, and died January 24, 1927. For the last several months the little fellow had been a constant sufferer. All was done by the parents, assisted by the grand-parents, that could be done, but he finally fell a victim of some sort of lung affection. The funeral was conducted from the home in Concord by the pastor of the family, Rev. G. H. Hendry, interment was in the city cemetery. May all follow where he has gone. For "A little child shall lead them."

The bereaved has our sincere sympathy in this hour.

Cordially,

C. H. HENDRY.

Mrs. D. A. Braswell

Miss Martha Jane Bryant was born June 17th, 1851, near Wadesbore, N. C. She was raised up to young womanhood in the same community. On October 27th, 1872, she became the wife of Rev. D. A. Braswell. Forty-four years ago she was converted and joined Hopewell M. E. Church, South. Four years later she and her husband became members of the Methodist Protestant Church. She was the mother of nine children. Three have preceded her to the heavenly land. The living are: J. T. Braswell, Hamlet, N. C., Mrs. Q. E. Bundy, Mrs. F. T. Garman of Concord, J. S. Braswell, Rockingham, Mrs. Lucy Eudy, Hamlet, Mrs. Dora Waddell, Concord. Twenty-five grand-children are also numbered among the near relatives.

November 1, 1923, she suffered a stroke of paralysis that caused her friends to despair of her life, but she recovered sufficiently to be up some of the time. Other strokes continued to weaken her vitality until finally on Sunday, 10 a.m., January 23rd, she took absence "from the body to be with Christ." She has been a great sufferer now for more than three years, but she bore her affliction with that rare and characteristic grace so well known of her by her friends.

For more than fifty years she has been a never-failing, all sustaining companion of her husband, who has these years been a pioneering preacher in our conference. A mother of the old school, kind, courteous, God fearing. Will be greatly missed by her family and her friends. "Gone but not forgotten" by those who knew her, for such lives are about the most real and all abiding things we can know.

By reason of a long-time understanding between Brother Braswell and Rev. W. F. Ashburn concerning deaths in their families, Brother Ashburn was to have conducted the service but through the failure of telephone service it could not be arranged in time for him to come for the funeral as announced. However, Monday 2 p.m., the funeral was conducted from late home on Anne street by Rev. G. H. Hendry, her pastor, assisted by Rev. A. G. Dixon, D. D., President of the conference, Rev. N. G. Bethea, Rev. L. C. Little, Rev. H. F. Surratt and Rev. Atlas Ridge, all of whom were accompanied by their wives. A large group of sorrowing loved ones and friends attended and made large and beautiful floral offering thus attesting in some measure their love and esteem.

The broken-hearted, "We commend you to God, and to the word of his grace which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among those which are sanctified."

We loved her some but God the more,
So look away to yonder shore
There you'll meet and laugh and roam,
For that good place is "Home, sweet home."

G. H. HENDRY.

William Fogleman

On Saturday, January 22nd, the lifeless form of William R. Fogleman was found in the barn, by Mrs. Ed Jarrett, a daughter with whom he had made his home for a number of years. The posture of his body when found indicated that he might have knelt to pray. He was known to resort frequently to the barn for private prayer.

For twenty years he had been a member at Mt. Lebanon. Though nearly deaf, he was a regular attendant for prayer meeting, Sunday school, and preaching service. He was loyal, large-hearted, and likable. In many respects he far surpassed many whose advantages and opportunities were greater than his.

On Monday afternoon funeral services were held from Mt. Lebanon church by the writer. A large congregation assembled to witness the final passing of one who had wrought well.

Lucinda E. Williams

Our mother dear is dead and buried,
All the solemn rites are o'er.
With some loved ones we have laid her,
And shall see her face no more.

Heavy were our hearts at parting,
For we loved our Mother dear.
She was ever tender-hearted,
And to all she was sincere.

We will not—no, ne'er forget her,
Nor allow our hearts grow cold,
But we'll love and think of Mother
With the tender love of old.

Whitaker

Mrs. Carey Whitaker, aged 52, of Enfield, N. C., passed into Eternal life on Sunday afternoon, November the 21, 1926, at St. Lukes Hospital, Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Whitaker was a faithful member of Whitakers Chapel Methodist Protestant church and a woman much loved and highly esteemed.

She was endowed with wit and humor and a cheerful disposition. She was a friend to all classes and was appreciated by them in return.

We shall miss this noble woman in many ways. The deceased left a husband, one son, Robert, and one daughter, Susan, all of Enfield. The funeral was conducted by her pastor and the body laid to rest in Whitakers Chapel cemetery.

R. C. STUBBINS.

Foushee

Sarah Elizabeth (Jobe) Foushee was born May 26, 1886, married Chas. D. Foushee October 21, 1906, died February 1, 1927.

The deceased joined the church in early life at Hebron. After her marriage and while living in another community, she joined another church. The family a few years ago moved into the Hebron community. She with her husband and two daughters joined Hebron M. P. church, where she remained a consistent member until death.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer at Hebron church February 2, after which the remains were placed to rest in the church cemetery.

A large congregation was present to pay their respects to the memory of the deceased.

She leaves to mourn their loss her companion, four children, her father, five brothers, and a host of relatives and friends.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

A CORRECTION

In last weeks Herald, in article "Not Afraid of the Truth," on page five, the types say, "If these Professors would teach this as a new hypothesis." YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK—NEW OFFICERS

At the meeting of the Board of Young People's Work, held at Grace church, Greensboro, January 14th, Professor P. E. Lindley declined nomination as president, over the protest of the members of the Board. Lack of time to give to the program of this important work of our church was Mr. Lindley's alibi, and the members accepted his declination, expressing their deep regret that it was impossible for him to lead the young people again this year.

However, one who promises to be an excellent leader was chosen to succeed Mr. Lindley in the person of Rev. Fred W. Paschall, of Whitakers, N. C. Mr. Paschall will begin immediately to plan the program for the Summer conference to be held at High Point College in July.

Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., was elected vice-president to succeed Rev. L. W. Gerringer. It will be the duty of the vice-president to conduct the registration campaign for the Summer Conference.

Mrs. E. Lester Ballard and F. R. Stout were reelected as secretary and treasurer respectively. Dr. A. G. Dixon, member ex-officio of the Board, and Rev. Lawrence C. Little, Executive Secretary of the General Board of Young People's Work, were both present, each bringing new ideas and suggestions gleaned from the recent meeting of the General Board held in Baltimore.

That the departments of the North Carolina Board might correspond with those of the General Board, two departments were merged, one omitted, and one added. As they now stand the departments and superintendents are as follows:

Children's Work—Mrs. J. E. Pritchard.

Young People's Work—Rev. E. Lester Ballard.

Adult Work—Rev. L. W. Gerringer.

Rural Church Work—Rev. R. C. Stubbins.

Christian Endeavor Extension—J. Elwood Carroll.

Teacher Training—Miss Mary Young.

Missionary Education and Stewardship—Rev. N. G. Bethea.

Life Work Recruits—Mrs. E. Lester Ballard.

Vacation and Weekday Schools—Mrs. H. W. Maier.

All the above superintendents are at the command of the young people and leaders of our conference, and will be glad to answer any questions or give any suggestions in their respective lines of work.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD, Secretary.

OHIO CHURCHES GETTING TOGETHER

The Eighth Annual Ohio Pastor's Convention has recently been in session in Columbus. A minister from outside the state writes:

"Attendance nearly 1,000. I am greatly impressed with the progress being made in the work of the Kingdom of God here in Ohio under the direction of the Council of Churches.

"Ohio leads the country in such a cooperative and constructive program. I wish our state had something like it. Seventeen denominations cooperate in this work. The pronouncements of the convention through their committees on Evangelism, Religious Education, Moral Welfare in the Home, the Youth, the Community, and International Goodwill are statesmanlike documents."

NOTICE

To Editors, Writers, Slogan-Makers, Cartoonists—$500 in Prizes

The American Arbitration Crusade, endorsed by William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, Francis J. McConnell, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, George W. Coleman, President of the Babson Institute, Zona Gale, author, the Presidents of Smith and Wellesley Colleges and many other thinking people, offers the above sum in prizes for letters, editorals, articles, sermons, slogans, cartoons and public demonstrations urging the prevention of war through arbitration.

$100 for the best letter, editorial or article appearing before July 4, 1927 in any publication having at least 5,000 circulation.

$100 for the best cartoon appearing as above.

$100 for the best slogan appearing as above.

$100 for the best public demonstration or concerted endeavor for obligatory arbitration.

$100 for the best sermon preached before July 4, 1927.

The idea is to induce our Government to outlaw war by negotiating treaties between the United States and every other nation providing for obligatory arbitration or adjudication of all disputes that may arise between them.

Competitors for the above prizes must send in proof of their entries to be received not later than 5 p.m. on July 4, 1927, addressed to American Arbitration Crusade, 114 East 31st Street, New ork, N. Y.

WORD JUMPING

The first prize we offered—a book—goes to Miss Alice Kennedy, R. R. 2, Thomasville, N. C.

It seems that some of our readers do not understand the rules. For instance, here is one that jumps directly from EAR to RYE. The first rule is that only one letter must be changed at a time. This jump changes A to Y and also interchanges the E and the R. The prize-winner jumped from EAR to EYE thus, ERR, ERE, EYE. This is in accordance with both rules. The second rule requires that each word formed be a real word, though it may be a proper name.

A small prize will be given for the best solution of the following received before February 24th:

1. Change LOSS to GAIN.
2. Change STONE TO BREAD.
3. Change HUMAN to BEAST.
4. Change SEEN to FELT.
5. Change SALT to RICE.

—Last Sunday night's service at Calvary was in charge of the Christian Endeavor Societies. Brother A. D. Wagner, president of the Senior Society, presided. Richard Causey read the Scripture lesson. Members of the Intermediate Society sang songs. The principal address was made by Mr. Paul Rawlings, a former president of the State Union. It is Pastor Gerringer's purpose to have the young people assist in each first Sunday night service.

—In October last there were in the United States 2,600 deaths from automobile accidents. Each day, on an average, took its toll of 84. Seventy per cent of the victims were pedestrians, and 32 per cent were under fifteen years of age.

GREENSBORO MINISTERS FORM AN ASSOCIATION

A meeting of Methodist Protestant ministers living in Greensboro was held in Grace church last Monday morning to consider the advisability of forming themselves into an organized association. After some discussion, Dr. S. K. Spahr moved that such an association be formed. The vote was unanimous in favor of it, and the association was at once formed with Rev. L. W. Gerringer as president and Rev. N. M. Harrison as secretary-treasurer. There were present Rev. Messrs. Dixon, Spahr, Harrison, Williams, Britton, Gerringer, Kennett, Ashburn and the editor of the Herald. It was decided to meet monthly on the first Monday at 9:45 a.m. The members hope through this association not only to enjoy a closer fraternity but also to help one another in the work of the several charges represented. Indeed, the hope was expressed that ministers in the county outside the city might avail themselves of the benefits of this association.

A CALL TO PRAYER

Hundreds of thousands of young people have received the first announcement of "Cleveland 1927." There is already in prospect a mighty movement toward the beautiful city on Lake Erie. An inspiring host of young men and young women will gather in the most beautiful civic auditorium of the continent. Shall we not pause in this good beginning long enough to emphasize those spiritual values without which this convention, however great, cannot hope to be worth-while? Shall we not go to our knees before we go anywhere else in our preparations for it?

Let every Christian Endeavor Society in North America and every Christian Endeavorer make "Cleveland 1927" a subject of constant prayer. Let us unite our hearts in every service and let us join each other daily in the Quiet Hour for this convocation of Christian youth that may well mark the opening of a new epoch in Christian service and fellowship.

"Pray through," was the heart cry of one who had learned in unceasing vigils the potency of Prayer. "Pray through for Cleveland," is the word I give you now.

Sincerely your friend,

DANIEL A. POLING,

President, United Society of Christian Endeavor.

—A Sunday school is conducted at the Guilford County Convict Camp, and magazines, stationary, fruit, cake, and lemonade are carried to the prisoners by the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society of Westminster Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, North Carolina. Hymn books and 200 copies of the Gospel of Mark have been presented to the prisoners. A Mother's Prayer Band has been formed for the purpose of getting together the mothers of the prisoners.

—It is not illegal to instruct public school students in religion one hour a week during school hours, the New York supreme court held in dismissing a protest against the practice.

—Walter Bowlin died last Sunday in a Baltimore hospital. On Tuesday two of his brothers were on the way to Vanceboro to receive the body when their car collided with a train which killed one of them and seriously hurt the other. There are two other brothers and the mother to feel the great calamity.

—Gaston Means, serving a sentence of two years at Atlanta penitentiary for conspiring to violate the dry law, evaded the additional $10,000 fine by signing a pauper's oath. However, he will have to serve an extra 30 days in lieu of the fine.

—President Dixon has found for Moriah church a pastor in the person of Rev. H. C. Carmichael, of Lexington. He comes highly recommended, and the Moriah people will heartily welcome him. They are preparing to build a parsonage near the church so that he may live in their midst.

—The Recorder reports that Adrian College is to receive two legacies of $5,000 each and one of $25,000. These have recently been determined upon. There are probably others. A campaign is on to raise $500,000 for Adrian College in the conferences known as Adrian territory.

—Rev. Frank S. Hemingway, of our Michigan Conference, has installed in his church at Lapeer, Mich., a broadcasting radio station. He has made a special study of radio outfits and assembled and built this outfit himself. The station designation is WMPC, the last three letters meaning Methodist Protestant Church.

—Dr. C. E. Wilbur writes for the Methodist Recorder interesting letters from California where he and Mrs. Wilbur are spending the winter.

LONG'S GLAD GARDENS
Pearson, Maryland

—The Austrian Christian Endeavor Union is very poor. In order to raise money to carry on the work, the Endeavorers are issuing small booklets consisting of half a dozen postal cards, and on each card is pasted the head of the rare Alpine flower, the edelweiss. It is considered very dangerous work to pick these flowers as they grow only on bare rocks ten thousand feet above sea level and usually in the most inaccessible places. These cards are sent to American Christian Endeavorers. No charge is made for the flowers, but gifts are accepted. The Austrian Endeavorers have found that the Americans are very generous in their gifts.

Christ's Second Appearing

This is an attractive theme to many, while others avoid the thought of it. Perhaps a closer study of the Scriptures on the subject would help all to a view that is wholesome and not terrifying. Those who are afraid of the second coming are expecting the coming to be for the purpose of judgment for which they feel unprepared. Others are eagerly awaiting His second coming, imagining that they are ready for it when in fact they may be found among those to whom Jesus will say, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity; I never knew you."

We wish here to call attention to a statement found in Hebrews 9:28: "Unto them who look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." This is not in accord with the view that the coming will be with outward pomp visible to all the world. His appearing is limited to those who look for Him. To those who do not look for Him and who do not desire to see Him He will not appear in this second appearance. His second appearing to them will be very different. When He comes with clouds, every eye shall see Him, and they who pierced Him. Then all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. But the second appearing to which the author of the Hebrews refers is not terrifying at all; for He comes without sin unto salvation. To one who wishes to be delivered from sin, His coming is most welcome, for He comes to save from the power of sin and to bring to complete salvation. But does Jesus really "appear" when He comes to the spiritual deliverance of men? Certainly He does not appear to the eye of flesh. If He were visible to the eye that sees the earth and the sun, He would also be visible in the same way to those who are not looking for Him. But while eye cannot see Him nor ear hear Him nor hand touch Him, yet His appearance is no less real. His presence is manifested to the soul that believes in Him and seeks His help in overcoming evil. Such a soul feels the incoming of spiritual power that gives the victory over sin. The life of righteousness that could not be lived before is now lived successfully.

"Second comings" are somewhat like "second blessings." Some readers of the Bible see only one, whereas others see several or indeed many. There is a coming of Christ referred to in the Scripture which reads: "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his work shall be." This may be supposed to take place at the death of the individual. If so, it accounts for the life of men in the future before the end of the world. Each individual is judged and rewarded at death, each is assigned to and goes to "his own place." Then the coming that Matthew describes in the 25th chapter of his gospel may mean still another "second coming." The comings of Christ to the earth in His effort to uplift and save the human race are probably infinite in number; and then there is the teaching of His abiding presence till the end of the age. Taking all in all, the teachings of the Bible regarding Christ's interest in the character and destiny of the sons of men are wonderfully inspiring and comforting while at the same time there is in them a terrifying warning to those who are not rightly responsive to the advances of Heaven.

The Future of Christianity in China

A crisis has been reached in missionary work in China. Civil war there combined with an undiscriminating hatred of all foreigners has resulted in the closing of about three-fourths of the mission stations conducted by American churches and probably a like proportion of those conducted by churches of other lands. If the hatred of foreigners prevails to the extent of banishing all missionaries, then of course Christian missions as now conducted in China will be at an end for the time being. It does not seem likely, however, that race hatred will be allowed to produce this extreme and unreasonable result. There are Chinese Christians, many of them, and they will exert an influence upon those in authority when affairs become more settled. But even should foreign missionaries be excluded, Christian missionary work would be continued by Chinese Christians. Indeed it is even now proposed that a Chinese Christian church be organized, foreign missionaries having only an advisory relation to it, if connected with at all. China, like other partially Christianized lands, has a pro-Christian and an anti-Christian party. It is reported that Chinese students educated in American universities have returned to China and are urging that an end be put to Christian influence and that the Chinese return to the faith of their fathers. It seems unlikely that such advice will prevail. This would be a backward movement that we do not expect history to take. We may confidently expect that Christian missionary work will be continued in some form in China. At the present time we believe the attitude of American churches toward China should be one of "watchful and hopeful waiting." Much property is held there for missionary work, and it is reasonable to expect the American government to see to it that this property or its equivalent is secured to those who created it when the time comes to make an agreement with the power that finally prevails in China. Milton said, "They serve who only stand and wait," and this service, if no better service, can now be rendered by the mission forces that have been operating in China. China is too hopeful a field to be abandoned unless it must be. We do not believe that the time has come to shake off the dust of the feet against China. Chinese Christians showed their quality in the Boxer uprising. The spirit of independence now surging in the Chinese people we believe is in part the effect of Christian teaching. We cannot say that China is all right, but we can say that we believe China is coming, and that in the not distant future it will be numbered among the Christian nations.

—Greensboro ministers have agreed to have a simultaneous evangelistic campaign running up to Easter. We hope Methodist Protestants in the city will try to do their share of this important work. Indeed, it seems to be indispensable work if the churches are to reach and influence the people. There are so many counter-attractions that it is difficult to induce unchristian people to attend church services.

—The ground-hog sign seems to fail this year. Dr. George R. Brown is skeptical about it anyway. He says he does not see why the Lord should reveal the weather to a hog.

THE RELIGIOUS LIFE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

By H. H. Smith

The religious life of George Washington has been the subject of no little controversy. Owen Wister, in his book, "The Seven Ages of Washington," says: "It is singular that he should have been made out a devout churchman by some, and an atheist by others, when his own acts and writings perfectly indicate what he was..... His nature was deeply reverent, and his letters so abound in evidences of this that choosing among them is hard:—

"'(1778) The hand of Providence has been so conspicuous in all this, that he must be worse than an infidel that lacks faith, and more than wicked, that has not gratitude enough to acknowledge his obligations.'

"'(1791) The great Ruler of events will not permit the happiness of so many millions to be destroyed.'

"(1792) But as the All-Wise Disposer of events has hitherto watched over my steps, I trust that, in the important one I may be soon called upon to take, he will mark the course so plainly as that I cannot mistake the way.'

"'(1794) At disappointments and losses which are the effects of providential acts, I never repine, because I am sure the All-Wise Disposer of events knows better than we do, what is best for us, or what we deserve.'"

Wister adds: "These sentences are intentionally not taken from public papers, or formal letters, where convention might be the reason for their existence, but from letters to friends where nothing of the sort was demanded; they are therefore spontaneous expressions, as is this final one, written at a time of great stress:

'(1798) While I, believing that man was not designed by the All-Wise Creator to live for himself alone, prepare for the worst that can happen.' These words propably state Washington's creed as nearly and fully as it could be expressed; certainly his deeds square with them fully. Do we count among our public men any who lived less for himself alone?"

Another biographer, William Roscoe Thayer, gives this summing-up paragraph of Washington's religious life: "Washington's religious beliefs and practices have also occasioned much controversy. If we accept his own statements at their plain value, we must regard him as a Church of England man. I do not discover that he was in any sense an ardent believer. He preferred to say 'Providence' rather than 'God,' probably because it was less definite. He attended divine service on Sundays, whenever a church was near, but for a considerable period at one part of his life he did not attend communion. He thoroughly believed in the good which came from church-going in the army and he always arranged to have a service on Sundays during his campaigns. When at Mount Vernon, on days when he did not go out to the service, he spent several hours alone in meditation in his study. The religious precepts which he had been taught in childhood remained strong in him through life. He believed moral truths, and belief with him meant putting in practice what he professed. While he had imbibed much of the deistic spirit of the middle of the eighteenth century it would be inaccurate to infer that he was not fundamentally a Christian."

Johnson, in his book, George Washington the Christian, quotes Dr. Dwight's reference to Washington's religious life as follows: "Timothy Dwight, D. D., president of Yale College, in a discourse on 'The Character of Washington,' February 22, 1800, says: 'For my own part, I have considered his numerous and uniform public and most solemn declarations of his high veneration for religion, his exemplary and edifying attention to public worship, and his constancy in secret devotion, sufficient to satisfy every person willing to be satisfied. I shall only add that if he was not a Christian, he was more like one than any man of the same description whose life has been hitherto recorded.'"

Chief Justice Marshall spoke of Washington's religious life as follows: "Without making ostentatious professions of religion, he was a sincere believer in the Christian faith and a truly devout man."

He believed that morality can be maintained only by the support of religion. In what is known as his Farewell Address to the people of the United States, there is this interesting paragraph:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, Religion and Morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of Patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of Men and Citizens. The mere Politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, Where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in Courts of Justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

During a severe illness, just after his inauguration, he asked his physician to tell him frankly his condition, and the probable outcome of the attack, saying: "Do not flatter me with vain hopes; I am not afraid to die, and therefore can bear the worst." From the doctor's response he realized that there were some apprehensions, and replied: "Whether tonight, or twenty years hence, makes no difference; I know I am in the hands of a good Providence."

LINCOLN NOT A NULLIFICATIONIST

By Senator William E. Borah

It does not seem to me quite fair to quote Abraham Lincoln in favor of nullification, for I take it that no severer test could have been placed upon his loyalty to the Constitution than to place slavery upon the one side and the Constitution upon the other and ask him to choose his course.

He chose his course and never faltered. He did not belong to that group of political philosophers who think because a law is wrong that you have a right to defy it, and that because a constitutional provision does not suit your view of righteousness you have a right to nullify it and trample it under foot.

In one of the statements sent out to the country by those who are advocating the doctrine of nullification of prohibition laws, you will find a sentence to this effect: "The nullification of the Fugitive Slave Law developed men like Abraham Lincoln." This seems to be a clear statement to the effect that Abraham Lincoln as to the Fugitive Slave Law advocated nullification.

The very reverse is true—he gave his life for the integrity of the Constitution. As far back as in 1858 he declared in a public speech: "I have always hated slavery."

I do not believe you will find among all his letters and public addresses the use of this word "hate" save in connection with the institution of slavery. The word seems never to have passed his lips except when speaking of human bondage. He did hate slavery.

But while he hated slavery he was devoted to our institutions and believed in our Constitution. "I have always hated slavery, but I have always been quiet about it until this new era. . . . By the Constitution all assented to it (slavery) in the states where its exists. We have no right to interfere with it, because it is in the Constitution and we are by both duty and inclination bound to stick by that Constiution in all its letter and spirit from the beginning to the end."

Speaking of the Fugitive Slave Law he said: "We must not withhold an efficient fugitive slave law, because the Constitution requires us, as I understand it, not to withhold such a law."

In one of the most notable occasions in his career he declared: "Our safety, our liberty, depends upon preserving the Constitution of the United States as our fathers made it, inviolate."—From an address at Annual Meeting of Citizens Committee of One Thousand at Washington.

OBSERVATIONS AND CONCLUSIONS

Rev. W. A. Ledford

I have been reading The Methodist Protestant Herald for a little over a quarter of a century, and have never enjoyed it more than now. I have done more than read and admire it during these years. I have contributed to its columns when I have felt moved to do so. There was a time when I plunged into debatable discussions when any position was open to question and misunderstanding. With the changing of scenes and relations I left those debatable subjects to those more vitally concerned. I am jotting down here a few observations and conclusions of my own. I trust they may help others.

The first is, that there is a real, positive, definite hunger in the human heart and soul today for the things of God. I have been led to this conclusion after many observations at various times. Last Autumn I attended a series of preaching services held in the largest auditorium of any Protestant church in Baltimore, held on six consecutive Thursday evenings, with capacity houses most of the time. On Christmas Eve, when so many are busy in their own homes, I attended a 5 o'clock Christmas service in the same church when the old, familiar Christmas carols were sung, and a brief Christmas message was given by the pastor. There were between 1,200 and 1,500 seated with all the standing room taken for that service. On my way to that service I saw about a hundred Camp Fire Girls in a park singing the stirring Christmas carols of the church. I have recently attended a series of religious meetings for men only, conducted by the Y. M. C. A., held on Sunday afternoons in one of the largest theaters in Baltimore. The theater has been filled for almost every service. The different speakers have talked on vital themes concerning man's eternal salvation. When the invitation has been given for those wanting to get rid of their sins, and get closer to God, the responses have been highly gratifying. There may be a losing of interest in non-essentials, "isms," and narrow sectarianism; but the real, vital things which satisfy the deepest need of the soul have an abiding place in the hearts and souls of men. If the ministers of today would take Romans 1:15, and substitute their names where Paul's occurs and their town where Rome is—"So, as much as in —— is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you also, which are in ——;" the Gospel will be found to be the power of God unto salvation over anything this age or any age has to offer.

Another conviction, conclusion I have reached, based on equally as wide obervation and positive proof, is that this generation has a fine lot of young people as any generation ever had. Most of these great services I have attended were largely attended by our young people. Recently I attended a complementary dinner given by the Baltimore Council of Boy Scouts of America, to the active Scout Masters and their assistants, in and around Baltimore. I was amazed, and delighted to see such a noble body of young men, active in the leading professions and businesses in the city, engaged in "doing their good turn," contributing voluntary service, training leaders for tomorrow. I have never seen a finer group of young men gathered together, not even when I attended the Northfield Student Conference, than these Scout Masters and their Assistants. The great young peoples' gatherings of various kinds held throughout the country, are proofs that the young people are worth while, serious-minded, and making their contribution on the side of right today. The young people may have no interest in certain doctrinal discussions, but they have hearts panting after the vital things of God.

I am not discouraged. "God is still in His Heaven and all is well on the earth." The Church was built on a Rock and thank God it is still there and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. The storms and floods of the powers of darkness have swept along, but the church of Jesus Christ has stood because it was builded on a rock. The foundation of God standeth sure. The Church, like the Cross, is "towering o'er the wrecks of time." Perhaps more men are needed, who will, in the language of the late Bishop Quayle, go around preaching, "The Present Good Health of the Kingdom of God" rather than taking the opposite view. God is not leading a losing cause in the world.

REASONS FOR PROHIBITION IN THIS GENERATION

By Colonel Raymond Robins

(Extracts from address at Annual Meeting at Washington of the Citizens Committee of One Thousand for Law Observance and Enforcement).

First, prohibition came to the United States in this generation, in part, because of the close of the frontier. You may think I am far afield. I am not.

People saw the promise of better things, and started their movement westward, seeking to escape from economic, social and religious pressure. Ever westward has been the vast trek of mankind.

Western Asia, Eastern Europe, Western Europe, the British Isles and then across the surging Atlantic to the bleak New England shores and to the happier shores of the South, was the challenge of a new hope, a new means of escape from the past pressure on the human race. There their sons picked up the trail and carried it over the Alleghanies, and ever westward, over the bosom of the Father of Waters, across the Great Plains to the foothills of the Rockies, and there it rested for a time, and then ever westward over the Continental Divide, and then on to the shores of the beautiful Pacific. There it rested for 20 years, and then we picked it up, westward and northward, and carried it forward until we reached the Behring Sea on the north.

Eager-hearted boys in the District of Columbia, in Maine, in California, in Florida, wherever they are, boys and girls with questions in their hearts, with desire to free themselves and get away from the shelter, possibly, of a father's home—that is the quest of the human heart. What are they thinking about? About the frontier.

The old frontier has ceased to exist. They are thinking about Chicago, New York, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, and the great industrial towns of New England, and they are today pouring into those communities. This nation began 96 per cent rural. It is 54 per cent urban at this moment, and that percentage is increasing rapidly.

The social implications of individual action are wholly different in the two situations. A man getting drunk in his farm home, or drving along a country road with mules or oxen going six miles an hour, was not so serious. The mules or the oxen would take him home. But now in a sixty-mile-an-hour world, with crowded communities, the drunken hand on the wheel has a wholly different social implication. There you find one of the reasons why society has had to relieve the community from the danger and menace of alcoholic waste, poisoning, inefficiency and incompetency.

There is another reason. We are the greatest mechanical and engineering people in the world. Power under control—for that is all an automobile is—has more devices in this country than in any other nation in the world. Thirty years ago we made a rule that locomotive engineers in this country could not drink; they had to be teetotalers. Nobody wanted to limit the personal liberties of locomotive engineers, but everybody knew that locomotive engineers, whose business it was to protect life and property, could not do so if they were drinking engineers. And nobody in the country wanted to ride on trains that were run by engineers who were drinking men. And nobody from President Nicholas Murray Butler, who has so much to say about personal liberty and prohibition laws, down or up, if he were going from Chicago to New York on the Twentieth Century Limited, would want to have a drunken hand on the throttle. That condition which was necessary for a class 30 years ago, has now by reason of the diffusion of mechanical and engineering power throughout the mass of the people become necessary for the whole people, to protect the life and property of all of us.

There is a third reason. The diffusion of a better standard of living, of a larger means of recreation and of personal happiness in a material sense. The spread of general education has been greater in those 30 years than in any other previous period in the world's life.

The part that liquor played in the social life and habits of the people has been wholly changed, so far as the necessity for it is concerned, within the 30 years. These 30 years have seen the widest diffusion of general intelligence; the widest diffusion of general recreation, the coming of the movie, the radio, the Ford car, giving all kinds of opportunity for a better type of recreation. These things have changed the burden and necessity of artificial stimulation so far as the vast mass of the people is concerned.

And side by side with that education has gone on another education. We have learned the effect of alcoholic stimulation and poison upon the human body. We have learned that it is injurious in every way.

A group of Germans have been studying the effects of alcoholic stimulation on men and women, and in a unanimous report which they have made, they tell us that it has the effect to deflect the accuracy of the message sent by the brain along the nerves to the muscles, so that a fine marksman shot a little off after he had had a drink or two; and that a fine draftsman drew his lines a little irregular after he had had a drink or two. And a peculiar thing in that study by the Germans was this, that the lower the type, or more phlegmatic or stolid the subject, the less the effect, and the more sensitive and higher the nervous tension, the higher the type of mind, the greater the effect. So when a man says to you that he can take three or four drinks without affecting him, it may be true, but it is not very complimentary to him.

There is another reason. We men and women of America are not a temperate people. We might as well be honest with ourselves. It is a fact that we may think we are following the scriptural injunction, and we do things in a large way. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." We throw ourselves into anything we do or undertake until we overdo it.

All this talk about light wines and beers is pure unadulterated bunk, and the people who are doing the talking about it do not want it. They do not want light wines and beers. They want whiskey and they want it straight. They want cocktails and highballs and whiskey sours and mint julep. I come from Kentucky, and I know. And the reality is that the people of America, by reason of their characteristics and their social tendencies, can not be temperate with alcoholic stimulation. And the fact is that we want a kick, and we want it fast, and if we do not get it with one drink we take another to get the kick. This has been one of the reasons why it has been necessary in our present day to have prohibition.

There is another reason. The liquor traffic, itself, is more responsible at this hour for prohibition and its immediacy in the United States than any other one single force. I am not a fanatic.

I know some distillers, and there are some mighty fine men among them. But the more commercially-minded among them said, "We are not getting as much money as we could get out of this," and they began to buy up every available corner and establish saloons, and they began to pick up the ex-convicts, and put them behind the bar, and said, "Get the booze across; get the booze across, and we will pay you a commission in proportion to the amount you put over."

That was the organized saloon. And that kind of an organized saloon soon gathered around it organized gambling and organized prostitution, and it was not long until it became a stench in the nostrils of the people of the community, and a menace to the children, to the homes, to the church and the school. The aroused conscience of the country arose and outlawed it, and made the saloon an outlaw among the institutions of the land. And now there is not a single saloon under the flag, and in my judgment the saloon can never came back to the United States.

That is the force, economically, socially, educationally, which, more than agitation, than mere moral enthusiasm, is responsible for the coming of prohibition to the United States.

"Thy Speech Bewrayeth Thee"

A man may be recognized by his voice when all other tokens fail. Peter's voice told on him, and every man's voice has an individuality that will help to identify him. Last Sunday night a voice came by radio from Pittsburgh, Pa., that was at once recognized as that of Rev. George Stephens, evangelist. His voice became very familiar to Greensboro people in his weeks of preaching in his tabernacle meeting here last spring. He was preaching to a Pittsburgh congregation and concluded his service by a call for uplifted hands. You could hear the familiar tones as he said, "I see that hand, I see those three hands, I see that man's hand, I see the hands of those two women: God bless you!"

Years ago the editor was traveling in Ohio. He was accompanied by Rev. Dr. Graham who stopped to see a Quaker minister then confined to an invalid's bed. As soon as we heard his voice we recognized it as a voice we had heard before. By inquiry we learned that he had preached at Center Quaker church in North Carolina over twenty years before where we had heard him. His appearance did not recall to us the former meeting, but the voice did.

Instances might be multiplied. Your voice will identify you. Your speech will betray you.

THE APPARITION OF WASHINGTON

"Oh, that the apparition of Washington might appear at every feast and revel where the Eighteenth Amendment is set at naught, and with uplifted hand repeat these sentences from him parting message to America:

"'The Constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory on all. The very idea of the power and right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government.'"—From address of Senator Morris Sheppard at Annual Meeting of Citizens Committee of One Thousand at Washington.

THE WISH COME TRUE BIRTHDAY

Tommy could not believe his sleepy eyes when he saw what was on the chair beside his bed—deerskin leggings, mocassins, a war bonnet and even a bow and two arrows. "Whoops," he cried as he rolled out of bed.

Mother laughed. "Bill is here waiting, he is going to take you out to the ranch and you and Jack are to be Indians together for one whole day." The leggings had been pulled on in a second and Tommy slipped his feet into the mocassins and pulled a sweater over his shoulders which, when the sun was warm, would be bare, Indian fashion. Bow and arrows in hand he raced down to Bill and climbed into the flivver and was off for his Wish-Come-True birthday.

"What would you rather have for your birthday than anything else in the world?" Mother had asked a week or two before.

"I'd like to play real true Indian for a whole day."

"Can do," Mother had saluted. "Bill will take you out to the ranch and you and Jack can play Indian the whole day long."

Tommy knew the road to the ranch, it went up and down hills and over stones and after a while the woods came in sight but Bill turned off before he got to the corral and made for the woods and there close to the edge of the trees Tommy saw a tent. Jack ran around it and before Tommy could climb out or say a word Jack had rushed up to his father and was speaking in a rush.

"Dad, I know where that fox had her den, I think I do, and we've got to look for it right away. If there are any little foxes I want 'em. It's been two days since she was shot and if we don't find them now, they'll be dead."

Tommy straightened up, to hunt a fox den was the very thing to do when starting an Indian day. "Let's go!"

"It's far, Tommy, and rough going," said Bill, "better stay here. Chang's starting a fire behind the tent, going to cook a regular Indian dinner, squirrels, and corn and beans and pork all in one pot. Maybe he's got something for you to eat now, hungry?"

Tommy shook his head, his throat felt choked as he watched Bill and Jack stride off for the woods. He knew Jack wanted to find a fox den and get some young foxes and start raising them and selling them for breeding or for their furs. Jack had told him how a run could be wired and kennels built. But Tommy wished Jack had not had to go on that special hunt today. He looked at the iron pot and he tried not to let his lip tremble. "What you doing, Chang?" he asked bravely.

Chang looked at him and he drew a skillet quickly from the side of the coals. "Injun boy-hungly? Bake Injun cakes," he took some coarse corn cakes from the skillet, hot and crisp and good, and Tommy filled his hands with them and ran around the tent and sat down on a stump. Chang was going to skin the squirrels and watching squirrels being skinned was no fun. By and by Chang brought around an olla of water and sat it beside him. Tommy slid out of his sweater and rested the bow and arrow beside him. On his neck was the charm Jack had gravely presented. How blue the sky was, how warm the air, and Tommy was happy, so happy.

But after a while he got tired of sitting still. Indian boys were always doing things. Indian boys roamed the woods, and the woods looked cool and inviting. Tommy, bow and arrows in hand, started that way, Chang was not at the fire and Tommy strolled on. He might see a—a beast in the woods; he might see a wild turkey, but he heard only the patter of leaves and he saw only a hen. Tommy went on deeper and further and by and by he sat down upon a log. Tommy had gotten up at daybreak and now he nodded, and the bow and arrows fell from his limp hand.

As they struck the leaves a whimper broke out at Tommy's very heels and at that whimper something long and spotted sprang past Tommy and in at the far end of the hollow log. Something small and furry ran out between Tommy's feet. He caught it up and with his feet he pushed and pushed at a stone and rolled and pushed it to the hollow at that end, then he rushed around to the other end of the hollow log and kicked dirt and leaves and twigs before that. Then holding the little furry thing tight he ran and ran.

The tent was in sight when Tommy heard something behind him—the beast had scratched his way out of the log and was after them. Tommy dropped his burden and fitted an arrow to his bow—he and Jack had learned to shoot arrows long ago—twang went the bow and the beast whirled round and around biting at an arrow stuck in its haunch. Tommy picked up the furry little animal and again he ran and ran, ran till he fell beside the fire, panting.

Chang came around the tent as Tommy put the little furry thing upon its feet.

"Baby fox, hungly maybe," and Chang dipped a gourd into the bubling stew and brought out a piece of soft fat. Tommy was laughing so at watching the little thing eat that he did not hear Bill and Jack come up beside him. Bill's face was ashy because he had found that arrow in the woods and it had a bloody point and blood was beside it. Bill knew that arrow, he himself had made it.

"Tommy," he exploded, "what have you been doing, what is this?" But Jack only gazed and gazed. When he spoke it was slowly, "You—do not—want it?"

"Of course, I do. I'm going to make a run in the yard and build a kennel." Tommy kept the baby fox close when they sat around the fire Indian fashion and ate squirrel stew from that iron pot. He had Bill tie it when he and Jack shot their arrows at a mark and he slid it into his sweater pocket when he started to climb into the flivver, his Wish-Come-True birthday ended.

Jack stood beside the running-board and Jack's face was wistful. Tommy looked down at him and then Tommy slipped his hand into his sweater pocket and slid the soft furry thing into Jack's arms. The flivver was starting and the engine roaring, but Tommy caught what Jack cried out. "Good Injun," he shouted and Tommy's birthday wish had more than come true.—Selected.

MINDING

"How do you make him go where you want him? asked Henry, who had come from the neighbor's yard to see the new goat and cart.

"That's easy. If I pull the right rein, he turns to the right; if I want him to go to the left, I pull the other rein. That's all. He always minds," replied Jimsie.

"And can you teach a goat all that?" asked Uncle Wesley who came up from the other side.

"Sure," answered Jimsie.

"Queer that boys aren't as smart as goats," said his uncle.

"They're heaps smarter," answered Jimsie indignantly.

"So?" questioned his uncle. "Seems to me I heard somebody's mother say this morning that her small son never came when she called him, and she didn't know what she was going to do to teach him to mind. Guess she'd like to be able to pull a rein to have her boy go where the rein told him to!"

"Humph," said Jimsie slowly, "I guess I'll go and do that errand right now." And before Uncle Wesley could answer, the goat team had turned off down the street!—Exchange.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Forsythe

Last Friday evening we drove to the parsonage on Forsythe Circuit, at Maple Springs, took supper with Rev. Geo. L. Curry and his interesting and happy family, and then drove to Hickory Ridge for the second quarterly conference of the year.

The pastor had prepared blanks for the heads of all departments, so every report made was a written report. This is fine, and will give added interest to the workers and to the quarterly conference. The reports were good, and showed that the churches are in good working condition, and that the finances are considerably ahead of what they were this time last year. That is the way we make progress, by doing better this year than we did last year, and by doing better today than we did yesterday.

It is always pleasant to be with Brother Curry. He is a big-hearted, jolly fellow, and delights to do Kingdom service. He is preaching three times every Sunday, and has met all appointments for the year regardless of the roads and the weather.

A Sunday at Home

I came home from Brother Curry's sick with a deep cold and nervous sick headache. We applied all known remedies Saturday afternoon and night, hoping to be well enough to fill appointments Sunday, February 13th. But Sunday morning came and no relief had come, so I was compelled to give up the trip to First Church, Burlington, and Fountain Place. This forced me to spend February 13th, my birthday, at home while the rain peppered down all day long.

How old am I? Well, I am older than I am good. This morning I feel older than I am, while ordinarily I feel much younger than I am. My days are in His hands, and I grow more and more anxious to do His will. My life-work is more than half done. Pray for me that I may have His guidance in every act.

Will give a Sunday to Burlington soon.

Quarterly Reports

We waited late on purpose before sending out first quarterly report blanks, hoping that pastors would report promptly. At this writing 59 have reported, leaving 33 pastoral charges yet to be heard from. Others will report soon.

The reports show that progress is being made on most charges. Financial reports are some better than a year ago. These reports show that in some instances the charges have raised more money than the financial statement in the HERALD shows. The way to keep that statement looking as well as possible is to send money for budgets to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C., as soon as raised. We cannot report through the HERALD until the treasurer reports to us.

Under the heading, "Pastoral Visits Made," we glean these figures from reports: Visits made, 175, 238, 125, Have made all I could, 112, 10, 63, 49, 125, 77, 43, 100, 150, 155, 104, Have been into all the homes, some twice, and in case of sickness oftener, 286, 40, 55, 60, 125, 84, 93, 67, 75, 141, 46, 86, 35, 224, 154, 82, 194. Some pastors do not report any visits at all.

The following figures are gleaned from "Subscriptions to Church Paper:" 2, 50, 75, 3, 1, 19, 10, 9, 13, 7, 6, 28, 39, 18, 5, 12, 66, 20. Several charges do not report any church papers taken; several report from 1 to 28.

The four pastors reporting the largest number of church papers taken are those on Denton, 28; Asheboro, 39; Liberty and Siler City, 66, and Vance, 75.

These figures on pastoral work, and on subscriptions for church papers, coupled with financial statement in another column, are figures that speak for themselves. We purposely omit names. But when the end of the year comes all this tells in final reports to Conference. And somehow delegates get these facts and choose accordingly.

Sparkles From the Field

"God's Way"—See first page of HERALD for February 10. Thank you, Dr. McCulloch. You did well to re-publish that brief article and then answer it as you did. We believe that Moses and Paul are the two men, of all history, whom God most wonderfully used. Moses was the university man of the Old Testament, and Paul was the university man of the New Testament. Christian education is greatly needed in these times. It should always increase efficiency.

High Point College: "High Point College has received from the State Board of Education of North Carolina an A-grade rating. The student enrollment is now 227." Hurrah for High Point College! And hurrah for Methodist Protestants in North Carolina! Our minimum aim for the 1927-1928 college year is an enrollment of at least two boarding students from each pastoral charge.

First Church, High Point: "Many compliments are being showered on the junior church and the very splendid work it is doing. . . . Our denomination is the first in the city to introduce this innovation, which is a long felt need." Community Church, Thomasville, is also carrying out very successfully a similar program. God bless these pioneer workers.

Asheboro: "Yesterday we had 184 in Sunday school, and the house was fairly well filled for preaching."

Rockingham: "Our Sunday school has now increased to 166 pupils." Those who know the work in Rockingham know this to be wonderful.

Calvary: "We took our usual first Sunday offering for the Children's Home of $20." A splendid monthly goal for Calvary Church, and all Sunday school will do well to set a monthly goal for the Home.

Liberty: " We have a good live Workers' Council, which meets the first Tuesday night in each month." A Workers' Council is a necessity for a well organized church.

A fine letter which accompanied one pastor's report! guess which pastor wrote it: "I am preaching on Stewardship this months, and will do my best to get Church Extension assessment. Our Christian Endeavorers are making some progress getting subscriptions to the HERALD. The Ladies' Aid is doing good work. The W. H. M. S. is doing fairly well. Foreign Missionary Society not yet organized. The Junior C. E. is being reorganized, and Intermediates are quickening in interest. Our Sunday school is increasing in attendance. The Home Department is just now being reconstructed. The Cradle Roll is being looked after much more closely. Our Sunday school co-operates with the Township Sunday School Association. Also our C. E. Society with the East —— C. E. Union. I think I have never had quite such an opportunity for work among and development of young people. I would that I were equal to it!"

Easter Programs

There has just come to my office a sample copy of the Easter program. In the package is all the suggestions and plans necessary for a fine Easter Day service. I take it that samples have reached all pastors. Order your supplies early from Rev. J. M. Sheridan, D. D., 516 North Charles street, Baltimore, Md., and give your workers good time to prepare for the service.

Pastor For Moriah

After having Rev. H. C. Carmichael, of Lexington, visit the charge for three Sundays, the people of Moriah Charge decided to ask for his services as pastor. So Brother Carmichael has now been officially appointed there as pastor.

Appointments

February 20th, 11 a. m., Siler City.
February 20th, 7:30 p. m., Grace, Greensboro.
February 27th, 11 a. m., Pleasant Grove.
February 27th, 7:30 p. m., English Street.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. Dixon.

"NOT THIRTY, BUT THIRTY-ONE"

Something is bothering the minister. Not that he had said so. It was the closing of the front door of the manse that said it to the keen ear of the minister's wife, busy with a young mother's duties. For she had come to know the minister's mood on Wednesday evenings by the way the front door of the manse was closed. And tonight it has come to with a bang. Something is bothering the minister. Nothing more is heard but a quick step passing into the study. The young minister has just come in from the weekly prayer-meeting and is giving himself up to his thoughts.

Now it is just this weekly prayer-meeting that is taking the life out of the minister. He had chained himself to his desk that day preparing his best, for his people. How many were at the meeting? Thirty, all told, ranged in the back seats with rows of insulating seats in front. Depressed at the small attendance, he had hard work pulling himself through the address from which the tide of feeling so exhilarating in the writing had sadly ebbed. He had no heart to greet, at the door, as was his wont, his little flock as it filed out in its formal way. That the minister is downright discouraged there is no doubt.

Not but that in many ways, as he had been told, things were going quite well in the congregation. What a sight that was last Sabbath evening, the ranks of young men in the gallery and the church full below! But "the prayer-meeting is the thermometer of the spiritual life of the congregation and the test of the minister's power." So he had taken down the notes from the old professor. And for this he had often argued strongly, in spirited discussion in college days, which tonight seemed so far away. And now in the active ministry he judged his influence on the congregation by the prayer-meeting.

Might not the experience of the evening be an indication of a weakening hold on the people? It was this thought that cut into the quick of his self-esteem. He had thought better of himself than this. For did not his friends tell him this little church was but the stepping-stone to a brilliant future of which he himself had often dreamed? Not before, but tonight there is the mood of resentment. He would show his spirit and teach these simple folk that if they could not appreciate a good thing they would lose it. He would say nothing, for he could not trust himself, but would simply announce that there would be no prayer-meeting.

In the kitchen the minister's wife is having her thoughts, as she is bringing to a close the day's work that never seems to be done. The minister is a good man, young and inexperienced, but sound at heart. None knows this so well as this wise little woman who had placed her hand in his one June day, just a year ago, and went forth into that high adventure of love and service as mistress of the manse. But she knows his ardent nature and fears the chilling effect of the temperament of his people. Good they are and appreciative, but slow to speak their thoughts. Quietly entering the study, she seats herself with her work at the minister's side.

"Were there many at the meeting tonight?" she asked.

"Thirty. Isn't that enough to take the heart out of a man?" was the doleful reply.

"But have you counted right, John?"

"Count them yourself." And as the minister goes over the names of the little group, the faces of this one and that appear, hard-working men and women whom it cost much to be there.

"Thirty! No, thirty-one," she said, "You have left one out."

And then, opening the last number of a magazine that lay on the study table, she read the words of the Bishop of Edinburgh spoken at a recent conference: "Now with the first disciples....the Presence was always most sensibly felt. With them if thirty were gathered together there was always thirty-one, and the One counted more than all the others put together."

During the silence that followed, the shooting up of a flame in the fireplace lit for a moment the little picture on the wall—the Christ in Gethsemane. The eyes of the Master in rebuke seemed to say to him—"you did not count me in." And in that hallowed moment the minister saw his work, and in particular the weekly gatherings of His people, in a light never more to fade away. And looking into the face of her who was his good angel he said with a sober smile: "It was a good meeting, Jean—not thirty but thirty-one."—E. E. Annand, in The Presbyterian Witness.

GOD UNDERSTANDS

It is so sweet,
When we are tired and when the hand of pain
Lies on our hearts, and when we look in vain
For human comfort, that Heart Divine
Still understands these cares, both yours and mine.

Not only understands, but day by day,
Lives with us while we tread the earthly way;
Bears with us all our weariness, and feels
The shadow of the faintest cloud that steals
Across our sunshine; ever learns again
The depth and bitterness of human pain.

There is no sorrow that He will not share,
No cross, no burden for our hearts to bear
Without His help, no care of ours too small
To cast on Jesus: let us tell Him all—
Lay at His feet the story of our woes,
And in His sympathy find sweet repose.

Denominational Enterprises

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Just as I start to write this article, a cable has come to our Board from Rev. Soderbom, Kalgan, China, saying, "Situation gives great cause for concern. What does the Board recommend in present emergency as a measure of precaution?" We cabled in reply suggesting that he use his best judgment in the matter, and to advise as far as he could with the United States Minister in Pekin.

Hitherto our work and missionaries have seemed to be comparatively safe in China, and all parties to the struggle have readily accepted the services of our workers in caring for their sick and wounded. This cablegram, however, causes anxiety, and emphasises for us our inability to do much at this distance, and our renewed obligation to pray much for those who are sent by us to the front line trenches.

Nagoya College Church

In answer to my appeal for funds to help complete this church, I received a most encouraging note from one of our good women in Ohio, who desired her name and the amount of her contribution withheld. It is cheering to those of us who are charged with the responsibility of directing any department of our denominational work to receive expressions of co-operation from different sections of the church. Knowing the situation in Nagoya from personal observation, I know of no finer opportunity anywhere to invest a little money for the Kingdom, where the dividends will be greater.

Read This Carefully

One of the interesting and encouraging by-products of foreign missions is the growing change in the customs and thought of great areas of the world. This was brought forcibly to my mind a few days ago when there came to my desk the following editorial from the Japan Times and Mail, published to Tokyo, December 25, 1926. This paper is the most influential paper published in English in the Japanese Empire, hence the importance and encouragement of this editorial.

Christmas in Japan

Each Christmas shows that the Japanese people are more and more turning Christian. They may not fully understand the Christian doctrines; they may not quite have the Christian spirit like the peoples of Christian countries, but this much is certain, that we have come more and more to take the point of view of Christians. Our conceptions regarding our various customs and institutions, especially our views of public prostitution and the habit of drinking, have been greatly influenced by the views of Christians, thanks to the untiring efforts of Christian missionaries in this country.

Ten years ago our people scarcely celebrated Christmas. But today there are many shops on the Ginza dealing in Christmas toys and decorations. Our children await Christmas Day with the same eagerness with which the children of Europe and America await Santa Claus. In fact, Christmas has become one of the national holidays of the country, although it is not recognized as such by the government.

Christianity can be regarded as a sort of middle ground been Shintoism and Buddhism, in that it is free from both the fatuous optimism of our ancient religion and the soul-horrifying pessimism of our imported Hindu religion. We have reasons to believe that, had our ancestors not imported Buddhism from Continental Asia, our primitive Shinto religion would have taken a line of development which would have led to a religion sober and hopeful like Christianity. The seed of our own civilization was of the same with that of western civilization. This largely explains why our people are turning Christian every year, even though the number of churchgoers may not have increased appreciably. This influence of Christianity in this country should not be measured by the number of churchgoers, but by the degree in which our thinking has been altered by Christian faith and morals.

THE DENOMINATIONAL OUTLOOK

Alabama—At least three of the members of our church in Alabama are members of the State Legislature. They are Hon. A. C. Rogers, Hon. G. C. Adcock, Hon. George T. Bryan.

Eastern—At the Christmas service at the Lake Como, N. J., church, the pastor, Rev. S. F. Sliker, was presented with a gift of $35 in gold.——The Madison Park Church in Patterson is to be relocated and enlarged. The pastor's salary has been increased by $200.——An electric interchangeable bulletin board has been placed in front of the church at Roseland.——The cornerstone of the new Trinity Church, Aalantic City, was laid on January 8. The completed building will cost $75,000.

Florida—In the last nine months four new churches have been built, and large additions made to the membership.

Georgia—The Corresponding Secretary of the Conference is giving a history of some of the churches through the columns of the Methodist Protestant. Her account of the organization of the Anvil Block church is especially interesting. The result of the conversion of a desperately wicked man who afterwards became a preacher in our church.——Plans for building a Centenary Church in Atlanta are going forward.

Illinois—The supper and bazaar held by the young woman' class of the Castleton church netted $114.

Indiana—Considerable improvement has been made in the Milledgeville church. The building has been raised and a basement built underneath; stained glass windows, and an indirect electric lighting system installed.——The Home Department of the Victory Memorial Sunday school, Indianapolis, has given $125 to the church building fund.——Fifteen new members have been added to the New Haven church.——The Elwood church has voted to proceed with the re-flooring of the church.

Iowa-Missouri—As a result of revival services in the Bussey church, eighty-two members have been received.——Twenty-two additions have been made to the membership of the Kahoka church.——$300 has been raised to install electric lights in the church at Hixon Grove.——Twelve members have been added to the Rhodes church.

Kansas—Rev. G. J. Welker, pastor of the Haddam church, was recently presented with a Ford sedan by the citizens of the town.

Maryland—As part of the Christmas service the membership brought forward $315 to cancel the debt on the Parksley parsonage.——The Christmas offering at the Delmar church amounted to $116.22.——The G. A. R. Post and Women's Auxiliary worshipped with Grace Church, Baltimore, and presented the church with a beautiful flag-staff and stand.——Mrs. Katherine Bomberger, 89 years of age, and for years a member of the Baptist church, was recently received into membership in Starr Church, Baltimore.——The "White Gifts Service" held by the Eutaw Church, Baltimore, totaled $224.——The annual oyster supper held by the Ladies' Guild of Calvary Church, Baltimore, netted $350.——Thirty-six members were added to the roll of the Stewartson church as the results of a recent revival.——The Peninsula Church, Wilmington, Delaware, has added 60 new members in the last two months.——The church at Greenwood has been improved at a cost of $650.——$6,000 has been expended in improvements to the Lynchburg, Virginia, church. Fifty-three members have been added to the church. The pastor, Rev. Joe Lynch, received a Hamilton watch as a Christmas gift from the membership.——Rev. C. E. Dryden, pastor of the Glenburnie church, is making a tour of the Holy Land.——Sixteen members have been added to the Violetville church.——The basketball team of the West Baltimore Sunday school won the championship in the Baltimore Sunday School League.

Ohio—A number of gifts have been made to the improvement and furnishing of the President's Parsonage at Jonesboro; the total runs into the hundreds of dollars.——Friends of the President, Rev. F. L. Brown, gave him a purse of $340 as a Christmas gift.——The largest Christmas offering in the history of the Newcomerstown church, $107.27.——The Watch-Night service of the Cambridge church was featured by an offering to the building fund of the new church, which amounted to $4,450.——The Ladies' Aid of the Coshocton church cleared $150 at a recent supper.——Dr. W. P. Wells, a member of our Zanesville church, has been appointed director of public safety of that city.

Pittsburgh—Eleven new members, and an offering of $250 at the Christmas service are items from First Church.—Rev. A. J. Allen, pastor of Grace Church, Sharpsburgh, was the recipient of a purse of gold from the Men's Bible Class of that church.

Washington—Rev. W. P. Roberts, pastor of First Church, is pastor-councilor of the Seattle C. E. Union.——Forty-one additions were made to the Ravenna membership last year, and the pastor reports 1,349 pastoral visits made.

West Virginia—Improvements at a cost of $20,000 have been made in the church at Buckhannon.——A basement has been placed under the Harrisville church, and concrete works are to be added.——The Christmas offering at Bridgeport amounted to $110.

EASTER SERVICE

The Easter Service for April 17, prepared by the Board of Home Missions, is now ready for distribution. Sample copies have been sent to all the pastors and Sunday school superintendents, as far as we have their names and addresses. A few pastors have probably been changed since the last session of their annual conferences. In most cases we have not been informed of these changes. If the new pastors, who have been appointed, will notify me I will gladly forward them sample copies of the service, or they can send their orders at once.

The list of Sunday school superintendents is not by any means complete. Rev. Lawrence Little, the Secretary of the Board of Young People's Work, has very kindly prepared this list. He informs me that he has not been able to get a reply from a number of the annual conferences, although he has made an earnest effort to do so. We will greatly appreciate any assistance the pastors and superintendents will render us by sending their names and addresses. If you have not received a sample copy you may know that it is because we haven't your name or correct address.

I wish to call special attention to the Pageant, the title of which is "There is Hope of a Tree," prepared by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, the daughter of Dr. H. L. Elderdice, of Westminster, Maryland. This has been examined and approved by several of the prominent ministers of our denomination and will meet the needs particularly of our larges churches. The churches that may not be able to use the Pageant will find in the regular program sufficient material in recitations, music and other exercises for a very delightful and profitable service.

According to the Conference Minutes, last year 45 charges of the North Carolina Conference received offerings for the Easter Service, while 44 did not give anything. I am appealing to this Conference for a more general observance of the service during the coming Easter. It will be a fine opportunity for a simultaneous effort in all the churches of the Conference in reaching the young people of the Sunday schools and C. E. Societies and having them to make their confession of faith in Christ and unite with the church. I call the attention of the pastors and superintendents to the Decision Cards which we are supplying to all the churches.

A year ago we sent out 804 orders. I am hoping that this year the number will not be less than 1,000. Please send in your order card and it will receive prompt attention. If you have not received a sample of the service, write me at once.

J. M. Sheridan, Secretary.

SECULARIZING THE CHURCH

For the last twenty years or more there has been a growing tendency to forget the fact that the Church is a spiritual body, a witness of Jesus Christ and His agency in connection with the winning of souls to faith and salvation and building them up in righteousness. There has been an increasing and determined effort to secularize the Church and to advance it along secular lines. The chief purpose in this connection seems to be to secure members and funds. This aims at the advance and strengthening of the organization, but it loses all view of the divine purpose, and this will eventually destroy the organization or convert it into an antagonist to the real purpose of the church.

Some of these secular methods have descended into very low vulgarity. Some time ago at a Chicago Religious Publicity Conference, several such instances were mentioned. One speaker told of a church service which was advertised by cheap handbills scattered around the streets and on porches, and carrying in glaring type the phrase, "Be a Sport—Come to Church." Another speaker told of newspaper announcements of sermon topics as follows: "How to Wash Without Soap" and "The Unpardonable Sin—Stealing Another Man's Wife." It was also reported that one pastor sent a steam calliope down the main street of his city, bearing the placard: "Gum Given Away Free at Blank Church Next Sunday Night."

This is not short of blasphemy. Proper notice of services accomplishes a good deal, but this crude stuff is an offense to God and man.

Let us remember the words of our Lord, "My Father's home shall be called a house of prayer for all nations;" "Holiness becometh thy house, O Lord;" "The Lord is in His holy temple, let all the earth keep silence before Him." Surely the expressions quoted above show us that we have reached the crisis in this folly, and it is time that the churches were washing themselves clean of all this, together with the smokers, dances, and similar practices. Good will dwell with the humble church as well as with the humble soul, if it be clean.—Selected.

STEWARDS

The idea is spreading among men of wealth that they owe it to the world to give some of their time, experience and talents to help advance the world. This growing thought—that a man's wealth and talents do not belong to him for his personal enjoyment, that he is simply a steward to administer them for the general good—is bound to work wonderful betterments as the idea becomes more general.

We would like to see these ideas matched by workmen recognizing their responsibilities to the public as well as their rights to themselves, and thus have everyone working for the happiness and welfare of mankind.—Selected.

We are glad to find so many working to have all the Church Extension money collected this month. Fine spirit of co-operation—team-helps as we encourage one another, and altogether get more done than we could do alone. Earnestly hoping that all will put forth the very best efforts to raise all the Church Extension money this month, I am,

Yours in His blessed service,
A. G. DIXON.

Woman's Missionary Department

Miss Esther Ross, Editor

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE MEETING

A cordial invitation that each member bring a friend to the joint executive meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies resulted in a well attended and enthusiastic meeting at Grace Church, Greensboro, Tuesday, February 2nd, with the Grace Church auxiliaries as hostesses. Practically every member answered to roll call, and the splendid reports from the various secretaries was indicative of the noble work in missions being done by the women of the North Carolina Conference.

The morning session was taken up with the business of the Home Society, and Mrs. H. W. Maier conducted the devotionals. Mrs. Maier used as her theme, "The Value of the Secret Place," and based her thoughts and beautiful illustrations on the 91st Psalm.

Following an excellent lunch served by the Grace auxiliary, the business for the Foreign Society was opened. The report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. P. Harrell, was full of encouragement and hopefulness. During the past quarter two old societies, Hollister, and Welch Memorial, High Point, have been reorganized, and a new society organized at Mount Pleasant, North Davidson Circuit. Also during the quarter 68 new members have been welcomed into our ranks, and one perpetual and one memorial enrolled with the Asheville auxiliary. More of the corresponding secretaries responded to Mrs. Harrell's request for reports this quarter than ever before, but there are still a number who did not send them in. Will these secretaries please send them to Mrs. Harrell at once? Those failing to report are as follows: Bethesda, North Davidson; Center, Alamance; Concord, Saxapahaw; Friendship, Mt. Hermon; Maple Springs, W. Forsyth; Pleasant Union, Mt. Pleasant; Rehoboth, Granville; Shoals, Pinnacle; Sapling Ridge; Shiloh, N. Davidson; Salem, Saxapahaw; Tabernacle; Thomasville, First Church.

A bit of discouraging news was the fact that the treasurer reported a number of auxiliaries in arrears, some reporting their inability to raise their budgets this year. Since the budget for the Branch is only about half raised, the treasurer was requested to urge the auxiliaries to make a special effort to raise their apportionments before the Branch meeting in April. The treasurer reported $163, on the scholarships for the children of Rev. E. I. Obee, $50 of which was donated by the First Church, High Point.

Miss Mary Young, secretary of young people's work, has been doing excellent work in her department with the young girls at High Point College. Training young people for leaders seems to be one of our greatest needs, and there is great opportunity where the young people are grouped together as they are at our colleges.

Mrs. R. M. Andrews, representing the committe on education, recommended the missionary magazine, "Everyland," for workers with children. Mrs. E. Lester Ballard reported 24 new subscriptions to the Missionary Record for this quarter, and a decrease of the same number. The societies reporting decreases are urgently requested to secure renewals from those who have discontinued this valuable aid to the missionary work. Miss Pearl McCulloch asked for help in selecting suitable pageants to meet the needs and conditions in North Carolina, and Mrs. D. S. Coletrane and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard were appointed a committee to aid in censoring the literature.

The time for the Annual Branch meeting, as suggested by the Henderson auxiliary, who will entertain the Branch meeting this year, was set for April 19, 20, and 21, 1927, and Mrs. George R. Brown, Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. S. R. Harris were chosen a committee to make plans for this meeting at Henderson.

A number of our ministers looked in on the meeting during the day, among them being Drs. A. G. Dixon and S. K. Spahr, Revs. L. W. Gerringer, George R. Brown, N. M. Harrison, C. W. Bates, R. A. Hunter, E. L. Ballard, F. W. Paschall and H. W. Maier.

We were also delighted to have with us for a few hours our own Mrs. J. M. Stone, who, on account of illness, has been missing from our ranks for some time.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Emma B. Siler.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD,
Reporter.

—Otto Wood who has thrice escaped from our state penitentiary has been captured in Indiana where he was attempting to rob a drug store. He met his match this time and was shot a few inches below the heart. He is recovering rapidly and will be brought back to North Carolina if extradition papers are honored. It seems that he has a criminal record reaching over into Tennessee and Ohio in both of which states he has escaped while serving prison sentences.

—Announcement was made last Saturday night from Pittsburgh broad-casting station (radio) that on February 26 beginning at ten o'clock a missionary to the Esquimaux will speak to them in their own language from Pittsburgh. There are radio receiving sets in the Arctic regions, and people there as well as here will be permitted to hear this sermon in the Esquimaux language.

—We are glad to see Brother W. W. Hunter on the streets again. He was injured by a truck some weeks ago and had a prolonged stay in bed in consequence. Fortunately for him, perhaps, it was one of the city's trucks that hit him and the justice of his claim for damages will not be denied, especially as he is so moderate in his claim.

—Rev. H. L. Powell is in Washington, looking in on the United States Senate. He sends us a card saying, "Call on me for anything I may do." We thank him for his generous offer.

—Rev. J. D. Williams expects to begin a protracted service at West End the first Sunday in March. He will be preacher for the series of meetings.

He that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.—Jesus.

MARRIED

Butler-Fields

On January 29th, 1927, at the home of the writer, Miss Lola Belle Butler became the happy bride of Mr. Clarence R. Fields. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Butler of Liberty, N. C., and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Fields of Bethel M. P. Church, near Climax, N. C. Their many friends wish for them that happiness shall be theirs through the journey of a long life.

Wreaking wide damage with scarcely a pause,
Is one you can stop whenever you choose—
Just patch up defects in your chimneys and flues!

—Dr. Allman, formerly of Asheville, now of Farmville, was a recent visitor in Greensboro. He joined our church in Asheville during the pastorate of Rev. L. W. Gerringer. He was originally from West Virginia.

—The ladies of Calvary Church announce a tempting supper at the Hut next Tuesday night—chicken pie and oyster stew.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Saxapahaw, Concord Church.—Brother Isley preached an inspiring sermon to a large audience first Sunday. It was his first for our church since he has embarked on his matrimonial voyage and we wish for them blue skies and smooth seas. Sunday evening Mr. Furr of High Point College addressed the Christian Endeavor Society. He spoke on Service. We have the material for a live Christian Endeavor Society. Let us pray that it may be of untold good by giving unselfish service.

The Woman's Missionary Society will hold its thank-offering service February 20, 2 p.m. Let everybody come and be truly thankful in a financial way.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under our superintendent, Mr. C. O. Furgeson. But he is helpless, unless we give him our loyal support by attending, knowing our lesson, and in every way we can help to make it better.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cates are quite feeble.

Mrs. T. H. Moore improves very slowly.

Mr. T. C. Guthrie is able to be out some now.

This morning a few members gathered at the cemetery and planted flowers, and running roses to hide the unsightly fence, and set the church grounds in flowering shrubs and evergreens, under the direction of Mr. L. E. Guthrie. One would think we had hired a land scape artist to do the job. But there is more to be done. We made the mistake of not taking time to let it be known. We had not thought about it until Sunday and as it was time to plant, we rushed and the weather is fine on the plants. We don't see the mist and weather; to us "it is raining daffodils."

REPORTER.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—Sunday school continues very good; attendance very good for winter months. The school gave a tree, and a treat Christmas to the delight of all the children.

Our pastor has filled all his appointments since last report except one, and Brother Middleton, of Gidson's Grove, made a nice talk in pastor's absence.

Stewards report annual conference budget paid in full, part paid on college assessment, some on pastor's salary.

Mr. Jasper Sharron continues feeble.

Mrs. Betty Tucker, who had a stroke of paralysis several months ago, continues about the same.

Aunt Betty Sharron and Aunt Haily Ann Tucker are feeble.

Uncle John Landreth did not take his trip, reported in my last report. The northern climate was too cold for one of his advanced years.

Am glad to see the Postal Card in the last Herald, always glad to read reports from former pastors. The Editor of the Postal Card was my pastor when I was a little girl.

Two of our young people got married Christmas: Mr. Adell Sharron and Miss Ruby Williams. Ruby was the only child of Mrs. Mattie Williams, and Adell was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Sharron, and both members of Palestine; they have a host of friends that wish them happiness.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Albemarle.—The Ladies' Aid Society held a very interesting meeting Tuesday, February 8th, at the home of Mrs. J. A. Furr. A letter of regrets from Mrs. Marshall Hatley, who was to have opened this meeting, was read to the society, explaining that sickness prevented her attending the meeting, but that her heart would be with us, her thoughts of us, and her prayers for us. We missed Mrs. Hatley so much, for this is the second meeting she has been unable to attend in about four years. We doubt if there are many who hold her record.

The President, Mrs. Moton, opened the meeting by reading the seventh chapter of Matthew, followed by prayer. The minutes were read and roll called, with two new members to add to our list. We also added two new ones last month, making a total of 31 now on roll. We had 25 present at this meeting, besides two juvenile members, the largest attendance on record. This was especially notable because of the bad weather on that day. But when women are so full of enthusiasm as our members are, the weather doesn't keep them at home. The committee reports were all good. The visiting committee showed that they had been on the job, turning in 110 visits. The ways and means committee suggested putting on a play sometime in the near future, which met the approval of the society, and Mrs. C. B. Efird, Mrs. J. A. Furr, and Mrs. J. R. Anderson were appointed to select a suitable play. We having been working for quite a while toward having plumbing fixtures installed in the church, and it was decided to have the plumbers start on it next week. We are very fortunate in having several plumbers in our church who have very kindly offered their services to install the fixtures. We deeply appreciate this co-operation on the part of our men folks. Mrs. C. S. Hatley and Mrs. Fred Trexler were appointed to supervise the work.

Traveling Basket donations amounted to $6.05. Besides several beautiful pieces of fancy work, there was a beautiful Angel Food Cake and a basket of nice home-made candies. And if any of you readers want to know just what a "Traveling Basket" is, just write us. It is a mighty fine way of keeping money flowing into the treasury.

It was decided that, in the future, 10 percent of all funds collected be set aside for Missions, since the Missionary Society has been discontinued. We still have some Missionary money in the Treasury, which will be sent to Pine Ridge School, to pay for a window in the new building. This completing the business for this meeting, we were dismissed by Mrs. D. F. Harkey.

During the social hour delicious refreshments consisting of pineapple sandwiches, cut in heart shapes carrying out the valentine idea, peach ice cream, and wafers were served.

MRS. JOHN U. WHITLOCK.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Pastor Garner filled his regular appointment last Sunday, February 6, at 11 o'clock. He preached a splendid sermon, after which the Lord's supper was administered.

One new member was received by letter from Burlington church, Mrs. R. K. Torbert Mrs. Torbert was formerly Miss Hester Stuart who moved her membership from there to Burlington when living there but now comes back to her home church.

The Home and Foreign Missionary met with Mrs. J. A. Auman February 11. We are expecting to raise our missionary budgets.

REPORTER.

Fountain Place.—Have not seen a report from Fountain Place for several weeks, so I will attempt to wedge one in.

We have not been asleep or idle, but have been going right on with our work. Brother Loy came to us the first Sunday after conference, and has gotten hold of the hearts of all our people. There is one objection—he lives too far away. We hope, however, that he will be able to live among us after commencement. We have been having some splendid services, and some exceptionally good sermons. One member remarked a few days ago that he had not had a chance to sleep in church a single time since Brother Loy has been here.

Our attendance has been very good, and seems to be improving. Scarcely a Sunday service passes that we do not have several visitors. To them, we say, we welcome you; and to all, we say "The latch string hangs on the outside." Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hornaday and Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Glenn have been worshipping with us for several weeks. We welcome them, and hope that they will cast their lot with us.

Our Sunday school is gradually climbing up. The report that the superintendent made to the first quarterly conference was very gratifying, both numerically and financially. He reported the school free of debt, with a nice little balance in the bank. We have adopted the slogan "pay as we go" in our school, and find that it works fine, and keeps us out of debt. Our school and men's class have contributed very generously to the Children's Home during the first quarter.

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary societies are moving along very nicely. They made a splendid report to the quarterly conference.

At the first quarterly conference, we adopted a standard report blank for all our organizations. This blank is adaptable to branch or organization of the church, and is filed with the conference secretary's minutes. It saves a lot of his time, and gives us a complete history of the workings of our church.

We are planning a campaign to help us to raise funds toward the liquidation of our church debt, and we hope that you will pray for our success.

We are trying to place the Herald in every home in our church. Every Methodist Protestant should read the Herald. Is a subscription list of 5000 too high for Herald? I don't think so. Let's put our shoulder to the wheel, and push the Herald to the top—it is worthy. I congratulate you, Brother McCulloch, on the new Herald.

H. W. WADE.

Lincolnton.—We are still doing things here in Lincolnton, even if you don't hear from us very often. The work here is moving along nicely. We have a splendid Sunday school. The down-pour of rain didn't keep the people away last Sunday, had a wonderful report. The crowd wasn't so large but it was a good one. Good things don't always come in large quantities, as we all know.

The pastor delivered a very interesting message at the eleven o'clock service; his subject was, "Christian Perfection." Many touching remarks were made.

The board of stewards are very active at this time and we believe if they continue through the year as they are now, the church will be in splendid shape at the end of the year, financially.

Just a word here to the church who find it a difficulty in getting the stewards to attend the regular meeting, try this plan: Each steward entertain the board at his home in turn. The refreshments will help induce them to come, then you can get them to work. We have had wonderful results from this plan.

Our junior society is fine; much interest is being shown among them, and they attend the services regardless of the weather. Just a few Sundays past we had forty-seven. Indeed, a splendid bunch of boys and girls.

Our pastor's wife has been in very bad health recently but we are glad to say she is improving rapidly. REPORTER.

Concord.—The revival is growing in interest at each service. This has been so at each succeeding service since the meeting began last Sunday a week ago. Yesterday was a banner day with three services, all of which were well attended and the real revival fires were manifest in at least two of the services yesterday. In the morning there were four conversions with twelve accessions to the church and at the evening service there were thirteen professions of faith. There has been a total of twenty-nine professions of faith since the meeting began.

The service will continue nightly at 7:30 with cottage prayer meetings of twenty minutes duration which are held at 7 o'clock.

The music is one of the chief features of the services. The large chorus choir under the able leadership of N. J. Miles is rendering fine service. Besides the chorus direction. Mr. Miles is a soloist of no mean ability. The people are being delighted nightly with his fine presentation of the gospel in song. If you are a lover of music you will not be disappointed in your expectation. R. P. Benson is rendering fine service at the organ in his usual whole-hearted fashion.

Tonight has been styled loyalty night and a special invitation is hereby extended to the Christian people of the town and community to attend this service. Tuesday night is M. E. Church night and the brethren of this fine communion will have recognition in this service.

Come and bring an unsaved friend and receive a blessing. REPORTER.

Albemarle.—Sunday a week ago three united with our church. This makes 16 since conference.

The first Sunday was communion day with us. It was very gratifying to see such a large per cent of our membership present and almost all taking part in this sacred service.

I have noticed a tendecy in many churches to refuse to come to the Lord's table, and those who come were older people, but both old and young are present at these services at our church. It was a beautiful sight Sunday morning to see age and youth together around the Lord's table, as the children of the church responded to a special invitation from the pastor.

The Sunday school is slowly but surely growing; 147 present Sunday and they had to come in the rain.

Brother R. L. Leonard, our faithful and efficient superintendent, is the right man in the right place. He is doing a fine work in the Sunday school.

Our mid-week prayer meeting is not as well attended as it should be, but interest is increasing, and the meetings are very spiritual. J. R. ANDERSON, Reporter.

Orange Charge, Hebron.—Our Sunday school has not been what we would like since Christmas on account of the bad weather and roads. And right much sickness in the community. But we hope as spring opens up we will again have full attendance.

Our preaching service yesterday afternoon was rained out. But we will have services the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. B. M. Williams, our beloved pastor's wife, has been sick, but glad to say she is improving.

The W. H. M. S. will meet at the home of the writer next Saturday afternoon. The January meeting was postponed on account of the inclement weather.

We have recently lost one of our members, Mrs. C. D. Foushee died at her home near Hebron February 1, and was buried the following day in Hebron cemetery. Funeral services conducted by her pastor in the presence of a large congregation.

Mrs. Foushee was a good woman loved by all. Had been a member of Hebron church since girlhood. And was loyal to her church, always attending services when her health would permit. She leaves to mourn their loss a husband and four children, the youngest six weeks old.

Fare-well until the morning
Of that eternal day
When we shall meet where Jesus
Wipes every tear away.
Farewell until the morning,
Thy labor here is done,
And thou shalt rest forever,
With Heaven's bright crown won.

We sorrow o'er the parting
Of one we hold so dear,
But trusting in the Saviour,
Our grieving hearts find cheer.
When life on earth is over,
A happy time awaits
When we shall dwell together
Beyond the pearly gates.

MRS. F. A. GILL.

Bethel, Flat Rock Circuit.—I think it has been some time since we had a piece from Bethel, but we are by no means dead. We had a nice Christmas program, thanks to Mrs. A. A. Jones and others. Also our pastor, his wife, and daughter were a great help in presenting the pageant. It is rather late to tell the readers about our Christmas entertainment, but better late than never. We were very glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Trogdon back with us for another year. I think every one here at Bethel enjoys hearing Mr. Trogdon preach. Our Sunday school has been running all winter with a good attendance most of the time, although the writer has not been to any of the services very much lately owing to colds etc. in the family.

Prayer meeting every Sunday night by some of the faithful ones, and I sincerely hope they will continue and that much good will be accomplished. We have the church equipped with a new light plant and hope it will prove successful as it will be much more pleasure to have night services with a good light.

Pray for us that we may all do more for the Master this year than ever before.

With best wishes to the Herald and all its readers. REPORTER

High Point.—The Ladies' Aid Society held an interesting and enthusiastic meeting Monday afternoon at the church with an attendance of 32 members. Various plans are being worked to help fill our Treasury. A sale of house dresses is being conducted Tuesday and Wednesday at Mrs. S. S. Coe's. She has very generously opened her home for this purpose. Diminutive aprons are being sent out to "everybody and his wife" with the request to return with so many pennies per waist measure in the pocket. Then individual donations are being made, the latest being a check for $20 from Mrs. J. A. Gray. After the close of the business session, delightful refreshments were served.

Last Tuesday evening a delightful lecture was given by our associate pastor, Rev. Lester Ballard, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, from which a neat sum was realized. Messrs. Ballard and Bethea of Lexington joined the Christian Herald party in January, 1926, on a cruise through the Mediterranean Sea, to Egypt, and the Holy Land, to Turkey and Italy, this being about the same trip which Mrs. L. J. Diffee is enjoying at the present time. Mr. Ballard has one hundred twenty-five beautiful colored stereopticon pictures of the various places visited, and he wore an interesting costume of an Arabian sheik. During the lecture his fine voice was heard in "A Son of the Desert Am I" and "The Holy City." These pictures are quite vivid and life-like, and the evening was one of great pleasure and wholesome entertainment.

Last Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service a number of Boy Scouts attended and sat in a body in observance of "Boy Scout Week." This is a body of fine, upstanding youth, full of promise for the future.

Next Sunday will be observed as "Baraca Day," and the center section of pews in the main auditorium will be reserved for the men and boys of the church and Sabbath school at both morning and evening services. Special music will be rendered by the Baracas, and Prof. Lindley will give a special message to the men at the morning service while the program for the evening will be miscellaneous in character.

Monday evening the Christian Endeavor Society entertained their young friends with a most delightful Valentine social. A large crowd of young people was present, and the games and pantomimes were thoroughly enjoyed. Befitting the day, hearts were much in evidence; a large heart adorned the wall of the C. E. room, the chairs were placed in the form of a heart, the invitations were heart-shaped, as well as the refreshments, sandwiches, strawberry ice, and candies. Special music was given, and the evening was one of delightful wholesome fun and merriment just what our young people need. Neither time nor pains was spared by the committee in charge, to whom a vote of thanks is due by all those present.

Sunday, February 27th, will be observed as "Foreign Missions Day" by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and the Annual Thank-offering will be taken at the evening service. We are hoping for an unusually large one this year.

Many congratulations are hereby extended to Post-master and Mrs. O. R. York upon the arrival of a new daughter in their home. The mother and baby are now doing nicely at the Guilford General Hospital. May this tiny girl grow up to be a blessing and comfort in this home.

Concord.—Our revival meeting began the first Sunday in February. Our pastor, Brother Hendry, is doing the preaching. Mr. N. J. Miles, of Enfield, is directing the singing. Large crowds have greeted the pastor at all services, even though the weather has been very bad. The singing, which is one of the biggest phases of the service, is inspiring. Special music is rendered each evening.

We are having a revival in every sense of its meaning. The hearts of all have been stirred as they have not been for some time. Many sinners are finding Christ each evening. So far 14 have confessed Christ, and 19 reconsecrations. Saturday night was a great time for all. The service was turned into a praise and testimony meeting; about 30 or more stood up and testified for Christ.

Sunday morning a very effective message was brought by the pastor; at the close 13 presented themselves for membership. The majority uniting from other churches. Sunday evening a wonderful and helpful sermon was preached. The subject was "'Confessing Christ."

This week special services are being held for the other denominations of the community. Tuesday is M. E. Church night, Thursday is Baptist night, and Friday is Presbyterian night. We are hoping that these services will be well attended by these churches.

BERNICE NASH, Reporter.

Anderson Charge.—The fact that we have been quiet so far as reports in the Herald are concerned is no reason we have been quiet here in our work as pastor and people. Our work is making some progress, but we are not doing anything that might be called big, however we are endeavoring to accomplish something during this month about which we will have more to say later. Watch the Herald for a report from Anderson occasionally because we are going to have something to say now and then. All appointments have been filled with the exception of three and the pastor gave the fifth Sunday to Fairview to fill the appointments missed while visiting at home during the Christmas holidays. The other appointment was rained out at Liberty Hill before Christmas.

Our Sunday schools are not as large in attendance as they could be. The interest is good and we have not missed a single Sunday since conference to the knowledge of the writer. Our C. E. Societies are considering a course in C. E. Methods in the early spring. I feel sure this will create better and more efficient work.

Anderson charge is represented this year in the State Legislature. Brother H. A. Foster and Brother Luther White of the Fairview church are in Columbia helping to make plans and looking after the interest of their State. They are not too busy to show their interest in their church. They return to their homes and church each week-end and go back to Columbia on Monday. Brother White is clerk of the special committees and Brother Foster holds a position on several committees and other important connections. Miss Montez Henderson, a member of Fairview and one of our faithful and efficient Sunday school teachers, is found regularly at her post. She is teaching at Norris, S. C., but returns in order to meet her class every week-end.

We are sorry to report some sickness among our people. Brother W. M. Laboon has been confined to his home for some time with trouble that he feels may prove fatal. Mrs Matthew Ellison has been to the hospital fo. an operation and Mrs. Tom Pearson is now in the Chick Springs Hospital where she recently underwent a serious operation. We ask an interest in your prayers for the recovery of these of our number if it is the Master's will. Mrs. J. K. Poole has been sick for the past few days but is improving.

Cupid still keeps busy in our community. Brother Rosevelt McClimon and Mss Nell Dillard were married recently. Brother McClimon is the son of Brother B. A. McClimon, superintendent of our Sunday school at Liberty Hill. The young couple will make their home in Greer, S. C. We wish for them a happy journey through life.

Brother Lee Leonard of Greenville will preach at Liberty Hill the fourth Sunday. Brother Leonard is a former member of our church and a neighbor boy and friend of our Liberty Hill folk. The choir that was organized sometime ago is doing good work, however a sentence in the report may be a bit misleading to some. Instead of raising the choir, plans are being discussed to build a Choir loft in our church.

Watch Anderson about March the first.

M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD, Pastor.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday night. He preached a splendid sermon as he always does. He stressed the importance of living a Christian life, for the life we live here on earth willl determine where we will spend eternity. On the fourth Sunday in this month he is going to preach on this subject, "What is the matter with the World." Hope we will have a large congregation, for I am sure he will bring us a message worth while.

We are going to reorganize our classes in Sunday school next Sunday. We want to have a name and motto for each class, also elect a president and secretary for each class. We want to make our Sunday school more interesting and helpful.

There is right much sickness in our community; some of our oldest members are sick with flu. We wish for them a speedy recovery.

Our Missionary societies will meet with Mrs. Williams tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Siler City—The members of Siler City M. P. church were glad to have their pastor, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, preach for them Sunday evening. A good number of the members and visitors were present. We gladly listened to the report given by our pastor of his work and surroundings in Maryland.

The Endeavorers enjoyed a talk by Mr. Gibbs at the Christian Endeavor Society Sunday evening. He said it was good to be away from home and meet so many friendly people.

Miss Minnie Cooper gave the C. E. Society a most delightful Valentine party Monday evening at the home of Miss Sallie Smith. The home was beautifully decorated with red and white hearts. A number of games were played throughout the evening. A heart contest was given. The winners of the contest, Miss Pearle Moore and Mr. Evans Stone, were awarded dainty baskets of hearts. Delicious refreshments were served consisting of egg and chicken salad sandwiches on lettuce with hot coffee.

REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge—We were rained out Sunday and Sunday night, so we are hoping to get another appointment. The prayer service at Mr. Ivey Leonard's Saturday night was real good.

Mrs. Bynum Wright has been sick, but is better.

Mr. Leonard Wilson is getting along very well now.

We have been wonderfully blessed in this community recently, having had very little sickness.

Mr. Ed Kindley was a pleasant caller at Mr. Lanier's last Saturday.

Miss Sadie Kindley has returned to Lexington where she holds a position.

These people have been real helpers to us at Cid. While they haven't been with us much since Christmas owing to bad roads and weather, they are coming when weather and roads get better, so by the help of the Lord and His faithful workers we are looking forward to a good year.

MRS. N. W. LANIER, Reporter.

Welch Memorial—On the first Sunday in February we had five services at our church. The first was at 6 o'clock, conducted by the C. E. Society. We have an early service the first Sunday in each month. On each Wednesday afternoon we have cottage prayer meetings. On Wednesday evening at 7:30 prayer meeting at the church led by different members of the church. Last Wednesday evening at 7:30 the meeting was led by Miss Catherine Gill. The leader for the next meeting will be Mrs. R. C. Loman. The C. E. Society conducts a cottage prayer meeting one night in each week. The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly on the night of February 8th at the home of Mrs. W. R. Brackett on White Oak Street.

One visitor present. The usual business was attended to in a very interesting way, everybody present seemed to have the spirit to go forward.

We had a good attendance at Sunday school yesterday for a rainy day, 126 were present.

On Sunday morning our pastor, Brother Pierce, delivered a splendid sermon on Stewardship.

Beginning in the month of January our pastor consented to let C. E. Societies have charge of one Sunday night in each month; in January with the help of the Juniors we successfully put across a program. Last night was our night again. We not being very familiar with the subject, one of our college boys worked his head a little, secured Prof. J. D. Hardy from the High Point College to speak for us on the subject of expressing the Missionary spirit; he read the last five verses of the 28 chapter of St. Matthew for the Scripture lesson. The subject was handled well. We can't find words to express our appreciation to Prof. Hardy for the great message and good thoughts be brought to us.

We are very sorry to say we have lost one of our faithful members, Mrs. W. M. Wilborn. She will be greatly missed in our church and community.

Our Home and Foreign Missionary Society will meet next Tuesday evening at 7:30. Our plans are to keep moving along and do more work for our Master.

MRS. D. G. HIATT, Reporter.

Glen Raven.—Our Sunday school is doing nicely, but was off some yesterday due to such a rainy day. Our Thursday eve prayer service is moving along with fine spiritual interest. Our young people are taking a great interest in these services, every other Thursday eve; one of them leads. Miss Leffie Talbert is leader for this week.

The Ladies' Aid are on their job; they had an oyster supper Saturday night and made good, and are busy making candy most all the time. So you see we are going to keep sweet.

There is right much sickness in the community. Trust all will soon be well again. Miss Alice Lashly is in the hospital. Mr. Howard Glenn has been, but is at home now. Both are getting on nicely. We are trusting that this will be the best year in the history of our church. REPORTER.

Elbaville, Mocksville Charge.—We have been silent for sometime but not idle, We have put a new carpet in the church since conference, and we are now busy getting out timber for Sunday school rooms.

Our Sunday school is growing and we are hoping when the roads get better to have larger attendance.

The death angel visited our community Saturday morning, February 12, and called from our midst Mrs. Christian C. Myers. She was one of our faithful members. We will miss her smile, and presence at church.

Two new members have been added to the church.

Best wishes to the Editor and the Herald readers. REPORTER.

Denton Church.—Our Sunday school was in charge of the Philathea class No. 3 yesterday. The devotional reading was by their teacher, Mr. J. V. Lanier.

Many thanks to the Philatheas for their service.

The weather was so bad the Sunday school was off some to what has been. Large attendance class, no. 7, present 20. Large offering class was the Baraca class, no. 2, offering, 85 cents.

Attendance a year ago was 60; attendance yesterday, 68; offering a year ago, $1.40; offering yesterday, $2.20.

Next Sunday is our preaching day. Wish all members on roll would be there, and any others that are there will be welcome. Always glad to see visitors come out to our service.

REPORTER.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. W. T. Totten, filled his regular appointment Sunday morning at 11 o'clock with an interesting sermon.

Our attendance at church was not as good as it should or could have been, I'm afraid, although the weather was very unfavorable.

There has been a lot of sickness in our community, also some families have moved away, but we are looking forward to spring for a springing up of new interest in both Sunday school and church worship.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. MAE MATTHEWS, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—Our first quarterly conference has been held and the usual business transacted very harmoniously. It was decided to pay the A. C. B. budget by the month.

Superintendent Teague is very well pleased with the increased number in Sunday school, but is not satisfied because perfection, both in the work done and attendance, has not yet been reached. There are others yet to be reached and brought in. There is marked improvement in the interest and work of our teaching force. This counts for much. Our workers' conference was held last week in the home of our superintendent with almost 100 percent attendance. Uncle Sam Ceen, one of our oldest members, is still very active in the Sunday school work. He is teacher of the adult Bible class for women, and has built up a very large class having only a few to start with. The adult men's Bible class, under the efficient leadership of Brother J. B. Morris, has accomplished much. The increased attendance in this class is very encouraging and speaks well for Brother Morris as a teacher. There are many good things that could be said about the other teachers, but we will not take the space to do it now.

A church brotherhood was recently organized with Brother I. W. Burton as president. Our next meeting will be in the home of Brother W. H. Burton. Much interest is being taken in this, and we feel that great good will result from this organization.

We are expecting Dr. and Mrs. Dixon to be with us fourth Sunday at 11 a.m. This will be Dr. Dixon's official visit to this charge and we look forward to his coming with great pleasure.

Mrs. Will H. Newby has been on the sick list for a few days, and perhaps some others, yet our people have been greatly blessed this winter with very good health. Brother Noah Charles, since his return from the Sanitorium near Asheville last year, is getting along very well. We hope and pray that he may completely regain his health. Last year he took the church vows in his home, and the following Sunday was received into the church, being granted full membership.

We would not forget to say that, since last report, we have received a nice lot of sausage and other meats from Mrs. Ralph Kennedy, also potatoes from Mrs. Charlie Kennedy, and apples from Brother Alvan Kennedy. We thank most heartily these good people for these kind remembrances.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

Jerusalem.—Last Sunday was the time for the regular appointment at Jerusalem but owing to the constant down-pour of rain all during the morning the roads became very muddy and slippery and there was no service. The pastor started to the church but stopped before reaching the church and learned that the road from the highway to the church would probably be impassable.

Next Sunday at 11 o'clock will be our regular appointment and we are expecting to observe the Lord's Supper at that time. We are hoping for a large attendance, provided the roads are better and the weather more favorable than last Sunday.

Brother R. E. Hunt, one of the stewards of Jerusalem church, is a member of the staff of deputy sheriffs in Davidson county, having been appointed by Sheriff Fred C. Sink and qualified as deputy sheriff for Emmons township. His duties call him into other sections than the township in which he resides, and he has already assisted in making a number of raids on bootleggars in the county.

Thomas Hedrick, son of Brother and Sister H. L. Hedrick, who are among the faithful members of Jerusalem church, met with the misfortune of accidentally cutting his foot on Thursday of last week. The accident occurred while he and his father were engaged in cutting logs. The injury is not very serious but has caused young Hedrick to not be able to use the foot for several days.

It was the privilege of this writer to hear a plain but forceful gospel sermon at South Lexington church on Thursday night of last week which was delivered by Rev. D. A. Braswell, of Concord, a beloved former pastor of the church. His subject was, "God, the Supreme Need of the World." Brother Braswell preaches with remarkable force and his pulpit utterances are driven to the hearts of the people in an earnestness that is not equalled by many of the younger preachers. He is perhaps the oldest active pastor in our conferene, having reached the age of 73 years, and has given nearly half a century of service in the ministry of the Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina. His sermon was well received and appreciated by the fairly good size congregation attending the service which was the regular weekly prayer meeting appointment. He was introduced by a former pastor of South Lexington church who used the designation applied to him: "An ambassador of Christ and a man of God."

C. B. WAY, Pastor of Jerusalem.

EXTRA CONFERENCE JOURNALS

The Secretary has about fifty more Conference Journals than the charges called for. If any of the brethren did not get enough to supply the demand, I shall be glad to send an extra supply. Or if any individual failed to get a copy, it may be had by writing me and sending twenty-eight cents in stamps.

NOTES AND SUNDRIES

—"Not only will the well equipped farm shop make the work of repairing and conditioning farm implements much lighter on the owner but the influence over the growing boy must not be overlooked," says David S. Weaver, agricultural engineer at State College. "Many of our present day inventions owe their beginning to the handling of tools in the farm shop. Many of our engineers and the heads of our gigantic industrial corporations had their first training and received their first practical knowledge of tools in the farm shop."

—Every progressive farm should be equipped with a good farm work-shop. Machinery can be repaired during spare hours, many implements can be built at home at little cost and much time can be saved by the owner's ability to make small adjustments on the home place. There are other advantages which the owner will find after he has equipped his shop, states Prof. Weaver, and certainly the boy will be given his chance to develop any ability that he may have with tools.

—Although the earthquake situation in Armenia has become less dangerous for the orphans in the care of Near East Relief, and American personnel, the distress caused by the earthquake promises to reach its height later in the winter when the food supplies (30 percent to 50 percent of which were destroyed) of the peasants in that district, become finally exhausted. Near East Relief, in spite of its orphanage obligations, has been able to provide a total of $63,850 in cash, blankets and clothing. This amount includes approximately $18,850 in cash and blankets raised by the Paris Office from European sources.

—In 1923, of the children brought into the Near East Relief orphanages, 79 percent were infected with trachoma, that dread disease which is the cause of so much blindness in that section of the world. During the past three years, through careful treatment, the percentage has been reduced to 12.

—Two hundred and forty fruit growers attended the fruit growers conference recently held at Mt. Airy in Surry County.

—Year by year the wave of fire losses in America grows higher and more threatening. There is one way in which it can be checked and only one: by throwing up a dyke of aroused popular interest in the situation. Not until every man, woman and child wills it—and works for it—will the wave of waste (already $559,428,858 high) begin to recede.

—A cable has just been received from London stating that Dr. W. C. Poole, pastor of Christ Church, and President of the World's Sunday School Association, will be present and deliver an address at the International Christian Endeavor Convention in Cleveland, July 2-7, 1927.

—Nearly 47 million depositors have savings accounts in the banks of the United States. Their savings deposite amount to a total of nearly 25 billion dollars—an average of about $200 for every man, woman and child in the country.

"No Preliminaries in a Church Service"

"There are no preliminaries in a church service." We caught this statement from a passing radio message sent out by a Pittsburgh minister. This is a novel view to many church-goers who regard the sermon as the essential thing and the earlier parts as mere preliminaries. But is not the Pittsburgh minister in the right? Are not scripture reading and prayer and worshipful songs just as essential as the sermon? The scripture reading and the prayers and the songs do honor to God. They are the especially God-regarding parts of the service. Hearing the sermon is a man-regarding part. If we regard the minister more highly than we regard God, we will care more for the sermon than for any other part of the service. But if we have a true and worthy regard for God, we will wish to take part in the worship, hearing attentively the word of God, joining heartily in prayer to God, and delighting to sing His praises. Taking this view of the matter, we will wish to be in our places ready to join in the worship at the very beginning of a church service.

The Philosophy of Confucius and That of Jesus

Confucius had well defined notions as to social regeneration. Witness this extract from his writings:

"The illustrious ancients, when they wished to make clear and to propagate the highest virtues in the world, put their states in proper order. Before putting their states in proper order, they regulated their families. Before regulating their families, they cultivated their own selves. Before cultivating their own selves, they perfected their own souls. Before perfecting their souls, they tried to be sincere in their thoughts. Before trying to be sincere in their thoughts, they extended to the utmost their knowledge. Such investigation of knowledge lay in the investigation of things, and in seeing them as they really were. When things were thus investigated, knowledge became complete. When knowledge was complete, their thoughts became sincere. When their thoughts were sincere, their souls became perfect. When their souls were perfect, their own selves became cultivated. When their selves were cultivated their families became regulated. When their families were regulated, their states came to be put into proper order. When their states were in proper order, then the whole world became peaceable and happy."

This philosophy of Confucius reminds us of that of the man who proposed to lift himself up by his bootstraps. Both recognize the fact that man may be uplifted and the further fact that man must have a part in his own uplift. So far, good. And both err in supposing that man is sufficient for his own uplift.

Not so with the philosophy of Jesus. Jesus saw that man is insufficient for his own uplift. Man must be re-created, he must be born again, he must receive power from above. Confucius' plan has no dynamo in it. Jesus' plan has infinite power to connect up with. Jesus recognized the need of knowledge and the necessity of human effort, but he saw that this must be supplemented by direct action of God. Jesus' plan succeeds where Confucius' plan failed. Confucius was a great man, but he was laboring at a problem too difficult for a mere man. Jesus knew what was in man and what was not in him but must be brought into him.

An Only Sister in a Triune Family

The death of Mrs. R. R. Ross removes the only sister of three families that became one family. Her father and mother were both married and lost their mates before they married each other. Each had two sons by the first marriage. From the last marriage five sons and one daughter were born. She was thus the only sister to five brothers and four half-brothers. Being the only sister, she was peculiarly precious. The half-brothers as well as the brothers esteemed her highly. When she passed out of the home to found a home of her own, brotherly affection followed her. All were glad of the privilege of visiting her from time to time. She did not cease to be a good sister when she became a good wife and a good mother. She retained a lively interest in us all and was glad to visit us as she had opportunity. The separation of distance brought no feeling of estrangement. Now that she has gone, we realize that we have suffered a great loss. We have no sister now. We can keenly sympathize with her companion in life's journey and with those who realize that they have no mother now. And yet even death is not able to take her from us. The impress of her spirit and life upon ours has left an indelible effect. We feel like thanking God for such a sister, such a wife, such a mother. We can say with appreciation, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

—The Sunday Citizen of February 13, published in Asheville, N. C., has a picture of our Asheville church and of its pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates, together with a sketch of the struggles of Brother Bates to prepare himself for the ministry and of the heroic efforts of Mrs. Bates to help carry on in the work of the ministry. "This man and this woman built this church," is written over the picture. Through the story of struggle and effort the reader sees how strong and high the purpose must have been to enable the young man to persevere and finally win. He entered college with only five dollars ahead and no prospect of more save as he earned it or received it from friends who might come to his aid. But he had faith in God and struggled on and achieved a victory over his untoward circumstances. His example is an inspiration to other aspiring youths, and other pastors' wives can learn from the example of Mrs. Bates how to be real helpmates in promoting the work to which their husbands are called.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN, TEACHING EVOLUTION?

Luther K. Long

Through the opinion handed down by the supreme court of Tennessee the famous case at Dayton in that state has passed into history.

The law as enacted by the state legislature was not very clearly conceived and stated. The points at issue in the Scope's case were not definitely agreed upon by the prosecution and the defense and the trial judge. The verdict was set aside by the supreme court on the technical ground that the fine was assessed by the judge when it should have been imposed by the jury.

The constitutionality of the law was upheld by a three to one vote of the supreme court, and, by inducing the Attorney-General to drop the case against Mr. Scopes, recourse to the United States Supreme Court was barred—the court holding that "nothing is to be gained by prolonging the life of this bizarre case."

Disappointments

Some people were hopeful at the beginning of this conflict that when the trial at Dayton should be concluded we should know whether or not the theory of evolution is true. There was summoned quite an imposing array of witnesses whose standing for scholarship was very high. But these witnesses were not allowed to testify, and the attorneys did not to any great extent discuss the merits of the case. Even though double the number of experts had been called upon to testify, and even though twice the number of able attorneys had made lengthy pleas, the truth or falsity of the theory of evolution would not have been determined.

This question can never be settled in a court of justice nor by partisan debaters. It is a question for scholars in the laboratory. Careful research, gathering and comparing of facts, clear insight, unprejudiced thinking—these are some of the things necessary in order to arrive at the truth.

Some other people were hopeful that the trial at Dayton was the beginning of a case that would eventually reach the United States Supreme Court. From this court of last resort would be had a decision covering the question of the right of state legislatures to determine the character of the teaching in state supported schools. Such a decision would in all probability include something, also, as to the form of statement fitting for laws regulating the school cirriculum, in case such laws were deemed constitutional.

Where Are We?

I suppose that the majority of evolutionists are at least as strong in the faith as ever. And it is likely that the majority of anti-evolutionists are more determined than ever in their opposition. This was to be expected. Those who had come to think favorably of the theory have neither seen nor heard anything that would greatly tend to change their views. Those who were already bitter against the theory would not be likely to give up their opinions because of any incidents seen at or reported from Dayton.

Without doubt there has been a great deal more buying and reading of books on the subject of evolution since the starting of the Scope's case than in the same length of time previously, and a good proportion of that buying and reading has been in the southern states. The quiet, thoughtful study of books by intelligent writers always yields a larger measure of reliable information than does listening to ranting declaimers or reading sensational reports in the newspapers.

So it would seem that, on the whole, the truth is not bound. People are free to read, to think, to discuss; and the country is much more intelligent on the subject of evolution than it was two years ago.

What Next?

It is possible that some schools in Tennessee will omit biology from the course of study. Some teachers who accept evolution may go over the material in the prescribed text-book without committing themselves to any position on the subject of evolution. It is also possible that another case, either in Tennessee or in some other state with a similar law, may find its way into the local courts and be carried up to the United States Supreme Court. If there is to be legislation in the several states on evolution—which, on the whole, does not seem a suitable subject to be handled by a state legislature—the laws should be so drawn as to be clear and definite and in accord with the guarantees of the federal constitution. Should a case come before it I think we may trust the wisdom of the Supreme Court of the United States to safe-guard freedom of thought and investigation, and to provide adequately for liberty in teaching.

Let Us Study

Because of their bearing on the Bible and Man there are two things every intelligent person would do well to study:

1. The first eleven chapters of the book of Genesis should be given much thought. The moral and spiritual teachings of these chapters are of supreme importance. It is not at all likely that they will ever be supplanted. The only danger is that extreme literalists will succeed—for themselves and for their misguided followers—in covering up and obscuring the moral and spiritual teachings of these chapters with a blanket of unwarranted claims as to the historical and scientific accuracy of statements never intended to be either historical or scientific.

When a person sets about interpreting the Bible a fine spiritual sense is an absolute necessity. Next to this in importance is a well-balanced literary sense. One who fails to perceive in the Bible its various literary forms—history, drama, story, legend, parable, poetry—is poorly equipped to get from the good Book the truth and inspiration which God has so abundantly placed there. These early chapters of the book of Genesis are especially rich in literary forms—forms that were dear to the people in the childhood of the race, forms that are still dear to those who have not lost the child-like spirit.

2. Every living thing that we know—and, presumably, every living thing on this earth—began life as a one-celled organism. We can easily believe such a statement as it applies to creatures so small that they cannot be seen except with the aid of a compound microscope, and which can sport in large numbers in a single drop of water. But it is equally true of every living thing. The giant oak began life as a fertilized one-celled organism hidden in the heart of an acorn. The mastodan, and every other mammoth animal, began life as a one-celled organism. In whatever manner the first may have begun life, we know that every man now living began his life as a fertilized one-celled organism hidden away in the body of his mother.

Now, in view of these facts, it is not at all surprising to me that many scholars have raised the question, "May not the first creature, as well as all others that have lived since, have begun life as a one-celled organism?" Surely this is neither an irreverent nor an ungodly inquiry. It is a question that the human mind will naturally be inclined to investigate.

It is not to be wondered at that some students pursuing these investigations have concluded that God is not necessary, that nature unaided attends to all these matters of reproduction and growth. But the vast majority of scholars find God a necessity and appreciate the value of the Bible. These men, re-reading the Bible, find that fundamentally its truths are not out of harmony with the truth discovered by other means and in other spheres. They find that, re-reading the early chapters of the book of Genesis with its various literary forms in mind, the moral and spiritual truths of those chapters stand out in brighter beauty, while the form of presentation, due to the age in which they were written and the state of knowledge of the writers, do not in the least stand in the way of the modern scientific interpretation of the facts of nature and life.

I am quite sure that the quiet, dispassionate consideration of the early chapters of Genesis, together with familiarizing one's self with the facts and implications connected with the beginning of each present-day living creature as a one-celled organism, will not only broaden one's mind but will also yield a mental and spiritual poise and peace that will prove eminently satisfactory.

THE DAWN OF WORLD PEACE

The poet has said, "Give me that peace of mind; 'Tis dearer than all." The word 'mind' is superfluous, because the mind alone is involved in conflict. Peace and conflict are not only things in the mind, but problems of the mind. All wars, all conflicts, and quarrels are invariably the product of erroneous thinking and development of wrong within the mind. So external combat is only an expression of the internal content of the soul. Tell me the nature of a man's personal behavior and I will tell you the content of his mind; and not only that, but also the forces and influences that have been brought to bear upon him.

The question has been asked, "When shall we have world peace?" It is natural enough that we say, "Just as soon as the world so desires." However, such is not the truth. Man has hungered and vainly sought peace since the dawn of creation, yet, at the same time he has struggled, fought, and died, and is continuing to do so.

We are being told, today, that we are living in an age when wars shall cease to be, but to my mind the clock of time has just struck five a.m., and at least a century will be required before the dawn of that exalted mental attitude and the glorious sunrise of everlasting peace. The League of Nations and the World Court are only expressions of the inward desire for rest. However, it is going to require more than desire to bring it. We can demobilize our vast armies, we can scrap our mighty navies, but until ignorance is obliterated and our false philosophy is "scrapped" we shall still have wars "and rumors of war." Isaiah said, "Let us go up to the mountain of the Lord,—and he will teach us his ways.". Then he says of those who will have been taught, "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they know war any more."

Today nations and peoples are living under primitive conditions, overclouded with ignorance and superstition, dominated by the animal instinct of self-preservation: while those of higher mentality and civilization are so warped and prejudiced by tradition that it will require many years of educational endeavor before they will have developed an international philosophy of life. So the solution of our problem of war is this;—The training of the minds to harmonize on problems of common interest, or at least create an attitude that will enable us to make necessary concessions. The training must be the inoculation of the heart with the ways of God, which are absolutely ethical.

So we have said, World Broadmindedness is the only open door to world-wide unity and international goodwill. To be broad-minded, as regards the world, means much. It includes an interest in the world-wide well-being of humanity, and power and willingness to interpret and adjust ourselves to the laws of the universe, which always carries us upward. This will place every man, in every land, in the same line of progression.

As yet, we are far short of knowing our general bearing, and being able to control where we really understand. Man was destined to have dominion over the fish of the sea, fowl of the air, cattle of the field, and the beast of the forest. This man has well done; in that he has been able to interpret them. With this intelligence and the use o f the mineral resources he has been enabled to bring them into complete submission. But, alas, he has not known nor been able to conquer himself, but obeys the dictation of a corrupt mind. As a result of the above fact, he is led into many affairs and places that prove very detrimental to his happiness and well-being. The powers, resources, and forces that should have placed him higher in the realm of god-likeness have proven only as a snare; though used in an effort to elevate.

The world needs to practice the philosophy of the Saviour, where he said, "He that loses his life shall save it." Nations have been selfishly seeking their own salvation and as a result have lost vitality.

This world broadmindedness can be developed only through a knowledge of, and the adoption oof the principles laid down in the New Testament. Lord Bryce says, "Nothing but Christianity can eventually secure the world's peace." It should be agreed that this is true, however, they should not be taught as Christianity, but without religious intent or else be carried over into other religions.

Now let us look at a few of the outgrowths of this broad vision. In the first place;—when we take a world view of life it will be evident that war is always a losing game. The victors are losers and the defeated suffer a real disaster. Further, the property, energy, and life destroyed in conflict is an absolute loss to the world; it can never be restored.

In the second place, we will eliminate one of the greatest causes of war by minimizing industrialism and magnifying life. We, as nations, shall live for the sake of life itself, and not for industrial possessions. We, as nations, shall cease to monopolize the world's resources, and realize that a nation's greatness consisteth not in the abundance which she possesses; but in terms of contributions made to humanity. Barnett R. Brickner says, "We have the challenge of poverty, and the greater challenge of obliterating it with social justice rather than charity."

Jesus said, "Follow me, the life that I live shall ye live also." Life to Jesus was goodwill, service, and sacrifice. Character was measured in terms of these qualities and not in terms of wealth, He further said, "I am come that ye might have life." What was his contribution? Not ideas primarily of industrial worth, but principles, foundation principles of real life and peace.

This world broadmindedness, in the third place, will bring us to a realization of the brotherhood of man, irrespective of nationality, race or religion. When this liberal view is taken of the world it will be clearly seen that the United States is not the only nation, the Caucasian the only race, and Christianity the only religion. The more elevated of mankind will realize that their achievements are largely the result of favorable circumstances over which they had no control, and vice versa for people living under less favorable conditions. We shall then be able to sympathize with one another, and this will bring us together in bonds of unbreakable affections.

Just so long as we are taught that our nation is God's elect; our religion, alone, heaven born;—just so long will we hold other nations in contempt and fight and die to sustain our views.

"Friendship and goodwill are just as valuable to nations and governments as they are to individual men and women," says Professor Dobbs. This can only be had through freedom of thought and endeavor. When this attitude is established we will be forced to respect the views and rights of all peoples regardless of the circumstances under which they labor. Brickner again says, "Let us think of brothers (nations) as children reared in a common home, sharing a common tradition and responsibility, living in peace while differing from one another in appearance, mentality, profession and outlook."

TOBACCO AND FALSE ECONOMY

South Dakota has a law which provides for the use of money received from taxes on cigarettes in erecting educational institutions. The first use made of the fund will be the erection of a $200,000 library building at the South Dakota Agricultural College.

This serves to emphasize the strange views of some people. The one thing that does much to hinder the mental development of the youth of the land is tolerated and licensed, while the revenue from its sale is expended in aid of that development.

South Dakota is right in line, in principle, with Tabasco, one of the states of Mexico, which has a law imposing a tax on all who smoke in public. The revenues thus collected are not used in an educational way, but in fighting the locust plague in that section.

Thoughtful persons would probably say that Mexicans have the most sensible law of the two, as it might have a tendency to guarantee more pure air in public places, and at the same time is used for the extermination of another nuisance.

California spent $11,000,000 more for tobacco in 1925 than for maintaining the State's entire public school system, according to Dr. John K. Norton, Director of Research of the National Education Association at Washington, D. C. The amount expended for tobacco was $86,000,000, and for schools, $75,000,000.

But don't point the finger of scorn at California, for that state is just a "sample" of like conditions in nearly every state in the Union. Tobacco revenues, no matter how used, can never be rightly considered economical, for they are derived from tearing down manhood and womanhood, and never as a result of building up.

A PRAYER

O Thou whose very word is power,
Great Master of the mighty sea,
Grip Thou my will within Thine own,
And rule Thou me.

As Thou didst calm the winds and waves
That wrestled wild on Galilee,
Rebuke the passions that would slay,
And calm Thou me.

The arm of man availeth not
To snatch me from the fateful sea;
Stretch forth Thy strong and willing hand,
And save Thou me.

—Thomas Curtis Clark, in "The Christian Century."

A SETBACK FOR EVOLUTION

(From the July, 1926, number of "The Last Hour;" Philip Mauro, Editor.)

Prof. Th. Graebner, in the Walther League Messenger, calls attention to a recent geological "find," a fossilized shoe, which it is quite impossible to reconcile with modern evolutionary and geological teachings. As he says:

"It has been a bad half-year for Evolution. Scientific examination has proved genuine the sole of a child's shoe impressed on Triassic rock."

Triassic rock, according to the fabulous figures of modern geology, goes back from thirty-six million years to three hundred and sixty million years. Hence this recent discovery completely upsets the accepted conclusions of geological science; for it proves either that man was in existence at that unthinkably remote period of time, and at a stage of development enabling him to produce an excellent specimen of the shoe-maker's art, or else that "Triassic rock" is not so old, by a good many millions of years, as geology has confidently declared it to be. In truth the solitary fact of this fossilized shoe (for it is an undeniable fact) throws the whole scheme of modern geology into ruins.

"The specimen was discovered by Mr. Albert Knapp on the eastern slope of the West Humboldt Mountains, Pershing Co., Nevada. The exact spot of its discovery was the north slope of the side hill projecting into the canyon about two miles south of Fisher Canyon. Impressed upon this piece of Triassic rock, and slightly impressed into it, is the sole of a child's shoe, No. 13. The fossil shoe has been almost completely silicified, and is even denser, harder, and more compact than the rock itself."

The fossil was brought to New York by Mr. John T. Reid, of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, who was "the first to recognize the importance of this astonishing specimen."

"But," says Prof. Graebner, "he did not realize that he was about to upset the conventional interpretation, not only of the age of the world, but of evolution. A human fossil imposed on Triassic rock means either that man came into existence millions of years before the lowest order of monkeys, or that the system whereby the age of the earth's strata is estimated is, and has been, preposterously absurd. The sole of the shoe is so obviously 'the sole of a shoe,' with its beveled welt and hand-stitched seams, that no observer can doubt its origin or nature. It is the product of a human hand, and was worn upon a human foot."

Already the accumulated facts of biology and anthropology had laid a solid foundation for the conclusion that if ape and man stand in any relation to one another in an order of development, the man is the more primitive creature, and the ape is his offspring, not his ancestor, which not only demonstrates the absurdity of evolution, but stands that idol upon its head, so to speak.

It has also been shown (by Prof. Price's New Geology) that all the phenomena of the fossiliferous rocks can be reasonably explained by an aqueous inundation, such as the flood of Genesis, and its necessary concomitants, and that within comparatively recent times.

But in order to realize how well grounded are the foregoing conclusions, one must examine and weigh a mass of evidence of a highly technical character, and few have either the time, the inclination, or the ability to do this. Hence the exceptional value of this fossilized shoe, which reveals, almost at a glance, the falsity and absurdity of the doctrine of evolution, which is the foundation of the whole system of religious Modernism.

PEGGY'S CHILDREN'S DAY SURPRISE

Peggy Parker's Aunt Elsa Norton was sick, and Mrs. Parker took her little niece, Madge Norton, home to stay for a while till her mother should get better. Madge was a dear little four-year-old, but she was an only child, used to being amused a great deal, and Peggy found her rather bothersome. She was willing to play at dolls with Madge and swing her in the swing and hammock and race with her to the barn to look for eggs and take her strawberrying down in the south field and draw her in her little cart and to do a great many other pleasant things for her; but she did wish that Madge would let her have enough time to herself to learn her recitation for Children's Day.

But that was something that Madge could not seem to do. Since she never took a nap, and since she made grandmother's head ache after a few minutes, and since Mrs. Parker had no time for her, the task of taking care of her fell on Peggy. To be sure, she could have crept off to the attic or out on the high-heaped clover mow of the barn and hidden from her little cousin; but that would only have made trouble for her mother. So she tried to make the best of it as it was.

The poem that her Sunday school teacher had asked her to recite was a long one, for Peggy recited uncommonly well. But it seemed to her that she could never get it learned so long as Madge was about, clattering and asking for stories and for help in dressing her doll or hunting up the kitten or doing something else. But finally she did learn it—every line. And she said it over and over to herself after Madge had gone to bed and before she woke in the morning. The day before Children's Day, Peggy told her mother she could almost say it backwards or even when she was sound asleep!

The concert was to be from seven to half-past eight o'clock in the evening. Since it closed so early, Mrs. Parker said that Madge might go. She could easily stay awake as long as that.

Madge was delighted. "I'll thee Peggy thpeak her pieth! Won't I, Peggy?" she cried over and over. "The'll be on the pwatform in her white dreth! And th'll begin, 'It wath a thweet June morning!' Won't you, Peggy?"

At the church as she waited for Peggy to go up on the platform she was so excited that she could hardly keep still. But when Peggy's name was finally called she sat very quiet and her eyes shone like stars.

Peggy stepped to the front of the platform, bowed and smiled. She opened her mouth to begin her piece, and then something strange happened—strange for Peggy, anyway, though it had happened more than once to some of the other pupils. She couldn't remember the first line of her recitation! And she had not brought the book. It was very large and heavy, and besides she had felt perfectly sure of herself. She turned as red as a tomato, A little rustle ran through the church as people moved impatiently. Little Freddie Hollis snickered! Peggy bit her quivering under lip and turned to leave the platform.

Then suddenly a sweet little voice from the audience said, "Peggy, Peggy, 'It wath a thweet June morning!' 'Member?"

Everybody laughed, and Madge hid her face on Mrs. Parker's arm. But Peggy turned and bowed and smiled all over again and said her recitation from start to finish without a single mistake. The people in the audience clapped and clapped and said that Peggy had never recited so well before.—Youth's Companion.

TANGLED THREADS

Tangled Threads had golden hair, soft and fine, eyes as blue as the sky, rosebud lips, a dear little nose (if Brother Ben did call it "a pug"), and her name, her real name, was Lillian; but, dearie, she was always in trouble; everything about her seemed in a snarl from the early morning, when Jane tried to fix the tangled curls, until late at night, when the Sandman at last succeeded in smoothing out almost all the pucker in her fair forehead and the grown-up people in the house would sigh and say, "She'll sleep now and we will not have to bear with her naughty ways—until tomorrow."

"Oh, auntie! that is an awful beginning to a story! Was Lillian never a good girl?" and Aline looked really troubled.

"She was always just this way," auntie continued, "until one day, when a very wonderful thing happened—at least she said it happened, and I stayed with her a whole week and never knew her to say anything that was not true. I'll tell it in her own words, as nearly as I can remember them.

"Jane was tugging at my curls, hurting me dreadfully, and I was calling her 'a horrid mean thing,' when a little tap on the looking-glass made me look up, and I saw in it a grown-up fairy (she looked like mamma when she isn't bothered). She had on a flowing white grown like an angel and was pointing into another glass, way off, and whispering, 'Look.' I saw a little girl just like me—she had a pug nose and yellow eyes (oh! I mean she had blue eyes and yellow curls) but they were smooth and glossy. She beckoned me, and when I took her hand said: 'I'm your other self. I'm going to stay with you all day.' Just then Jane gave me an extra hard pull, I started to say something naughty, but I thought of that sweet little face, and said, "Thank you, Jane—I'm glad that was the last curl.' Brother Ben teased me that day, too, but somehow I didn't mind. I missed a lesson at school. I told Miss Ames I was sorry and asked her please to 'splain it to me. She looked 'sprised but took me in her lap and made it so easy. At recess the girls began to bother me; then I said, 'Girls, I've got my other self with me today, and she brought you all some cookies;' and, and—I can't remember all—the best was when mamma leaned over my bed at night and kissed me twice. She said, 'Mamma is so pleased with your other self. I hope she will stay with you and every day help you to straighten out the tangled threads.' "

"Is that all?" asked Aline.

"Yes," answered auntie. "I expect a good many little children to read this story and puzzle out its meaning for themselves."—Exchange.

THE BIBLE IN THE HOME

"Whatever I have done in my life has simply been due to the fact that when I was a child my mother daily read with me a part of the Bible, and made me learn a part of it by heart."—Wendell Phillips.

What a step forward it would be if all our church homes had a daily Bible reading period! How many young lives today might be different if back in the homes from early childhood the Bible had been given its proper place! If our leaders did noithing more than awaken the people who are Christian to this vital need and practice great things for God would result. This, however, is not the easiest thing a leader an do; really it is about the hardest. "The enemy hath done this." Satan knows the baneful results of keeping God's Word from the people, but who are we that we permit him to do it?—Hints and Helps.

—Don't blame the church for anything which you have not at least tried yourself to remedy.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Siler City

Early Sunday morning I started for Siler City for the morning service. It was one of those gray winter mornings which, I suspect, caused many people to stay at home because of "bad weather." And yet it was one of the most beautiful mornings I ever saw. Nature was so beautiful that my very soul was thrilled as I traveled through the fields and woods which had been washed so clean by the rain on Saturday, and then had been partially covered with a blanket of snow early Sunday morning.

I reached our church in Siler City in time for a part of the Sunday school, and then preached to a very attentive audience. Every department of this church seems to have taken on new life, and the members are happy in the work. They have already paid College Assessment, and Annual Conference Budget for this year, and they will pay the General Conference Budget in full. The pastor, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, is in Westminster Theological Seminary at present, but the work is moving along splendidly in his absence. He is to return once per month while in the Seminary.

Grace, Greensboro

By special request, I preached at Grace Church Sunday evening, and thus took part with these good people in their Thanking Offering Service for Foreign Missions. There were a goodly number of people present, and they were very responsive to the truth. Dr. Spahr, the senior pastor, also preached on Missions at the morning hour. So this church gave the time of one full Sabbath to the study of missionary interests. And I think they are setting a fine example for all our churches this year in that they are planning to pay the G. C. B. in full, and then pay Dr. Roberta Fleagle's salary and other things besides. May God bless them in this noble undertaking.

Evangelism

Our pastors in Greensboro are all co-operating in a simultaneous evangelistic campaign for Greensboro and community, which is to culminate with Easter. While this is to be a co-operative movement, each church will be free to put on its own plans of operation, and each pastor will direct the campaign in his own church. Thus a mighty force will be at work for the salvation of the unsaved in Greensboro for a period of about two months. We commend this plan to others.

And we are especially hoping that all our pastors will stress evangelism in this period of the year when the Protestant Christian world is placing that thought uppermost in the life of the church. Many churches at another set time in the year will hold their regular revival services; but let that not prevent any church from entering heartily into this Pre-Easter Evangelistic Campaign of personal and pastoral evangelism.

Easter belongs to all denominations. It marks the time of the crowning event in the earthly life of our Christ, so it seems reasonable to one that all our people stress this period as a good time to render decisions for Jesus Christ, and to round up numbers for His church.

An Increase of 10 Per Cent

Is it too much to set for ourselves a goal of a net increase of 10 per cent of our present membership during this Conference year? That seems to me really a low mark. We really should on this last year before our Centenary General Conference set our goal higher than that. For the last four years we have increased in membership at the rate of about 600 per year. That we may have a much greater increase this year, the last one of our one hundred years of service, each local church should make a special effort to add at least 10 per cent to its present membership. That would mean an increased membership of nearly 3,000. What say you, brethren? "We can do it, if we will." Will you join me in saying, "We can do it, and we will?"

That is a great goal, but our reason for existing is to win individuals for Christ. Surely, 10 of us can win one!

Easter Programs

Did you receive samples of Easter Day programs from Dr. Sheridan? If so please get them into the hands of your proper workers and get them to order the supplies early that they may be prepared for the service when Easter comes. Did you read Dr. Sheridan's letter in last week's HERALD? If so, then you noted that he tells us that "Last year 45 charges received offerings for the Easter service, while 44 did not give anything. I am appealing to this Conference for a more general observance of the service during the coming Easter." I add my appeal to that of Dr. Sheridan. Surely, every church in the Conference can and will make a special Easter offering for Home Missions, and report it as such to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C. This offering will in every case count on your General Conference Budget.

Sparkles From the Field

Moriah: "A splendid new parsonage is being erected on the church grounds at Moriah Church. The foundation looks large enough for a good home. The place will be beautiful when cleaned off around the house, and the yard levelled in front."

Concord, Saxapahaw: "A few members gathered at the cemetery and planted flowers and running roses to hide the unsightly fence, and to set the church grounds in flowering shrubs and evergreens." Fine! Most of our country churches are located on beautiful spots, if the members would just get together and beautify the grounds. It can be done at so little cost. Now is a good time to do it. Also place a good marker by the road while at it.

Palestine, Flat Rock: "Stewards report Annual Conference Budget paid in full, part paid on College Assessment, some paid on pastor's salary." With this good start, we predict that Palestine will pay all claims in full this year.

Fountain Place: "We are trying to place the HERALD in every home in our church. Every Methodist Protestant should read the HERALD. Is a subscription list of 5,000 for the HERALD too high? I think not. I congratulate you, Brother McCulloch, on the new HERALD." So say all of us!

Albemarle: "The Sunday School is slowly but surely growing; 147 present Sunday, and they had to come in the rain." This is fine, let the god work go on.

Elbaville, Mocksville: "We have put a new carpet in the church since Conference, and we are now busy getting out timbers for Sunday school roms." Fine!

Spring Valley, Vance: "Our church building is being remodeled and enlarged. We have spent about $500 on building to date."

Asheville: "Plans are on foot to enlarge and improve the Sunday school plant, at a cost of more than $7,500."

First Quarterly Reports

During this week, pastors from 14 charges have made report for first quarter; this leaves 19 yet to be heard from. Some of those will be in before this is read. If yours has not been mailed before then, please mail at once. Thank you. If you need a blank I will mail you one.

Church Extension Work

Our Church Extension efforts have accomplished much during the last 25 years. Let pastors and people cooperate just at this time to raise all the A. C. B. possible and mail reecipts to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C., that the Board may proceed to make some much needed help. I thank you for every effort in this behalf.

Appointments

I have waited for some developments before making appointments, so have not made them far ahead.

February 27, 11 a. m., Pleasant Grove.
February 27, 7 p. m., English Street.
March 4th, 7:30 p. m., Yarboroughs, quarterly conference.
March 6, 11 a. m., Yarboroughs.
March 6th, 7:30 p. m., Liberty Hill, Anderson.

Faithfully yours in His serice,

A. G. Dixon.

A WEIGHTY CREDENTIAL

The urgent need of the Christian religion is one of the proofs of its genuineness. Take away Christ and what is provided and promised in Him, and how pitiable would be the condition of humanity! Life's struggles and sorrows would have to be faced in our own puny strength, and no stars of promise would light the future that stretches away beyond the tomb. The hopelessness of the heathen nations is one of their most striking characteristics. There was sound philosophy underlying the words of the angelic messenger when, in announcing to the Judean shepherds the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem, he said: "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." In Christ, human life has incentive, inspiration, and outlook. Indeed the riches of our inheritance in Him is vastly beyond the conception of the finite mind. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." And even the revelations of His Spirit are but faint glimpses of the glories to come.—Selected

A PERTINENT STORY

A story is told of a man in a railway car in England who took in with him a large mastiff. A guard came in and told him that he must put the dog into the baggage car. "Is that so!" said the man, smiling politely. "You put him out." The guard moved toward the dog, but the dog showed his teeth and the guard went out and locked the door. At another station a similar scene occurred. At a third station no guard came in. The man said to himself complacently, "I have carried my point." Then he began to wonder why they stayed so long at that station. Seeing a guard passing, he called to him from the window, and inquired why they were remaining so long. The man answered, "You were twice notified to put out your dog. You did not do it and so we side-tracked you and the train has been gone an hour." Is it not the opportune time to side-track legislators and political parties that pay no heed to the demand of the protectors of the home, and let the law-obeying people travel on to a higher civilization?—Selected.

A LAYMAN ON PREACHING

My message to the preachers is that nothing in your ministry is so important as the earnestness born of living faith. The people will forgive anything else in a minister except the sense that he is professional. Unless back of his learning and diction and eloquence they feel that he is dominated by a faith that lifts him to the heights, his sermons are as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

"The reason I go to hear that man preach," said a prosperous and virile successful lumberman, "is that I cannot be sawing lumber while he is preaching."

Men and women, to use an overworked word, are "fed up" on the things that pertain to trade and business and sports and science and literature. They go to church—when it is not from habit, and the older I grow the more I believe that most good things that come to us are the result of a habit that puts us in a receptive mood in a good place—in the hope that they will be lifted up by a spiritual message and have their walks brightened by the light that never was on sea or land.

The conception that there may be a religion in the heart separate from the religion of the head, and that one may be substituted for the other, finds no warrant in the Scripture or in life. Whenever I go to church and the minister rises and says, "I am going to preach to you out of my heart tonight," I immediately begin to fear that is an excuse for the lack of proper preparation, and I am in for a thin discourse. Often the impression is justified. People go to church to be fed as well as comforted and strengthened. You will observe that even Billy Sunday, believed to disregard the conventions, writes all his sermons, even if he seems to drive his appeals home with a baseball bat.

It may be because of my upbringing in the old-time Methodist faith, but I feel a sense of being denied bread, if I go to church and in the learned discourse, enriched with classical lore, I find nothing that gives warmth and cheer to the heart. Between the preacher who is short on learning and long on experience, and the one whose sermon is a cold ethical essay, give me the first. I can go to the library and the lyceum for the classics and for logic. But if the Church has no message or no influence that warms the heart and sends one forth to love and help his fellows, from what source is the essential to happiness and usefulness to come?—Josephus Daniels, in N. Y. Advocate.

DANGERS OF SUCCESS

"He gave them their request; but sent leaness into their soul."

It seems often too true that success is accompanied with a tragedy that is worse than failure. As we strive and seem to win, things get into the saddle and drive us to the devil. A king once showed a guest his beautiful city, and when through the visitor asked, "You have shown me your beautiful city, but where are your men?" A man was showing his friends his new mansion, into which he had moved and was living. When through, his friend asked, "This is beautiful, but where is your altar?"

Jesus says, "Ye tithe annis and cummin, but omit" more important matters. We all are working for comfort and pleasure, but are we working hard at the same time to keep in our lives the groundwork of character? It appears that where we seek luxuries, the loyalties of spirit suffer leanness. Think of the words of the poet:

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget."

A WONDERFUL LETTER—READ IT

In place of my usual article, I want you to read this wonderful letter, that has just come to my desk, written by one of our missionaries in China, Mr. Horace Starr Williams, to the late Rev. Fred C. Klein.

J. C. Broomfield.

Kalgan, China, January 4, 1927.

Several weeks ago Rev. Soderbom made a trip to the country and I accompanied him. We were gone less than two weeks, but during that time I was greatly inspired with a zeal to do more and better work. Before I left, I had only seen a view of the work as it appears in Kalgan. Often we heard it said that New York City is not a sample of the United States. Kalgan also is not a sample of our work in China.

We went a few miles by train and then hired a mule cart and struck out for the interior—of our work. It took us two days of hard going to get to the nearest station where we have a worker, though measured in miles it is less than fifty. The first day we went up a dry river bed for more than fifteen miles, over a high mountain pass, and into a new country where we found an ancient outpost called the Deep Well. We arrived after nightfall and found the city gates closed. We called and called and finally a man appeared on the wall, who inquired who we were and what we wanted. They were very cautious inside the gate because we were in the bandit country. Only a few days before two bandits were killed and their heads were hanging on the gate in plain view. We had not seen them because it was dark, but when they told us we looked and saw. It was nearly half an hour before they got the gate opened because the key had been transferred to the General's Headquarters for safety. Then we found an inn which was full of soldiers. They gave us one room which, far from being clean or warm, was at least shelter and safety.

The next morning we started early. By noon we had crossed another mountain range and were descending into a great valley. It was a great view from the mountain top, miles and miles of mountain peaks and a river valley extending as far as we could see. Here and there on the plain we could see the dim outlines of walled cities. It was a great sight. But when I realized that in only one of these many cities before our view was there any Christian church, and that among the many thousands of people there were only a possible two hundred who were following the Christ, it changed my rapturous feelings into one of—well, what shall I say? Well, the challenge was truly great and I just consecrated anew my life in his service. I felt so helpless in the face of so much work and such great opportunities. Truly the field is great; the harvest is white, but it looks so impossible. I became thoughtful and so I've been ever since. Of course I won't have it all to do, but I have a share for which I am truly thankful.

For over a week we went through the cities of this and other valleys and as we went and I saw the multitudes of people and the handfuls of Christians, I saw a vision—a vision of more missionaries; of hundreds of trained Chinese evangelists; of churches and Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies; of Young People's Conferences and—well, a new heaven and a new earth. A new China freed from the slavery of sin, a China cleaned of her idols and evil, a China peaceful and prosperous, a China where Christ has access to every courtyard.

At one little village which I visited entirely by accident, so it seemed at the time, though since it seems like I was really led there, I found a few Christians who are really more faithful than I am. For many years there have been a few people in Hsia-Li-Tai (the name of this village) who really have faith in Christ. Until the present, even, there has been no way to start a church nor even to send a full-time evangelist. Most people would have given up hope after a year or so, but not these people. I walked into this village and within half an hour the Christians were all gathered together in a little store for a meeting. I had never heard of the village before that day. They had heard of my arrival in China but were utterly surprised to see me. They wanted a meeting. So we sang some songs and had a prayer and then a few minutes' talk. Their main member, and the life of their group, had died a few weeks before. They were all greatly discouraged because they thought maybe the work, and the group, would gradually disperse and all Christian influence would gradually come to an end. With tears in their eyes they told me these things. They told me how they had planned for a school so their children might study, and how they had planned for a leader to lead them in Bible study and be their preacher. I found I was almost in tears too as they spoke, and resolved to do all in my power to bring their dreams true.

We visited many other places, but nowhere did I find people who were so really in earnest. Finally we got back to a railroad station. We had to wait nearly twenty-four hours for a train, but in China we are thankful, at times if we get a train so soon.

I could not forget the people at Hsia-Li-Tai, the little village. As the weeks passed I planned to go there for Christmas. I did not write them as I thought it would be a pleasant surprise to arrive on Christmas Eve and be their guest for this great day. I further determined to make this trip on my bicycle. The cart I found to be very slow and rough. It is also expensive. So as the days passed I planned how I would carry enough bedding for winter weather, some food, and other things necessary for a week's trip. On Saturday, December 18, a week before Christmas I had everything ready. I put on a new tire and saw that it was in shape.

Continuing my story, I took the train about midnight Sunday night, and by four a.m., we had gone the great distance of fifty miles to the station where I would start across the mountains. I went to a little inn and waited until daylight. Then I rode into the city, some three miles away, and dropped in on some missionaries for breakfast. After breakfast I started for Yang-Yuan city, thirty miles over the mountain and in the western end of the great valley I mentioned above, seen from the east. All morning I toiled up a mountain side. Riding was out of the question and pushing my bike took all my strength. My bicycle was really heavy because I had three army blankets beside a heavy sheepskin sleeping bag. Also a basket with some food. For food I took rice, sugar, salt, butter, powdered milk, crackers and cocoa. Also some grapenuts and a box of bouillon cubes. Even with only a little of each this was quite heavy. All together I believe I had a load of a hundred pounds.

Oh, I was going up a mountain. Finally I came to a little village at the foot of the last big grade. Here it was very steep. So I hired some boys to pull me up. This they were very happy to do. You see my bicycle was a great curiosity. In all the history of China I dare say there has not been half a dozen bicycles over these mountains and the country beyond.

Having reached the top I was rewarded by having down grade all the rest of the way. I arrived at the first mission at 5 p.m. I was certainly tired, and hot, too. Remember it was Christmas week in North China. It was snowing when I left Kalgan and was by no means warm weather. But all day I perspired freely and by noon my inner clothes were almost soaking wet with perspiration—inspiration as my Chinese friend said. When I arrived I was given the best room in the building but it was cold. There was a fire but to our idea not enough for comfort. The Chinese try in every way possible to save money, so it is cheaper to wear your overcoat in the house than to build a big fire. Consequently I caught cold. And every place I came to was similar, so, long before I reached home, I had a regular "whooping" cough.

The next day I rested and went to visit some church members. They all need to be encouraged. The people in the United States will find it hard to realize what it means for a man to stand as a Christian here in China. In this city the population is estimated at 50,000 and there are less than twenty-five Christians. Can you realize what this means? It means for one thing that we have to keep on the alert, or we will gradually fall in line with the multitude, instead of drawing others toour group. It also challenges the most utmost in us. It is nothing to think lightly about. Here are thousands of the best people in the world, but they know nothing about Christ's great plan of re-creation. We who profess to know Christ and follow him have a great responsibility, for if we fail, there is no one to carry on in our place, and if there were our failure would make it infinitely harder for them to work. So every praying Christian—and every Christian ought to be a praying one—ought to give special time every day for the Christians of this country that they may stand firm and may truly be Christ's disciples and servants.

ty mile trip to the next church. All day I rode. I went

The next day, Wednesday, I started early on another thirthrough a dozen towns of more than five hundred population each where there was no sign of Christian influence. In some there are undoubtedly a few who are Christian, but think of the field for service. Let me say this work will not be done by foreigners alone. But we have a great task, duty and opportunity in helping train Chinese workers who will carry on. Do you remember the song "Send the Light" and the words "There's a call comes ringing o'er the restless wave, Send the light, the Blessed Gospel Light?" And do you hear the call? I do, and I am thankful beyond words that I am right here where I am. I just feel so useless at times because I am so poorly prepared for the work but I don't want to quit. I just want to study harder and live better that I may be a better worker, one who needs not to be ashamed.

About 3 p.m. I came past an old city. For hundreds of years it has been empty but the walls are still standing. Why is it empty? I must leave my answer for the next time. Then I will also tell about Christmas in Hsia-Li-Tai, the little village I mentioned above.

I hope some of you who read this will find time to write me a letter asking in particular about my work and the people here. If you write, I promise you an answer and possibly a few pictures I have taken myself.

Sincerely yours in His fellowship,

HORACE STARR WILLIAMS.

WHAT IS A BOY?

He is the person who is going to carry on what you have started.

He is to sit where you are sitting and attend to those things, you think are so important, when you are gone.

You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they will be carried out depends upon him.

Even if you make leagues and treaties, he will have to manage them.

He is going to sit at your desk in the Senate, and occupy your place on the supreme bench.

He will assume control of your cities, states and nations.

He is going to move in and take over your prisons, churches, schools, universities and corporations.

All your work is going to be judged, praised or condemned by him.

Your reputation and your future are in his hands.

All your work is for him, and the fate of the nation and of humanity is in his hands.

So it might be as well to pay him some attention.—From The Front Rank.

THE ONLY THING GOD FORGETS

Some one has beautifully said that the only things God ever forgets are the sins of His people. These He casts behind Him into the depths of the sea, and, blessed be His name, remembers them no more forever.

But the longer you live, the more wonderful will God's memory seem to you about the prayers you once made and then forgot.

"Thirty years ago," said an old Christian the other day, "I was deeply interested in the salvation of a young man of my acquaintance. For years I prayed earnestly for him, pleading with God by many precious arguments to save his soul. All this time he remained indifferent, and indeed gave up any belief he had in the Bible. I was separated from him, he drifted out of my life, I ceased to think or pray for him. But God had not forgotten him, and I dare even to hope that my poor prayers were remembered, and today I hear that he is a member of the church visible and invisible, a sincere and useful Christian."

Is it not worth while to bring our petitions to Him who will never forget the feeblest of them?—Selected.

WESLEY HAD BEEN THERE

One day a young nobleman on horseback rode impatiently up and down the streets of a village in Cornwall. He was seeking for a public house, where he could get a glass of that concerning which Shakespeare said, "Alas! that man should put an enemy into his mouth to steal away his brain!" but his search was vain, and coming upon a white-haired peasant on his way home after a day of toil, the young man said, with rising anger, "Why is it that I cannot get a glass of liquor in this wretched little village?" The old man recognized to whom he was to speak, and taking off his cap, made his humble obeisance as he replied: "My lord, about a hundred years ago a man named John Wesley came to these parts," and the old man walked on. A hundred years! and he was living still! —Selected.

The circumstances of our lives are not unmeaning, but infinitely otherwise. This we very often do not see for want of vision. High as heaven and wide as the earth, is the atmosphere of holy opportunity in which our souls have their being. Is it not felt? Then it is only because it is not wished. Not every hour, nor every day, perhaps, can generous wishes ripen into kind actions; but there is not a moment that cannot be freighted with prayer.—William Mountford.

Reports have come in from 68 charges on one or the other of the five budgets. There are six charges reporting on all five of the budgets; five reporting on four; 11 reporting on three of the five, 12 on two, 34 on only one, and 24 on none. When our automobile engines are not hitting on all the cylinders we are anxious to find out just what is the matter, and when they are hitting on none they are not going at all.

Liberty-Siler City still heads the A. C. B. They sent in a good contribution, but being head of the list, there was only one thing more for them to do and that was to go over the top, and such a small amount more puts them over that we are expecting them to go over next week. Mt. Hermon's contribution enabled them to hold their own. Friendship went up two points. We give a hearty welcome to Weaverville, who joins this list at 11.

On the G. C. B. Mocksville advanced from 30 to 17. That is a good gain. Lebanon joins this list at 33. Welcome, Lebanon.

On the College list Granville leads, Alamance made a gain of one, and we welcome two new names to this list, Friendship and Union Grove. The latter enters at 26.

One more week of February and Church Extension special effort. Then following that a printing of the entire Conference roll. In other words, a roll call of the Conference. What will the answer be? Let's see to it that there are no blanks.

Yours in His dear service,
A. G. DIXON.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Williams

"God touched her eyelids, and she fell to sleep."

Just before the break of dawn on January 16, 1927, at her old home, about three miles south of Hillsbore, the sweet and gentle spirit of Mrs. Lucinda Elizabeth Williams winged its flight to God who gave it. Age eighty-four years, ten months. Mrs. Williams was greatly loved and admired by all who knew her. She was a woman noted for her lovely Christian character, gentle and kind ways. Seven children survive, as follows: Rev. D. R. Williams of Graham, N. C., Rev. T. A. Williams of Glen Raven, N. C., A. J., Wright and Robin Williams, Mrs. Emma Lloyd, and Mrs. Charles Thompson, all of Hillsboro, N. C. Four brothers and two sisters, Rev. J. D. Williams of Greensboro; C. R. Williams of Chapel Hill; Jessie Williams, of Durham; Alex Williams of Hillsboro; Mrs. Margaret Stubbins of Durham; Mrs. John Ray of Hillsboro.

In addition to the above thirty-eight grandchildren, thirty-one great- grand-children, besides a host of other relatives and friends, are left to mourn the loss of a dear one.

The solemn and impressive funeral services were conducted from the Episcopal church in Hillsboro the following day at 2 o'clock p.m., of which church she had been a member for a long number of years, Rev. W. D. Benton officiating. Amidst an unusually large concourse of friends and relatives from different sections of the state, her body was tenderly laid to rest beside the grave of her husband, gone before. Thus beneath a mound of beautiful flowers we left her to sleep the "dreamless sleep of death."

She will never quite leave us, the dear one who has passed through the shadows of death to the sunlight above. A thousand sweet memories are holding her fast to the places she blest with her presence and love; we cannot think of her as dead, who walks with us no more along the paths of life we tread. She has but gone before, and still her silent ministry within our hearts hath place, as when on earth she walked with us and met us face to face.

A LOVED ONE.

Welborn

Mrs. Delphine Blizzard Welborn, was born in Randolph county, March 9th, 1853, and departed this life February 5th, 1927. May, 1877, she was united in marriage to Mr. W. W. Welborn; to this union were born five children, four daughters and one son. The son died at the age of sixteen years, one daughter died at the age of eight years; three daughters survive as follow: Mrs. C. W. Combs, Mrs. W. E. Royals, Mrs. C. C. Jackson, all of this city. In September, 1925, her companion was called home, preceding her one year and five months. The deceased is also survived by two brothers, W. A. Blizzard, of California, and Joshua Blizzard of Leaksville, N. C. Two sisters, Mrs. S. M. Rike, of Randleman, and Miss Mary Blizzard, of High Point. Six grandchildren.

While quite young she professed faith in Christ and united with Gillard Church, where she remained a member until later she united with Fairfield M. P. church. There she was faithful and active in all activities of the church, until she and her family moved to High Point. She then with her husband placed her letter with the Welch Memorial M. P. Church, where she remained one of the most faithful and active members until about four months ago she was forced to give up her activities on account of failing health. Though her health failed her, yet she never lost interest in her church. She often expressed the desire that she would soon be able to be in the service again. But her work was finished; she had been faithful in that which was least, and the Lord said, I will make you ruler in that which is much. "Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

The funeral was conducted in the church by the pastor; assisted by Rev. W. B. Davis, pastor South Main M. E. Church, and Rev. O. L. Ruth, pastor of the Holiness church. A large crowd was present.

Warner

John H. Warner was born June 15, 1855. He departed this life January 25, 1927.

On December 29, 1875, he was united in marriage to Miss Lucy Walser, and they lived happily together for fifty-one years—long enough to celebrate there golden wedding anniversary.

To this union were born twelve children, eight of whom survive. They are Mrs. C. H. Miller, Mrs. J. S. Koontz, Mrs. W. I. Williams, Mrs. J. H. Koontz, Mr. J. R. Warner. Mr. E. T. Warner, Mr. Zeb Warner and Mrs. C. G. Hege. He also leaves behind his faithful wife, twenty-seven grandchildren and three great-grand-children, and one sister, Mrs. J. F. Pickett.

Brother Warner professed faith in Christ and joined Shiloh M. P. Church when a boy and lived true to that profession to the end of his days. Like the apostle he too said, "I'm ready to be offered," and often said his last years were his best years, for as his body grew weaker his soul took a stronger grip upon God. He will be greatly missed by his loved ones and friends and his church, but we can all rejoice in the hope of eternal reunion.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Loflin

Richard Locker Loflin, born May 24, 1854, died February 5, 1927. He was married to Miss Cornelia Everhart about 53 years ago.

To this union were born three sons and six daughters. The widow, two sons, four daughters and a large number of grand-children, and great grand-children survive.

Brother Loflin professed faith in Christ when a young man. He helped to build Lineberry M. P. Church, and became a charter member when it was organized.

Uncle Locker, as most of us knew him, was a good man, a loving companion, a devoted father, a faithful church and Sunday school worker. A friend to God and all mankind.

His funeral was conducted by the writer Sunday afternoon at Lineberry church, in the presence of a large congregation of people, after which his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Brothers W. T. Hall, A. G. Cranford, and J. P. Elliott, spoke briefly, but effectively.

These brethren all paid a beautiful tribute to the life and Christian character of Brother Loflin. Personally I feel very keenly the loss of this good man. The church has lost one of its best members.

The home, the church, the community, are sorely bereaved because of his removal from among us.

But our loss is his eternal gain.

May we all look to our Heavenly Father who will comfort us in our bereavement and bind up our broken hearts.

C. E. RIDGE.

Dixon

Mrs. John W. Dixon, who was Miss Hettie Carroll before her marriage, was born January 17th, 1874. Died February 4th, 1927.

She was married to John W. Dixon June 16, 1899, and to this union there were born eight children. Three of these died in infancy and five are still living. She was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Carroll of Reidsville. She leaves to mourn their loss, her husband, her father, two daughters, Mrs. B. L. Davenport and Miss Doris Dixon; three sons, Thomas, Woodrow, and Phillip; two brothers, D. L. Carroll of Reidsville and N. F. Carroll of Winston-Salem; three sisters, Mrs. C. H. Garrison, Mrs. Basley McCollum, and Mrs. Lorensa Chandler all of Reidsville; and five grand-children.

Her husband's father, five brothers, and one sister also mourn the loss of a daughter and sister. Besides these there are numerous friends who feel keenly the loss caused by her going.

Mrs. Dixon was a devout Christian woman. She joined Midway Methodist Protestant church in childhood and remained a faithful member of this church for a number of years, and until she moved her membership, with others of her family, to the M. E. Church South in Summerfield.

She was an invalid for nearly six years before her death, and she bore her pain and suffering as patiently and as cheerfully as a faithful Christian could do. She was never known to murmur or complain. Toward the last she began to long for the release that comes to the faithful when they are permitted to depart and be at peace. So she bade farewell to her husband and children and loved ones and told them she was going to be with Jesus.

She was triumphant in death as she was in life, and she is to be congratulated in that she has found release from the pains of a frail body, and has entered into that realm where suffering and sorrow do not come.

The funeral services were conducted at Midway Methodist Protestant Church, by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Albright, and Rev. W. F. Ashburn, a former pastor. Many of her childhood friends gathered for this service, and she was laid to rest amidst the familiar scenes of her childhood days.

A. G. DIXON.

—Dr. H. P. Towle, Boston physician, says that fully half the people with pimples, or acne, who come to him for treatment are rapid eaters. Rapid eating and the consequent overburdening of the digestion, he declares, seem to be the causes of many cases of red, blotchy rashes over the face and body. Imperfect mastication and the accompanying habit of washing the food down whole usually result in habitually overeating.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bessemer City Charge.—We had a very good Sunday school last Sunday morning. The Baraca class won the banner for best attendance. We are hoping to increase our school to one hundred. The C. E. Society will give an oyster supper in about two weeks; these socials seem to enliven the society and the young folks seem to enjoy them. The Ladies' Aid is trying to complete a quilt which will be sold. for the benefit of the church. We had preaching services Sunday night. Brother Modlin from Lincolnton came over with Brother Carson and preached a very interesting sermon.

We all love Brother Modlin as he seems to be a good man, an old soldier of the cross. We desire the prayers of all Christian people.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Porter Church.—Pastor Hill here on the second Sunday preached another very helpful sermon.

The attendance was fine. Brother Hill certainly draws the folks. We feel very fortunate in having him and his good wife to work with us this year.

Our Sunday school work is moving on nicely. We are very proud of our faithful little band.

Brother Hill will be with us the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock. Hope to have a large number to hear him.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. W. T. BRASWELL, Reporter.

West Forsyth Circuit.—There is an interesting series of meetings in progress at Tabernacle. A team of the Billy Sunday Gospel Club present each night, with their individual testimonies to the saving power of Jesus, earnest exhortations, and personal invitations. Last night in spite of rain and mud, there was nearly a house full of people present. Team no. 8 was early on hand. Many of the men composing the teams have good voices which they lift in songs of praise. Two young men came forward and confessed and declared their purpose to serve the Master. About a dozen asked prayer.

C. H. WHITAKER, Pastor.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Sunday morning Brother Williams brought us a very helpful sermon. He preached on the parable of the talents, bringing out clearly that we should use our talent to the best of our ability, even though we may have only one.

Our Sunday school is still moving on nicely. We have recently purchased a new register board. This board is very helpful and has been needed a long time. In the last two weeks the result of our Bible reading contest is 1720 chapters. This is arousing considerable interest in some of the classes.

Recently the home of Miss Annie Jordan and nearly all the house-hold furniture of Mr. and Mrs. E. Powell who lived with her was burned. These people have our sympathy in their loss. Our Sunday school and others pounded Mr. and Mrs. Powell a few nights later. Our sympathy also goes out to Mr. Powell in the death of his brother, Harold Powell. He was seriously burned February 11 while starting a fire with a mixture of gas and oil which exploded. He was rushed to a hospital but the burns proved fatal. He died February 16. He was a young man only about 17 years of age. This is indeed sad to think of.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Creswell Circuit.—Much credit is due Miss Mary Spruill for her efficient leadership in conducting entertainments in Rehoboth church, where such a worker has long been needed. Also the splendid bazaar she managed with fine success. May more of us girls possess a like spirit to work for the Master.

A FRIEND.

Friendship, Stanly.—Despite the rainy day yesterday a large congregation was present to hear Brother Hill deliver another powerful sermon. The congregation is increasing each Sunday, due to the fact that there is something being done worth while.

The prayer services which are held the first and third Sunday nights have proved to be a great work to the young people of this community and the old as well.

The first Sunday of this month our pastor preached a wonderful sermon and also administered the Lord's Supper to a large number.

The Sunday school Convention will be held here Thursday evening, March 3rd, at 7:00 o'clock. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Best wishes to the Herald readers.

MARTHA ANN HARWOOD, Reporter.

Mecklenburg Circuit.—When the conference closed, and the churches on this circuit realized that their beloved pastor, Rev. Robert Short, and family, would be removed, they dreaded the change, as these dear people had endeared themselves to all, consequently, many hearts were anxious. "God holds the key," and knows the way. To the surprise of many our new pastor arrived November 13th, filling the appointments at Antioch and Beulah the 14th a.m. and p.m. and has been unfailing in these duties, filling every appointment at the four different churches since then, without the aid of a car, which these modern times demand, but this necessity he hopes to possess later. Brother Totten has much of the spirit to overcome difficulties.

He served this work over 20 years ago, where he made many lasting friends who gladly welcome his return, as they knew his worth, so with the wide experience he has had, he can stimulate the slackers who need to be at their post of duty.

Stallings church observed the Christmas program with splendid success. The former leaders had married, so the problem of conducting the program was successfully met, with the aid of Miss Lorena Flowe and Mrs. Totten. Much credit is due Miss Flowe, as she is a natural leader with children.

Beulah church had begun Christmas preparations, but they were overthrown through "Dan Cupid's" invasions, which resulted in the marriage of our Miss Grace Phifer, a leader.

Three of the families at Beulah have suffered the sad pang of death. First the infant of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Schell, little Joe Tom, was suddenly transferred with the angels, leaving heart-broken parents, brothers and sisters. This was their first sorrow through death.

The next was little Theluia Neal, the infant of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Morris; again loving hearts were broken, and dear friends shared their grief, but these little angels are transferred to be with Jesus, where there is no doubt and fear.

Then the saddest of all was the wife of Walter Maynus, who died in a hospital in Charlotte, leaving husband with five helpless children, the youngest a tiny babe. This is a heart-breaking position for husband and loved ones, which has stirred our sympathy as few deaths. She was a sincere Christian, devoted to her family, unfailing in her duty to home and church, so with the splendid reputation she bore, we think of her as rejoicing in the presence of her Master, "Safe in the arms of Jesus."

May our Father lift the burdened hearts o this husband and loved ones, and help them to be submissive to God's plan.

It is hard to bow beneath the chastening rod, but in the hereafter the mists will be cleared away.

Not now, but in the coming years, it may be in the better land, we'll read the meaning of our tears, and then up there, we'll understand.

February 23 Brother Totten was called to his home at Yadkin college to conduct the funeral of Miss Howard.

We are praying for a revival at every church, trusting for the salvation of many souls. So help us pray for a spiritual awakening here, throughout the entire conference, and every branch of his kingdom.

AN OLD CONTRIBUTOR.

Denton Church.—Our pastor filled his appointment yesterday morning and last night.

The attendance yesterday morning was large considering the day.

The sermon was well enjoyed by all. We like Mr. Henderson better every time we hear him preach.

We hope the first Sunday in March will be pleasant and we can have good attendance.

Our Sunday school offering was good yesterday for the number. Offering was $2.85; year ago was $1.92. We are sure glad to see our church and Sunday school on the gaining side in attendance and collection.

We ask the prayers of all good people for our church and Sunday school that we may be better.

REPORTER.

High Point.—Last Sunday was observed as "Baraca Day" at our church, and this splendid organization of men was much in evidence, having charge of both services of the day. It was truly an inspiring scene when the middle section of pews in the main auditorium and the choir loft filled with men, young, middle-aged, and those advanced in years. The president of this class Mr. Lynn Trout, and the teacher, Prof. J. D. Hardy of High Point College, occupied seats in the pulpit. Mr. Hardy led the opening prayer, and a male quartette, Messrs. Dan W. Smith, Carey Davis, Arnold J. Koonce, and Clarence Schultheiss, sang "Tell Me the Story of Jesus" with pleasing effect. Mr. Lindley delivered a very forceful sermon, appropriate to the occasion, from the text, "Quit you like men, be strong." Mr. Lindley said that he honors all professions and lives of honest work, with special privileges or esteem to none. He told the men to be proud of their work, and to do their best in the field of usefulness where they find themselves. He laid special emphasis upon purity of thought and action, and begged them to be constantly in touch with the Master through secret communion and prayer. His talk was most timely and practical. At the evening service a History of the Baraca Movement was given by Mr. R. L. Trout, and the sermon on "The Sins of the Fathers Upon the Children" was delivered by Prof. J. D. Hardy of the College.

Rev. E. L. Ballard, the associate pastor, called together the new Pastor's Cabinet at the parsonage last Thursday evening, and met with an enthusiastic response, there being 17 members present. The duties of this group are to get in touch with all members of our church in the various sections of the city, to visit the sick and shut-ins, those who are in trouble or sorrow, prospective members, etc, and to repart to one of the pastors. This Cabinet will hold another meeting to complete plans for work on Friday evening of this week. The members of the Cabinet are the following: Dr. S. S. Coe, C. C. Robbins, A. J. Koonce, J. W. Hinkle, Mrs. W. C. Hammond, Mrs. S. D. Shelton, H. A. Moffitt, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, Vernon W. Idol, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, J. H. Jennings, A. M. Rankin, Sr., Mrs. C. L. Gray, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, Henry Hankins, Mrs. P. T. Crawford, H. T. Hancock, and Mrs. H. U. Oakes.

Many friends of the family will be pained to learn of the serious illness of one of our greatly loved members, Mrs. A, Harriet Guire, widow of the late J. Wesley Guire. She is in a hospital in Lenoir, N. C., where she has made her home with her two sons for many years. Mr. V. W. Idol was in Lenoir on business last week and visited Mrs. Guire, who has been a life-long friend of his family. Though living in Lenoir for more than a dozen years, she has retained her membership and loving interest in the First church, and every one of its members is very dear to her heart. May the God whom she has served so long and so faithfully be very near to her and comfort her in these days of illness.

We are grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. R. R. Ross of Asheboro on Sunday, February 20. She had been critically ill of pneumonia and other complications for two weeks. Mrs. Ross and her family have a large number of friends in High Point, who are pained to hear this sad news. Mrs. H. A. Garrett is her niece, and she and Mr. Garrett had been to Asheboro on several occasions during her illness to visit her and they attended the funeral on Monday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Ross have attended services at First church many times, and we were always delighted to see them. The sympathy of many friends here is extended to the bereaved family in the loss of this splendid mother and wife.

Next Sunday will be observed as Foreign Missionary Day, and the women will have a prominent part in the services as did the men on last Sunday. At the evening service a special program will be given, and the Annual-Thank-offering will be taken. A competent committee composed of Mesdames S. S. Coe, E. L. Ballard, and P. E. Lindley, is working out this program.

Dr. and Mrs. George R. Brown of Reidsville were in High Point on Thursday, February 17th, for a short time.

Captain A. M. Rankin left Tuesday morning for Hot Springs, Ark., where he expects to spend a month.

Mr. Chas. C. Robbins returned Friday from a hunting trip in Eastern Carolina.

James C. Penny, Jr., of Greensboro has entered High Point College as a student.

Garland McPherson, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McPherson, will take part in the Freshman-Sophomore debate at Chapel Hill next week. Garland is a member of the Freshman class in the university. His colleague will be John Mebane of Greensboro.

We are pleased to know that Mrs. Fred Leonard, who has been ill in Guilford General Hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be moved to the home of Miss Pearl Leonard.

Gibsonville.—One of the most pleasing events in our church life was the annual meeting recently of the East Guilford Christian Endeavor union held in our church hut. The supper afforded the fellowship in the breaking of bread together that seems not to come in any other way. The songs, the after-dinner talks, the address of the evening, the fellowship with workers of other churches and other denominations—all had the happy effect of broadening our interest and of inspiring to us quickened activity. One of our own workers was chosen president of the union.

Our Junior Christian Endeavor society, inactive for a period, has been re-organized and promises well.

The subscriptions to the Herald reported recently should be credited to the members of Christian Endeavor. They did the work, I only sent in the names and the money.

Our board of stewards are making this Church Extension month. In the Sunday morning services, the pastor and people are thinking "Stewardship," the first step toward practising it.

A pleasing experience is the interest our young people are taking in an open discussion Wednesday evenings of the Sunday school lesson.

When our Ladies' Aid meets you would think from the interest manifested that the women have no other duties whatsoever. Then when the W. H. M. S. meets you would for the same reason think the same about that. It always has given me pleasure to see other folks work, as the years go by it is coming to be a delight. The W. H. M. S. is now on the last lap in raising their quota for the year. T. M. JOHNSON.

First Church, Burlington.—We were fortunate last Sunday in our visiting speakers—one for each service. At the morning hour the speaker was Mr. M. G. Daniel, a student of Wake Forest College, and a delegate to the Student Volunteer Conference at Elon College. Mr. Daniel has spent most of his life in the near East, and knew at first hand many of the atrocities of the Turks against the Armenians. He recounted in brief the history of his own nation—he is an Assyrian—and the cruelties of the Turks against the Armenians. Many of his own people had been killed, among them, three of his little brothers. His father witnessed, through field glasses, the drowning by the Turks in the Tigris river of eleven thousand children of the city of Bitlis.

Mr. Daniel is the representative in this state of the Near East Relief. The congregation gave him an offering, amounting to about $38.00.

At night we were fortunate in having as the speaker Rev. Jesse R. Wilson, associate general secretary of the student volunteer movement for foreign missions. Mr. Wilson was one of the speakers in the Elon Conference, and was enabled to come to us because of the closing of the conference on Sunday afternoon. He had been in Japan for five years under the appointment of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society. His coming to us was given an added interest because of his personal knowledge of some of our missionaries in Japan. He knew Miss Ethel Hempstead and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Auman, and spoke in highest terms of them. Having his mind imbued with the missionary purpose and program of Christ's Kingdom, it was but natural that he should talk to us along that line. He told us some interesting things about the "Island Empire of the East," and in simple earnestness he impressed upon us our responsibility and our privilege in establishing the reign of a spiritual brotherhood throughout the earth—the purpose and program of Christ for his Kingdom. Both speakers were helpful and enjoyed.

Some interesting features of our work are in process of development, announcement of which we hope to make later. During the winter months we have had a great deal of sickness among our people but most of them are improving, we are glad to note. We were sorry that Brother Dixon was sick, and not able to come to us on the thirteenth. We shall be glad to have him later.

S. W. TAYLOR.

Liberty, Siler City.—It is a pleasure to write to the Herald, because the recent paper campaign carried on by the faithful workers at our churches has placed the Herald in most of the M. P. homes in Liberty and Siler City. May we not stop until every home has one or more of our church papers!

The writer enjoyed the trip to both churches in N. C. the 13th. Regardless of the rain and mud encountered the trip was inspiring. At Liberty Sunday morning good reports were heard from all sources. The organizations haven't ceased working, but seem to continue their steady progress. The church conducts each Wednesday evening a prayer service. A letter received today tells of a good Ladies' Aid meeting and a Christian Endeavor oyster supper in progress.

Mr. S. M. Smith has proved himself a huge hearted member. He donated and had placed around our Liberty church a goodly lot of shrubbery. Its value is estimated at $145.00. The church is so located that this donation will help the general appearance of our church very much. We appreciate this timely gift, Mr. Smith! May your tribe increase! A few men of the church, also, agreed to give $20.00 to fix an aqueduct around the eaves of the church to protect the shrubbery from the rain.

The writer, also, found Siler City continuing the Kingdom's work along all lines. A full congregation was present at the evening service regardless of the inclement weather. The C. E. was attended and they report a lively prayer meeting with good attendance conducted each Wednesday evening for the church. Regret so much I missed the Valentine social last Monday. A letter reached me today telling of 40 being present at your mid-week prayer service. Fine!

There is a great opportunity for our church to grow at Siler. We should have one of our strongest churches located in this field. There are only 83 members there now, but they are as good as gold. It is with much interest that we are looking forward to our meeting there in May. Let us pray for a great increase. Regardless of the few in number it has paid the pastor in full through February; its college assessment; its A. C. B. and some on the G. C. B. Liberty practically equals this record. These are just good everage Methodsit Protestants, but they speak encouragment to the Good Cause and inspire the efforts of a young preacher to greater things.

The writer was going to write about the seminary, trips etc., but I have taken up so much space about the folk at home that I will have to write that later.

F. L. GIBBS.

Westminster, M.

Siler City.—We were very fortunate to have Dr. Dixon of Greensboro with us Sunday morning.

His sermon was enjoyed by everyone present. We will be very glad to have Dr. Dixon preach for us again.

We were also fortunate to have Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Isley, from Saxapahaw charge with us Sunday evening.

Mr. Isley brought us a wonderful message. We will be glad to have them with us again.

REPORTER.

First Church, Concord.—This church has closed a two weeks' evangelistic campaign that resulted in one of the greatest meetings, it is said, that this church has had in recent years. There were sixty-three conversions, and forty-two reconsecrations; Thirty-five have been received into membership, with others to follow.

The pastor conducted the services, doing the preaching. Mr. N. J. Miles of Enfield had charge of the music and rendered fine service.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Charge.—On the second Sunday Rev. W. T. Totten filled his appointment with a small congregation, due to sickness in the community and bad weather.

Since January 1, there has been sadness in four of the Beulah homes to the extent of a death in each family. On January 1, a sweet little boy of four weeks was taken from the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Schell.

On January 18, a mother of five small children and the wife of Mr. Walter Manus was taken away suddenly. She was a good woman and loved by all that knew her. It was said by her nearest neighbor that in the eight years she lived by him she was never heard to speak a cross word to any one, or a harm word of any one. She had been a faithful member of God's church since childhood.

On January 31, death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Morris, and carried back to heaven their five-months-old daughter.

February 18, Mrs. David Morris passed from this life to a home over yonder after ten days of suffering with pneumonia. She was the mother of seven small children. She has been a faithful member of Beulah church since she was sixteen years of age. It is good to have lived such a life that after we are dead our children can say, "I know memma is in heaven for she was such a good woman."

May we all take examples from these good women.

These four families have our greatest sympathy, and may we all live such a life that we may live as one unbroken family on the right hand of God.

Rev. Mr. Totten conducted all the funerals with the exception of Mrs. Morris'. Our formal pastor, Rev. Rober Short, from Roberta conducted her funeral.

Mr. Willie Wyles of this church is recovering from a serious attack of pneumonia.

May the prayers of God's people be with us. Best wishes to the Herald.

EVELYN SCHELL, Reporter.

Haw River Circuit.—We were fortunate to have Rev. Elwood Carroll preach for us at Brown Summit the fifth Sunday in January. To say the people were delighted is putting it in mild form. His style was fine, his reasoning clear and his words forceful. The people heard him gladly. They are justly proud of their boy.

The second Sunday it rained and it poured but when we reached Fair Grove we found our young Sunday school superintendent, Brother Percy Bevel, and his good wife and children on hand ready for Sunday school.

At 2 p.m. we were at Midway, the church where people go rain or shine, and we were delighted to find the house almost filled.

The pastor asked some of the people why they came out on such a rough day. He was made glad when they said because we expected to see you here. They are becoming dead in earnest about their new church and have already $4000.00 pledged for the building.

We missed very greatly, the presence of our faithful Brother Fred Jones at Mizpah Sunday. Unfortunately he had given the hoof of his mule a desperate blow with the top of his head that resulted in an ugly gash in his head about four inches long.

Fred says the people are liberal with their advice now but that it is too late.

He is improving rapidly and we hope he will soon be out again.

Brother Way had to turn back before reaching his church on account of the road being impassable. Oh my! when will the people learn that a fine road to their church is a big drawing card.

Stallings, Mecklenburg.—The Ladies' Aid met Thursday evening at the parsonage. It was a called meeting for the purpose of reorganizing. This done, Mrs. M. L. Stallings (re-elected president) made an appeal for more interest and enthusiasm. Afterward, delightful refreshments were served by our pastor's wife, Mrs. W. T. Totten. The next meeting will be at the home of our president, and we expect a good attendance. Surely we can spare one afternoon each month for this good work. Especially when we have such wonderfully good times together. The social contact so rests and refreshes one. The readings, songs and prayers are always spiritually uplifting.

Our Sunday school is doing well, but we regret that our superintendent, Mr. R. S. Irby, has been unable to be with us for some time.

The C. E. is having fairly good attendance but hopes for improvement.

We were indeed glad to have Rev. A. B. Heywood worship with us at the morning service the first Sunday in this month. Our pastor delivered an appealing and inspiring sermon on "The Pure in Heart." I think each one present went away feeling benefited and glad he had come out to the House of God.

MRS. P. L. GARMON, Reporter.

Davidson Circuit, Chapel Hill.—Pastor Ridge filled his appointment today with a good sermon. I never heard him preach a better one.

Our Sunday school is better attended than it was. We have 50 on roll. They aim to build some more to the arbor. Next Wednesday is the day set to go to work at it.

Thomas Smith was buried at Chapel Hill last Thursday. He was a member of Chapel Hill church.

Sunday school next Sunday at 10 o'clock. Come and bring sombe one with you.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Midway, Guilford Circuit.—Our Sunday school is growing in interest and in number. We have a great field to work in. So many people are coming in the community that have no church home. We are reminded of our Master's words when He said, The harvest truly is great and the laborers are few. Yesterday, February 20th, was a feast day with us. Mrs. Dixon (wife of president Dixon) was with us and gave us a wonderful message on God's love. Some said it was the best they had heard in a long time.

One boy on his way home said she made the folks cry: she promised to come again soon and organize a woman's missionary society. We hope we can tell you more about that later.

W. A. LAMB.

Liberty, Davidson Circuit.—We were very fortunate to get our former pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, back with us for the new year. Every one was glad to see him back. He certainly had been doing some real good preaching for us. He was with us Sunday.

Sunday school has been running every Sunday that the weather would permit at 1:30 p.m. Though the number has not been what it ought to be. We hope and pray that the future may be much better than the past has been.

ANNIE HILL, Reporter

Shiloh, North Davidson Circuit.—The Christian Endeavor Society met at the home of Mr. B. L. Leatherman February 18th, and had our regular weekly meeting. We had a large number present considering the weather.

The topic was Our Duties as Christian Citizens. We as Christians have many duties, and we should not neglect them. It's our duty to attend all church services, Christian Endeavor meetings, and many other duties for Christ. We should start when we are young, then we will grow in service for the Master. We all should be laborers together with God. It's our duty to honor and obey our parents. If we neglect this duty we will never get very far in life. So may we live each day that will shine for our blessed Master.

On February 20th, we had charge of the opening of Sunday school. May we be ready at all times to do something for Christ.

EMMA BERRIER, Reporter.

Asheville.—Miss Bonnie Roberts was recently married to J. F. Bell.

Our Ladies' Aid Society surprised her with a linen shower. Mrs. Bell is much beloved by our church here as an unusually fine young woman—always loyal to her church. She is a grand-daughter of the late Andrew Pickens and wife of Jupiter.

On the second Sunday night our Missionary Society gave a pageant, "The March of the Mites," under the direction of Mrs. C. W. Bates. Mrs. E. L. Winslow trained the children and took the leading part. The Thank-offering was $25.00.

Our missionary societies have exceeded their apportionments.

Two new members were received into our church Sunday morning; Miss Betsy Patton and Miss Mary Bates, both members of the Ore Hill church. We welcome them.

Pastor Bates and Mrs. Bates were recently favorably written up in the Asheville Citizen.

Our prayer meetings are well attended. So also are our Sunday services. Our pastor's sermons always good, are even better than ever.

Our Brotherhood meeting on February 8th was in some respects the best ever—in attendance and offerings, and addresses by Pastor Bates and President E. C. Fawcett. Brother Fawcett in a happy manner told of his joy in the privilege of worshipping in our church and contributing to its support. He is one of our most liberal givers, although he is still a member of the Friends' church back home. He paid high tribute to the preaching of Rev. T. M. Johnson and Brother Bates. He and family are making ours their church home.

We regret the illness of two of our members—Mrs. James Moore and Mrs. J. C. McKenzie.

Strangers are frequently seen in our congregations. We are happy for the faithful services of Miss Flossie Stout, who is teaching in the Asheville High School, and has recently joined our church here.

REPORTER.

Roberta.—Our work is progressing very nicely. Despite the rain and muddy roads last Sunday there were 132 present for Sunday school and the offering was $28.15.

A large congregation was present for the preaching service. We were pleased to have so many visitors with us. Many of the good Baptist people always attend our services. We cordially welcome them.

We also appreciated the special music rendered at the preaching service. Messrs. Cole and Williams sang duets and Messrs. Alexander, Foster, Talbirt and Williams sang quartettes. Their selections were beautiful and inspiring. We hope that they will come again.

Last Sunday a week ago we had a very impressive service after which the Lord's supper was administered.

The Ladies' Aid met last week with Mrs. Short. They welcome the four new members who joined them. The Ladies' Aid are laying plans for bigger and greater service, under the direction of their new president, Mrs. Essie Williams. They are now working on a "name quilt."

Our prayer meetings deserve mention. The young people hold a mid-week prayer service. A fine spirit is manifested by these young people, and it is wonderful how well they carry out their programs. On Saturday nights a prayer service is held by the older people. These meetings are very spiritual.

We want to do more and more for the dear Master. Pray for us.

REPORTER.

Henderson.—Our attendance at Sunday school and church services, seems to go up and down with the thermometer. Having had two bad Sundays in succession our people have not come out so well, and quite a lot of sickness among our membership has also hindered. However the organizations continue at work and the Mission Band hope to have a new piano in the primary department before long. On Thursday, February 3rd, they gave a barbecue dinner, assisted by "The young Ladies' League, and quite a neat sum was realized. They are a band of faithful workers and we feel sure that their efforts will not be in vain.

The Aid Society held a very helpful and enthusiastic meeting February 7th at the home of Mrs. L. R. Gooch. At the conclusion of the business routine, the Society voted to buy folding screens suitable for dividing the classes in the basement. The program was in charge of Miss Agnes Harris who gave a sketch of the life of Miss Clara Barton. After adjournment the hostess served refreshments.

On February 10th the Philathea class and Mission Band gave a chicken dinner to help increase the piano fund. This was well attended and both societies are very grateful for all the assistance given them in epery way.

The Intermediate C. E. had charge of the Christian Endeavor meeting last Sunday night, February 13th, and a splendid program was given. Regardless of the bad weather a large crowd was present and all received a spiritual blessing. It is indeed encouraging to see young minds and lives at work for the Master.

Tuesday night a meeting of "The S. S. Worker's Council," was held at the parsonage. Fourteen teachers and officers were present and quite a number of important problems were discussed and agreed upon. Our superintendent, Mr. J. M. Baity, urged that each teacher be on time and thus set the proper example for their pupils. Mrs. H. A. Jordan was also elected leader for the Junior Choir. At the close of the business hour, a Washington contest was enjoyed, followed by refreshments.

Our Sunday school report was much better than last Sunday. There being 161 present this Sunday, February 20th. We hope that with the coming of spring our enrollment will increase. The Junior Choir gave us some special music at the Sunday school services and are also helping in the evening church services.

The young Ladies' League met Thursday night, February 17th, with Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Jr. Mrs. H. A. Jordan presided. After the transaction of business, a motion was carried by the society to send a box of sheets, towels, and pillowcases to our Bethel Home. The articles to be brought in at the next meeting. A splendid program on the Bethel Home was given by Mrs. H. A. Jordan. A solo by Miss Alice Martin was greatly enjoyed. Two new members were enrolled and the campaign for new members continued. The meeting was closed by prayer offered by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch. Dainty refreshments, carrying out the Washington Birthday idea, were then served by the hostess.

Special mention must be given the splendid sermon preached by our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, this Sunday morning, February 20. His Subject, "Responsibility," using the words of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" He very forcibly brought to us the great responsibilities of the man outside the church, and the Christian also. He made us feel the grave responsibility for our brothers of other countries, and it was food for thought for each one there. A special Missionary program will be given at the church tonight. The ladies of the missionary societies are beginning to formulate plans for the Branch meeting which will be held here April 19-20-21. We trust much interest and help will be given by the local society and that a great blessing is in store for all.

MRS. CLYDE L. FINCH.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—On next Sunday, at the usual hour for church service, members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will render a program including a Thank-offering pageant, reading, music, and a talk on Missions by our pastor. The annual thank-offering for Foreign Missions will be taken and we hope to have a large congregation present, also a liberal offering.

There has been much sickness among the members of our congregation lately. The epidemic of whooping cough has also spread widely among the children thus causing a noticeable decrease in attendance at Sunday school and church service.

A fuller report of our church activities will follow later. REPORTER.

HOGS AS WEATHER PROPHETS

Brother McCulloch:

You may say to Dr. Brown for me that neither do I "see why the Lord should reveal the weather to a hog." Yet during my boyhood days on the plains of Alamance county when we saw the mother-hog industriously carrying mouthful after mouthful of leaves to her bed, the boys knew, though to us no perceptible change in temperature, to draw up over us an extra blanket or quilt that night. This is no brief for the ground-hog or his foreknowledge. T. M. JOHNSON.

A UNIQUE CHURCH CHOIR

The choir always tittered and whispered all through service. There was once a church choir that was not ill-bred, but I have forgotten where it was, now. It was a great many years ago, and I can scarcely remember anything about it, but I think it was in some foreign country.—Mark Twain in Tom Sawyer.

—In line with all communities throughout this state and the country at large, this city has been asked to hold a campaign during the month of March for the purpose of raising funds for Palestine's restoration.

The tentative date suggested for the campaigns in this city is Tuesday, March 8, 1927 and the quota assigned is $3,500. The United Palestine Appeal combines five fund-raising agencies for Palestine into one and its specific task is to maintain the many splendid institutions which have been established through the efforts and funds raised by the Jewish People throughout the entire world. The Christians and Arabs in Palestine share in the benefits which are to be derived from schools, hospitals, and other modern institutions that have been created in recent years.

—In the funeral service of Mrs. R. R. Ross on Monday, Rev. J. E. Pritchard was assisted by Rev. W. F. Kennett, a lifelong friend of the deceased. The house was crowded with friends from far and near. The last words of the deceased, spoken in a moment of returning consciousness, were: "I do not know what is best." During her illness she sang a song that her family had never heard before, probably learned in her childhood days. Her last words are indicative of one of her major characteristics,—a desire to know and do the best.

—Rev. H. K. Boyer, of Shelby, reports that Corporal Delton of Mt. Airy confessed on his death bed 29 years ago that he was one of four men who slew Joseph Smith, founder of Mormonism. This killing occurred in 1844 in Carthage, Ill., where Smith had been imprisoned charged with adultery and perjury. The people generally were infuriated against Smith and ten or twelve men swore that they would not eat or sleep until Smith was dead. Four of these men including Belton went to the jail and carried out the purpose. Smith to save himself jumped from a high window, but was stunned and then killed by the four men.

Another Parable of a Fig Tree

Years ago there was a rank growth of weeds on the south side of the barn every year. I cut them down with a scythe, but the next year they grew up as rank as ever. I dug them up by the root, but the next year there would be a new growth of weeds, the seeds having blown in from elsewhere. There seemed to be no way to stop the weeds from growing. But I learned there was a way. I planted some fig sprouts south of the barn, just where the weeds had been growing. I did not fight the weeds further, but left the battle to the fig bushes and the weeds. And the fig bushes conquered. They grew into small trees and have been bearing fruit every year for years, while the weeds have ceased to appear. The higher life has overcome the lower life.

Does not this illustrate the victory of the higher over the lower in our moral life? There are two opposing spirits seeking for expression in our lives. There is what the New Testament calls the "flesh," and there is a very different principle of action springing up in our higher nature under the influence of the Spirit of God. These both seek to dominate our lives. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh." This struggle may continue for quite awhile, but at length the flesh may be completely overcome. "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Compromising With Circumstances

There are compromises we must not make. We must not sacrifice principle for pelf. We must not exchange honor for dishonor. We must not disregard God for the sake of mammon. We must not sell the advantage of others to secure our own. But there are occasions when we must yield our own preferences and relinquish our own program out of regard to circumstances. A man had planned to go to the city on a certain day. It seemed important that he should go at that time. But when the day came his own father lay a corpse and was to be buried that day. Of course he yielded to circumstances. There are people—and perhaps this is true of all of us at times—who, when they set their minds on a course of action, are disposed to pursue that course no matter what may happen. They have not learned how to compromise with circumstances. This is a hard lesson for such people to learn, but it is a very valuable lesson to learn. In making our plans for the future we should realize that some pertinent factors of the situation are as yet unknown to us. Our plans should be made subject to revision as changing circumstances require. None of us liveth to himself or should try to live to himself. We are enjoined to bear our own burdens and also enjoined to bear one another's burdens. In making our programs we should leave a large place for unseen contingencies. The Good Samaritan would have failed to secure the commendation of Jesus had he not been ready to respond to an unexpected call. His mind was open not only to the demand of his own interests, but also to the cry of others' need. So it should be with us. The loom of time is weaving some strange patterns involving our own lives. We know not what a day may bring forth. We should avoid arbitrary plans. We are God's and the world is God's, and we should keep ourselves free and ready for the part that God has for us as He weaves about us a new combination of circumstances.

Of course we may go too far in compromising with circumstances. We are not to be mere puppets of circumstances. We must have wills and exercise them. The man who will not plough because of the cold will beg in harvest. There is a difference between a proper compromise with circumstances and a weak yielding to circumstances.

Why Go to College?

There must be some reason for going to college, or so many intelligent people would not spend so much money to keep their sons and daughters in college, and so many intelligent people would not spend money even to the point of sacrifice to build and endow colleges.

In the High Point College students' paper of February 17 we find an analysis of the reasons for going to college made by Dr. J. Henry Highsmith of the North Carolina Department of Education. He finds ten reasons, as follows, condensing his statements: 1. Training for work. 2. Increased earning ability resulting in greatly increased compensation. 3. Enlarged knowledge with its satisfaction and enlarged power. 4. Brings new and valuable acquaintances. 5. Develops character, manhood, good citizenship, improved health. 6. Liberalizes the mind, freeing from prejudice and narrowness of view. 7. Reveals one's own limitations and teaches reliance upon experts. 8. Develops the finer feelings, bringing an appreciation of the things most worth while. 9. Develops the latent talent, preparing for specialization in some line of service. 10. (This we give in full). College training puts a person in position to render the highest order of service. He has learned to work, and is anxious to make a contribution to the progress and welfare of society.

AGED STUDENTS

Cato at eighty, took it into his venerable head to learn Greek and Plutarch, almost as late in life, learned Latin. Theoprastus began his work on the characters of men at ninety. His literary labors were ended only by death. Socrates learned to play on musical instruments when well advanced in life. Colbert, the famous French statesman returned at sixty to his Latin and law studies, and the great Doctor Johnson applied himself to Dutch but a few years before his death. Then there is the now forgotten Marquis de St. Aulaire, who was once regarded as a remarkable prodigy. At the age of seventy he began to write poetry and contemporaries declared that his verses were "full of fire, delicacy and sweetness."—Exchange.

THE SITUATION IN CHINA

LUTHER K. LONG

My daughter, Miss Ethel M. Long, whom some of the readers of the HERALD have met, is in the province of Shantung at Lintsing on the Grand Canal. She is some 200 miles from Tientsin, which is at the north end of the canal, and much further from Shanghai, which is at the southern end. She is thus well out of the immediate zone of the present disturbances.

However, from time to time through recent years, the girls' school of which she has charge has had to change its time of opening or closing a term because of the activities of bandits; and occasionally there has been a pitched battle between one of these roving bands and the regular soldiers. The requisitioning of railroad trains for the movement of troops has sometimes interfered with travel, but, on the whole, she and her work have had but little serious interference since she went to China in 1913.

My daughter has not been much excited over recent disturbances. The distance from the trouble is one reason; and, then, she feels that the Chinese are friendly to Americans—though when they get after English people, whom they dislike, they might not always be able to discern the difference between them and Americans. To obtain a little additional reassurance I wrote to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions under whose auspices she is working. I quote parts of the letter I received from Dr. William E. Strong, one of the Secretaries:

"We have not heard directly from Lintsing for some time, but from other sources of information we do not feel that the situation of our missionaries in Shantung is alarming. A letter from Peking which came the other day, brought the news that Mr. Rowland M. Cross, Secretary of our North China Mission, was touring in the Tientsin field. The fact that he could thus be travelling about away from his home and family in Peking was satisfactory assurance that things could not be in a very threatening state through all that area.

"We feel that every reasonable precaution is being taken and that our missionaries are experienced enough and have sufficient contacts and wise and resourceful friends among the Chinese to be aware of what is going on and to make necessary provision for meeting danger that may arise.

"I quite agree with your feeling that, despite the nationalistic spirit in China today, and the measure of anti-foreign sentiment which exists in certain quarters, on the whole China and the Chinese are friendly to the Americans, and that we are not likely to see any uprising against them. Moreover, I think that the recent development of the United States' attitude toward China, and disposition to deal with her independently and sympathetically in trying to right the wrongs of the case, will increase China's good will to the United States and benefit all our representatives there."

Our Sympathies With the Cantonese?

Dr. Strong continues: "We have been glad to get frequent reports from Foochow and its region of late and to find them continually and increasingly affirming that the situation is improving. The men missionaries are, in general, holding to their posts. Some of the women are there; also others with the children have sought temporary refuge nearer the ocean-bound steamers, where they could get away if necessity required.

"It looks now as though a decisive clash would have to come between the forces of the North and South in China. What the outcome and result of that will be one cannot say with any certainty. The feeling seems to be that the South is more likely to prevail, in which case we may see a united China with a real national government set up and functioning; but it is not best to prophesy, only to hold steady, doing what one can, and to wait with patience and courage to meet the issue."

Changes of Policy

Sir Austen Chamberlin, British foreign ministers, enumerates the things the Chinese desire to have changed and which, he says, Great Britain is willing to change:

"The principal matters which China desires to see changed in the old treaty system are, first, the extraterritorial position by which foreigners can only be tried in their own courts by their own laws; second, the tariff provisions by which China cannot raise the duties on foreign goods; third, the quasi-independent status of the concession areas. We are prepared for a change on all these points, for the present system is antiquated and unsuited to conditions today and no longer affords protection to our merchants."

On January 4th, Congressman Porter, head of the committee on foreign affairs in our house of representatives, introduced a concurrent resolution "requesting the President to enter into negotiations with the republic of China for the purpose of placing the treaties relating to Chinese tariff autonomy, extraterritoriality, and other matters, if any, in controversy between the republic of China and the United States of America upon an equal and reciprocal basis."

Senator Borah, head of the foreign relations committee of the senate, is equally active in these matters with Congressman Porter, and Secretary Kellogg is also manifesting interest.

Missionaries and Military Matters

I have felt no special fears for my daughter's safety in places where she and her fellow-workers are known, and among people who understand the purpose and spirit of missionaries. The introduction of foreign naval and military forces complicates matters. This, with the misunderstanding and excitement consequent upon and connected with the moving of missionaries and other foreigners from their stations to the ports and the protection of warships, might easily stir up such mob movement as would result at almost any time in woeful tragedy. The Christian Century says on this angle of affairs:

"It is at this point that the interests of the missionary workers require attention. To the credit of the missionaries be it said that no one of them, so far as public report shows, has, up to date, appealed for military or naval protection. It is safe to assume that large numbers of the missionaries wish that no gesture of protection had been made by any power. All of them must realize by this time that any wide use of force by a foreign power would wreck the outlook for Christianity in China for years to come. We cannot help regretting, however, the failure of the missionary societies to reject with positiveness the proposal to employ force to protect their workers or property. Much might have been done in recent days to alleviate the wounded feelings of the Chinese by such an appeal to good will. Now, if matters turn out for the best, and good relations are restored on the basis proposed by the British and other governments, there will be almost no record of any repudiation of force-tactics by the official Christian organizations. And the special treaty status involved in the 'toleration clauses' will have likewise vanished without the mission boards being able to claim the virtue of having voluntarily relinquished their privileged standing."

My daughter has often written of seeing American and other foreign soldiers in Peking, Tientsin, and other cities large and small. The American soldiers, she testifies, always look good to her—not so much because they are soldiers and represent protection as because they are from home and bring to mind all that is fine and good in the homeland. Surely, missionaries of the gospel of the Prince of Peace must be sufficiently strong in His spirit of good will to all men to arouse in the hearts and minds of those whom they are teaching, and in the governments under which they are working, a chivalry that will protect them from harm. At any rate, neither the point of a sword nor the muzzle of a gun is so effective in opening and keeping open access to non-Christian peoples as a heart of love and the spirit of self-sacrificing devotion.

Nation-Making in China

Just as I had finished what I have written so far there came in the mail a most enlightening article by Mr. T. Z. Koo, an eminent Chinese Christian and leader. A year ago Mr. Koo was elected to successd Dr. John R. Mott as general secretary of the world's committee of the Y. M. C. A. This position he declined, choosing rather to remain in China with the title of assistant general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in charge of student work. I give here three important paragraphs from this article:

"The fundamental process I will call the process of nation-making. China, as a nation in the modern sense of the term, does not exist. She is, so far, still an aggregate of families just beginning to be conscious of nationhood. Hitherto, the unit of Chinese political thought has been the family and not the nation, and the unit of political relationship is the family tie rather than the bond of citizenship. Loyalty to the family is far more real than loyalty to the state for the ordinary man. As long as this is true it is unthinkable that China can become democratized. Until the basis of political thinking in China is shifted from the family to the state in the minds of the people, the work of the revolution cannot be said to be complete. At this very moment in our national life, we are seeing the birth of this conception of the nation-state gradually superseding the conception of the family-state. It has needed all these years of suffering and turmoil to force men's minds to this change. But at last this change is well on its way and daily gaining momentum. This is the fundamental issue we need to grasp in order to understand the significance of what is happening in China today."

"The Christian church in China today is being attacked mainly along four lines. First, the church is attacked because of the foreign nature of her organization, administration, personnel, and support. She is denounced as the agent of foreign exploitation in China. In this line of attack one hears distinctly the voice of the nationalist. The attack is not so much on religion here as on foreign influence in religion. Second, the church is attacked as an instrument of capitalism created by the capitalist class for the sole purpose of drugging the mind and lulling the spirit of the submerged classes in society. In this the communistic voice is speaking. Third, the church is denounced as an outworm institution, a relic of superstition and an opponent of human progress. The atheist and the agnostic are speaking in this line of criticism. Fourth, the church is attacked because she practices not that which she preaches. This is the most common criticism."

I am sure that all of us realize that for China herself, and for the rest of the world as well, that great country with its 400,000,000 of people should have a government that exercises authority over its entire territory. And I am sure, also, that we would welcome the triumph of the Cantonese nationalists if they are to succeed in bringing about a united China. That there is opposition to the Christian church is not to be wondered at. Some of that opposition is justified. They have learned from Rusian advisers what the church did for Russia in the days of the Czars, when the people were struggling for a measure of freedom. They are informed as to what the Roman Catholic church meant to do for Japan, many years ago, resulting in the expulsion of Christianity from the Hermit Kingdom. For a good while Chinese Christians have been in favor of a united church for China. Western Christians should be content to serve as helpers in bringing Christ and His gospel to the Chinese people, allowing His spirit to guide in the building and administering of the church for the benefit of these Oriental people, who may, better than Westerners, understand the world's Christ who was born in the Orient.

Here is the concluding paragraph of the article by Mr. Koo: "The fundamental issue before the Christian group in this situation, however, is not so much to preserve and save this or that particular institution. The real issue at stake is the question of religious freedom. This freedom must be preserved at all costs, and Chinese Christians will be well advised if their main attention and best efforts are centered on safeguarding this point. In conclusion may I add that there never was a time in China when people's hearts were bounding with more hope than today. For the first time in the last 15 years, glimmerings of a possible solution of our problems are visible on the horizon. The atmosphere strongly reminds us of the revolution days back in 1911. Expectancy and hope are in the air and a forward move is now possible."

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

In the home—it is kindness.
In business—it is honesty.
In society—it is courtesy.
In work—it is fairness.
Toward the unfortunate—it is pity.
Toward the weak—it is help.
Toward wickedness—it is resistance.
Toward the strong—it is trust.
Toward the penitent—it is forgiveness.
Toward the fortunate—it is congratulation.
Toward God—it is reverence and love.

NEED OF SERVANTHOOD

A man may be a child of God, and yet disapproved as a servant of God. To be approved, to reach the maximum of our spiritual privileges, involves constant self-judgment, self-denial, and self-crucifixion. Many are accustomed to think that the question of their personal security is the only question of any moment. That is a great mistake, for by careless living, by giving lodgment to Self in any of its forms, whether hateful or beautiful; by carelessness and unwatchfulness; by neglect of communion; by failing to keep the Master's sayings, we forfeit the highest possible service to the world, that of manifesting, in our life, the loveliness of Jesus.—Selected.

WESLEY'S TEACHING AND PRACTICE CONCERNING THE RIGHT USE OF MONEY

By H. H. Smith

It would be no exaggeration to say that one will search in vain to find any person who has rendered a higher account of his stewardship of time, talents and possessions than John Wesley. His "sayings" on the right use of money are well worth quoting, for they give the marrow of the Gospel on this important subject.

"Gain all you can; save all you can; give all you can."

"It is no more sinful to be rich than to be poor, but it is dangerous beyond expression."

"How can you, on principles of reason, spend your money in a way which God may possibly forgive instead of spending it in a manner which He will certainly reward?"

"You will have no reward in heaven for what you lay up; you will for what you lay out. Every pound you put into the earthly bank is sunk; it brings no interest above. But every pound you give to the poor you put into the bank of heaven. And it will bring glorious interest."

"If you are not in pressing want, give something, and you will be no poorer for it. Grudge not, fear not; lend unto the Lord, and He will surely repay."

"If you earn but three shillings a week, give a penny out of it, and you will never want. But I do not say this to you who have 10 or 15 shillings a week, and give only a penny. I have been ashamed for you, if you have not been ashamed for yourself. Give in proportion to your substance. Open your eyes, your heart, your hand."

"If you have a family, seriously consider before God how much each member of it wants in order to have what it needful for life and godliness. This being done, fix your purpose to gain no more. As it comes daily or yearly, so let it go. 'But I must provide for my children.' Certainly. But how? By making them rich? Then you will probably make them heathens. Leave them enough to live on, not in idleness and luxury, but by honest industry."

He Practiced What He Preached

Now let us see how his example corresponds with his precepts on this subject. Once when accused of laying up treasure upon earth, he replied: "I have two silver teaspoons at London, and two at Bristol. This is all the plate which I have at present, and I shall not buy any more while so many around me want bread."

If everyone had the same regard for the poor that Wesley had, the starving millions would soon be fed. He says: "Many years ago, when I was at Oxford, on a cold winter's day, a young maid called upon me. I said: "You seem to be half starved. Have you nothing to cover you but that thin linen gown?' She said, 'Sir, this is all I have.' I put my hand in my pocket, but found I had scarcely any money left, having just paid away what I had. It immediately struck me: Will the Master say, 'Well done, good and faithful servant? Thou hast adorned thy walls with the money which might have screened this poor creature from the cold. O, justice! O, Mercy! Are not these pictures the blood of this poor maid?' Everything about thee which cost more than Christian duty required thee to lay out is the blood of the poor."

A generous-hearted lady left him a legacy of a thousand pounds (about $5,000), but in a short time it was all given away. He wrote his sister: "You do not consider money never stays with me; it would burn me if it did. I throw it out of my hands as soon as possible lest it should find a way into my heart; therefore, you should have spoken to me in London before Miss Lewen's money flew away."

His biographer says: "He lived with the utmost economy himself, and gave away the whole surplus of his income. When he had 30 pounds a year he lived on 28 and gave away two. The next year, receiving 60 pounds, he still lived on 28 and gave away 32. The third year he received 90 pounds and gave away 62. The fourth year he received 120 pounds, still he lived on 28, and gave to the poor 92."

He Knew the Value of Money

He taught that the talent of making money is not to be despised, but regarded as God-given, and used for His glory. He emphasized the good that money might do if properly used: "It may be eyes to the blind, feet to the lame,—yea, a lifter-up from the gates of death."

Some wealthy men once told Wesley that he did not know the value of money. He apparently took no notice of them, and let them talk on. But later in the day, as he was preaching, he recalled their words, and said: "I have heard today that I do not know the value of money. What! Don't I know that 12 pence make a shilling, and 21 shillings a guinea? Don't I know that if given to God, it's worth heaven—through Christ? And don't I know that if hoarded and kept, it's worth damnation to the man who hoards it?"

To the precept, "Gain all you can," he added the qualification: "without injuring yourself or your neighbor in soul or in body." He warned his people against the snares of wealth, urging them to "hold fast to their old-time simplicity, to count themselves as God's stewards, and to be as faithful in saving and giving as they were diligent in getting."

"The Methodists grow more and more self-indulgent because they grow rich," he said. Referring to those who had rapidly increased in wealth, he said: "And it is an observation that admits of few exceptions, that nine in ten of these decreased in grace in the same proportion as they increased in wealth."

The last entry in his personal Account Book was written about six months before his death, and reads: "For upwards of 86 years I have kept my accounts exactly. I will not attempt it any longer, being satisfied with the continual conviction that I save all I can, and give all I can, that is all I have."

His treasures were laid up in heaven. It is estimated that he gave away during his lifetime $150,000 (an equivalent of $500,000 today), derived principally from gifts and the proceeds from the sales of his books and pamphlets, and dying, left behind him, as someone has put it, "a good library of books, a well-worn clergyman's gown, a much-abused reputation, and—the Methodist Church."

An Abiding Blessing

I am so thankful that I have a joy that the world cannot rob me of; I have a treasure that the world cannot take from me; I have something that is not in the power of man or devil to deprive me of—the joy of the Lord. "Your joy no man taketh from you." John 6:22.—D. L. Moody.

FIRST-HAND INFORMATION

The present unrest in China is giving all mission boards, having interests there, much concern. Several letters have been received in the past few days from our missionaries in Kalgan, along with clippings from daily papers in China printed in English. In all of these the seriousness of the situation is clearly set forth. After referring to their hope of peace through the Cantonese army, Rev. C. G. Soderbom writes: "As the time goes on and they occupy new territory, people are more and more convinced that there is no hope of peace, and a united government, as long as they rule. The Bolshevik agitators, and strike leaders, are following close in the wake of the army, or even before it, and spreading their inflammatory ideas among the students and ignorant people. Endless trouble and disorders follow everywhere. No consideration is given to mission stations, schools or hospitals; they are rather the first to suffer."

In confirmation of what Rev. Soderbom writes concerning Bolshevik influence in China, clippings from newspapers, published in various provinces, tell of posters put up in many places, which show their connection with the Russian Reds. Here are a few of them: "Long Live Communism;" "Communism Is the Hope of China;" "Down With the Opponents of the Reds;" "Foster the Soviet Principles;" "China and Russia Are One;" "Close All Christian Schools;" "Abolish Capital;" "Down With Hypocritical Christianity." In the China Weekly Review, published in Shanghai on January 1, 1927, this question is asked: "Has General Feng Renounced His Christianity?" and an answer in the affirmative is given that fills two columns.

On this same subject, Bro. Soderbom, in a letter just received, writes: "West of our district is a mission colony run by the Scandinavian Mission. They have had an extensive colony work for over 25 years, and have done much good in their district. That mission has recently been looted and destroyed by the followers of General Feng—the so-called Christian general's troops. Over $10,000 worth of property has been stolen or destroyed, and the missionaries after ill-treatment had to flee for their lives to the mountains. Several Catholic missions have likewise been looted. This has been done while General Feng, after his return from Moscow, resided in the vicinity. He lost his Christianity while in Russia, and substituted for it Bolshevistic ideas. His pastors have left, or are leaving. I am glad to report that our old friend, Chang Chih Chiang, former marshal here, does not share these views, and has disassociated himself from these activities, and is yet a warm-hearted Christian."

Although at present it is peaceful in Kalgan, still the general situation makes one feel that the danger is similar to that of 1900 in severity if not in nature.

Writing in the same issue of the China Weekly Review, Mr. Charles Dailey says: "As time goes on it becomes more and more apparent that the warfare of the Soviet-aided- Kuomintang is directed not only against the foreign treaty powers, but also against Christianity, and that its purpose is to drive the missionary and the Bible from the field."

In the same article he shows that in the city of Changsha, capital of Hunan province, now in the hands of the Cantonese army, six American missions have property valued at over $3,500,000, and that the Kuomintang, or People's Party, is seeking to confiscate the same. He says: "A more complete frame-up against Christianity, and for the confiscatory control of American philanthropy could not be imagined." Closing his article, the says: "All these attacks upon Christianity, and upon the morals and virtue of the teachers, physicians and nurses can not come from the Chinese themselves. It must be inspired by the Bolshevists."

Referring again to our own work in Kalgan, Brother Soderbom writes on January 15, 1927: "In consideration of what has happened in so many other mission stations, and our own experiences of two years ago, it is my private opinion that we at least should not increase our work in the Kalgan school, and we might better close up the higher grades, until we are sure of the outcome of the present struggle. It seems to me this is one of the precautions we need to take to save our mission work."

"In these times the Lord's Prayer—'Deliver us from evil,' is very apt, but we must not forget to add, 'Thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory,' and by God's grace, Psalm 46 is ours also, and we can say it with a full heart."

HOME MISSIONS

Decision Cards For Easter

It is gratifying to note the interest the churches are taking in this phase of the Easter Service, as planned by the Board of Home Missions. We had 5,000 Decision Cards printed. It took 2,200 for the samples sent to the pastors and Sunday school superintendents. Orders have come from every section of the denomination and we have been compelled to order printed another supply. Orders are coming in by almost every mail.

We have a great desire to make the coming Easter memorable as a time when there will be one great simultaneous effort in all of our churches looking to those of our congregations who have not already accepted Christ as their personal Savior, to do so and unite with the church. This applies particularly to the young of our Sunday schools and C. E. Societies.

We especially appeal to our small churches, and those in the country districts, and who may have not before given much attention to Easter, to emphasize this part of the Easter Service. Many of the towns and city churches will hold a week of service preceding Easter Sunday, leading up to the day when an opportunity will be given for the reception of members. In many rural sections it may not be practical to hold an entire week of religious service, but some effort can be put forth by the pastor and his co-workers with definite results.

I do not know anything that would be more encouraging and inspiring to our denomination than to be able to report through our church papers that all over this great country of ours, where the Methodist Protestant Church is established, the invitation was extended with the result that hundreds of persons confessed Christ.

There is certainly no more appropriate time in all the year than the anniversary of our Lord's resurrection for personal evangelism and soul-winning. This appeal for a concerted movement is sent to all of our churches with the earnest hope and prayer that it will receive a favorable and even glad response.

In due time, cards will be forwarded to all the pastors, requesting them to return the results to our office immediately after Easter Sunday. J. M. Sheridan, Secretary.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Pleasant Grove

Sunday morning, February 27, bright and early we started to Pleasant Grove. And just to see if we could get through we drove over the new boulevard from here to High Point. The road is about finished from here to Jamestown, but a greal deal of work must yet be done from Jamestown to High Point.

We arrived at Pleasant Grove in time for Sunday school, and found a well organized, well graded Sunday school in operation at this splendid country church. There were 157 present in Sunday school, and every class has its separate room. So far as I know, everyone who was in Sunday school stayed for preaching, and others came in.

Rev. George L. Reynolds, the pastor, is doing a great work here at this country station. And yet he takes no credit to himself. He says the folks are doing it. They are planning to build a good sand-clay road from the church door to the hardsurfaced road nearby. The church grounds are well kept, and a splendid marker stands by the High Point-Thomasville road, directing people to "Pleasant Grove Methodist Protestant Church." They have their finances well in hand, and are already planning for the Easter services.

English Street

For the night services we were with Rev. J. H. Moton and his people at English Street, High Point. Brother Moton has succeeded already in getting a wonderful grip on these people, and every department of the church seems to be in fine shape. The house was packed with people and it was pleasant to preach to them. They are planning to put in a new lighting system in the church, and to make other improvements which will add much to the attractiveness of the church. Brother Moton always does good work, and though he is one of our oldest pastors, he is as active and energetic as a boy. He is a pastor as well as a preacher, and the people are delighted with him. They have already raised their A. C. B. in full, and as soon as it is sent to the treasurer and reported to us it will be properly listed in the HERALD.

Mrs. R. R. Ross

Just one week ago we joined the many friends in paying our tribute of respect to Mrs. R. R. Ross at the funeral service from her late home in Asheboro.

If we understand what makes up a noble character and a good woman, we believe that all these elements were combined in Mrs. Ross. Truly it may be said of her, as of Mary: "She hath done what she could."

A good wife and mother, a good church worker and a good neighbor has gone from us. She was a great and noble woman, and will be missed by all those who knew her well. Our sympathies are extended to the husband and the children and their relatives in their bereavement.

W. T. Bowman

On last Friday morning all of Guilford County was shocked and outraged when we read of the tragic death of Deputy Sheriff W. T. Bowman. A chicken thief shot him to death near Tabernacle Church rather than submit to arrest. Brother Bowman was a faithful officer and died in the performance of his duties. But what a fearful shock to his wife and mother. He was the son of Rev. J. H. Bowman, who died on the way to one of his appointments last August.

We attended the funeral Saturday afternoon at Pleasant Union. There were a great number of sorrowing people there. We sympathize so deeply with the mother, the young widow and her children, and all sorrowing ones in this case.

College Assessment

Brthren, please note: The small amount of College Assessment laid on each charge by the Annual Conference is meant to be paid on this college year's running expenses. So please raise it at the earliest possible date, and send it to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C., that the college may have it by the first of May at the latest. We are so glad so many charges are paying up this claim early.

Church Extension

We are getting some very pressing and urgent calls these days for Church Extension help. We simply have to write back and tell them that there are no funds in hand. February is now closing, and we know a great many charges have raised a part or all of the A. C. B. during February. Please send it to Mr. Idol at an early date, so the Board of Church Extension may know what to depend upon. The Board of Church Extension has no way of getting money except from the charges.

Easter

March is upon us, and April will soon be here, and during April comes Easter. Every Sunday school and church in the conference should hold Easter Day services, with a good offering for Home Missions. Order programs early, and let your workers have plenty of time to prepare. Order from Dr. J. M. Sheridan, 516 North Charles street, Baltimore, Md.

Sparkles From the Field

"If we prayer more for our churches, we should talk far less against them."

"Don't blame the church for anything which you have not at least tried to remedy."

"Someone has beautifully said that the only things God forgets are the sins of His people." It would be a beautiful thing if God's people would be more God-like in this particular.

Tabernacle, West Forsythe: "An interesting meeting is in progress. A team of the Billy Sunday Gospel Club is present each night with testimonies, exhortations, and personal invitations. Last night, in spite of the rain and mud, there was nearly a house full of people present." The old-time fire still has the old-time power to draw the people.

First Church, High Point: "A pastor's cabinet has been organized. The duties of the cabinet members are to get in touch with all members of our church in the various sections of the city, to visit the sick and shut-ins, those who are in trouble or sorrow, and prospective members, and report to the pastor." Fine! We shall watch this new move with interest.

Liberty: "Mr. S. M. Smith has donated and had planted around our Liberty Church about $145 worth of shrubbery." Good! It is fine to see our people getting the mind to beautify church grounds. Now is a good time to do it.

Concord: "There were 63 conversions in our recent meeting; 35 joined the church with others to follow." Fine!

Asheville: "Our Missionary Societies have exceeded their apportionment." Good! Not many of us do more than we are asked to do.

Roberta: "Despite the rain and muddy roads last Sunday there were 132 present in Sunday school and the offering was $28.15. A large congregation was present for preaching." Glad for this good word from Roberta.

A good letter from a pastor to his members—guess what pastor:

"My Dear Fellow-Worker:

"This month has been set aside as 'Tithing Month.'

"I have asked every member of our church to deal fairly with God this month and set aside one-tenth of their income for the month and give it as a special offering to God for the purposes set forth above. It is not for me to say how much. I am leaving that to your own conscience and God.

"I will take one-tenth of all the money received this month, and after taking out my regular offering through the envelopes, will give the rest as my offering.

"Count your salary, rent, if you have any, and all other incomes whatever, and after deducting your regular offering, place the balance in the enclosed envelope and bring it to church with you on the last Sunday of this month and lay it upon the altar of God as your 'Tithing gift.' Let us all remember that our Lord has said 'Bring ye your tithe into my storehouse and prove me now saith the Lord of hosts if I will not pour you out such a blessing that there shall not be room to contain it.' Let us test this promise and be fair with God.

"Praying the rich blessing of the Father to rest upon you and all yours, that He may bless you in basket and in store, is the earnest prayer of your friend and pastor."

Quarterly Reports

During this last week 10 pastors have sent in reports for first quarter, leaving only nine not heard from. That is fine, but why not have every pastor report?

"HOGS AS WEATHER PROPHETS"

The American Magazine for March has an interesting article on weather prognostications from which the following extract is taken:

The ground hog is by no means the only animal that is credited with knowing, far in advance, what the weather will be. In a book published more than 20 years ago, Professor Edward B. Garriott collected scores of these popularly accepted traditions which have no scientific value.

A good sample of these sayings is this one about the beaver: "If the winter is to be a long one, the beaver cuts his supply of wood and prepares his house one month earlier than in late, mild minters."

Among the dozens of others, which continue to be repeated with childlike faith, are these:

When bears lay up food in the fall, it is going to be a cold winter.

If bear tracks are seen after the first fall of snow, the winter will be mild.

When birds of passage fly south early severe weather will come soon.

The swan builds its nest high before heavy rains, but low when the season will be dry.

If the November goose bone be thick,
So will the winter weather be;
If the November goose bone be thin,
So will the winter weather be.

There are scores of similar sayings, based on the actions of birds and animals, their fatness or leanness, and so on.

But, as Professor Garriott explains, their physical condition—fat or lean, thick fur or thin—depends on what the weather has been, and how it has affected their food supply and their general health. They are not omniscient as to the future, but are often caught unprepared.

It is conceded that birds, animals, and insects do sometimes show a keener faculty than human beings possess for "sensing" an approaching change of weather; but this applies only to short periods, rarely exceeding a few hours in length.

It is an old saying, for instance, that a bee is never caught in a shower. This may be true, for insects seem conscious of atmospheric conditions which precede rain.

"Ants are busy," says one old proverb, "gnats bite, crickets are lively, spiders come out of their nests, and flies gather in houses, just before rain."

It is said that if sea birds fly out early, and go far, moderate wind and fine weather may be expected. If they hang around near shore, or fly inland, a storm is close at hand. If swallows stay at home and fly up and down, or very low, expect rain or wind. Pigeons return early to their cotes when it is going to rain. Guinea fowls and peacocks "squall;" chickens oil their feathers or roll in the dust; robins perch on high branches and "whistle for rain."

Cats are supposed to be especially weather-wise. It is commonly believed that if a cat washes herself in the usual fashion, the weather is going to be fair; but it will be the reverse if she licks her fur the wrong way, or washes above her ears, or sits with her tail to the fire.

More worthy of belief is the assertion that sheep are unusually frisky before a storm. All animals, in fact, seem to be restless when a storm is approaching. Horses stretch out their necks and sniff the air. Pigs run up and down; and, so country people declare, pick up straw in their mouths and carry it into their sties. Cows huddle together at the end of a field and stand with their tails to windward.

These, and other actions of animals, birds, and insects, may be accepted as weather signs, indicating some change that is close at hand. But we cannot depend on them when it comes to long-range predictions.

You never get to the end of Christ's words. There is something in them always behind. They pass into proverbs, they pass into laws, they pass into doctrines, they pass into consolations; but they never pass away, and after all that is made of them, they are still not exhausted.—Dean Stanley.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE HOUSE AT THE FOOT OF THE HILL

"Mother, who lives in the big white house at the top of the hill?" asked Jim. Mother looked a little surprised at the question.

"Why do you ask, son?" she said, drawing him to her lap.

She had hoped that the explanation might be postponed for a long time. They had lived so happily, she and Jim, in the small house at the foot of the hill, up which the village straggled picturesquely crowned by the large white house concerning which he was now inquiring; and she feared lest their peaceful life might be disturbed by the knowledge; but there was no evading the question.

" 'Cause at recess today we passed by it and saw an old gentleman standing on the piazza, and Tom Wynn said, 'Jim, that's your grandpa.' And I said I hadn't any grandpa, and the boys laughed at me and said I was a baby not to know my own grandpa, so I said I'd ask you! Is he my grandpa, mamma?"

"Yes, Jim, the boys were right," she answered him simply. "He is your grandfather, and you have his name, James Bellamy Douglas; but it seemed such a big name for a little boy like you, that we just call you Jim."

"And why don't I know him?" asked Jim again. "Why doesn't he come to see me and bring me candy, as Tom Wynn's grandpa does?"

"I will tell you about it, dear. You were too little to understand before. Your grandfather did not like it when your dear father and I were married. We both hoped he would forgive us after a while, but he never did, and your father died without seeing his father again. It made us both very sad. I hoped he might have cared for you, but he has never tried to find us out, and I could not write to him—"

"I don't like him," declared Jim indignantly. "I don't like anybody who wouldn't be good to you, and I won't have him for a grandpa."

"Hush, dear. That is not the way to speak of your grandfather. We should be sorry for him, rather."

"Why, mother. He's rich, and we are so poor. Why should we be sorry for him?"

"He is rich in worldly things, yes, Jim, darling. He has horses and lands and money, but he is poor in the very things that make us rich—love, and happiness, and each other to care for. And he has no one to love him. No one can be happy without love in his heart. So we must pity him, for his life must be very lonely."

"I'm not sorry for him: he wasn't good to you and daddy," insisted Jim; and from this standpoint she could not move him.

The weeks passed, and the Christmas holidays came. A heavy snow fell, and a hard freeze following, made the long hill a splendid coasting place as smooth as glass. The boys had splendid times on it.

One morning Jim came running in to his mother, full of excitement. A big motor car had skidded on the ice, near the foot of the hill, and turned over. An old gentleman was hurt.

"Might they bring him in? He is awfully hurt, and our house is the nearest," panted Jim.

"Surely," assented Mrs. Douglas, readily. Her sitting room was warm; a broad leather couch was quickly converted into into a temporary bed, and all was ready by the time the unconscious man was broutht in.

The doctor came soon, and pronounced that he was not seriously hurt, but must be quiet for a few days.

"His recovery depends upon that. He can remain here, madam?" he asked.

"You will not lose by your hospitality. Mr. Douglas is the richest man in town," he added.

"If he were the poorest and most humble, it would make no difference," she answered gently. "I will do what I can for him."

For several days the injured man took no notice of his surroundings. Then one morning he opened his eyes and looked about him.

"Where am I? What has happened?" he asked.

"In my house. You were hurt, but you are better," said a quiet voice, and a hand held a glass to his lips.

He drank the contents, and then asked, "Who are you?"

"I am Mary Douglas," she answered as gently as before.

He started up on his elbow. "My son's widow?"

"I was Mary Gordon. I married your son—against your wish, I know. He is dead now, and you must forgive him. I will bear your anger still, if I must, but you must forgive Jamie; you cannot be angry with him any longer."

He was silent for a little, gazing at her. At length he said, slowly, "Mary."

"Yes," she said quietly, because he must not be agitated.

"I have always believed," he began, "that a man should not be ashamed to own himself in the wrong, and to repent. There is something in the old Book about feeding your enemy, and heaping coals of fire. You have done all that."

"Oh, hush. You are not my enemy! What else could I have done?"

"What, indeed, being a follower of the One who spoke those words?"

Her eyes filled. "I was glad to do it for Jamie's father."

"Are you all alone in the world?" he asked after a brief silence.

"Except for my boy," she answered, her eyes brightening.

"Your boy? My grandson! I did not know. Call him," he added.

Jim came at her call, peeping in with wondering eyes.

"Come here, my boy. Jim, do they call you? Do you know who I am?"

"Yes, sir. You are my grandpa," answered Jim.

"And do you like me?"

Poor Jim! He was in a strait betwixt truth and politeness.

Mr. Douglas laughed shortly. "Well, sir! Are you dumb?"

"No, sir. I don't like you—very much; but mother said we must be sorry for you because—"

"Jim! Jim!" she interposed hastily.

"Don't stop him. Let him speak. Because what, Jim?"

" 'Cause you were poor."

Mr. Douglas looked at him sharply. "What makes you think that? Do you know where I live?"

"Yes, sir, in the big house on top of the hill. But mother said—"

A look from his mother checked him, but Mr. Douglas said quirkly: "I can guess. She meant that I was poor because I had no little grandson, no loving daughter to care for me. Was that it? Well, she was right, Jim. But perhaps we might remedy that, now we have found each other. Will you come and live with me in the big house, and take your father's place to me?"

"Not without mother," said Jim surlily, backing away.

"Perhaps she will come, too. Will you, Mary?" he called suddenly.

"My dear," he went on, as she came from the window where she had been standing, "I have not been just to you in the past. I want to make amends to you and the boy. And—could you call me what he—Jamie—did? I should like it."

"Dear father," she answered, and kissed him.

The big car came, a few days later, and took them all home to the big house to live.

And for the first time there was a happy Christmas in the big house, as there had always been in the little one at the foot of the hill, because the spirit of love and good will had entered into it, and the joy bells found an echo in three happy hearts because they were loving hearts.—J. L. Glover, in Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

A BOY THAT WOULD NOT GIVE UP

About forty years ago I stepped into a book store in Cincinnati in search of some books that I wanted. While there, a little ragged boy, not over twelve years of age, came in and inquired for a geography.

"Plenty of them," was the salesman's reply.

"How much do they cost?"

"One dollar, my lad."

"I did not know they were so much."

He turned to go out, and even opened the door, but closed it again and came back.

"I've got 60 cents," said he—"could you let me have a geography and wait a little while for the rest of the money?"

How eager his little bright eyes looked for an answer, and how he seemed to shrink within his ragged clothes, when the man, not very kindly, told him he could not. The disappointed little fellow looked up at me with a very poor attempt to smile and left the store. I followed him and overtook him.

"And what now?" I asked.

"Try another place, sir."

"Shall I go, too, and see how you succeed?"

"Oh, yes, if you like," said he in surprise.

Four different stores I entered with him, and each time he was refused.

"Will you try again?" I asked.

"Yes, sir, I shall try them all, or I should not know whether I could get one."

We entered the fifth store, and the little fellow walked up manfully and told the gentleman just what he wanted, and how much he had.

"You want the book very much?" asked the proprietor.

"Yes, very much."

"Why do you want it so very much?"

"To study, sir. I can't go to school, and I study when I can at home. All the boys have got one and they will get ahead of me. Besides, my father was a sailor, and I want to learn of the places where he used to go."

"Well, my lad, I will tell you what I will do. I will let you have a new geography, and you can pay me the remainder when you can, or I will let you have one that is not quite new for fifty cents."

"Are the leaves all in it, and just like the others, only not new?"

"Yes, just like the new one."

"It will do just as well, then, and I will have eleven cents left toward buying some other books. I am glad they did not let me have one at the other places."

Years later I went to Europe on one of the finest vessels that ever ploughed the waters of the Atlantic. We had beautiful weather until very near the end of the voyage; then came a terrific storm that would have sunk all on board had it not been for the captain. Every spar was laid low, the rudder was useless, and a great leak had shown itself, threatening to fill the ship. The crew were all strong, willing men, and the mates all practical seamen of the first class; but after pumping for one whole night, and the water still gaining upon them, they gave up in despair, and prepared to take to the boats, though they might have known no small boat could live in such a sea.

"I will land you safe at the dock in Liverpool," said the captain, "if you will be men."

He did land us safely, but the vessel sank, moored to the dock. The captain stood on the deck of the sinking vessel receiving the thanks and blessings of the passengers as they passed down the gangplank. As I passed he grasped my hand and said:

"Judge P—, do you recognize me?"

I told him that I was not aware that I had ever seen him until I stepped aboard his vessel.

"Do you remember that boy in Cincinnati?"

"Very well, sir. William Haverly."

"I am he," he said. "God bless you!"

And God bless noble Captain Haverly.—Young Folks' Weekly.

TAKE HOME A SMILE

By Edgar A. Guest

Take home a smile, forget the petty cares,
The dull grim grind of all the day's affairs;
The day is done, come by yourself a while,
Tonight, to those who wait, take home a smile.

Take home a smile; don't scatter grief and gloom
Where laughter and light hearts always bloom,
What though you've traveled many a dusty mile,
Footsore and weary, still take home a smile.

Take home a smile—it is not much to do,
But much it means to them who wait for you;
You can be brave for such a little while,
The day of doubt is done—take home a smile.

RESERVOIRS OR RIVERS?

God never intended that we should be reservoirs of living water, but rather that we should be flowing rivers. When the Rev. George Rhoad of the Africa Inland missions, was about to leave for Africa for the first time, he made a farewell visit to an old colored mammy who lived in Swamppoodle, now part of Philadelphia. He expressed to her his feeling of inadequacy for the task before him, when the old colored saint replied, "Sonny, you can't hold much, but you can spill lots." It is not the amount of the love of Christ, of his joy or peare that the Christian is able to contain but what he is able to give out that makes him a profitable servant of the Lord Jesus Christ.—Sunday School Times.

We welcome Melton's Grove to the A. C. B., Asheville and Lexington, South, to the College list, and Creswell and Flat Rock to the W. H. M. S. list. This makes 70 charges reporting on one or the other lists, but it leaves 22 to be heard from.

Liberty-Siler City goes over the top on the A. C. B. We have heard of others having the money in hand but it is not yet in the hands of the treasurers. Mount Carmel Church on South Lexington goes over as an individual church. We are glad to know of these churches that go over even before the entire charge goes over. Wonder which charge will go over first on the G. C. B. Who is going to be next on the College and on the A. C. B.? If your church goes over before your charge does, let the treasurer know and you will be so reported and have the distinction of standing on the Honor Roll the rest of the year.

Shocking Death.—Sudden death is always shocking, but the death we are about to report was shocking in an unusual degree. Last Thursday night Deputy Sheriff W. T. Bowman was called to Tabernacle church to arrest some chicken thieves. Some bagged chickens had been found by school children. Thieving had been going on for some time, but it was commonly believed that it was done by some mischievous boys of the neighborhood. The officer with other men decided to wait and watch for the coming of the marauders. About eleven o'clock they came, not mischievous boys but two negro men. When Mr. Bowman spoke, one of the negroes flashed a light upon him and shot him twice before he could rise to his feet. Death followed almost immediately. The two negroes fled, but one of them was caught by young Charlie Fields. The other escaped and is still at large. The slain officer was a son of Rev. J. H. Bowman who died suddenly on his way to church one Sunday morning last autumn. He was a member of Pleasant Union M. P. Church where the funeral was held last Saturday at 2 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. G. F. Millaway, was in charge; he was assisted by Drs. Dixon, J. D. Williams, and T. M. Johnson, and Rev. Mr. Miller, pastor of Alamance Presbyterian Church. Quite a number of ministers were present besides those named. This distressing event has evoked the sympathy of all hearts for those so sorely and suddenly bereaved. Their hurt is too great to be healed by any power less than that of God. May He comfort them and keep them. Brother Bowman was regarded by Sheriff Stafford as one of his best deputies. The sheriff and other county officers attended the funeral besides a large congregation of neighbors and friends.

—Simmons, one of the two negroes who shot and killed Deputy Sheriff Bowman, is still at large, though diligent search has been made for him.

—The United States Supreme Court has confirmed the decree of a lower court condemning Doheny and Fall for the contract to lease the oil lands of the government. The lessee has spent millions of dollars on the property since leased and claims damage. The high court refers to Congress the question of claims for damage.

—Production of rayon (artificial silk) reached 61 million pounds last year. The output for 1913 was only 1 1-2 million pounds.

—A total of 473 persons lost their lives in automobile accidents in the seventy-eight large cities of the United States during the first four weeks of 1927, Jan. 1-28. During the same period last year, in those cities, the total number of deaths from the same cause was 431.

—Hens pay a profit of $2. per head according to late experiments by poultry workers of State College.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Mrs. R. R. Ross

(Read in her funeral service by her pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard).

Rebekah Ellen, daughter of Joseph Dobson and Sarah McCulloch, was born in Guilford County, N. C., March 5, 1854. She was united in marriage to R. R. Ross, also of Guilford county, on February 5, 1874, the ceremony being performed at her home by an uncle, the Rev. Joseph Causey, a well known minister of his day.

Mrs. Ross professed saving faith in Jesus Christ in early life and united with Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church in Guilford county. After her marriage she moved her membership, first to Level Cross and later to Randleman. After coming to Asheboro thirty-seven years ago she assisted in organizing a Methodist Protestant church, and was one of the charter members. As a church member and Christian her interest is seldom ever surpassed. There is scarcely an office in the women's organizations of the church which she has not held with credit to herself and with profit to the organization. When she accepted an office of any kind, to her it became a sacred duty and obligation and she gave her best to it. Mrs. Ross assisted in organizing a Woman's Foreign Missionary society in Asheboro and for many years was its president. She also organized a Junior Christian Endeavor society and for quite a while was its superintendent.

While Mrs. Ross was a devoted member of her own church, her interest did not stop there. First of all, she loved her Lord, and after that she loved all His people. To her, church membership offered an opportunity for extending His Kingdom and of rendering service to all humanity. Many times she sat and talked with her pastor about some poor, last sinner whom she wanted to see saved. She was interested in all things that were for the good of the community and she gave herself to every task which had as its object the making of a better world.

Even though Mrs. Ross was a splendid church member and devout Christian and while she was interested in all things for the uplift of the community, yet perhaps her largest contribution was to her home, where she reigned as a queen. To her, home was a most sacred institution and she gave her best thought to it. This partly explains why her home was the ministers' home and why people loved to go there. Her influence had a great deal to do with the shaping the ideals of her children, of sending them out as blessings to the communities in which they live. Having been taught in the home the best and most enduring things, it is no wonder that this influence should be felt by all those who came in contact with her.

While we are here today to pay this last tribute of respect to her memory, we are also here to celebrate her triupmh, for hers was a triumphant life. She lived such a consecrated life that her going away was only the entering into a still larger life. The kind of a life she lived must go on forever. She anchored her soul in Jesus Christ and a soul thus anchored cannot really die. This thing we call death is nothing more than the laying down that which is frail and that which grows weak in order that the soul may not be hampered. Today we mourn because she has gone, yet we shall see her again. Someone has said, "If we love forever those whom we have lost, can we lose forever those whom we have loved?" Our hearts cry out, No! We shall see them again.

Mrs. Ross is survived by her husband, Mr. R. R. Ross, with whom she lived happily for 53 years year, five sons, Arthur, Charles, Joseph, Ferree and George; one daughter, Miss Esther; five brothers, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, Rev. J. F. McCulloch, D. D., and David McCulloch, all of Greensboro; Everett McCullochfi of Pleasant Garden, and C. E. McCulloch, of Wilmington. One daughter died in early childhood while another daughter, Mrs. Bertie Ross McDonald, preceded her mother to the spirit world by several years. There are also 17 living grandchildren.

To these loved ones we would say, Sorrow not as those who have no hope. Thank God for her life. The world is better because she lived in it and your lives are richer because of her influence. You will never forget the day, February 20, 1927, for on that day she went to her heavenly home. Now she beckons unto you to come. Let us resolve to meet her there.

Welborn

At a meeting of the Bible Class of the Welch Memorial Church, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas it was the will of Our Heavenly Father, to call from our midst our beloved Sister in Christ, Mrs. Delphine Welborn. And be it further—

Resolved: That in the death of Sister Welborn, the class has lost a faithful member, Welch Memorial Church, a ceaseless and consistent member, and the community at large, one whose thoughts were always for the betterment of the same, and be further—

Resolved: That while our loss is our dear departed sister's gain we are consoled with the thought, that she has gone to the reward that is promised to the faithful. And be it further—

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the class minutes, a copy sent to the bereaved family of the deceased, and a copy sent to and published in the city papers.

McLean

Sister Susan Elvira McLean, wife of Brother H. Frank McLean, died February 1, 1927 at 10:10 a.m., at the age of fifty-six years, four months and twenty days.

Sister McLean was the mother of twelve children, seven boys and five girls, ten of which are living.

I haven't seen in recent years a more devoted family of children to mother and father.

Sister McLean was a member of Shiloh M. P. Church for almost exactly forty years. She was a most faithful Christian and dutiful mother.

It was a sad day for the family, church, and neighborhood, But the time had come, as it must come to all of His children, for Jesus to say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you."

D. M. DEW, Pastor.

Lovelace

Mrs. Levina Fannie Lovelace died January 29, 1927, aged 86 years. She had been sick for a year. All was done for her that could be by her children and friends, but the cancer did its deadly work. She leaves behind seven daughters; Mrs. C. L. Ezell with whom her last days were spent, and Mrs. Maggie Burch of Spencer, Mrs. Lou Zegler of Jackson, Miss., Mrs. T. M. Ezell, Mrs. B. M. Cheek, of Graham, Mrs. Will Stapleton and Mrs. Ellen Browning of Greensboro, and forty-eight grandchildren and 53 great-grandchildren. The funeral was conducted by Rev. D. R. Williams assisted by Rev. T. A. and O. B. Williams.

She was a member of Haw River M. P. church, but the funeral was conducted from the Graham church, and the remains were placed in Linwood cemetery by her husband. Pall bearers were grandsons and flower girls were grand-daughters.

She is missed by all the family and friends, but we would not grieve too much as her trust was in God and she wanted to go home.

Rejoice, oh grieving heart,
The hours fly past.
With each some sorrow dies.
With each some shadow flies until at last
The red dawn in the east
Bids weary night depart,
And pain is past.

MRS. E. F. STEELE, A Grand-Daughter.

Townsend

Ila Smith Townsend, aged 26, wife of Roy Townsend, Proximity, died in a local hospital Saturday in the afternoon, February 12th. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Sandy Ridge at 4 p. m. Monday, February 14th, after which her body was laid to rest in the Sandy Ridge cemetery to await the call of Him who said to Lazarus, "Come forth."

She was a member of the above-named church for a number of years.

The following acted as pallbearers: J. M. Matthews, Loy Duckles, Ray Bassinger, S. A. Wylie, William Leach and A. L. Pennington. Flower bearers were as follows: Ellen Tyson, Virginia Brady, Annie Belle, and Mrs. Calvin Jordan.

She leaves a husband and seven children, one brother, and three sisters. A good wife, kind mother and faithful church member is gone, but not forgotten. May the God of all grace greatly bless all bereaved friends and relatives.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Caroleen and Shelby.—As it has been some time since the Herald has had a report from these churches we will say that we are not dead or asleep. Things are moving on nicely. Our Sunday school and church attendance is steadily growing at both churches. Caroleen has an average attendance of 90 in Sunday school and each department is doing good work.

One of the latest signs of progress in the church was the old-time class meeting held last night. The meeting was composed of a goodly number of the members of the church. The class teachers went to each present, took him by the hand and asked him or her about their spiritual condition. After the class leaders had gone around, the pastor gave an invitation to those who were not satisfied with their Christian experience to come for prayer. All came and the Christian part of the congregation gathered around the altar and offered prayer for cold and indifferent church members and for the unsaved.

The meeting was a success in every way. All went to their homes with the blessings of God upon them.

Shelby Church has had a struggle to live for the past year and a half, as all know that have read the papers. They have been laboring under the weight of a law suit. This has held them back some, but the faithful few have stood by the church and will continue to stand by it as long as there is anything to stand by. These good people are to be commended for their loyalty to the church.

The family and friends of Mrs. Ella Lee Ramsey gave her a surprise birthday dinner on Sunday, February 20. This was an enjoyable occasion and we hope for Sister Ramsey many more days like this.

There were 31 present around the heavily loaded table. To add to the joy of the occasion the two-year-old son of Rev. and Sister Frank Glenn joined in the prayer of thanks with a hearty amen at the close.

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

South Lexington—Owing to the rain and unfavorable weather, the attendance in Sunday school for the second and third Sundays decreased. There were 195 present last Sunday, which was an increase of nine over the previous Sunday.

There were usual sized congregations for both preaching services last Sunday. Pastor Ridge delivered two helpful sermons.

The Sunday school last Sunday enjoyed some splendid music by a male quartet from Erlanger, which rendered three selections during the opening exercises of the school.

Brother C. B. Yates, president of the men's class, who was taken to a hospital at Charlatte about two weeks ago, was brought to his home last week. We regret to report that his condition has not improved.

Pastor Ridge announced last Sunday night that a series of special services will begin in the South Lexington church on the first Sunday night in April and continue up to and including Easter Sunday, and longer if the interest justifies. He stated that he had not engaged any help yet, but plans to secure another pastor to help in the meeting.

The men's class will visit the Children's Home next Sunday afternoon. They will go in automobiles (and Fords will be used, too). Some of the men have never been to the Home and the trip is anticipated with pleasure by them. They will start on the trip about 1:30 and return probably about 5 o'clock.

Superintendent Koontz, leader of the Sunday school work, is preparing a program for the Easter service which will be held on Easter Sunday. Already regular practices are being held each week.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will be at Mount Carmel for the regular appointment there. We will have preaching at 7 o'clock at night.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—Our W. F. M. S. met February 20. Mrs. E. S. Welborn, president, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, and Mrs. R. M. Andrews from the High Point College were present.

The meeting was opened by singing, "I Love to Tell the Story." Mrs. C. L. Whitaker read the scripture lesson and offered prayer. Roll call and reading of the minutes, followed by a collection of dues amounting to $2.40. Received 11 new members, making the membership twenty-seven. Afterwards a splendid talk by by Mrs. Whitaker on Foreign Missions, also a fine talk by Mrs. Andrews on "Moslem Women." Song, "Rescue the Perishing." The business meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. Andrews.

Dinner was served and enjoyed by all present. After dinner we reassembled, singing "I Am Resolved," followed by a story, "Tillie's Thank-Offering Dollar," read by Miss Ruth Green. A group of girls next gave a missionary pageant, "The Awakening." Between the two scenes Mrs. Andrews sang beautifully, "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult." We next received a thank-offering amounting to $16.67. The meeting was closed by a short prayer by Mr. J. R. Stone.

(Miss) RUTH PAYNE, Cor. Sec.

Mount Hermon, Mount Hermon Charge—February 5th, the Mount Hermon auxiliary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society met with Mrs. Lonnie Holt. One member absent, one new one added to the roll. Interest increasing in the work. It was decided to invite Mrs. B. J. Vestal and perhaps others from our sister auxiliary at Friendship to meet with us at Mrs. E. F. Holt's March 5th.

February 6th, our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, preached to a good congregation on "God Is Love." He said in the beginning he had chosen a subject too big for a young man to handle, but he handled it in such a way as to show he had given it careful study, and he planted some valuable truths in the hearts of his hearers.

February 20th our pastor came at the usual time, but did not preach; he had a group of H. P. College students to talk on the C. E. topic for the day. Those who talked were Herman Coble, Pauline Whitaker, Nettie Stuart, Elizabeth Hanner, Ruby Isley, Pomona Johnson, Floyd Garrett and the pastor. Miss Young brought the girls. The condition of the roads kept part of the people from getting out, and caused others to be late, but those who were fortunate enough to hear these young people enjoyed their talks so much that they are hoping to have them come again. They went to Friendship and Belmont, and organized at both places. Had Mount Hermon not already had a society they would have organized here, too.

REPORTER.

Mount Cermal, South Lexington Charge—Our Sunday school has been off considerably for the past two Sundays on account of bad weather and sickness among some of our regular attendants. Although we are looking forward for a large and better Sunday school when the sick get well and the weather gets better and spring opens up.

Our pastor, Brother Ridge, filled his regular appointment Sunday with a forceful nd helpful sermon. His subject was "A True Follower."

About 75 children, and grandchildren, relatives, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mrs. E. S. Swicegood and gave her a birthday dinner February 13 in honor of her 74th birthday. After thanks were returned by Brother C. L. Hedrick all partook of a bountiful dinner. Miss Lena Helmistetler baked a beautiful birthday cake, set with 74 candles.

Best wishes to the editor and the Herald and its many readers.

H. V. S., reporter.

Denton Church—Our Sunday school was in charge of the Baraca Class No. 2. The opening prayer was led by a visitor, Mr. Hauser, A male quartet, composed of R. H. Hardy, C. T. Surratt, D. M. Sexton and Othell Kearns, sang "Have Thine Own Way, Lord." The devotional reading was by D. M. Sexton, the teacher of the class.

The lesson was a great lesson yesterday, "Making the Community Christian.

After the classes returned, Prof I. O. Hauser, of White Plains, N. C., gave us a great talk on the lesson, which was enjoyed by all present. We are always glad to have Mr. Hauser with us. He seems like home-folks. Hope he will come again soon. Many thanks to the Baraca class and their visitors for the service.

Attendance yesterday, 100; attendance year ago, 58; offering yesterday, $3.15; offering years ago, $1.47. Large attendance class, No. 7, present 27. Large offering class, No. 2, $1.46.

Our Christian Endeavor attendance was small last night to what it has been. The lesson was a great lesson for us to think about, "Practicing World Brotherhood."

REPORTER.

Mount Carmel, Granville Circuit—It is with much regret that I have to say that we have been snowed and rained out of our last two church services. It seems as if it is almost impossible to get people out in the country to go out to church services in bad weather, and, too, there have been quite a lot of colds and measles among our membership. But as spring is nearing, we are looking forward to much better work in the church. Although there has been lots of sickness and bad weather, our Missionary Societies have held all their meetings and continue to do well. Our last missionary meeting was held at the home of Mrs. O. H. Powell February 15 with good attendance. Mrs. P. P. Cunningham had charge of the devotional, and conducted it from the February Rose Jar. Mrs. W. O. Ellis had the chapter of Moslem Women and was ably assisted by Rev. H. F. Fogleman. We decided at this meeting to have a chicken dinner, all the members donating the different things we were to sell. As there was no other business, the meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. H. W. Anderson in March. The hostess, assisted by her daughters, serve a delicious salad course. At our next regular church service, which will be March 13, we will hold our annual thank-offering service. People, stop and think of the many blessings we have in a year and show your thankfulness by making this the biggest offering we ever had.

On Thursday, February 25, our Missionary Societies gave a chicken dinner, and it was a grand success in every way. We thank all who helped us to have such a succes. We realized a neat sum, which will help us so much.

We are all looking forward with much interest to the Branch Meeting, as it meets right here at home with us this time. Let everybody come. REPORTER.

Reidsville—Last Sunday was "Missionary Day" in our church here. The pastor preached a missionary sermon in the morning, and the women held a thank-offering service in the evening. It was gratifying to note that the congregations at both services were the largest we have had since conference. The thank-offering amounted to $30, which was very good indeed when we consider the heavy demands made upon our small membership. The women gave a little pageant, called "A Missionary Clinic," which was splendidly rendered and greatly enjoyed by all who witnessed it. This was followed by a talk on "Why Give a Thank-Offering?" by the President of the North Carolina Branch.

The Sunday school, under the superintendency of C. R. Reed, is increasing in numbers and attendance. The Cradle Roll department is being reorganized, and a Home Department is being organized. In a little while we hope to have a 100 per cent Sunday school.

Mrs. Sallie McCollum and Mrs. J. E. Burton, who have been hospital patients, are at home and well on the road to health once more. We are glad to report, also, that Brother J. F. Dixon, the father of our President, Dr. A. G. Dixon, is recovering from an attack of "flu."

Brother J. A. Gunn celebrated his birthday a few days ago. The pastor and his wife had the pleasure of helping to celebrate the happy event, especially when the sumptuous dinner was served. We wish Brother Gunn many returns of his natal day, and hope that it may be our privilege to help him celebrate every one of them.

Brother Luther McCollum does nothing these days but just smile. The reason for this is the arrival of a son at his home on Washington's birthday.

Our shut-ins, Brother Rube McCollum and Miss Mamie Pegram, while deprived of the privilege of ever attending church services, are happy in the fact that Christ, their Saviour and Friend, abides with them in their confinement, and gives them comfort and consolation. It is a great privilege to minister as best we can to these loyal servants of the King. GEO. R. BROWN.

Saxapahaw Charge—Large congregations were present at Saxapahaw and Salem last Sunday. We were glad to see several of our number who have been kept from church because of sickness occupying their pews again.

The annual thank-offering service was held at the Concord church on the third Sunday afternoon in February. Mrs. R. T. Woody, president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and her splendid co-workers arranged a program that was inspiring, consisting of recitations, readings, solos, and quartets. The pastor was called on for a talk, after which an offering was taken for Foreign Missions.

A number of the members gathered at this church, Concord, a few days ago and planted flowers and shrubbery. This is a step in the right direction, and we believe it is just the beginning of improvements at this place.

All the Sabbath schools on this charge have been running through the winter with fairly good attendance. Easter programs will be arranged at each church.

Mrs. Mary Woody, the mother of our Bros. R. S., J. F., and R. T. Woody, who has been very sick, is much improved. We hope she will soon be able to occupy her pew again.

Mr. Colon Thompson and Miss Maynor Hargrove two splendid young people, motored to Danville, Va., and were married recently. Their many friends will be glad to learn that they have decided to locate in our community.

Miss Lillian Lindley, who spent some time visiting her brother, Prof. T. E. Lindley, at High Point College, has returned home.

We are very grateful to the members of this charge for the many valuable and useful gifts, consisting of silverware, chinaware, cut-glass, and many other things too numerous to mention. Several cash presents were given. Mrs. Isley joins me in thanking the good people for all these donations.

H. L. ISLEY.

Midway, Guilford Circuit—We were very fortunate to have Mrs. A. G. Dixon with us last Sunday morning. The purpose of Mrs. Dixon's visit to us was to organize a Woman's Missionary Society, but as there were so few women present it was put off till a later date. So Mrs. Dixon had charged of the morning service, bringing to us a wonderful message. Her subject was, "God's Love to Us."

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the leadership of Mr. Lamb. The attendance has been very good this winter.

Several new members have been added to the church. REPORTER.

Shiloh Church, Randolph Circuit—On account of illness, we are sorry to say the reporter has failed in her duty, but hope she or the next reporter will do lots better in the future.

The Sunday school teachers for the following year are: Superintendent, Mr. W. K. Hemphill; assistant superintendent, J. S. Pickett; secretary, Grace Garrett; assistant secretary, Miss Gladys Pickett; adult class, Mr. W. P. Pickett; assistant, Mrs. Grady Hemphill; senior class, Mr. Charlie Hemphill; assistant, Miss Gladys Pickett; intermediates class, Miss Eva Brown; assistant, Miss May York; junior class, Mrs. Charlie Hemphill; assistant, Mrs. J. S. Pickett; primary class, Mrs. A. L. Kime; assistant, Mrs. J. L. Whitaker; beginners class, Mrs. W. P. Pickett; assistant, Mrs. Clyde Jones.

Rev. A. O. Lindley will deliver the usual sermon next Sunday, February 27, at 3 p. m.

Mr. James M. Brown, who has been in the hospital at Oteen for quite a time, has returned home to his mother in Julian. We are glad to have him in our midst once more.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett has been confined to her home for a few weeks; she seems to be improving. We hope she will soon be out with us again.

Mr. Frank Jordan, who has passed his 90th birthday, is confined with a very deep cold.

F. E. JORDAN, Reporter.

Democrat Circuit—This our first report from Democrat Charge. I want to thank each one for kindness shown us and also for the nice pounding they gave us December 8 amounting to about $40. I believe I am serving as good a people as we have in our conference.

We have very good attendance here for the winter months.

We started our Sunday school at Democrat church February 20 with a nice congregation. We hope to get our Sunday schools started at most of the churches when spring opens up.

I have been prevented from filling some of my appointments on account of rain and muddy roads. I have not yet been able to reach all the homes on my charge on account of bad weather, but I have made 63 visits in the homes of the people. I hope I can reach every home when spring opens up.

I assisted Rev. J. A. Carm in a revival meeting at Prink Fork last week. Our attendance was very good for the season of the year. The Lord blessed us all in an unusual way. My days are in the Lord's hands and I grow more and more anxious to do His will. Our life work will soon be over. Pray for us that I may have His guidance in every act.

H. W. BELL, Pastor.

High Point.—Sunday was observed as Foreign Missionary Day. At the 11 o'clock service Prof. P. E. Lindley brought us a stirring and inspiring message on "The World Christian." He stressed two great facts in his appeal in behalf of the foreign missionary spirit: First, we are all bound together in one common brotherhood of nations by the spirit of Jesus, it being the nature of human life. Second, there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, the same Lord being over all, and there is no foreign nation. The church of Christ cannot live in America alone, but must expand to the uttermost parts of the earth. At this service Miss Mae Kirkman played the pipe organ, and Prof. Dan W. Smith joined with the choir in singing a beautiful anthem, "Angel Voices Ever Singing," by Shelley, and later he and Mrs. J. Hobart Allred sang a lovely duet, "In the Cross of Christ We Glory." At the evening service the program was presented by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The President, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, gave a splendid address on "Why the Thank-offering," in which she presented some interesting facts in regard to the women's work in our foreign fields. Mrs. Whitaker was one of the founders and charter members of this local Society during the pastorate of her late, lamented husband, Dr. C. L. Whitaker. An inspiring pageant called, "Hanging out a Sign," was rendered by members of the Young People's Circle of the Missionary Society. Miss Claire Douglas was the "M. D.," seeking for a place "to hang out her sign." Miss Rosalie Andrews took the part of a Moslem Woman, and was dressed as a native with black flowing robe, and heavy veil, Miss Grace Koontz was a Korean, Mrs. John Armfield appeared in a Chinese costume, Miss Inez Strader wore the beautiful costume of a Japanese girl, Miss Inez Reynolds represented an African girl, while her sister, Miss Irene, was a girl from the Philippines, and Miss Marjorie Welborn represented India. This pageant was most pleasing and instructive. The little folks of the Junior Mission Circle, 18 in number, appeared in the pulpit and sang "Heavenly Father, Send Thy Blessing," with fine effect. These young children under the able leadership of Mrs. R. M. Andrews are doing splendid work for the missionary cause. They meet regularly and contribute liberally each month. The First Church is very proud indeed of this fine Circle, and also of the Young People's Circle. From their ranks we are expecting the leaders of tomorrow. The Thank-offering was taken, and amounted to the sum of $68.15, but this amount will be increased by additional donations, as, several members were out of town. We are expecting at least $100.00.

The Mission Study Class held a delightful meeting at the church on Monday afternoon with a good attendance. Chapter No. 5 of "Moslem Women" was presented by Mrs. S. S. Coe in a very interesting manner, and she was ably aided by Mrs. H. A. Garrett, who told of the Medical Work among the Moslem women in Turkey, Asia, and Egypt, and Mrs. J. H. Allred told of the Child Welfare work. The Question Box was answered by Mesdames E. L. Ballard, J. H. Pritchard, and S. D. Shelton. It was decided to observe next Friday, March 4th, as a Day of prayer in our church in cooperation with the world-wide movement of all denominations. Prayer services will be held at three intervals; at 10:30 o'clock a.m. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker will be the leader, at 3 p.m. the service will be presided over by Mrs. E. L. Ballard, and again in the evening at 7:30 Rev. Lester Ballard will lead in the devotionals. It is earnestly hoped and expected that a large number of our members will attend one or all these services, and join in this beautiful custom of uniting our petitions in world-wide fellowship and universal love.

The Brotherhood, or Men's Club, will hold a meeting Thursday evening for which a good program is being planned, and it is expected that a large number of the men of the church will enjoy the social hour of fellowship. A supper will be served to them by a group of the ladies.

Mr. R. H. Shaw was the leader at the Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening, the topic being "Practicing World Brotherhood."

The Sunday School Workers' Council will be held Tuesday evening at the church. A full attendance of officers and teachers is expected, as a new feature is being prepared by the committee.

After the resignation of Don C. MacRae as Judge of Municipal Court, the Governor has appointed Lewis E. Teague Judge of the New City Court of High Point for two years. This Court will try all civil cases instead of taking them to Superior Court at Greensboro as heretofore. This meets a long-felt need in behalf of High Point people, and it will be a great convenience for the lawyers here. Judge Teague is to be congratulated on this honor, he being one of the youngest Judges in the state.

Post-master O. R. York went to Washington last week with a petition for a new Post Office building here. It was signed by civic club officials and others, and was presented to the postal authorities. Mr. York was authorized to investigate suitable locations for sale, and it is thought that the present site will be sold, and another lot secured for a new building. The business here is expanding so rapidly, and more commodious quarters are needed.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Neese returned Sunday afternoon from a visit to the bereaved family of the latter's nephew, Mr. Wm. T. Bowman. This family has indeed been sorely bereaved, this being the fifth death in less than two years. The hearty sympathy of a large circle of friends here is extended to Mrs. Neese and other members of this sorrowing family. May the God of all comfort be very near them in these hours of grief and loneliness, and bind up their broken hearts. These strange dispensations, the removal of a devoted husband and father from his young family, are indeed hard to understand, but in His own good time and way the reason will be made plain.

Messrs. C. L. Whitaker of Gastonia and Theodore Ballard of Charlotte were guests of relatives and friends here for the week-end.

Rev. and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard attended the funeral of Mrs. Emily Armfield, widow of the late Albert Armfield, at Greensboro last Friday. Mrs. Armfield and her daughter, Mrs. Ward, at whose home she died, have been were highly esteemed members of West End church for a number of years. Mr. Ballard assisted in the funeral services.

We are pleased to announce that Mrs. W. D. Burgess, who has been seriously ill, is improving.

Miss Ida Davis, who was painfully injured by an automobile one Sunday evening while in front of the church on her way to attending services, is greatly improved and is able to be up in the house most of the day. Her many friends are pleased to hear of this rapid recovery.

Mebane.—Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock service the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society gave their Thank-offering program. Miss Pauline Nicholson gave some interesting facts about our work and workers in Japan. Mr. Suits talked on our work in China and the conditions existing there. Mrs. H. C. Nicholson gave a very interesting outline of our mission work in India. All these talks were helpful and make us feel more keenly the need of these nations. Special music was rendered also at this service. The collection amounted to $22.40.

On Monday afternoon of last week the Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. P. N. Thompson; 27 members present together with Miss Effie Boone and Miss Ezora Sink as visitors. The collection taken at this meeting was $14.25. During the social hour Mrs. Thompson assisted by Mrs. Hyfill Jobe served sandwiches and coffee. Our next meeting will be with Mrs. Charlie Jobe.

On the evening of February 14 at 7:30 the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met in joint session with Mrs. J. W. Nicholson and Miss Pauline Nicholson. Twenty-six members present. We were glad to have Mrs. J. R. Boone join the Home society at this time. The program rendered was interesting and helpful. Our missionary quilt made by the Home society was sold at this meeting to Mrs. H. C. Nicholson for $10.00, the total amount, realized from the quilt being $50.00. During the social hour Miss Nicholson served banana pudding with hot coffee and whipped cream. Our next meeting will be with Mrs. Edward Suits.

REPORTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Circuit—Brother Ridge preached today another good sermon. After preaching, Brother Ridge administered the Lord's Supper.

Brother Hank Taylor's wife is in the hospital very sick. We ask prayers that she may be restored to health if it is the Lord's will. We missed them at preaching today.

There has been some improvement on the church. They have built a recess pulpit. We hope to see the church painted soon.

ABIGAIL COGGIN, Reporter.

Canaan, Denton Charge—Brother Henderson filled his appointment Sunday with a very inspiring message which seemed to be enjoyed by everyone. He also filled his appointment the second Sunday, but the congregation was small due to the rainy weather and rough roads. We are glad indeed that our pastor is so interested in us that he will come and preach to us regardless of the rough weather.

Our Sunday school seems to be on the growing list, yet we feel that there are several in our community that are neglecting the church. Let us as members of our Sunday school speak to these seople in a winning way that will cause them to join in with us. Perhaps they do not realize the pleasures they are missing by not attending the church and lending a helping hand to their dear Master. May God's richest blessings go with us and help us all to do more and more for our Master.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

First Church, Albemarle.—Our work is going a long very well. Our Sunday school is gradually increasing. We are going to make a special drive to increase our attendance. We have divided our school in two sides known as the reds and blues and our campaign will end Easter Sunday. A new member will count so many points for the side that gets one and regular attendance will count so many. The side that gets the most points will be entertained with cake and cream or something that will be pleasing to the appetite by the losing side. We have been listening to a series of sermons by our pastor on Raising the Standard of Christians, and I have never heard any better gospel preaching in my life. Brother Anderson preached last night on the Standard of True Greatness, using for his text, For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink, and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost even from his mother's womb.

He showed that true greatness comes only through true service to God and your fellow men showing that men were sometime considered great in the sight of men but that God looked on the inward side and not the side that the world looked on.

Our second quarterly meeting will be held on Wednesday night, March 9th. We have a system that we are using in these meetings that we think would be interesting to a good many of our folks. Each chairman is to hand in a written report each meeting on blanks gotten up to suit each officer, for instance, the form for Sunday school superintendent goes like this: no. on roll at beginning of quarter, new members, total on roll, average attendance, money raised by Sunday school. These forms will be filed away in our secretary's book.

Our cottage prayer meeting will be held Wednesday night with Brother and Sister C. W. Hatley. Miss Louise Green leader. J. W. Whitlock Sub.

We have purchased new chairs for our choir which will add very much to the needs of our church. We bought a regular auditorium chair. We are looking forward for their early arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Moton visited Mr. Moton's parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Moton, in High Point, last week. The writer wishes these good folks many more years of useful service. R. L. L., Reporter.

Zoar, Mecklenburg.—Our work is progressing very nicely. We are still having a very good Sunday school.

We had a real good time at Zoar last Sunday. A Wesleyan Methodist preacher, Rev. Floyd Wilson, from Rock Hill, preached at eleven o'clock; he gave us a helpful message on the second coming of Christ to a large congregation. We had about twelve of the Rock Hill folks with us. We were so glad to have them with us.

A choir from Fort Mill sang; the singing was good.

Rev. W. T. Totten, our faithful pastor, has filled all of his appointments. We know he is a worker for the Master. We have been blessed wonderfully this year at our church; reading of the deaths at other places. We have not had any at Zoar. We are glad to thank the Lord for it all. Readers of the Herald, remember us in your prayers.

BETTIE JONES, Reporter.

State Street Church.—On Sunday night, February 20, the regular Thank-offering service was given in the form of a missionary pageant by the ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society. The offering given was applied on the general conference budget. The Society meets Thursday of this week at the home of Mrs. F. J. Cox on Vance Circle.

We had a gain of 22 in Sunday school attendance last Sunday over the attendance of the Sunday before. Some of the classes are going to be divided as soon as more teachers are secured.

C. E. Society continues to grow and interest never lags.

Brother Bethea announced Sunday a.m. that our revival meeting would be held about May 1st or near that time. We are hoping and praying for a real revival in the true and full sense of the word and request your prayers to that end.

Mrs. Wilcox and her children, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bethea, are visiting at the parsonage the past few weeks. Mrs. Wilcox is a helpful and delightful addition to all the services. Wish we could keep her.

The Junior choir which has been recently organized is doing some fine singing and seems to enjoy it as do all who hear.

REPORTER.

Concord.—After two weeks' series of revival meeting, the Senior Christian Endeavor Society met last Friday night for its regular weekly meeting. The society had made for its goal fifty present including members, visitors, and new members. We are delighted to say that the number present was fifty-two. Our leader, Miss Geneva Simpson, brought a very inspiring program which seemed to be enjoyed by all.

After the meeting Miss Maggie Mann and Miss Nina Little invited all members present to the Baraca room of the church where they were served lemonade and sandwiches, many interesting games were played afterwards.

We are glad to add to our list fifteen new members, may we bid them God-speed in the work of His kingdom.

Those who enjoyed the program and social were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Henry, Bernice Nash, Nina Little, Maggie Mann, Geneva Simpson, Mary Polk, Agnes Polk, Dessie Lea Little, Mildred Burris, Eula Burris, Mrs. Robert Pennion, Lillian Wiley, Adelaid Honeycutt, Bertha Earnhardt, Kathrine Widenhouse, Lilly Troutman, Rose Hagler, Bertha Brown, Mrs. L. M. Williams, Mrs. T. H. Scarboro, Dora Wilhelm, Lilly Nash, Melda Scarboro, Louise Hendry, Ethel Peck, Pauline Lowder, Cecil Mae Little, Daisy Furr, Myrtle Furr, Mary Melton, Joyce Edson, Mary Newton, Lillian Eudy, Annie Clayton, Ethel Howard, Martha Scarboro, Lorene Craven, Kathleen Tuter, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Davis, Homer Dorton, Mr. P. E. Todd, Mr. R. P. Benson, Zerry Potts, John Burris, William Newton, Erskine Newton, Waddell Newton, Leander Nash, Oscar Robbins, Clarence Tuter, Ralph Kerley. ONE PRESENT.

Randleman Charge.—Quite a number of events have transpired since my last report. I append a few.

Deaths—About one month ago funeeral services for Mrs. Caroline Hudson were held from the home of her son, C. W. Hudson, of Worthville. She was 80 years old and a good woman.

On February 18th services for Mrs. Mary Wall were held at Level Cross. She also is favorably spoken of. Both of these good women are being missed.

Accessions—We have received two valuable members by transfer from the M. E. church here. Mrs. Leonard Ward united recently with the Worthville congregation. Mr. C. L. Brookshire casts his lot with Mt. Lebanon.

We were the recipients of a generous pounding a few days ago. The Worthville people did it. Supplies of all kinds for the pantry were included. We were, and are, highly pleased. Who wouldn't be?

On the second Sunday in February Prof. P. S. Kennett preached for us at Worthville. He held the attention of his hearers throughout and made a fine impression on the people.

Mt. Lebanon now has three preaching services each month. The charge gets nine services each month. W. H. NEESE.

NOTICE TO PRESIDENTS OF W. F. M. SOCIETIES

If someone in your society has not received a blank to fill out for the secretary of Young People's Work of the W. F. M. S., it is because you have not reported to me that your young people are organized.

Please send me a report of your organizations. The name of organization, number of members, dues collected, special work done, special money collected, etc.

If you do not have missionary organizations, but your young people are doing definite missionary work, mission study, etc., through the C. E. Society, please tell me about that, and plan to send at least one young person from your church to the Branch Meeting.

NOTICE

The second quarterly conference of Flat Rock Circuit will meet at Flat Rock Church on Saturday before the third Sunday in March at 2 p. m., being the 19th day of March.

May each member realize that God is taking note of what we do and what we don't do. May each remember our work will soon be finished and what shall our record be?

JOEL B. TROGDEN, Pastor.
Flat Rock Circuit, Feb. 25, 1927.

DOWN WITH THE INVADER!

The United States is at war! Not against any foreign nation but against a foreign bug known as the European corn borer. That deadly enemy of the corn crop has gained such a strong foothold in the United States during the past few years that Congress has just passed a bill setting aside 10 million dollars to fight the pest. President Coolidge has signed the measure.—Current Events.

—"Cuba today would be an American colony if the United States had been the imperialistic nation which she has at times been pictured. All the development of Cuba has been due to the influence of the United States, which is the benefactor of the Latin-American races. We have done great things under our independence. Cuba is now the connecting link of the world's commerce. We had practically no public schools in 1898; in 1902 we had 1,700, and in 1927 we have more than 4,000 in addition to 100 private schools." —Don Orestes Ferrara, Cuba's Amassador to the United States.

—"Washington was a real man among men, a human being subject to the trials and temptations common to all mortals. When we regard him in this character and have revealed to us the judgment with which he met his problems, we shall all the more understand and revere his true greatness. No great mystery surrounds him. He was a man endowed with what has been called uncommon common sense, with tireless industry, with a talent for taking infinite pains, and with a mind able to understand the universal and eternal problems of mankind."—Coolidge.

Offerings by churches and individuals: Gillburg Church, Vance Circuit, $3.86; Tabernacle, Tabernacle Circuit, by Mr. J. M. Brown, Greensboro, $5.00; Pine Grove, Kernersville Circuit, $3.65; a nice box of clothing and four pair of new shoes from Mrs. Bettie Davenport, Craswell, N. C.

Sunday school offerings: Mitchell Grove, Guilford Circuit, $2.26; Calvary, Greensboro, $20; Shoale, the circuit not mentioned, $7.57; Shiloh, N. Davidson, $4.62; Lebanon, Spring Church Circuit, $2.08.

We thank you again for your help. When you have as large a family as we have to look after you would appreciate help, too. I feel very proud that the people have been so kind and so thoughtful of the Home while it was all left up to me to look after, or at least the responsibility was upon me. By the time the next report comes out we will have a new superintendent, Dr. E. F. Allman, from Farmville, N. C. We are glad indeed that he has decided to come, for the work is too heavy for any one man. So I guess this will be my last report to the paper. You will look for the report to come from Dr. Allman next week.

Sincerely yours,

J. A. DIXON.

—"I must express my admiration of President Coolidge's sincerity in proposing a new five-power conference. His humane mind is one that Japanese can thoroughly understand. He is not thinking of America particularly when he proposes a reduction of naval strength. It is well known that the United States, the richest country in the world, can build ten times the number of ships that it is possible for any other nation to construct. Therefore, the President of the United States must be acting in the cause of humanity."—Premier Wakatsuki of Japan.

Are We Israelites?

A book was published perhaps fifty years ago to prove that the English people are descendants of the lost ten tribes of Israel. It seems not to have produced any widespread conviction of the truth of the theory, though it was decidedly interesting. The Dearborn Independent of February 19 has an article by Mark John Levy, a Christian Jew, arguing that the Anglo-Saxons are descendants of the lost ten tribes fo Israel. This, too, is interesting, but so much of it appears fanciful that it does not seem probable that it will be found convincing to many. If we are descendants of the Hebrews, it seems likely that the resemblance of our language to the Hebrew language would be far greater than it is. Mr. Levy in his article has the following reference to the linguistic evidences in the case:

"Scripture narrates that the Ten Tribes were taken captive to Assyria by Shalmaneser (721 B. C.) one hundred and thirty-four years before Judah was taken captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar (587 B. C.) and that they never returned as a representative body to Palestine. Led by Dan, the northernmost tribe, they gradually wandered from Media, by way of the Caucasus Mountains, to the western part of Europe—Dan as a waymark stamping his name (Judges 18:29) on that continent; Dar-dan-elles, *Don, Dan*ube, *Dan*aric Alps, Scan*din*avia, *Den*mark, Lon*don,* and so forth, and so forth. Consonants only are arbitrary in the Hebrew language."

Mr. Levy awakens doubt as to the correctness of his views by the positive and confident manner in which he interprets certain ancient and obscure prophecies. We have no prejudice against the hypothesis that we are children of Abraham, but we wish the evidence to be stronger than it is to bring assurance.

Almost Unbelievable

That the same man should do two things so diverse in character seems almost incredible, but we read that the man who wrote—

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers 'round its head sublime," and all the rest of this splendid hymn, also gave orders for the burning of a large part of Canton, China, in which eight or ten thousand homes were destroyed and many human lives were lost, in the interest of the opium trade. Perhaps only the life of Paul exhibits such amazing inconsistency.

—The Supreme Court of the United States has just enunciated a principle that is so obviously true that one wonders that it has not been recognized everywhere before. It is the principle that a man is disqualified to act in a judicial capacity if his fees are contingent upon the manner of his decision. This will cut out the imposition of fines all of which or part of which go to the man that imposes them.

Intellectual Ability of the Ancients

We moderns have fallen into the habit of exalting ourselves and discounting the men of long ago. We are like boys in the smart age who feel themselves far in advance of the "old man." And there is perhaps as much to justify the new generation in its contempt for the immediately preceding generation as there is to justify the modern feeling of superiority to the people of long ago. Aside from the really notable advances in physical science, in what do we excel the ancients? And as to the knewledge of the material world, this does not prove our mental superiority. It is to be explained by the fact that we have made the material world a subject of study as our fathers did not. Had they applied their minds as we have, their progress might have been as rapid and as great in proportion to the time given.

Ancient literature brings us face to face with indubitable evidences of great minds. The book of Job is one of the oldest books in the world and one of the greatest in its revelation of the power of human thought. What deep questions it handles! What amazing knowledge it reveals! We see there that the author had advanced to the point of distinguishing the soul from the body and of grasping the fact that the soul survives the dissolution of the body. We hear him saying in the nineteenth chapter, 26th verse, that after worms have destroyed the body, yet apart from the flesh shall he see God. (This is according to the Revised Version. The old version incorrectly reads, "yet in my flesh shall I see God.") There are other Hebrew writers who in ancient times wrote with a mental power equal to that shown by the world's best writers today. When we turn to Greek and Roman literature we find the same thing true. What country in modern times has produced three men who in mental ability can be placed ahead of Socrates, Plato and Aristotle? Knowledge has advanced and the modern thinker has the advantage of all that has been discovered for him, but with this advantage the moderns are not eclipsing the men of old time in the display of mental power. With all the boasted progress of the centuries, men do not seem to have grown in mental ability.

—The British Museum and the University of Pennsylvania have a joint exploring party in Ur, the first home of Abraham. Through the associated press this party reports some interesting recent finds. Graves dating back more than three thousand years before the time of Christ have been opened, hundreds of them, and many articles made of silver and gold and other metals have been taken from these graves, most of them articles of personal adornment. The explorers are surprised at the advance in art revealed by these objects. Many of them have a modern look, so advanced was the art of working metals in that far-off time. The more we know about past civilizations, the more respect we have for them. We boast of recent achievements, but could we have done as well as our predecessors did had we lived in their day?

—Paul says, think on "whatsoever things are honest." (Phil. 4:8.) Thinking on dishonesty tends to make us dishonest. Dishonesty begins in the mind.

PAYING OUR VOWS

Sermon preached in the Asheville Methodist Protestant Church by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Bates

Text—Psalms 116:14: I will pay may vows unto the Lord.

The vows which the Psalmist felt called upon to pay were not those which obligate the Christian. But the Christian is as much under obligation to pay vows as was the Jew. One discharged the obligation as he brought to the Temple the offerings prescribed in the Law. The other pays his vows as he fulfills the obligations he takes when he joins the church. Let us consider these vows as they are laid down in the Discipline.

1. "Will you deny all ungodliness and wordly lusts, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world?" The answer is: "By God's help I will."

This vow is both positive and negative. On the negative side it is a denying, an abstaining from, worldliness. What that is this church does not tell us. It leaves that to the individual conscience. The Discipline contains certain "Advices" of John Wesley, which it calls to the serious consideration of those who would become members. But it lays down no law in the matter. But there are certain outstanding sins in which the earnest Christian will not indulge. And there are certain others on the borderland of morality. Indulgences and practices in worldliness which raise a question. What shall our duty be? There is only one answer: "Abstain from all appearance of evil." Do as you think Jesus would do in such matters. If we are followers of Christ, would He lead us in that direction?

But we are much more concerned with the positive side of the obligation. If it is a hard thing to lead a negative Christian life, "to deny all ungodliness and worldly lusts," it is a harder thing to "live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world." It means putting our religious profession into practice. "To live soberly"—redeeming the time because the day are evil; "to live righteously"—squaring our practice with the principles of Jesus; "to live godly"—exhibiting to men a god-like character—these are a challenge to the best in us. Anything less is unworthy, anything less is a repudiation of our vow.

2. "Will you devote yourself to God in the everlasting covenant of His grace, and consecrate your life to His service and glory?" The answer is: "I will."

Devotion and consecration, surrender and service: these are the foundations of the Christian life.

"Will you devote yourself to God in the everlasting covenant of His grace?" Is that just a pretty phrase? What does it mean? Let the Apostle answer: "By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God." It is the acknowledgment of the debt we owe to God for our salvation. It is a debt of gratitude for the abounding grace of God.

"For all the Lord hath done for me
I will never cease to love Him."

"Thou hast brought me up out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and hast set my feet upon a rock." "Therefore will I offer unto thee sacrifices of thanksgiving." And that love and gratitude is no passing emotion. It must be a life-long dedication.

"Will you consecrate your life to God's service and glory?" That means putting our talents and abilities at the disposal of God.

"Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee."

If we seriously regarded this vow, there would be no lack of helpers, no failure of the church to carry out the program of Christ.

3. "Will you give diligent attention to His Word and Ordinances, and seek the honor and advancement of His Kingdom." The answer is: "I will."

Two things are involved in giving "diligent attention to His Word." First, is the reading of the Bible, which is the Word of God. Bruce Barton has written a book with the title, The Book Nobody Knows. Is it true that nobody knows the Book? If it is, it's a reflection upon many of us who vowed to give diligent attention to it. It is the Christian's guide-book; it is his daily bread. We will not go astray, we will not go hungry, if we read the Book. "Oh, how delight I in thy Law; it is my meat all the day." To give diligent attention to the Word is to keep in spiritual health. And, again, to give diligent attention to the Word, means to the preaching of that Word. The church has always depended upon preaching as a means of grace to believers. "How shall they hear without a preacher?" We are exhorted not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together—for the purpose, I think, —of hearing that Word. Around that gathering together the church has grown in numbers and influence, and the individual Christian has grown in spiritual life and power. To neglect this means of grace is to starve the soul. To give diligent attention to it is life and peace. How diligent shall our attention be? It ought to coincide with the opportunities to hear that Word preached. How many times is it preached? That is the measure of our opportunity and obligation.

"Will you give diligent attention to His Ordinances?" This church recognizes only two—Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The first one—Baptism—we observe once for all. And this church makes no requirement as to how, nor when, nor where. It does not believe in re-baptism. So, then, the emphasis must be on the other ordinance—the Lord's Supper. To give diligent attention to it is to observe it as often as the church gives opportunity to celebrate it. And as often as it is administered, the Christian is under obligation to partake "in commemoration of His death until He come."

"And seek the honor and advancement of His Kingdom." We are to pray "Thy Kingdom come" so intensely that we shall work with all earnestness for the fulfillment of our prayer. And so far as you and I are immediately concerned the Kingdom is the Church to which we belong.

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The Church our blest Redeemer saved
With His own precious blood.

"For her my tears shall fall;
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and toils be given,
Till toils and cares shall end."

If we "seek the honor and advancement of His Kingdom," we will not knock the church, we will not unjustly criticize the preacher. We will boast and boost.

4. "Will you contribute as God gives you ability to the support of the Gospel ministry in this church, and to its works of Christian benevolence, remembering that you are a steward of whatever wealth you may possess?" The answer is: "I will.'

"Will you contribute as God gives you ability?" We have a fine latitude as to method. The church lays down no law as to how or how much. Only one requirement—we are to give as God gives ability. Giving is not to be measured by income but by ability. But that doesn't mean the ability of the surplus, but the ability of surrender. The amount will take care of itself when we remember that we "are stewards of whatever wealth we may possess." The money a steward has is an entrustment; he must give an account of it. And so must we in the final day. God wants consecrated contributions from consecrated Christians.

These contributions go in two directions. "To the support of the Gospel ministry in this church." This church believes in a whole-time ministry. If it has a whole-time ministry that ministry must be paid. Not many rich men become preachers, or remain preachers if they become rich men. They are dependent upon their salaries for their support. If a man is under obligation to give his life to the Gospel ministry, those to whom he preaches that Gospel are under equal obligation to support him while he proclaims it. "They that preach the Gospel shall live by the Gospel." "Muzzle not the ox that treadeth out the corn." "The laborer is worthy of his reward."

And we are to contribute "to its works of Christian benevolence." To the program of the denomination beyond the local church. Our contribution is our contact with the larger Kingdom. Education, missions, in short, all the enterprises of the church at home and abroad are gathered up in that word "works of Christian benevolence." Shall we withhold our contributions? Not and be true to our vow!

"Will you?" "Will you?" "Will you?" "Will you?" Four times that question was asked you. "I will." "I will." "I will." "I will." Four times you answered it, in the presence of God, in the courts of the Lord's House, and the people are witnesses. Have you paid your vows?

CONGREGATIONALISTS AND UNIVERSALISTS SEEK FULLER FELLOWSHIP

Luther K. Long

It is true that from time to time new divisions and threats of divisions arise to distress the followers of Christ for whose oneness He so fervently prayed.

But it is also true that now and again there come rumors of propositions looking toward the reuniting of two or more of the divided members of the great Christian body and, thank God, occasionally a union is happily consummated.

I confess that my heart is much more lifted up and rejoiced over rumors and realizations of union than it is depressed because of divisions and threatened disruptions. I believe that our Master's prayer for the oneness of His disciples will eventually prevail—so, I have good reason to hail with joy every step any organization takes in the direction of unity.

The Congregational Commission on Inter-Church Relations and the Commission on Christian Comity and Union of the Universalist denomination had referred to them by the National Council of Congregational Churches and Universalist General Convention, at their sessions held in October, 1925, certain proposals looking toward closer fellowship. After full conference and discussion the members of these Commissions have agreed upon and presented a report.

The Joint Statement

The first paragraph of this "statement" registers a decided advance over any "union" document previously issued by any "Commission." Note the conception of Christianity as primarily a way of life, faith in Christ expressed in a supreme purpose to do the will of God as revealed in Him, assent to an official creed not essential, differences of theological opinion need not break fellowship but may enrich the content of faith and experience. Here is the paragraph:

"We believe that the basis of vital Christian unity is a common acceptance of Christianity as primarily a way of life. It is faith in Christ expressed in a supreme purpose to do the will of God as revealed in Him and to co-operate as servants of the kingdom for which He lived and died. Assent to an official creed is not essential. Within the circle of fellowship created by loyalty to the common Master there may exist differences of theological opinion. With that primary loyalty affirmed, such differences need not separate; rather, indeed, if the mind of the Master controls, they may enrich the content of faith and experience; and if it does not control, theological agreements will not advance the Christian cause."

The Commissions recommend that the two denominations co-operate so far as possible in local and national organizations, in religious education, social service, evangelism, rural church development, interchange of speakers at local state and national gatherings, in the conduct of denominational journals, and in all other ways mutually agreeable. The conclusion of the "statement" should touch the heart of every Christian:

"The stirring challenge to forward-looking Christians of whatever name today is to make their churches vitalizing centers of the Christianity that is in Christ, and so to promote the broader fellowship through which alone the mighty task of winning the world by the Master shall be accomplished. To that task we commit ourselves. The event is in the hand of God."

Editors Approve

The editors of the Congregationalist and of the Christian Leader (official organs of the two denominations) heartily approve the statement, and are ready to help put into use the plan for co-operation. The latter says:

"Too long we have been at the impossible task of whittling down this man's creed and that man's creed to find an irreducible minimum which each might accept. The Commissions turn their backs on all that sort of thing. Move on, they say in substance, into a different atmosphere. The thing the world needs is a deep and abiding faith. Use the creeds you need to help get the faith, but regard faith as the essential. Recognize as brothers and allies those who have the same deep faiths of the heart. Above all, get at the common task. Along this path we firmly believe the Congregational and Universalist Churches will choose to move. And along this path many another great communion we also believe will elect to march in the years to come. It is so simple, but so profound and withal so Christ-like."

This joint statement of the two Commissions will be presented to the National Council of Congregational Churches and to the Universalist General Convention. It seems altogether likely that these bodies will give their approval, and that in the course of time the two denominations will become one.

SOME "MOTHER DAY" TRIBUTES

Prayer

Our Father, we thank Thee for our home. It is the joy of every day to us that Thou hast set us in a circle of loving souls whose lives we can influence, and whose purposes we can share. Bless the little children, the young, the men and women of maturer life, and those who go down to the great deep. Bind us together in unity and helpfulness. May no ungentle word or ungenerous ambition creep in to mar the serenity of this good place. And may we all so shape lives that hereafter we may renew our family circle in the Father's home. For Christ's sake. Amen.

Not until eternity shows us the record of our earthly lives will we have any just appreciation of the debt we owe our homes. Whatever virtues of character we may possess, their roots run down into the unselfish and tender loyalties of home affection. We can only repay so great a debt by keeping the fire burning upon the hearth, remembering in constancy of love our dear ones, and living in a way that will justify their trust in us.—Above selections from The Daily Altar-Christian Century Press.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration met in Baltimore, Md., on February 24, 1927. All the members of the Board were present with the exception of Mrs. Lester, and Mrs. East took her place.

As usual, the problem of the annual budgets for our three mission fields occupied the major portion of the time of the meeting. The success of our work requires enlarged budgets, but the income of the Board made it impossible for them to grant to our missions the budgets they desired. So as to treat each field alike, the budgets of last year were allowed for the ensuing year.

The correspondence from China referred especially to the disturbed conditions in that land, and the Board is notifying our missionaries to use their best judgment when new situations arise, and that what they do in matters of personal safety the Board will approve.

In the matter of furlough for Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom, it was decided to grant their request for a furlough to begin not later than next autumn. Brother Soderbom has been over fourteen years in China without a furlough, ten years of which have been spent in our employ.

A number of repairs in the two compounds in Kalgan were authorized, and concerning the new homes for our Chinese workers, the mission was asked to furnish figures of possible cost.

The mission was also asked to provide information concerning workers who may be secured in China to help in our work during the absence of Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom.

The letters and minutes of mission meetings from India were very encouraging, and indicate substantial progress in our work there.

Rev. Paul Cassen is finding the Ford, furnished him by friends, of great assistance in his evangelistic work, and the securing of a Ford for the women's department is under consideration.

Brother Cassen reports the baptism of eight converts from Hinduism. A very interesting matter was the reading of the Constitution and Confession of Faith of the United Church of India, with which we are being urged to unite. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee of the Board for further consideration. From now on the Board is requesting each mission to furnish it with the quarterly personal work report of each missionary. Hitherto the reports have come from departments, and this request is additional.

Each mission was also requested to furnish the Unoin Board with a large map of the territory in which they are working, indicating thereon each preaching place and the location of each church building, thus enabling the Board to visualize its territory and work.

Mrs. Sturgeon in her work report told of securing a legacy of $2,000 to be used for the purchase of a new church lot at Hamamatsu, Japan.

The Board expressed its appreciation of the heroic services of Mrs. Klein in carrying on the work until a successor takes up the work laid down recently by her departed husband.

Miss Edith Lacy, M. D., of Virginia, was presented to the Board by the candidate committee and recommended as a suitable person to be sent to India to take charge of our hospital in Dhulia. The Board approved the recommendation, and left to the Executive Committee of the W. F. M. S. the time and details incident to her going to India.

Dr. S. W. Rosenberger, of Columbus, Ohio, having been elected to succeed Dr. Klein as secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, was presented to the Union Board, and elected as its foreign secretary.

Concerning the property held by the Board of Foreign Missions in Dhulia, India, the Union Board approved the recommendation of the Board of Foreign Missions that the Executive Committee of the W. F. M. S. appoint a committee from the Board of Foreign Missions to take under advisement the sale of the property of the W. F. M. S., and report to the annual meeting of the W. F. M. S., and also to the Board of Foreign Missions.

The Board authorized the issuance of the coming Children's Day Service as a memorial to Dr. Klein, and the naming of the new church at Nagoya College the Klein-Coulbourn Memorial.

WESTMINSTER COLLEGE TURNS THE CORNER

For the first time in several years it is possible to say a word of unqualified encouragement about our Texas college. Like all our schools, Westminster has had its ups and downs and sometimes it has seemed more "down" than "up." In spite of heroic leadership on the part of presidents and equally heroic sacrifices on the part of the faculty and the people of Tehuacana the college has seemed to be on the down grade for a number of years. The situation reached the climax of discouragement last spring when the Board of Regents felt it was no longer worth while to continue. They had unofficially decided to close, sell off what property still remained, liquidate their indebtedness and give it up as an impossible task.

Before anything as serious as that was done, however, a very thorough canvass of the situation was made. Assets and liabilities were carefully listed, and favorable and unfavorable factors brought out into the open until it was learned that the conditions were not so threatening as imagined. It was decided to go ahead with the summer school and to make plans for the opening of school in the fall. In order to reduce expenses to the very limit some radical steps were taken. It was decided to do without a president for one year and ask Dean Willis to manage the school. The Regents voted to close the boys' dormitory, to do away with all intercollegiate athletics, to put an agent in the field, to levy an assessment on the churches of this area and to conduct the college on a sound and strict business basis. The results have been gratifying.

Dean James G. Willis deserves the highest credit for the great change that has taken place. He has followed the plans of the Board of Regents faithfully and firmly with the result that to March 1st all current bills have been met, many old accounts taken care of and the credit o the school restored. Obligations of all kinds do not exceed $11,000 and $7,000 of this is for current requirements running to the close of the school year. At least $3,000 of this is in sight. If the other $4,000 can be secured the year will close with no deficit and all liabilities except one taken care of. An earnest effort will be made to raise that $4,000 before the close of the school year.

Westminscter College is recognized and accredited as a Junior College. This accrediting has been recently renewed and the state authorities have commended Dean Willis and his associates for the progress made. Texas educational leaders are giving the Junior Colleges special attention and are co-operating with them in every way possible.

The citizens of Tehuacana have stood by the college loyally. If the rest of the college territory would do one-half as much there would be no longer any uncertainty in the situation. One family has spent fully $1,500 this year in making repairs in the main building and the young ladies' dormitory. Two other families have made repairs and added class-room furniture costing over $250. These generous gifts have improved the appearance of the buildings materially and made for greater contentment and utility.

The enrollment this year is about two-thirds that of former years, but the quality of work done is far ahead. There have been no disciplinary troubles of any kind, nor has it been necessary to give any student a single demerit. There has been fine fellowship in the faculty and a general atmosphere of good will and serious attention to business. The improved conditions within the school seem largely due to the elimination of the athletic program, as well as to the good management of Dean Willis.

Although Westminster College has turned the corner it is by no means "out of the woods." Some things are imperative, and one of these is an endowment. Even this seems nearer than ever before. If it comes Westminster will be in a position to make a growing contribution to the Kingdom through the Methodist Protestant Church. If it does not come the last chapters of our church in this great territory will soon be written.

It is to be hoped that Methodist Protestant friends will appreciate this situation and do their part to make permanent this vitally important enterprise.

Board of Education.

THE DENOMINATIONAL OUTLOOK

Alabama—The parsonage of the First Church, Birmingham, has been moved to an adjoining lot, and will be completely remodeled. A Sunday school building is to be erected where the parsonage stood.

Eastern—The church at Westville, N. J., sets aside $100 a month for anticipated church improvement.——A friend of Christ Church, Atlantic City, has just fitted out the auditorium with pew cushions at a cost of more than $3,000.

Fort Smith, Oklahoma—Plans are being made to construct a tabernacle on the Shady Grove Camp Grounds.

Georgia—Following the morning preaching at Pearce Chapel, 53 members were received into the church. A Senior and a Junior C. E. Society have been organized.

Illinois—The men of the Weldon Church had a rabbit hunt recently; bagged 40 rabbits, which the women of the church cooked. A rabbit pie supper was served to more than 150 people.——The church and parsonage at Foosland have been wired and fixtures installed, at a cost of $175.——The Christmas offering at Concord was $85.

Indiana—At the reopening services for the Milledgeville Church more than $2,000 was raised to clear the debt.——The church at Herbst has been improved at a cost of $5,300. The parsonage has also been remodeled at a cost of $300. The entire amount has been paid.

Michigan—Revival service in the Gregory Church resulted in 19 additions to the membership.

Maryland—The members of the Hallwood Church gave the pastor, Rev. L. E. Haddaway, a fine suit as a token of appreciation of his efforts in building the new church.——The Ladies' Aid of the Zion Church, Carroll Circuit, with the help of the men, have just finished the building of a social hall next to the church.——Calvary Church, Baltimore, received 39 new members as a result of the revival services.——An enthusiastic meeting in the interest of the Centennial Church to be held in Washington, D. C., was held in the Rhode Island Avenue Church.——The Talent Return of the Ladies' Aid of St. John's Church, Baltimore, brought in $1,100 this year. ——The Ladies' Aid of Trinity Church has installed a telephone in the pastor's study.——An anonymous gift of $1,000 was made to the church debt of Grace Church, Baltimore.—— The Maryland Legislature believes in Methodist Protestant prayers: Rev. J. McLain Brown is Chaplain of the Senate, and Rev. G. Q. Bacchus is the Chaplain of the House.

Ohio—A campaign is on in the Tiffin Church to secure an additional $10,000 on the church debt.——Sixteen members have been added to the church at Urichsville.——The Boy Scouts had entire charge of the evening service in the Middletown Church on February 20.

Onondaga—The entire quota of $15,000 for the enlargement of Adrian College has been subscribed.——The salary pastors to make Easter a great religious celebration both ... itually and financially.

It is with great joy that I have learned from a news item in one of our church papers, written by Rev. W. A. Sanders, of Wortham, Texas, that all the pastors of the Texas Conference have agreed to hold a week's meeting in their churches, beginning April 10, closing Easter Sunday, looking to the conversion of the unsaved and the reception of a large number of persons into the churches. This is to me a very significant step, and if followed by our pastors and churches of the other Conferences, will result in a great triumph for our beloved church and our Lord's Kingdom. If we can get the churches aroused spiritually, I have no fears about the offering.

I appreciate the hearty support I have had from many of the pastors in presenting the work of the Board of Home Missions to their local churches. It is my wish to receive not less than 1,000 orders for the Easter Service this year. If the pastors will kindly see that the order cards are filled out and returned to this office this goal can easily be reached. This would be an increase of 200 over last Easter, which would seem gratifying. But when we consider that according to the report of the Statistical Secretary of the General Conference of 1924 we have 2,278 churches, it plainly shows that with 1,000 churches ordering the Programs and holding the service, 1,278 churches will not be participating in this great program. They are losing as much by their failure in not co-operating with the general church activities as the denomination is losing in not having their support.

A NOTEWORTHY GIFT

High Point College has just received a gift which will be an inspiration to all the friends of the institution.

When the Children's Home was established in High Point, Mr. H. A. Garrett was called to the position of Superintendent. The Church in North Carolina knows how efficiently he administered the affairs of the institution, and the feeling of regret was general when he found it necessary to resign. However, he but laid down one form of service to take up another. As field agent for High Point College he has showed his faith in the institution by his unremitting efforts in its behalf, not only so far as its financial interests are concerned, but in his work to secure students, and to create in every way a feeling of good will for the college.

He has just placed in my hands certain securities amounting to $5,000 bearing interest at 6 per cent, and I have issued to him the Annuity Bond of the Board of Education for the same amount, bearing interest at 5½ per cent. This interest will be paid to Mr. Garrett during his life-time, and upon his death to his wife, should she survive. The amount then becomes the property of the college without reservation or condition.

This form of Annuity Bond has been in general use among institutions whose work is of a beneficent character. A gift so made is not taxable, and the income is secure to the donor during his life-time, and that of any others whom he may specify. It represents a form of gift which those who have the will to help the institution, but feel unable to contribute any large sum of money at present, may adopt with the knowledge that their money is safe, and their income is assured, for all money thus contributed is invested safely, and the income is used to pay the annual amount promised to the donors. The college has received several such gifts of smaller amounts. Mr. Garrett's is the first of any large amount. He induced a brother living in Missouri to make a gift of a similar nature for $500. All friends of the college should feel a peculiar sense of gratification that one has shown his interest in so substantial a way.

Mr. Garrett is endeavoring to collect as much as possible on outstanding pledges. Plans are on foot which promise much for the future, but the payment of pledges of even small amounts will be exceedingly welcome just now, for the treasurer hardly knows where to look for the amount of money needed to take care of imperative requirements. He is impressed with the fact that the problem would be very simple if there were a united effort on the part of the people to solve it, but it is exceedingly difficult for those who feel the responsibility to do it alone. J. NORMAN WILLS, Treasurer.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE

If you have not paid your college pledge, can't you make a special effort and pay it, or as much as you can?

Remember that it would not require so much for you to arrange for the payment of your pledge as for our Treasurer, Mr. J. Norman Wills, to provide for all the pledges. I believe the greater number of the unpaid pledges would be paid if you could just realize the burden Mr. Wills has been carrying. We are also aware of the fact that a number of pledgers have had reverses over which they have had no control and could not pay.

In my canvass I have found a great number who have said, "I could have paid, but just overlooked it, but I am going to pay because I consider it an obligation which I made in good faith and it is an honest debt."

Do you realize that by paying your pledges you are saving interest for our college? Will you please make a special effort to get the balance on your pledge paid? If you have forgotten the amount of your pledge or the balance due I'll be glad to furnish you the information.

High Point College has passed the uncertain stage and been given A-Grade rating. You need not fear losing your money.

Thanking you to give this your prompt attention, I am,

Sincerely yours,

H. A. GARRETT, Field Secretary.

CHRIST THE ALL IN ALL

Jesus Christ is the heart of the Bible. He is the Shiloh in Genesis; the I Am in Exodus; the Star and Scepter in Numbers; the Rock in Deuteronomy; the Captain of the Lord's Host in Joshua; and the Redeemer in Job. He is David's Lord and Shepherd; in the Song of Songs He is the Beloved; in Isaiah He is the Wonderful, the Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, and the Prince of Peace. In Jeremiah He is the Lord of our Righteousness; in Daniel He is the Messiah; in Zachariah He is the Branch; in Haggai He is the Desire of all Nations; in Malachi He is the Messenger of the Covenant and the Sun of Righteousness; and in the Book of Revelation He is the Alpha and the Omega and also the Morning Star.—Selected.

LABOR LEADER DECLINES ANTI-PROHIBITION INVITATION

When Mr. James W. Kline, of Chicago, head of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers, and Helpers, received an invitation to attend an anti-prohibition meeting held under the auspices of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment, he declined, availing himself of the opportunity to express his own views strongly:

"There has never been a law enacted agreeable to all. There has never been a man who has presented anything worth while who has not had opposition. Our country has produced some of the greatest men in history, and they have been bitterly assailed by those who disagreed with them. It seems that the greater the man and his cause, the greater the opposition.

"I have always opposed the dictation of the whisky dealers and the brewers' association. They have never respected or obeyed any law which interfered with their business, if they could avoid it, and it is not strange that they disrespect and violate the Volstead law as it now stands. Would they respect it if it was modified? I think not. That very fact alone would encourage them in their disrespect for law.

"A number of very good people are yielding to the argument of 'personal rights,' and in doing so they are yielding to the demands of the most vicious element in our country who are also using the same argument. Some of our lawmakers have thrown up their hands and are trying to surrender this great nation to the lawbreakers. They openly concede our defeat. They violate the law themselves. Their method, to my way of reasoning, is bordering on treason.

"Many in official life are catering to these forces, whose ideas and customs have been brought from foreign lands, who object to the laws which govern Americans, and who are connected with the bootlegging industry. Their places, before the Volstead law was enacted, were the hatcheries of the criminals, and hold-up men, and the gangsters; these are the men who are now plying their trade and trying to discredit the laws enacted by majorities, and the first step toward the return of these conditions is through the modification of the Volstead law.

"We should use all our efforts in demanding that honest men be placed on guard to enforce the law, rather than surrender America to these dstructive influences. Let us elevate our standards rather than lower them, as I believe the modification of the Volstead Act would do. This I believe to be the remedy. I am,

"Yours very truly,

"J. W. KLINE."

THREE COMMUNITIES IN AMERICA

Community Number One

A community of 45,000 people—eight evangelical churches—approximately 6,000 church members. On a recent Sunday evening the total attendance at the eight churches was about 600; that is, one out of every ten of the membership, and one out of every seventy-five of the population! Where were the other nine? and the other seventy-four? Where are they in other communities? in your community? Seeing the multitudes His heart was moved with compassion! Is yours?

Community Number Two

Somewhat similar to the one above, but "much more wicked." The churches seemed dead. A more hopeless situation could hardly be imagined. Then God's Spirit moved upon the heart of a certain pastor. He responded in mighty, prevailing prayer. Others were enlisted. Prayer bands were formed. And out of prayer came action. A great work began, out of which grew, among other things, a Fishermen's Club; and in one recent year this Club conducted, without compensation, "over 3,000 meetings, distributed over 300,000 tracts, dealt personally with over 24,000 souls, and led 2,079 to a definite acceptance of Christ!" Seeing the multitudes "as sheep without a shepherd," that pastor's heart, like his Master's, was moved with compassion! Is yours?

Community Number Three

Largely rural, consisting of two counties. A dearth of the Word prevailed. A busy, bread-earning housewife's heart was touched. She prayed. Then provided herself with a supply of St. John's Gospel, and began careful distribution, getting each recipient to promise to read. She also enlisted co-operation, and at the end of 1926 found that 8,000 Gospels and Testaments had been distributed! Also that some hundreds of school children had memorized a total of over 50,000 Scripture verses! This year she is endeavoring to cover two more counties—doing it all without material remuneration—because her heart was, and is, "moved with compassion!" Is yours?

Oh, that every pastor, and every layman, would do what he could, and all he could, whether little or much—first by prayer, and then by practice—for then how quickly would the multitudes, "fainting and scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd," be pointed to Christ! Will you pray—and act? Begin today—NOW!

Pray for the church's revival, and for America's and the world's evangelization!

THE BULLY

Every small-town school has its bully. He sticks out his chin, jeers at his smaller mates and occasionally beats up a weaker boy. He lords it over his school by sheer arrogance. A coward at heart, he blubbers like a baby when a real fighter puts up his fists.

Our intelligentsia have developed a new type of bully in the last few years, the intellectual bully, who thinks it an important career to jeer at common beliefs and convictions and terrorize the less agile of mind by his flying adjectives. The parallel with the burly coward who terrorizes an alley, a block, a school or a town is well-nigh perfect. The average human being is totally unprepared to defend his beliefs with his intellectual fists. As a matter of fact, if they are true religious beliefs they cannot be established by logic alone, for the clear reason that they rest not on reason but on emotional conviction. Most philosophers now realize and accept this fact. Consciousness of superiority based on a little more learning and a few more facts displays anything but intelligence. In the story of human nature that composite of ancient habit and emotion and fresh resolve that keeps human beings driving forward in the face of every obstacle, the recent advances of the mind are but one short chapter.

The town bully and the smart Aleck work opposite sides of the same street. One ordinary kind minding his own business is worth a schoolyard full of them.—New York Herald Tribune.

BENNY'S RUNAWAY TURKEY

ELLA B. WIGHMAN

Benny Johnson stood gazing at the rows of fat turkeys hanging in the window of the butcher shop. The proprietor, clad in big white apron, appeared in the doorway.

"Mornin,' Mr. Simon," greeted Benny. "How much does that big turkey—the fat one in the middle—cost?" he inquired.

Mr. Simon glanced at the one indicated.

"That one? Oh, eight or nine dollars. They're fifty cents a pound. I'd have to weigh him—want to buy one?" he asked, with an amused smile.

"N-n-o." Benny thought a minute, then added in a confidential tone, "Say, Mr. Simon, I've got three dollars and forty cents. Think I can get a turkey with that?"

Mr. Simon looked interested. He liked Benny.

"That won't buy a very big one, but I'll tell you what you do, Benny. You wait till tomorrow night when I put the prices down. Come in then. Mebbe I can fix it."

Benny walked slowly home. "My!" turkeys cost an awful lot. Eight or nine dollars"—and he had only $3.40 that he'd saved to buy a pair of shoes with. He needed the shoes badly. His soles were so thin it hurt when he stepped on a stone, but—Thanksgiving without turkey! Mother'd always had turkey. Even last year, when she was so ill, they'd had a big one. Benny loved turkey, and Mrs. Meggs had been so good to him. Hadn't she taken him right in after his mother died, and didn't she always treat him just as she did Chris! Mrs. Meggs was poor, too, and—after all, his shoes didn't hurt so very much, and Mrs. Meggs'd be so surprised.

Benny began to calculate. Fifty cents! Mr. Simon would come down to forty, or p'raps even less on Wednesday night. That'd be—40 into $3.40—went eight and a half—eight and one-half pounds sounded very satisfactory to Benny.

Things were in a state of confusion when Benny reached home. Jenny was crying bitterly, while Mrs. Meggs critically examined her arm. Mrs. Meggs was looking very anxious.

"Oh, Benny, I'm so glad you've come! I don't know what to do! Janey's gone and broken her arm, and I've got to take her to the doctor's right away." She hesitated, then with a pleading look, said, "I hate to ask you—if you could let me have your money till next week! I've only just enough to last till Saturday, but I can let you have it back next week, sure."

Without a word, Benny ran upstairs. By the time he returned with the money, there was no trace of disappointment visible on his face.

"You're a good lad, Benny," Mrs. Meggs said in a relieved tone. "I'm sure I don't know what I'd done. Get your hat, Janey, and come. The sooner we get it fixed the better."

Benny watched till they turned the corner. He was glad to help Mrs. Meggs. Mother'd like it, but—he was disappointed. Thanksgiving was so near. He couldn't earn much in two days.

"Pound o' sugar—loaf o' bread! Pound o' sugar—loaf o' bread!" Benny kept repeating to himself on his way to the store the following morning. He clasped the money tightly in his fist to be sure he wouldn't lose it, for hadn't Mrs. Meggs said only that morning, that she could always trust him better than she could Chris, and Janey—whose broken arm had proved to be only a sprain—who often made mistakes.

Benny looked longingly at the turkeys as he passed Mr. Simon's store. Lines of people were coming out, carrying big bundles. "Everybody's buying 'em. It's nice to be rich.' Benny gave a deep sigh. Mrs. Meggs was going to have pork, and he was so sick of pork.

"Pound o' sugar—loaf o' bread." Benny had almost reached the grocery store, when suddenly he stopped. Across the street, a little girl in a bright red coat was running. She was screaming loudly in terror. A big turkey gobbler with agitated wings and a string hanging from one leg was after her. With ungainly strides, his neck outstretched, intent on that red coat, he had almost reached her. Benny flew across the street. He threw himself down upon the frantic bird, and wound his arms tightly around him. "Run-run," he yelled. "Run—I got him!"

The enraged turkey tried to drive his spurs into Benny somewhere, but Benny hung on. A man appeared on the scene.

"There's a string! Tie his legs—will you!" gasped Benny, breathlessly. "I can't—hold him!" The man tied the turkey's legs securely, and Benny loosened his hold on the struggling bird.

"Say," Benny exclaimed, "that's some bird. What'd you let him get away for?"

"Get away!" laughed the man. "He's not mine. I never saw him before." The man glanced up and down the street. "No one seems to be looking for him. I guess he's yours, all right."

Benny's eyes opened wide. "D'you really mean I can have him! Can I take him home?" he asked, incredulously.

"I don't see why not. Someone with a load of turkeys had probably dropped him. The owner's not going to bother to hunt up one turkey this busy day. You've earned him, all right. Take him home and have a good Thanksgiving dinner."

Benny stooped down and gathered up the flopping bird. My—he was heavy! It was all he could do to get him home in spite of his tied legs. How his arms did ache! He could hardly hang on till Mrs. Meggs opened the door. He dropped the turkey into the first convenient chair, while Mrs. Meggs looked first at Benny, then at the bird in amazement.

"Look!" cried Benny, eagerly, his eyes sparkling. "It's a turkey—a real live turkey, and-he's mine. He's awful heavy—a fifty-pounder, sure! He's bigger'n Mr. Simons'."

Mrs. Meggs sized up the bird with an experienced eye. "He's no fifty-pounder, Benny, but he's a grand bird, just the same, and now, Benny, will you tell me what did you do to get that bird?"

Benny told his story. "And he's mine, all right. I'd earned him—the gentleman said so—told me to take him home and have a good Thanksgiving dinner. Are you glad Mrs. Meggs?" Benny asked wistfully.

"Sure I am, lad," she replied, heartily. "It'll be a rare treat for Janey and Chris. Four days it'll do us, I expect, and the bread—did you get the bread, Benny?"

Benny's face fell. He thrust his hands deep in his pockets. He looked up ruefully.

"I must have—dropped it when the turkey—"

"Of course you did," interrupted Mrs. Meggs cheerfully. "It's all right, Benny, and we've the pork money, you know."

It didn't take Mrs. Meggs long to prepare that turkey for the baking.

"There!" she said surveying her work. "He's all ready to shove right into the oven. I never saw a finer bird. Did you ever see such legs! Won't Janey and Chris have a feast! I'll just leave him here on the pantry shelf while I run and see my sister. She was real sick yesterday. Would you mind getting me a few onions, Benny? They'll go fine with turkey. You can leave them on the table till I get back."

Benny found the store crowded with late shoppers. Three men were standing at the counter talking. Benny paid little attention till he heard, "Lost your turkey? How'd that happen?"

Benny drew nearer to listen. It was a little old man who replied.

"Well, I s'pose it was my fault in a way. You know my son who lives out on Long Island raises turkeys. He's been fattening one for me, and this morning I drove out after it. He tied the legs and threw it into the back of the car, and I s'posed it was all right. When I reached home the bird had flown."

The men laughed heartily. "Good joke on you, Mr. Peterkin, all right."

Benny stood motionless a full minute. That bird wasn't his after all. It belonged to Mr. Peterkin, who lived in a big stone house. Benny had often left papers there. With his onions, Benny made his way home. He dropped the onions on the table and opened the pantry door. The turkey was his! He'd earned it, fair and square—that man said so. He didn't see why he couldn't keep it. Mr. Peterkin was rich. He didn't need it. Suddenly a thought of his mother stole into Benny's mind. Something arose in his throat. He s'posed he'd have to, and Janey and Chris—Benny drew his soiled sleeves across his eyes.

Tucking a paper around the turkey Benny picked it up and went out. It was not far to Mr. Peterkin's. He'd just leave the turkey and run home. To Benny's surprise, Mr. Peterkin himself answered Benny's knock. Benny held up the turkey.

"Here's your turkey, sir. I—found him," he stammered.

"My turkey!" Mr. Peterkin pulled off the paper. Noticing Benny's tired face, he motioned to a table. "Set it there! Now, what do you mean by my turkey? How'd you come by it?" he asked, sternly.

"He was chasing a little girl and I caught him. I didn't know 'twas yours."

"So you took him home! Where'd all this happen?"

"On the Av'nue," then as Mr. Peterkin still looked puzzled, "You see, sir, I had to get sugar and bread at the store and I heard an awful scream. It was the little girl. I guess the red coat made the turkey mad. My—he was going some! He was just ready to grab her, but I got there in time," ended Benny, triumphantly.

Mr. Peterkin looked very thoughtful. "You say the little girl had on a red coat?"

"Yes, sir, and you ought to see that bird flop! It took us both to get his legs tied, then the man looked and no one was coming after him. Nobody'd bother to hunt him up this busy day, and he belonged to me, all right, he said. He's all ready, sir. All you got to do is just to shove him in the oven."

Mr. Peterkin laughed loudly. "Why didn't you keep him?"

"Keep him! Why—he's yours," Benny replied in astonishment, then added honestly, "I did want to—at first."

A few more questions and Mr. Peterkin was in possession of all the facts.

There was consternation in the Meggs' household when Benny returned home.

"Can't we have any turkey, ma?" wailed Janey, in tears, while Chris was very indignant over his disappointment.

"Yes, and you lost ma's money, too. I could have carried a bigger turkey'n that and kept my money too," he grumbled. Benny felt too badly to reply.

"Be still, children. Can't you see you're making Benny feel bad. Go to the door, Janey. Don't you hear someone knocking?"

Janey opened the door. "Ma," she called. "D'you know where Benjamin Johnson lives?"

Benny sprang up. "That's me," he called. "That's my name. I'm Benjamin Johnson. Yes, sir. What! For me?"

Benny lugged in the heavy market basket which was handed to him. He set it on the floor. Janey and Chris watched curiously while Benny tore off the paper covering.

"Oranges!" cried Janey. "Bananas!" shouted Chris, "and look! There's a turkey leg sticking out."

Mrs. Megg's face beamed. "It's a Thanksgiving dinner for you, Benny. Get a pail, Chris, while I take out the potatoes and onions and fixin's and—Benny, look! It's your own turkey come back for sure."

Benny didn't even look. His face glowed as he read on a slip of paper: "For Benjamin Johnson, from my little grand-daughter with the red coat."—Selected..

SAY IT NOW

My attention has recently been called to a series of resolutions prepared by a special committee appointed by the church to express their appreciation of the membership of a dear brother deceased.

What a fine eulogy it was; about every good that could be said was included and when I had looked it over I wondered why some of these fine sentiments could not have been whispered in the ear of this good man before he passed on to his final reward.

I knew him well, his burdens were heavy to bear, he worked unceasingly, he loved folks, and literally spent his life in helping others. He was not prominent, but a quiet, retiring, faithful husband, father and friend, that was all, but was it not enough to quicken the interest of his fellows? It seems not, but when he died the whole community seemed to awaken to his real worth. The people wept, the preachers lauded his many virtues, the flowers were banked in large proportions over his lifeless clay, and when I saw it all, I said: "What a pity it was that he could not have received some of these splendid tokens of appreciation when he was living among us." "Tell it with flowers" is fine, but tell it with kind, sympathetic words to the one who really deserves our love and confidence here and now is far better.

I do not know, and would not venture to say, to what extent one is conscious of events transpiring on earth after death has done its work, but I am persuaded that Heaven has attractions which are so pleasing to the faithful followers of the Master, that I am doubtful if they will be interested in the comments of the brethren after they are gone, for all of which I am suggesting, if you have any kind words of appreciation to offer, say it now, when a fellow needs it most. —The Christian Index.

PREACHING THE GOSPEL

Preaching is not the easiest thing in the world. To preach the Gospel so that at all times the path in every-day life is made clear, is difficult. Excursions into literature are so tempting; sociology, psychology, history, and philosophy, are so inviting. And yet the true preacher must keep close to life. A father said of his son one day: "My boy says he gets all the literary things he wants at the university and all the civic things that he wants at the clubs; so he would like to find a church which sticks to the things that help a man religiously through the week." Is your church sticking to that kind of things?—The Presbyterian.

—Years ago Rev. Mr. Sheldon, then in Kansas, edited a daily paper for a short time to show how it might be done without giving an undue proportion to the crimes and ugly happenings of the day. It seems that some protest is needed now against the practice of feeding the reading public on crimes and misdemeanors. Newspaper men cannot excuse themselves on the plea that the public demands it.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Jenkins

February 18, Mrs. Sarah Jane Jenkins died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Richard Walker. Mrs. Jenkins had been in poor health for quite a while. She was about 87 years of age; was a good woman, had been a great help to many in her community in her active life, and was loved by all who knew her.

She was converted some time in her girlhood days and joined Corinth M. P. Church and remained a faithful member until she left us. She was a subscriber and reader of the M. P. Herald for a long time. She leaves behind one daughter and four sisters, and many friends who will miss her much.

We laid her body to rest in the Littleton cometery. J. B. O'BRIANT.

Vinson

On February 20, 1927, Mrs. Carrie Etta Vinson passed from labor to reward. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, Cicero Vinson, two brothers and three sisters: J. H. Goine, Cooleemee, N. C., W. A. Goine, Burlington, N. C., Mrs. Alice Perry, Burlington, N. C., Misses Bessie and Myrtle Goine of Altamahaw, N. C. The deceased was a member of Glen Raven M. P. Church and was faithful until death. The funeral was held in Glen Raven church by the writer in the presence of a large audience to pay the last tribute of respect to the one they loved. May the Lord bless and comfort the heart-broken husband. T. A. WILLIAMS.

Welborn

Mrs. Delphine Welborn, widow of W. M. Welborn, died at her residence on Saturday night, February 5, at 12 o'clock, following an illness of several weeks. Mrs. Welborn was born in Randolph county, the daughter of William and Doris Blizzard. In early womanhood she became affiliated with the Fairfield church but later transferred her membership to Welch Memorial church, this city.

The deceased was survived by three daughters, Mrs. C. W. Combs, Mrs. W. E. Royalls, and Mrs. C. C. Jackson, this city. Two brothers and two sisters and six grand-children.

Funeral services were conducted Monday, February 7, at Welch Memorial church. The Rev. T. E. Pierce, pastor of the church, assisted by The Rev. O. L. Ruth, Pilgrim Holiness church, and The Rev. W. B. Davis, pastor of South Main M. E. Church, officiating.

The church was filled to overflowing with friends and loved ones. The beautiful and immense floral designs were evidences of the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends. Interment was made in the Fairfield cemetery.

Although Sister Welborn was 74 years old, she was, unless providentilly hindered, at the church and took an active part in the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society. She was at the cottage and mid-week prayer services and always testified of being a child of God and would talk of her heavenly home. She was indeed a good church member, good mother, and good neighbor. With such love for her church and an unfaltering faith in Christ that she had, without a doubt she has received a crown.

Sister Welborn, someday we shall meet, around that great white throne, and there at the dear Savior's feet without a sorrow known, we'll live in the land of song. How glorious then it will be in that sweet land to dwell from sorrow and sin. We'll be free, the chorus grand we'll swell and live with the glorified throng.

(Written by one who loved her,)
MRS. C. R. MICKEY.

Campbell

Balaam Goodwin Campbell passed to his Eternal Home on Saturday night, February 13, 1927, at the age of 93 years 11 months, and four days. He was living with his daughter, Mrs. A. P. Pickett, about four miles south of Liberty, N. C.

He was a good citizen and highly respected by his neighbors and acquaintances. He was a successful farmer. For over 50 years he had been a faithful member of Shiloh M. P. church near Julian, N. C. He knew that he would soon pass out of this world, and told his people that he was going soon., conscious till the end, even after he was too weak to speak lifted his hand as a token.

His funeral services were conducted on Tuesday at 1 p.m. at Bethany M. E. South church by the writer assisted by Rev. L. W. Gerringer of our church, Rev. J. S. Gibbs of the M. E. Church, and Rev. T. F. Andrew of the Friends church.

The pallbearers were five grand-sons and one great-grand-son. The flower-bearers were five grand-daughters, and one great-grand-daughter.

His wife preceded him to the grave by about ten years.

He leaves five sons and two daughters, viz W. P. Campbell, of Siler City, P. W. Campbell, Brownfield, Texas, John P. Campbell, Lynchburg, Va., A. L. Campbell, Liberty, N. C., and Otis Campbell, Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. A. P. Pickett, Liberty, and Mrs. W. P. McMasters, Liberty. Surviving are also 27 grand-children, and 43 great-grand-children, and two great-great-grand-children.

The large concourse of people who attended the funeral, and the beautiful flowers placed upon the grave, were evidence of the esteem in which he was held.

As his faith pointed Heavenward, and as the uplifted hand pointed upward, when speech was gone, may all his loved ones think of him as being at Home above, and so live that they shall meet him there.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Drexel Brown

On Saturday night, February 26th, we had such a shocking death in our community. One of our bright young men, a member of Bethel church, met such a tragic death in an automobile accident with some colored boys; they ran Drexel almost out of the road, the cars turning over several times, crushing the poor boy's head terribly, he lived but a few minutes. The sad occurrence has cast a gloom over the entire community. We can only imagine how the father and mother felt when told of the terrible affair; only those that have experienced such things can know. Drexel was 18 years and four days of age. Just in the prime of young manhood. We can not understand why one so young should be snatched away. He was a good boy according to the testimony of his boy friends, never drinking or swearing and that is saying much in this fast age. He was faithful to the church and Sunday school and we surely miss him there. He was a student of Stokesdale school and a bright scholar, would have finished high school in an other year or so. We know that his teacher and school mates are sad because of his tragic death. We sincerely hope it will be a warning to all of us and especially his boy friends that it is well to be ready for we know not what hour death may come.

He leaves father, mother, four sisters, two brothers and a host of relatives and friends. We certainly sympathize with them in this terrible trial and may our Father in heaven comfort the bereaved family. His influence will still live on and those that knew him best will be made better for having him with them these few short years. We are thankful to say, that we do not sorrow as those that have no hope. Let us all strive to meet him on that "happy shore, where pain and partings are no more." His body was tenderly laid to rest at the old home church, Apple's Chapel, this being his request some time ago, that when he died he wished to be buried there. The pall-bearers were his boy friends. And the largest crowd I think I ever saw at a funeral to pay the last tribute of respect to our friend and relative. Thus we leave him 'neath a mound of beautiful flowers to await the resurrection morn. May our all-wise and all-loving heavenly Father bless and comfort the bereaved family.

A FRIEND.

DISTRICT MISSIONARY MEETING MEETING, EIGHTH DISTRICT

The third Sunday in this month we will hold our District meeting at Mt. Zion church, Rev. A. L. Hunter, pastor, beginning at 11 o'clock. Everybody is invited to come and bring dinner. We are anxious for all the churches to be represented and especially those that do not have missionary societies. A good program is being prepared, and we are anxious for a good crowd.

MRS. JOB HUNTER,
MRS. T. L. SPEAS,
District Chairman.

Last Call for Thank-Offering Service

I have been pleased with the Herald's reports of Thank-offering meetings held by some of our auxiliaries. Good work has been done in "Jerusalem." Can you not go out into "Judea," at least, and carry the Thank-offering message? If you will call up the pastor nearest to you, who has no W. F. M. S. in his church, I feel sure that he will be glad to give you an opportunity to give the pageant and the address, your church enjoyed, to his church, or churches, if he has a circuit. In this way you may help him to raise his General Conference budget, by reporting to the conference treasurer the amount of money given as a Thank-offering to the W. F. M. S., sent by you to Mrs. S. W. Taylor and counted on our Branch budget as coming from the church having no organization.

Our Branch budget is dreadfully behind. When the committee made it and apportioned it, they did so with the faith that several new auxiliaries would be organized during the year, and contribute enough money to make up the deficit. Faith, it seems in this instance, was not strong enough, or else not accompanied by work sufficient to meet this deficit.

May I not urge the women who are leaders to get busy and do everything possible to meet the budget in full? The Reidsville women have three appointments to fill on a nearby circuit. This is an example of what you may do.

The unexpected snow made it hard for many auxiliaries to hold prayer meetings on March 4; but it did not keep individual prayers from uniting with those of thousands of other women for the evangelization of the world. The promise in Isaiah 65:24, "And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer, and while they are yet speaking, I will hear," has been fulfilled in the history of our own W. F. M. S., and will be fulfilled again. Mrs. Sturgeon tells us that we have secured the services of a splendid doctor for our India work. Our missionaries are safe, and our work doing well, according to latest reports. We should continue to pray for them, especially for those in China.

In closing their books for the missionary year, I hope each auxiliary will see that it has made a contribution of at least ten cents a member to the Student Loan Fund, which is loaned to young women preparing for service on the foreign field. One fine young woman is being helped this year. Also, do not forget the birthday offering for Missionary Retirement Fund.

How many auxiliaries have organized any or all of the young people's societies? Do not fail to report number of members and amount of money raised. This money counts on auxiliary budget, and on young people's budget, as reported by Miss Young. Let us all pull together up the last and hardest hill on our way, and at Branch meeting report a year of work well done, and progress along all lines.

Lesson for March 20—The Christian's Hope. John 14:1-3; 2 Cor. 5:1-10; 1 John 3:2, 3.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Topic for March 13.—How to Conquer Circumstances. Phil. 4:5-7; 10-13.

Topic for March 20—How Can We Improve Our Minds? Prov. 2:1-9.

—The ministers of Durham, N. C., influenced by the reports of the heroic efforts of the Governor of South Carolina to enforce the laws favoring Sabbath observance, have sent him an expression of their approval of his course.

—Brother Kemp Causey's Cadillac car was run into last Sunday night on the road to High Point by a car driven at a great rate. The speeding car was overturned and A. O. Burke was killed. Mr. Causey's car was injured. The driver of the fast car is now being sought. It is said that strong drink is responsible for the reckless driving.

—Mrs. Rev. G. H. Hendry was called Saturday to Clearwater, Florida, to attend the funeral of her sister, Mrs. R. H. O'Haro, who died Saturday morning and whose funeral was held Monday, March 7th. She will be gone for several weeks; she will visit her father and brothers who live in and near St. Petersburg, as well as her husband's father, Rev. J. M. Hendry, who lives in north Florida.

G. H. HENDRY.

—A debate between Senator William E. Borah and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler on the enforcement of national prohibition by constitutional amendment is announced to be held in Symphony Hall, Boston, on Friday evening, April 8, at eight o'clock, under the auspices of the Roosevelt Club.

Are Men Miraculously Called to Preach?

Just recently I listened to a very able discourse on being "Called to Service," by one of our fine young preachers. He stressed the point that every one is "Called," that to recognize a need, and the ability to meet that need is all the calling that is required or necessary. He said one should not wait for a miraculous call, to take up religious work, even in the ministry. He said that if the miraculous call to preach is necessary, he wanted to confess that he had not been called.

Now, I have always been taught that preachers are divinely and miraculously called to preach, and that they should not take up this high and exalted work unless he had very unmistakenly and peculiarly felt this divine call. I would like for the Editor, or some one else who feels competent to answer this question, to explain this. Was this preacher right in stating that all the call that is necessary is to see a need, and recognize his ability to meet that need, or should he feel a special and miraculous divine call, before he takes up the work of the ministry?

D. A. NEESE.

(Who will answer Brother Neese's question? We refer it especially to our ministers, —Editor).

—Brother N. M. Harrison of Brinkleyville is dead. What this means to his community can be appreciated only by those who have lived there. He was one of the foremost citizens. His death came last Saturday night. The funeral was on Monday. His son, Rev. N. M. Harrison, of Greensboro, had been with him for some time.

—Calvary church was pleased to receive two new members last Sunday; Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Vaughan. Others are expected soon.

—Pastor Gerringer is planning to begin a series of evangelistic services in Calvary church the first Sunday in April.

—Rev. J. D. Williams is preaching nightly in West End Church this week. People of other churches will take advantages of the occasion to hear some good sermons.

—Brother W. J. Williams of Calvary church was taken to the Clinic hospital last Saturday and is being treated by Dr. Ogburn. He hopes that he will soon be able to return home. While calling on him last Monday we were surprised to find in a nearby room Brother J. K. Osborne of West End Church. He had the misfortune to fall and break the bones in his right leg near the ankle. This occurred last Wednesday while the snow was so deep. He too was hoping to be permitted to return home soon.

—The thousands of dolls sent by the children of America to the children of Japan are to be tendered a public reception March 3 at the Imperial Theater in Tokyo, says an Associated Press dispatch from that city. The United States ambassador, Hon. Charles MacVeagh, and some of the highest officials in Japan are to speak, and to participate in the presentation of the dolls to the more than three thousand children who are expected to attend. The Japanese boys and girls, it is stated, are planning to sing "The Star Spangled Banner," which they know very well.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

A PIE PARTY

On Tuesday evening, February 22nd, the Philathea class of Mizpah M. P. church had a pie party for benefit of the Sunday 'school.

In the beginning a short program given by the Mizpah grammar school in memory of Washington's birthday, with their suitable decorations was very impressive for the occasion. But most of all the table decorated with its many pies was the most interesting part of the program. The sale of pies created much excitement for a length of time, after which various guessing contests were put on. During the time of the pleasant pie feast string music was rendered by our good friends, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Jones, being enjoyed by the entire crowd.

Every member of the Philathea class was greatly pleased with the proceeds.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Sunday, February 27, was a fine winter day. My first appointment was at Harmony Grove. The Sunday school attendance is about 100 percent greater this winter than last. Epidemic of whooping cough is interfering some. At the church service two names were added to our list. At 2:30 p.m. was at Tabernacle where Dr. P. O. Schallert, physician of Winston-Salem, lectured, to men only, recommending clean living. At night Billy Sunday's team number one was present with songs, testimonies, and exhortations. Two young men surrendered their lives to the Master.

C. H. WHITAKER, Pastor.

Asheboro.—It is not our purpose to use space in the Herald every week as that perhaps would be robbing some one else; however, so many of our people are taking the Herald now that it is a good way to reach our people with announcements.

The passing of Mrs. R. R. Ross was a great shock to our town. She was one of the charter members of our church and one of the most faithful to be found anywhere.

We had splendid congregations at both services yesterday. There were 182 in Sunday school, and the offering was $34.57, or just $1.93 below the amount which we set for ourselves for the Children's Home. When the twenty given by Mr. J. D. Ross and others is added to the Sunday school offering it amounts to $56.50.

At the evening service yesterday Mrs. H. W. Maier of Thomasville was the speaker and the occasion was the Thank-offering of the W. F. M. society. Mrs. Maier made a splendid address. Our people here were glad of the opportunity of hearing her.

Lucy Clyde Ross, second daughter of Brother L. F. Ross, is seriously ill and we are distressed about her condition. The entire Ross family has the deepest sympathy of the entire church.

Brothers J. S. Lewis and Troy Gaddis seem to be on the way to recovery. Miss Cleon Holder continues quite ill. Mrs. Randall Presnell who is eighty-six years of age is quite ill at the home of her son John Presnell.

Next Sunday we will have communion service and reception of members at the eleven o'clock service.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

(Written for last week's Herald, but not received in time.—Editor.)

Mt. Zion.—We managed to dig out from the big snow today and go to Sunday school; 56 were present, an increase of 18 from last Sunday.

Brother Hunter has proven more loyal than the church members. He was present on time to fill his appointment last third Sunday but there being a mere handful present, due to bad weather and road conditions, he did not deliver a sermon. However he taught the Sunday school lesson in a very impressive way and also reviewed lesson for the second Sunday, which was very helpful.

We are looking forward to Easter hoping to have a program for our Sunday school.

Brother Ira O'Hauser, our very efficient circuit steward, has been working hard lately in that particular capacity. He has met with the board of stewards of every church on the charge endeavoring to get the stewards to work more and harder in order that we may pay every obligation. Brother Hauser called a meeting again at Mt. Zion inviting every steward of every church to be present and take part in discussing the best methods.

Brother Hauser assures us that unless we really do start to working he will continue to call meetings and work with us in such a way that we will gladly go to work.

Brother M. G. Hunt and family of Winston-Salem spent the day with Mrs. Hunt's parents and other relatives of Pinnacle Sunday.

Brother S. T. Lane has just about completed a new addition to his home which will, when finished, prove his to be one of the most modern dwelling houses of our section.

Brother O. P. Jones recently purchased the E. S. Culler farm at the foot of the old Pilot Mountain.

Brothers E. S. Stone and S. T. Kallam recently purchased a new car each.

The farmers of this section in general speak highly of the big snow we've just had as a very important and helpful factor to grain crops and farming in general.

May we ever be as the Golden Text for today, Ye shall be my witnesses. Acts 1:8. How? by speaking to and working with people. Where? Well, I notice Matthew was converted in a custom house, D. L. Moody in a shoe-shop, and Peter and John while mending their nets, therefore we may work anywhere and any time we find unsaved people.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

South Lexington.—Sunday evening Pastor Ridge seemed at his best in the delivery of a forceful sermon on "Using what you have in serving God." Reference was made to the revival meeting which has been planned to begin at South Lexington the first Sunday night in April. The church was appealed to for a thorough preparation for the revival meeting.

The Sunday school was slightly smaller than the previous Sunday, with 176 present. The offering was $8.20 which was for the Children's Home. The men's class visited the Children's Home last Sunday afternoon and all reported a very pleasant and enjoyable trip.

Brother C. B. Yates, who returned to his home here from a Charlotte hospital about two weeks ago, is improving slowly. A Lexington physician is giving him a treatment and it is the hope of the church and Sunday school that he will soon be entirely well and back in the men's class of which he is president.

Mrs. M. B. Deaton, a member of the South Lexington Sunday school, having been a faithful attendant for several months, entered the Davidson hospital here last Sunday afternoon. She is to undergo an operation.

We learned from an item of the report from the Shelby church in last week's Herald that Brother Frank Glenn, of that church has joined the ranks of the ministry as indicated by the "Rev." prefixed to his name. He was for a number of years superintendent of the Shelby Sunday school and served for a while during the first few weeks of this writer's pastorate at Shelby, voluntarily giving up the office to another. He was a faithful worker and leader of song, and we believe he will render valuable service in the pastorate. Our acquaintence and association with him for one year was both pleasant and profitable. Here's wishing him success and victory over the many perplexing problems and struggles in the ministry.

The foregoing paragraph leads this writer to comment further on the life of the minister. His life is one with varied duties and obligations; his work is tedious and arduous, with its perplexities and difficulties. Some times his services are not appreciated by the people as they should be, and he must bear much undue criticism and sarcasm from people with sinful hearts who pretend to follow the meek and lowly Nazarene. The pastor, or "preacher," as many prefer to call him, has a high and holy calling in the world, and gives his life in serving God and preaching his gospel. Is he compensated for his services? Yes, in the joy of knowing that he is doing the Master's will. But that kind of compensation will not provide for him and his family the necessities of life. There are many church people in this age of modern business principles and methods who would classify the minister with the objects of charity and "give" him a little money and some "rations" for his services. But the majority of church people have recognized the wisdom and importance of paying the preacher for his services, placing him in the class of those whose services to humanity are recognized and compensated in a measure which they deserve. In other words, put business methods into church work. Men, brethren, church officials, do not allow your pastor to use two-thirds of his brains studying and planning how he is going to pay his grocery bill, and provide clothing for his family and meet other obligations. Put the church on a par with the business concerns of the country and the work will prosper as never before. One of our best pastors was heard to remark about two years ago that his biggest worry was his financial affairs. I make these comments, not as a pastor depending on a charge for financial support, for my support comes from my secular employment, but I am merely expressing in print some of my convictions and beliefs as to the rights and privileges of the minister of the gospel. (I trust Brother Glenn, of the Shelby church, will not be discouraged by my comments on the difficulties of the ministry, but hope he will enter fearlessly and courageously to "preach or perish," and surmount the difficulties which the tempter will bring before him like a mountain.)

Now, I bring these comments to an end, lest I provoke an "attack" from Old Brother "Pessimist," whose silence has been observed for lo, these many months since the falling of the leaves from the trees.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Charge.—Our Sunday school is good for this season of the year. Our pastor, Brother Trogdon, gave us a powerful good sermon today as he usually does and I think all who missed it lost a real feast for the inner man.

Sorry we have several members sick, but glad to know that most of them are convalesing. We want the prayers of all God's people that they may have a speedy recovery.

Evolution I think is a plant someone has planted out to teach our younger generation that our Bible was mistaken about the creation of man. The fundamental motive is to teach the younger people that our Bible is a myth and nothing to it, and the way some of our highly educated men are cultivating that plant that it is going to develop to the sorrow of the present generation and ultimately the distruction of the peace and happiness of the Christian religion; and if we act and teach such I believe it is sin against the Holy Ghost. If evolution is true and if we get it in the minds of all the people could we have a higher standard of morals than the brute has now. And again if it be so, pray tell us at what stage of development did we come to be a living soul and to know right from wrong.

Yours for Christ's sake

F. J. L., Reporter.

Denton, Denton Charge.—Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday here with a very inspiring message.

At beginning of service Misses Blanche Hoover, Kate Sexton, Sallie Mae Frank and Jewell Lanier, sang The Old Rugged Cross. After the reading of lesson there was a piano and violin duet played by Miss Julia Loftin and Mr. Gilery. After this Rev. Mr. Henderson delivered the sermon which was enjoyed by a large congregation.

Last night his sermon was another great one. A great lesson for the saved and the unsaved.

On the third Sunday night in this month we will have Canaan choir down here to sang for us. We hope there will be a large congregation out to hear those good people.

Our Sunday school attendance year ago, 38; attendance yesterday, 83; offering year ago, $2.38; offering yesterday, $4.20.

This goes to the Children's Home at High Point.

Our Christian Endeavor was in charge of Mr. W. E. Hill last night. After the lesson Mr. Hill gave us a good talk on Stewardship.

REPORTER.

Haw River Circuit.—"A Missionary Clinic" will be given by the ladies of Reidsville M. P. Church at Midway next Sunday at 2:30 p.m. They will also be at Mizpah the third Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The play will be given in the interest of Foreign Missions.

The pastor made a dashing trip to all five of his churches Sunday to see how his people looked in their "every day" clothes. We were delighted to find everything going like clock work"ceptin" it was hinted that one Sunday school superintendent's watch needed speeding up just a little—fine to begin on time.

The financial standing of the churches had been shuffled a little with the result that Mizpah stands at the top beating Friendship by 29 cents. Then comes Midway, Fair Grove and Brown Summit. The margin is close, Midway having won over Fair Grove by $3.00.

Brother Horace Jones and his good wife were kept away from church Sunday on account of the serious illness of his tin "Lizzie." Another good brother said his wife was kept away because of a peculiar Sunday illness, said he hoped it was not contagious nor fatal, but it's more contagious than itch and if she don't soon recover the whole church is likely to get it.

The pastor earnestly desires a speedy recovery. We are glad to have Miss Hutton, daughter of Rev. J. R. Hutton, worship with us at Mizpah. W. D. REED, Pastor.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Our pastor filled his appointment yesterday and gave us a very good sermon.

The attendance was not very good owing to the weather. But when our pastor drives twelve or fifteen miles to deliver us a good sermon, it seems that we could go a mile or two to hear him. He is always there and on time regardless of "snow and muddy roads."

We are sorry to report that Miss Fannie Barnes was absent from church yesterday. She is suffering with a carbunele on her neck. We sincerely hope she may soon be well.

Mr. Lawrence Morris, one of our members, who lives at Tarboro, N. C., and has been in hospital some time, was operated on for appendicitis and had his tonsils removed. He is at home now but improving very slowly. We hope that his health may soon be restored.

REPORTER.

English Street Church.—It was indeed a great pleasure to have with us Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon February 27th for the evening service in which he delivered a most wonderful sermon, that emphasized man's obligation to the Christian religion and the congregation heard him gladly.

Our Sunday school is progressing rapidly due to the fact that Brother Moton stresses the need of young people's cooperation.

Our good people have seen the need of beautifying the church as well as homes. New carpet and lights have been placed in the church. Also the walls having been calcimined and we have raised the conference and college budget. REPORTER.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—This community has just "enjoyed" the deepest snow seen in a generation. The average depth was twenty or twenty-two inches. The rains and snow have decreased our average attendance some, yet the enrollment of our Sunday school is nearing three hundred.

Everybody is proud of our Sunday school rooms. We have ten nice large class rooms furnished with chairs and shades. Kirkman and Peninger Furniture store has donated a nice library table and chair to match for each class room. The whole Sunday school surely appreciate the substantial interest of these friends. Each class takes great pride in its room.

We are so glad to report that, Tom, son of W. J. Berrier, is now taking treatment in Jacksonville, Fla., and is improving. He is now able to eat potatoes, rice, eggs, and bread. We miss Tom, but are so glad that he can now look forward to being well. Even though he is hundreds of miles from his home church, he is taking great interest in church work where he is living. We knew we could "bet" on Tom to not forget his Lord's House on the Lord's Day.

Our pastor, Brother R. S. Troxler, is busy trying to get his house finished just enough to be able to move into. He has lived between two muddy hills all winter and has had to fight mud all the time. Hope he can soon move to his new home just west of Lexington by the Mocksville Road.

We are glad that Mrs. Ray Leathermore is able to be with us again, after a severe attack of tonsilitis.

Mr. Andrew Sink was absent Sunday because of tonsilitis.

Uncle Obie Waitman, one of our oldest and most faithful members, is confined to his room with rheumatism, unable to walk a step. We miss him much, and hope he may soon be able to come to his beloved Sunday school again.

Master Raeford Waitman, son of Edgar Waitman, has about recovered from an attack of appendicitis.

Mr. Walter Walser, son of Mr. Willard Walser, improves very slowly. They request that the entire church pray for Walter, that he may be well again if consistent with the Divine will.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shoaf has been absent from Sunday school for several Sundays because their children have whooping cough. They are some of our most faithful, and we have greatly missed them. Hope they can soon be with us again.

Elizabeth, the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Evans, fell off of the stairs of their home and broke her collar bone. We hope this dainty little lady wont have to miss Sunday school much on account of her unfortunate accident.

The infant of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Leonard was buried at Shiloh on March 8th, at 10 o'clock. Sympathy to the bereaved ones.

MRS. W. L. SHOAF, Reporter.

Granville Circuit, Rehoboth Church.—The fourth Sunday in February was Missionary day at Rehoboth. In order to arouse more interest in our mission work this program of songs, prayers and talks was planned.

Mrs. Clyde Finch of Henderson gave a splendid lecture on "The Call of Missions." She is indeed a pleasing speaker and her message was from the heart.

Mrs. Hunter, also of Henderson, gave some good thoughts on the Branch meeting which is to be held at Henderson in April. We hope our people will avail themselves of this wonderful opportunity and privilege. Rev. R. A. Hunter in well chosen words spoke of our mission work in the various fields and especially emphasized the great command.

Our pastor, Mr. H. F. Fogleman, closed the meeting with a short talk on the part our church should do in this great work. We were sorry that more of our people did not hear these splendid talks.

Miss Mary White of Flat Rock church was to have been with us but found it impossible to attend.

Rehoboth community has been stricken with flu. At this time the sick are improving.

Mr. John Barnes, of the Poplar Creek Baptist church, has trespassed into our church and taken for his bride Miss Lucile Kittrell. They were united in marriage at the parsonage by Rev. H. F. Fogleman. Mr. Barnes is a progressive young farmer. Mrs. Barnes is one of our most industrious young women. We wish them much happiness.

The first Sunday in March found very few attending church service, on account of the rough roads and sickness in the community. However our pastor gave us a good talk.

MRS. R. W. HARRIS, Reporter.

Henderson.—On last Monday night, week, the Missionary Society gave the play "Tithes and Offerings" from the December Record, at the church, for the purpose of inspiring us to the great call of the missionary work and how by observing, "God's Plan" this call can be met. A silver offering was taken and something over eight dollars received.

Our Sunday school attendance was very good this past Sunday and we are progressing in this part of our Lord's work.

Sunday, February 27th, Rev. R. A. Hunter gave us a splendid missionary sermon. It was very interesting and I feel that I can safely say, gave us all a much clearer and truer vision of the great work done by missions. This special sermon was followed by a missionary program at the evening hour, and the Thank-offering was taken. A large crowd was present and the following program was given: Special anthem by the choir, a missionary reading, "Mrs. Moulten's Experiences," by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch. Pageant, "The Five Wise and the Five Foolish Stewards," given by the young Ladies' League, followed by a solo, by Miss Annie Young Adams. A reading by Miss Mary Dosier then concluded the program. The offering amounted to $77.45.

The Missionary Societies held their monthly meeting with Mrs. Clyde L. Finch on Monday afternoon, February 28th. Mrs. J. B. Fox, assistant hostess. About twenty members answered to roll call and the collection of dues and circle money amounted to forty-nine dollars. We are trying so hard to reach our missionary budget and it is real encouraging the response the good ladies and men are making to help us. After the conclusion of the business session plans were discussed and voted on for the cleaning of the church and other arrangements, preparatory to the Branch meeting to be held with us April 19th, 20th, and 21st. Mrs. L. R. Gooch gave the chapter from "Moslem Women," after which the society was dismissed by prayer. The hostesses then served delicious refreshments.

The Philathea meeting was posponed last week, due to the weather, but will meet this Thursday night with Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Jr.

At the eleven o'clock services yesterday morning the holy sacrament was administered to a large congregation, and at the close of this three new members were received into our church. Miss Louise Powell, and Mr. and Mrs. Silas A. Powell. For this we are very thankful and hope our church will be a blessing and support to them, as well as they will be for us.

We were all glad to have Miss Katie Cook worship with us yesterday, after a long absence, due to sickness.

We are also glad to report that Mr. T. T. Hicks is greatly improved.

We feel that God has greatly blessed us in our work for Him and let us in gratitude be willing to labor and serve to the best of our ability. Truly "the harvest is great and the laborers are few." REPORTER.

Reidsville.—Our pastor, Dr. Brown, is preaching splendid sermons and we don't like to miss any of them. Our congregations are good and our Sunday school is growing rapidly. In fact, all phases of our church work seem to be making progress.

The Home and Foreign Missionary societies met this afternoon with Mrs. Mary Hopkins. The devotional was lead by Mrs. H. S. Dixon, Mrs. Brown gave a program from the Missionary Record, Mrs. J. R. McCollum gave a reading from "The Moslem Women" and Mrs. C. H. Garrison conducted the "Question Box." After the old business was disposed of new officers were elected, as follows: Foreign Missionary—president, Mrs. J. H. Allen; vice-president, Mrs. Geo. Brown; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. G. M. Reed. Home Missionary—president, Mrs. G. M. Thompson; vice-president, Mrs. A. O. Royal; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. H. S. Dixon.

During the social hour delicious refreshments were served. REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—The cottage prayer service was snowed under last Saturday night at Mr. M. J. Wright, so it goes back there next Saturday night and the next to Mr. Charles Hunts, Sr., then back to Mr. Ben Parrish's.

Had no service at Cid on yesterday as the roads were too muddy and snowy. Sorry to say we have a little stretch of bad road to contend with leading from the good road to the church. But nevertheless our faithful minister and wife came part of the way and spent a few hours with Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Lanier, which was enjoyed to the fullest. Come again.

Cid has paid her part in the parsonage furniture at Denton.

Pastor's salary coming on also. We are anticipating having an Easter program.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Trogdon and son, J. B., Jr., of Flat Rock Circuit while recently visiting their daughter, Mrs. Joe Delk, called by to see their old friends, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Lanier. We learned to love these dear people when they served us and have never forgotten them. Come again.

Mr David Kindley and Miss Treva Hughes were married recently. They are both highly respected young people and are Cid's Sunday school pupils. We will miss them very much, as they expect to make Lexington their home. Many good wishes go with them.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cody of near Denton, are going to move in their new home, recently built on the late Albert Beck place. We welcome these good people in our midst. The snow sure was about 24 inches on the level, and some places drifted up to four and five feet deep. The deepest as is supposed since Christmas eve of 1881 and that snow, a part of it, was here until February. Am glad Denton has such a fine reporter. J. W. L.

Stallings, Mecklenburg.—Rev. W. T. Totten filed his appointments here March 6th with two good sermons. He is an ever faithful pastor. The attendance is fairly good, but not what it might be. However, there are ever a faithful few who strive to attend both Sunday school and preaching service regularly.

We are glad that the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Drye has improved in health. The parents brought it out to service Sunday night, and we were delighted to have them.

Mr. M. L. Stallings has also improved. Even though he has been ill practically all winter he has missed only a very few Sundays at either Sunday school or preaching service.

We enjoy reading the reports from other churches, but we think Brother Brown of Reidsville must be mistaken. If Brother Luther McCollum's infant son is anything like the infant sons we know, its father certainly does more than "just smile."

Best wishes to the Herald and to the members of all the different churches and others who read it. REPORTER.

High Point.—Appropriate to the beginning of the Lenten season, on Sunday morning Mr. P. E. Lindley brought us a splendid message on "The Hour of Temptation." At this time of year, the hearts and minds of the Christian people of all denominations are turned to the closing days of suffering in the life of Jesus, and it should be a time of self-examination and frequent communion with our Heavenly Father. At the evening service Rev. Lester Ballard spoke of "The Same Jesus," in a very interesting manner. Considering the snow and inclement weather of late, our services are unusually well attended.

The flowers in the pulpit Sunday morning were the contribution of the sons and daughters of the late Dr. and Mrs. James R. Reitzel in memory of their beloved parents.

The two Missionary Societies met in regular business session Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. S. S. Coe. There was a large attendance, and much business was transacted, being the last meeting of the Missionary year before the books are closed with the last of March.

We are pained to announce the death of one of our older members, Mr. Albert A. Holton, who passed away at his residence on Steele street about 12 o'clock Sunday evening.

Mr. Holton was 72 years of age and has held several political positions of prominence, having been Post-Master of High Point at one time, and Clerk of the Superior Court of Guilford county from 1886 to 1890. A suitable obituary will appear later.

Dr. E. F. Allman, a native of West Virginia, but lately of Farmville, N. C., and his wife have arrived at the Children's Home to assume the duties of Superintendent. These good people have been residents of our state since 1922, having lived for a time in Asheville, N. C. Dr. Allman comes highly recommended as a good business man and fine Christian gentleman, and we feel that the Home is very fortunate to secure their leadership. We welcome them heartily to our midst, and to the felowship of the First church congregation.

The children of the Home are suffering an epicdemic of measles, there being six victims at the present time.

Miss Cleo Harrell, student at the College, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Burrus Clinic, is recovering nicely.

The numerous friends of Mrs. Louise J. Diffee will be pleased to learn that she is en route to London on her trip to the Orient, is enjoying good health and a delightful journey, and is expecting to reach home about March 25th.

Linberry, Davidson Charge.—Our work is progressing very nicely. Despite the big snow and muddy roads there were a goodly number present yesterday for Sunday school, also the fourth Sunday we had 81 present in Sunday school. Our campaign for new members and better attendance certainly is proving to be a great success. We now have 143 on roll, and have more new members coming in. We have had good attendance all the winter. We go to church regardless of weather. Our superintendent certainly is a soul-stirring man, and all the teachers seem to take great interest in their work. Our greatest "hold back" is room, we haven't sufficient room to take care of our school. We had hoped to be in a new church by our next revival meeting. But our people feel that we should have more in the treasury before starting the task. Pastor Ridge was with us yesterday and gave us a most helpful sermon.

Our Christian Endeavor Societies are being well attended on Sunday evenings. We have a Senior, Junior, and Intermediate Christian Endeavors.

The ladies of our community are planning to organize a Ladies' Aid Society. The Intermediate Christian Endeavor are getting a play, which they hope to render in different schools. Proceeds going to new church. The Easter program hasn't yet been gotten out, but we hope to get it out soon. Our choir has purchased new books, from the Sisk Music Company. We hope to be able to furnish better music. The Junior choir is doing splendid work with Miss Inez Ridge as organist.

Mr. Bob Lanier, one of our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers, had a sudden attack of appendicitis last evening at Christian Endeavor and was carried home unconscious.

Mrs. Robert Skeen underwent an opperation for appendicitis in High Point Hospital last week. She is getting on fine. We missed Mrs. Skeen at church yesterday.

Laurell Hill, Fallston Charge.—The work at this place is moving along splendidly. Rev. J. M. Morgan has been filling his appointments regularly. Our Sunday school is getting along nicely. The report for last Sunday far exceeded that of a year ago.

REPORTER.

Charlotte, First Church.—Everything seems to be moving along very nicely with us. The Sunday school and all other organizations are doing good work. A number of our people are sick with colds and flu. Six members have been received into the church since our last report.

The Ladies' Aid Society held an interesting meeting Monday afternoon. They will sell cook books this month.

The Thank-offering service which was planned by the W. F. M. S. has been delayed on account of sickness.

There seems to be more interest in the mid-week prayer services since using the Christian Endeavor topics and different ones taking part in the discussions.

A committee has been instructed to buy some needed new M. P. Hymnals for the church.

We miss Mrs. Surratt in the work since she is in Greensboro taking a rest at her mother's.

Our Worker's Council has been changed from the second Tuesday evening to the second Thursday evening of the month.

REPORTER.

Roberta.—We are glad we can report things moving along at a splendid rate at Roberta. The Sunday school and all church services are well attended, and there is remarkably fine interest. This is an exceptionally fine community. There is as fine a spirit of neighborliness and friendship as I have ever seen. The more I know about these folks the better I like them. They are showing a great interest in their pastor and his family, as well as in other things.

There is a deal of work being done about the church these days. Drawing the building together with heavy iron rods, remodeling the foundation etc. We have been having a bit of trouble about warming the church, but I think this is about all over, for the trustees are installing a heating plant. Excavation work is completed, the chimney is being built, and the plant will be placed this week. This outfit when installed, all told will be worth five hundred dollars.

We are to begin a series of meetings the third Sunday in March. Rev. C. H. Hill from Friendship charge will be here to do the preaching. We are expecting a good meeting, and praying that God may be glorified to the extent that He can use us to bring many souls into the kingdom, and that the church may be edified and built up in Him. Please pray for us when you read this.

I am talking strong, don't you think? Well, this is the reason. We had a wonderful visit by the ladies of this community recently, and they didn't come empty handed. Of all the good things! Why you just ought to have seen it. I can't use the space to name the gifts, or the givers. Suffice it to say that we have plenty to eat, and that of the very best the good women and girls had. Among the gifts were 225 pounds of flour and a bag of corn. God knows them all by name, and will not forget to reward them for their labors of love. May God bless them, they are always welcome on such business as this. They have a way of "Showing their love by words and deeds, Thus would Jesus do."

ROBERT SHORT, Pastor.

Draper Charge.—Our church work is going along fine. Our Sunday school is improving.

We are going to start our revival meeting the first Sunday in next month.

We will hold our second quarterly meeting the 19th of this month. REPORTER.

THE CHURCH THAT ALL TRAVELERS KNOW

On the Friendship detour from Greensboro to High Point travelers pass a red brick church. On the opposite side of the road is a large burying ground in which numbers of the graves, no doubt, date back many years, as the church building, though well preserved, bears the marks of age.

The passing traveler can not fail to observe this church and burying ground. It is one of the distinctive marks that locate the road through that community. But what church is it? That is the question that travelers ask, at least in their own minds, if not of other persons. But of this particular church it is not necessary to ask that question, for the large marker facing the road, so that you can't escape it, tells you that it is "Deep River Friends Church," and if you wish to attend service there you may know from this board what the hours are.

Does your Methodsit Protestant church on the highway have a marker that tells the traveler what church it is? Why not?

It would be interesting to learn, through the Herald, which of our churches have such markers. S. W. TAYLOR.

Big Snow

I thought probably the readers of the Herald would be interested in the history of the big snows in this part of the country. My father was born 1822; he kept a book of events during his life. He says the biggest snow he ever saw fell Saturday and Sunday, the first Sunday in January, 1857; he says it was belly deep to a horse. I also have some old books kept by Solomon Free; he was my step-mother's father. He was born 1799, so I can't find any record of any snow that has fallen in Randolph county as big as this one that fell the two first days of March 1927, for the last hundred years and I do not know how much longer. My wife and I live alone. When she got up last Wednesday morning the snow was from two to four feet deep right at our door. Two old folks snowed in. After breakfast I waded out in it to an out house after a shovel and went to work. I looked up the road and saw a young boy, Grady Hare, coming to our rescue. I soon gave out and fell in the snow. He got me in the house and opened up a way to feed my stock. God bless the dear boy. This is Sunday night and we are both well as usual. I will be 72 years old the 21st of this month. If any one who reads this wants to send me a birthday card I get my mail on Randleman, Route 2. I would be glad for any of our former pastors to come and see me. I should be especially glad for Brothers J. H. Stowe and C. H. Whitaker to come to see me; these two men have been of great help to me. I am still doing business at the same old stand near Cedar Falls, N. C.

—A process of putting sunlight into ordinary food so as to prevent rickets and probably other diseases has been discovered by Professor Henry Steenbock of the University of Wisconsin. It consists of the capture of vitamine D and its infusion into ordinary food by ultra-violet ray. Professor Steenbock is reported to have refused millions of dollars for the sale of his process to the manufacturers of a proprietary cereal food, and instead entrusted the discovery to the University of Wisconsin. "If I took that money," he is quoted as saying, "it would mean that the purpose of my life has been perverted. I am happy only in the endeavor to enhance the well-being of humanity. I haven't had a day off in five years, am breaking down, and must rest."

True and False Social Service

The term "social service" has come to be much used in recent years. Does it stand for something new? Yes and no. For generations and ages there has been service rendered which benefited all members of society, and therefore social service is not a new thing under the sun. But we believe there has sprung up in recent years a conception of social service which is decidedly new. Social service workers, if workers they may be called, have formed themselves into a school or class with a class spirit and a class pride. They pride themselves upon having escaped from the fallacy that still holds men of the old school. They are the true reformers and all who ever went before them were misguided enthusiasts. They have found the true way of eliminating evil from the world, a way so simple and easy that it is surprising that the world was so long in finding it out.

The old method of social service was to labor with the souls of men, especially their wills, trying to induce them to form habits of right volitions, righteous purposes, and high determinations. The new method is to labor with the environment of men, supplying food and raiment and amusements. This would be quite an undertaking, requiring real work if it were done by the reformers themselves, but they supply only the benevolent plan—it must be done at public expense.

The basic difference between these two schools of reformers is in their conception of the factors that mold human life. Which is stronger, the psychical or the physical factor? There is no denying that both are influential, and we believe these two schools should get together and form a program that would duly recognize both factors.

The Call to the Ministry

Last week an esteemed layman raised the question whether men are "miraculously called to preach." We referred this question especially to our ministers, but a few words here may not be out of order.

We would not use the word "miraculously" in describing the minister's call. We believe that God in creating man provided for a way of communication between Himself and men without working miracles. When God wishes to speak to a man about entering the ministry or any other occupation, He can do so easily. It is easier for God to speak to us than it is for our fellowmen to speak to us. They must approach our minds through the sensory mechanism. When our ears grow dull, men have difficulty in speaking to us, and when we become deaf they cannot speak to us at all. But God does not have to approach us through our nervous system. He is nearer to us than our nerves and brain are. He can speak directly to our souls, and we believe that He does thus speak to those who are not averse to receiving His communications.

It is possible for men to hear the voice of God in their own souls without recognizing it as the voice of God. When Samuel first heard the voice of God, he thought it was the voice of a man. A man may preach the Gospel in obedience to an impulse of the Divine Spirit and imagine that he is simply following the direction of his own mind, judging that he has ability to meet a need of his fellowmen. But it would be distressing to think there is no superhuman intelligence directing in the distribution of human labor in the Christian church. What confusion and interference there would be in a great manufacturing plant if every laborer were left every day to choose for himself what he should work at, subject only to the rule that each man is to labor where he thinks he can do the most good. There would be no place for the superintendent, nothing for him to do. If we adopt a similar plan in the church, what becomes of the headship of Christ? Is it not His function to direct every part of the body, the church? If the minister tells his hearers that he has gotten along without the direction of Christ, even advancing to the noble work of preaching the Gospel, will the hearers not be tempted to conclude, "Then I can get along in my less exacting place and work without the direction of Christ."

If the Spirit of God has no part in calling men to the ministry, upon what class of church workers does He exert an influence? We remove God to a great distance when we deny Him a place in this most important matter. While we do not believe in a "miraculous" call to the ministry, we most emphatically believe in a divine personal call. The man so called has a sense of authority that the man cannot have who is only trying to meet a need of his fellowmen. And he has also a sense of responsibility that the other man cannot have. He feels "woe is me if I preach not the Gospel."

Let Christ have the pre-eminence in planning the work, in calling and assigning the workers, and the process of human uplift will attain to its utmost speed.

Not only ministers, but laymen, have the sublime privilege of receiving their orders daily from Jesus Christ. He said, "Lo, I am with you all the days (literally translated), even unto the end of the age."

Divine Guidance in the Ministry

The Bible gives abundant evidence that God not only calls men to service, but that He also guides them in service. This He does not only by His providence, but also by His Spirit. Philip was led to the Ethiopian eunuch by the Holy Spirit. Peter was led by a vision or a trance to the Roman centurion. The Holy Spirit said to the Christian church in Antioch, Set apart Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. Paul and Silas were forbidden by the Holy Ghost to go into a certain part of Asia, and when they tried to enter Bithynia the Spirit of Jesus forbade them, doubtless for the reason that there was in view for them a more fruitful field. The Book of Acts, someone has remarked, is an account not simply of the acts of the apostles, but of the acts of the Holy Spirit. We must not lose sight of this Divine Factor in the Christian movement. The power from on high is still as essential as it was when the disciples waited in Jerusalem.

Whatever I have done in my life has simply been due to the fact that when I was a child my mother daily read with me a part of the Bible, and made me learn a part of it by heart.—Wendell Phillips.

SHALL THE PREACHER PLOT HIS SERMON?

By Rev. Luther K. Long

Judging from samples given in the daily papers, sermons are not a compellingly interesting sort of reading. Counting the people in attendance at church services, where preaching is the main attraction, makes the impression that the sermon is not a particularly seductive type of address.

Is it possible that the literary form of the sermon is responsible for some of its weaknesses?

An authority on the writing of the short-story says:

"Unless something happens, whether outwardly or inwardly, we can have no plot, and no short-story. You might as well speak of the plot of a sermon, because it has a well-constructed plan, as to apply the term to the realistic tales and sketches which are mere photographic records of life without any complication and without the element of phantasy."

Notwithstanding the foregoing strictures, I believe we may with propriety speak of the "plot" of a sermon.

The textual sermon and the expository sermon may well enough confine themselves to a simple, straight-forward, didactic presentation of Biblical truth, followed by fitting practical applications.

The sort of sermon calculated to arouse, to move, to produce immediate changes in the hearer's attitude and conduct —appealing strongly to the emotions and to the will, as well as enlightening the mind—should have in it certain elements of the modern short-story, including plot.

The short-story, we are told, must possess interest. In fact, the main purpose of the story is to interest in order to entertain. Without this quality the editor does not want contributions at any price, for no one would buy his magazine. By the same token the sermon must be interesting or it will not be listened to, though a few people may be present at its delivery.

The short-story must be brief—not too long for the average reader to compass without weariness at a single sitting. Also, it must have imagination, compressions, organization, and unity of impression.

Can the sermon, designed to be heard with interest and to be obeyed with purpose, afford to do without any one of these characteristics? Why should it not also possess that other essential of the short-story—plot?

Says Dr. J. B. Essenwein: "Plot is the scheme, plan, argument or action of the short-story. . . . . It is the very story itself, divested of all its description, characterization and conversation."

A good writer can put his plot—his story—in-a-nut-shell—into 50 or 100 words, or even less. It should be possible to do the same thing with the plot of a good sermon. It would be well for the preacher did he give as concentrated and persistent attention to making the plot of his sermon direct, progressive, and convincing as does the author to making effective the plot of his story.

An experienced writer usually begins his story at the end. He knows, before he has started to write the introduction, just where he is going, what climax he is to reach, where his "tie-up" is to come and how the knot is to be untied (the denoument). And, especially, he knows just what unified impression he is aiming at. On the appealingness of his theme, and on the skill with which he handles it and all the persons and incidents connected with it, he must depend for his power to capture and to hold the interest of his readers.

For the preacher of today there is no end to the outstanding themes for discourse. In connection with these themes many interesting—even exciting—situations are readily developed. Materials for complications, suspenses and surprises are abundant, if the preacher is at all familiar with the changing problems to which the unchanging truth is to be applied. To make, by means of the sermon, such a unified impression as will result in strong action on the part of the hearer is a prime necessity. The sermon plot, well conceived and vigorously developed, is one of the most effective agencies for getting the message of the sermon across.

JESUS CHRIST A PERSON

Jesus Christ is a person; a Divine person; a Divine-human person. He has always been a Divine person—from eternity. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever he had formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, he is God." "All things were made by him." "In the beginning was the Word." (Logos.) The Word was already there when creation began, and, of course, before it began. "He is before all things." And "by him all things consist." "Upholding all things by the word of his power." "Before Abraham was I am." "I Am that I Am." "If ye believe not that I am."

"No man hath seen God (the Father) at any time." He is the "invisible God, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto. So all the manifestations of Jehovah from the Garden of Eden on down to Bethlehem and the Manger have been of this Divine person now called Jesus Christ.

But He has been the Divine-human person less than 2,000 years. A little less than 2,000 years ago this eternal Word (Logos) "took upon the form of a servant," "took on him the seed of Abraham," and thus became "the son of man" as well as being the "Son of God." And this Divine-human person lived a Divine-human life for more than 30 years. Then he "laid down" this Divine-human life—no one forced him to "lay it down," nor to "take the form of a servant," nor the "seed of Abraham;" all this He did of His own free will—and after three days He took it again, but more glorious in nature. Before he "laid down" this Divine-human life it was a life of humiliation and weakness in many respects. But when He "took it again" it was in power, and glory, and triumph. And He lived this Divine-human life for 40 days after He "took it again," before He ascended to the Father to that "glory which he had with the Father before the world was."

The identical body He "laid down" he "took again." A real, veritable, tangible body of flesh and bones. But a transformed spiritual body. The celestial, resurrection body is "raised a spiritual body"—not a phantom—but a real body of "flesh and bones as ye see me have," said Jesus. He ate before them, and challenged them to "handle" Him and "see" that it was He Himself, "and be not faithless but believing." They were all convinced, even Thomas, he exclaiming, "My Lord and my God." They were so sure of this fact that they all died rather than to renounce it, save John, and he would have died had it been required of him, or to recant.

This Divine-human person had powers after He "took" this life "again" that He did not manifest prior to laying it down; power to manifest Himself in a room with "doors shut," and also to "vanish from their sight."

This is truly marvelous. The method or philosophy of it we do not understand; perhaps never will. We do not understand how light can pass through solid substance, like glass, both being material; nor the X-ray enable us to see through opaque bodies; nor how words can be heard hundreds of miles from where they are spoken, and yet not heard in the intervening spaces. But these are facts in the material world that we cannot deny. Then why should we doubt or question the inscrutable powers and mysteries belonging to this Divine-human body of Jesus Christ?—a body superior to gravitation; a body able to "ascend on high" and take its place at the "right hand of the Father," where this Divine-human person "ever liveth to make intercession for us," to "appear in the presence of God for us," entering into the "holy place" not made with hands."

This Divine-human body is not possessed with the attribute of Omnipresence no more than other bodies. It's a body—not a spirit—but a body in which dwells that Divine-human person—Jesus Christ.

This person has been seen a number of times since He ascended from Olivet. Stephen saw Him "standing on the right hand of God." He appeared to Paul several times. Once the brightness was above that of the sun at mid-day. He appeared to John on the isle of Patmos. "His head and his hairs were white like wool, as while as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace."

This is similar to His appearance on the Mount of Transfiguration, when His face shined as the sun and His raiment became white as snow, and Moses and Elias also "appeared in glory" and talked with Jesus. This, no doubt, being a little fore-gleam or outshining of the spiritual, or resurrection body. This seems to be characteristic of the Divine-spiritual manifestation all down the ages. A burning lamp passed between the pieces of Abram's sacrifice. The burning bush in the desert of Sinai; the pillar of fire in the wilderness; the devouring fire on Mount Sinai; the shekinah in the holy of holies; the chariots of fire "round about Elisha;" the chariot of fire in which Elijah ascended. The glory of God as it appeared to Ezekiel by the river Chebar and at Jerusalem. So of Daniel's visions by the rivers Ulai and Hiddekel; so of the angels at the tomb at Jesus' resurrection. Isaiah also saw this Divine glory in the temple.

This Divine-human person, and other celestials, angels, etc., seem to have the power to manifest this Divine, celestial glory, or veil it, at will.

This Divine-human person said, previous to His laying down His life, that He was going away to the Father, but that He would not remain away forever; that He would come again—not several times, but just again. And the day He departed from Olivet two angels said He was coming back like He went. He went, that Divine-human person, in the body. So he's coming back in the body. The person who went is the same who will return. He does not divide himself; leave his body at the right of the Father, and bring the remainder to earth. Such a thought is absurd. It requires the human and the Divine to constitute this Divine-human person; this Son of man; this Jesus Christ. This, some fail to see. He's the God-man, the Mediator between God and man. He's unique. No other person like Him in the universe. And He's coming again. He said so on various occasions—coming in glory and all the holy angels with Him. To speak of His coming in spirit or invisibly is to dispute His own plain statements and that of the apostles. People seem to forget or overlook the fact that it is the God-man that is coming, not God in His own omnipresence. In this sense He has been here all the while. But he has been incarnate less than 2,000 years. Incarnate He lived more than 30 years. Incarnate He died. Incarnate He rose from the dead. Incarnate He was seen during 40 days after His resurrection. Incarnate He ascended to the right hand of the Father, and incarnate He will come again. It is this two-fold being, person, who is to return, or logic is at an end, and words have no definite meaning.

This coming is to be "at such an hour as we think not." As public, and as unexpected, to those who are not looking for Him, as a flash of lightning. "Every eye shall see him and all tribes of the earth shall wail because of him." This is the God-man. The Divine-human person. Not God the Father. Not the Holy Spirit. Not Omnipresence, but the incarnate Logos. The individual person who went is coming back, for He said so. When a person goes on a journey the entire person goes. And when he returns the entire person returns. He does not leave a part of himself behind. So of Jesus Christ. Return must be the antithesis of go. All this word jugglng and quibbling to make the return of Jesus Christ to mean various things other than what it really does is plain perversion of the meaning and intent of the Scriptures. Some will tell you that it is His coming at death or to the heart in some spiritual blessing, or in some kind of judgment or providence.

Persons say this, but the Bible does not. The very thing some are so strenuously denying is the very thing that Jesus and the apostles most positively asserted: Coming visibly, in glory, with all the holy angels. To "gather his elect from the four winds." "The dead in Christ be raised" and the living Christians translated, "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," and all "caught up together to meet the Lord in the air." This does not happen at death, nor when someone receives some spiritual blessing, nor has it yet occurred at any judgment or providential happening. It is a plain, forced perversion of Scripture to attempt to make the return any of these things other than His plain bodily return in glory. To show the absurdity of these forced interpretations, let us ask, Who ever heard of all the tribes of the earth "mourning" or "wailing," when someone died, or was blessed in his spirit, or was saved from his transgressions? That thing has not yet occurred, but it will occur, at such a time as the unbelieving "thinks not," for they do not think it will happen at all. To all such He will return as a "thief in the night;" for when such shall say, "Peace and safety, sudden destruction will come upon them, and they shall not escape." But the children of God are not in darkness that "the day should overtake them as a thief," says Paul. It is nothing for the child of God to contemplate with fear, but as the "blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ." Paul says, "Comfort one another with these words." That "the Lord himself will descend (He ascended) from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel and the trump of God." This Divine-human person—the God-man. Not death, not somebody converted, not some Christian made happy, but the righteous dead raised, and the living righteous translated, and all caught away in the clouds from the great tribulation coming on this wicked, apostate world. Then will be the judgment of this world. The men of this world, wicked and worldly men, cry for the rocks and the mountains to fall on them and hide them. The righteous are to have "rest" at this time "when the Lord Jesus (this Divine-human person) shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire—taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." II Thess. 1:7, 8.

Yes, Jesus Christ, the Divine-human person, is coming again, to "lay judgment to the line and righteousness to the plummet." To "take unto himself his great power and reign." He has not done this yet. Te devil is still "The god of this world," "the prince of the power of the air." And this twofold person is to "reign," not in heaven alone, but in this world "until all enemies are put under his feet." He begins His "reign" at His return, at the "rescurrection of the just." I Cor. 15:22-25.

People talk about news nowadays. The Bible is the only news-book in the world. The newspaper tells us what has taken place, but this Book tells us what will take place. And for people to be shutting it up, and saying we can be guided without it, is just as reasonable as to shut out the sun by closing up our windows because we have the electric light. There is as much reason to say that the sun is worn out as to say that we have got beyond the Bible.—Dwight L. Moody.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Since the death of Dr. Klein practically all of the mail for the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Adminstration has been forwarded to me by Mrs. Klein for review, and to supply material for this column direct from the field. This will continue until Dr. S. W. Rosenberger takes up the active duties of the secretaryship May 1, at which time he will become responsible for getting to the church missionary information through this column.

During the past two weeks I have come to know how refreshing it is to those bearing the responsibilities of leadership, to receive expressions of interest and cooperation from the rank and file of the membership of the church.

Recently I noted in this column the erection of our long-prayed-for church at Nagoya College, and asked for help to meet the impending indebtedness of $10,000. Several letters and checks have been received. During the past week a letter and two checks for this purpose were received from the Whitaker sisters, of Raleigh, N. C. Every letter has been saturated with a Christian spirit. Again I say to you that I know of no place in the foreign field where a little money can be invested to better advantage, than in the completion of the church building.

Rev. U. G. Murphy, formerly our missionary in Japan, and now the superintendent of the Northwest Oriental Evangelization Society, with headquarters in Seattle, after visiting our work in Japan last November, writes: "I know how hard it is to get the church as a whole to catch a vision of what the Orient now offers. If I felt that I could, I would be willing to give of my own time several months toward raising $25,000 to extend the Nagoya school ground, in addition to getting some other things done. I suppose there is no hope of getting the church as a whole to realize what God has placed in its hands in the shape of thousands of young men—raw material from which the Kingdom of God may be built in Japan."

In another letter Brother Murphy expressed the wish that he might be thirty years younger, and given the privilege of investing his life in Nagoya College.

Expressions of Sympathy and Appreciation

The mail during the past week has brought to Mrs. Klein letters of sympathy and appreciation from our missionaries.

Brother Horace Starr Williams writes from Kalgan, China: "Dr. Klein was Christ's aid-de-camp. In all his letters to me he spoke as if I were his son. His advice was always exceptionally timely, and his letters always helped. Often have I been discouraged, but as his letter came I caught a new vision, and resolved to do better. He mentioned that he was continually thinking of us here, and was praying that we might do the work well."

We truly feel our loss and our hearts are heavy, but yet we feel that somewhere he is still praying and pleading for the work.

Brother Paul Cassen, writing from Dhulia, India, after expressing heartfelt sympathy with Mrs. Klein, says: "In looking back over the past three or four years, I am able to see one thing very plainly—I am serving on the mission field in India to-day because Dr. Klein led me to the decision to give my life in this service, and provided the means whereby we have been sent. I thank God that I am able to say that I knew Dr. Klein, and I will look forward to meeting him on the other side."

Brother Minnis, writing as president of the India Mission, says: "I wish to express to you on behalf of all the missionaries, and our Indian Christians, our heartfelt sympathy. We praise God that we had for so long such a splendid director and friend. Mrs. Minnis and I feel like our father had passed on, as Dr. Klein was always so thoughtful of our needs."

Brother Soderbom writes: "When we told our Chinese about Dr. Klein's death they wanted a memorial service; so we held one at Tung Kuan Chapel on Sunday morning. Special music was rendered by our girls' school and our male choir. Short talks about Dr. Klein were given by Mr. Yas, representing the Kalgan Church, and by Mr. Williams, Mrs. Soderbom and myself representing the foreign side.

Similar expressions of sympathy and appreciation were received from Japan through cable and letter.

EASTER

Orders For Programs

The number of orders received for Programs is very encouraging, and still there are many churches, which participated in the Easter Service last year, that have not yet sent their orders for supplies this year. There is always, on the part of some, a tendency to delay writing for supplies until the church or Sunday school is ready for rehearsal, and then send in a rush order, if there is a delay in the mails there is a disappointment.

We find there are instances where the pastor supposes the Sunday school superintendent has sent the order, and the superintendent thinks the pastor has attended to it. May I kindly ask the friends to fill in the card sent, or drop a note, stating the quantity needed or size of the school or congregation, and we will do the rest.

The Presidents of the Annual Conferences are rendering valuable assistance which is greatly appreciated. The Budget Council of the Alabama Conference, composed of the President, Treasurer and Secretary has sent a strong appeal, in the form of a letter, to all of the pastors of that Conference, urging them to order the Programs and hold the service.

This has given me a new suggestion. If the Budget Councils of the various Annual Conferences will adopt this plan, it will be the means of having many of the churches that have not held the Easter Service to do so, and, as the offering counts on the General Conference Budget, it will help to that extent in bringing up the Budget of their Annual Conference. I am intensely interested in having all the churches join in the Easter celebration. The reflex influence on the local churches will prove helpful.

If your school or congregation is small, arrange a service to suit conditions. You need not have the entire service. Again I urge you to use the Decision Cards, and try to reach those who have never made a confession of Christ and get them into the church. There are such in every Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society.

First of all please send your order for supply of Programs.

J. M. Sheridan.

Always pay; for, first or last, you must pay your entire debt. Persons and events may stand for a time between you and justice, but it is only a postponement. You must pay at last your own debt.....He is great who confers the most benefits. He is base—and that is the one base thing in the universe—to receive favors and render none. In the order of nature we cannot render benefits to those from whom we receive them, or only seldom. But the benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, deed for deed, cent for cent, to somebody. Beware of too much good staying in your hand. . . Pay it away quickly in some sort.—Emerson.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Yarboroughs

On Thursday, March 3rd, we left Greensboro in the midst of very deep snow to drive to Cross Anchor, S. C., for a quarterly conference on the next evening. There were times when the driving was very dangerous; but with care and persistence we kept heading south, and by the time we reached Cross Anchor there was very little snow on the ground. There was a very good attendance at the quarterly conference and the reports were fairly good.

We were glad to find Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Cowan both improving in health. We were drawn very closely to these dear people while they were in our home for about four months last winter, and it is delightful to see them going ahead with the Lord's work once more. I preached at Yarborough's Chapel Sunday morning, to a congregation of very earnest listeners.

Brother Cowan reported that his people are planning to plant about three acres to be known as "God's Acres." We shall watch their work with a great deal of interest this year.

Anderson

Sunday afternoon, March 6th, we drove to Liberty Hill, on Anderson, where we were greeted by a fair sized congregation which gave earnest heed to the Word. We had a good time together. This church has a wonderful opportunity in its young people.

Monday evening I preached at Fairview church. We had a very good hearing for a Monday evening. Rev. M. I. Crutchfield has the work well in hand, and is rendering fine service. The people are pleased with him and his work.

Caroleen

Tuesday evening we were in Caroleen with Rev. L. S. Helms and his people. Here we held the second quarterly conference and discussed the conference work. The church here seems to be in good condition, and the work is going along nicely.

Shelby

Wednesday was a rainy, rainy day; but we moved on over to Shelby where another quarterly conference was appointed. Because of the rain not many of the officials were present, so Mrs. Dixon and I both talked to the folks, and we had a good time together around the stove. Brother Helms is doing his best here, but he and his people are laboring under a very great handicap.

Bess Chapel

Thursday morning found us on our way to Bess Chapel to give the day to Brother E. A. Bingham and his people. Here the work is going well, though the pastor is exceedingly anxious for more rapid progress. We met a splendid congregation, and they preferred having Mrs. Dixon and me speak to them rather than hold a quarterly conference. They seemed to appreciate our messages, and we trust much good was done. The people seem to be definitely planning to do some building during this year. What they need is to decide definitely what should be done, and then do it.

Brother Bingham is also teaching in the North Brook school, so we stopped and spoke to the students Friday morning.

Cleveland and Fallston

Friday, Saturday and Sunday were given to Cleveland and Fallston. Rev. J. D. Morris and Rev. J. M. Morgan had worked out a program for these three days which pressed both of us into service, and enabled us to visit seven of their churches.

Both of these men are doing fine service on these two large fields. We enjoyed our visit with them, and trust that much good was done.

Department of Commerce

The Census Bureau of the Department of Commerce of the United States government has sent out blanks to all pastors in the North Carolina Conference asking for facts and figures. These blanks are not difficult to fill out, and it is exceedingly important that they be properly filled out and returned early. Please be sure to do this. These figures will be published and it will give us a very poor showing if only a few of our pastors report. Please do this right away, without fail.

Church Extension Money

Comparatively little Church Extension money from our February collections has been sent to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C. Church Extension claims are pressing upon us as a Board, but we are dependent upon the people on the charges for Church Extension money, and we cannot distribute money until we get it. If pastors and people heeded the Conference request to collect Church Extension money during February, surely there is money in the hands of church treasurers somewhere. If there is, you will please send it to Mr. Idol at once, so the Board of Church Extension may have the funds with which to meet some urgent calls.

Easter Services

Just about one more month will bring us up to Easter. Have you ordered Easter supplies yet? If so, that is fine. If not, better order at once from Rev. J. M. Sheridan, D. D., 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., and get your people to practicing so as to have a good service. Also plan, and pray, and work for a splendid ingathering around Easter. Surely any Sunday school and church can hold the Easter services as planned by the Board of Home Missions. At least they can try.

Children's Home

Dr. E. F. Allman and Mrs. Allman arrived at the Children's Home about ten days ago, and have assumed the duties of superintendent for the Home. We bespeak for them a continuation of that splendid co-operation you have given to the Home under the management of Mr. H. A. Garrett, and Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk. Dr. Allman has been sick with a deep cold since arriving at the Home, but his wife reports that he is improving. In just a short time these faithful workers will be in the full swing of the activities of the Home. Pray for them, co-operate with them, and let each church and Sunday school redouble their efforts to send in a monthly offering to the Home.

A Definite Amount

Watch the report each month from those churches which send in a definite amount each month. See how much better it looks than those alongside of it which report no definite amount.

Appointments

March 19 and 20—Flat Rock.
March 27—Liberty.

Faithfully yours,
A. G. Dixon.

—Let continued emphasis be given to Christian Endeavor's part in the program of evangelism of our churches. Too much stress cannot be laid upon the Quiet Hour observance, which fits us for the task of winning souls to Christ.—Dorothy H. Krauss.

OUR STORY PAGE

CHARLIE COULSON, THE DYING DRUMMER BOY

Two or three times in my life, God in His mercy touched my heart, and twice before my conversion I was under deep conviction.

During the American war, I was a surgeon in the United States Army, and after the Battle of Gettysburg there were many hundred wounded soldiers in my hospital, among whom were 28 who had been wounded so severely that they required my services at once—some whose legs had to be amputated, some lost an arm, and others both an arm and a leg. One of the latter was a boy who had been but three months in the service, and, being too young for a soldier, had enlisted as a drummer. When my assistant surgeon and a steward wished to administer chloroform previous to the amputation, he turned his head aside and positively refused to receive it. When the steward told him that it was the doctor's orders, he said, "Send the doctor to me."

When I came to his bedside, I said: "Young man, why do you refuse chloroform? When I found you on the battlefield, you were so far gone that I thought it hardly worth while to pick you up; but when you opened those large blue eyes I thought you had a mother somewhere who might at that moment be thinking of her boy, I did not want you to die on the field, so ordered you to be brought here; but you have now lost so much blood that you are too weak to endure an operation without chloroform, therefore you had better let me give you some."

He laid his hand on mine, and, looking me in the face, said: "Doctor, one Sunday afternoon, in the Sabbath school, when I was nine and a half years old, I gave my heart to Christ. I learned to trust Him then; I have been trusting Him ever since, and I know I can trust Him now. He is my strength; He will support me while you amputate my arm and leg."

I then asked him if he would allow me to give him a little brandy. Again he looked me in the face, saying: "Doctor, when I was about five years old, my mother knelt by my side, with her arm around my neck, and said, 'Charlie, I am praying to Jesus that you may never know the taste of strong drink. Your papa died a drunkard and went down to a drunkard's grave and I promised God, if it was His will, that you should grow up, that you would warn young men against the bitter cup.' I am 17 years old, but I have never tasted anything stronger than tea or coffee; and as I am in all probability about to go into the presence of my God, would you send me there with brandy on my stomach?"

The look that boy gave me I shall never forget. At that time I hated Jesus, but I respected that boy's loyalty to his Saviour; and when I saw how he loved and trusted him to the last, there was something that touched my heart, and I did for that boy what I had never done for any other soldier—I asked him if he wished to see his chaplain. "Oh, yes, sir," was the answer.

When Chaplain R—— came, he at once knew the boy from having often met him at the tent prayer-meetings, and, taking his hand, said: "Well, Charlie, I am sorry to see you in this sad condition."

"Oh, I am all right, sir," he answered.

"The doctor offered me chloroform, but I declined it; then he wished to give me some brandy, which I also declined; and now, if my Saviour calls me, I can go to Him in my right mind."

"You may not die, Charlie," said the chaplain; "but if the Lord should call you away, is there anything I can do for you after you are gone?"

"Chaplain, please put your hand under my pillow and take my little Bible; in it you will find my mother's address. Please send it to her, and write a letter and tell her that since the day I left home I have never let a day pass without reading a portion of God's Word, and daily praying that God would bless my dear mother—no matter whether on the march, on the battlefield, or in the hospital."

"Is there anything else that I can do for you, my lad?" asked the chaplain.

"Yes; please write a letter to the superintendent of the Sands Street Sabbath School, and tell him that the kind words, many prayers, and good advice he gave me I have never forgotten; they have followed me through all the dangers of battle, and now, in my dying hour, I ask my dear Saviour to bless my dear superintendent; that is all."

Turning towards me, he said: "Now, doctor, I am ready, and I promise you that I will not even groan while you take off my arm and leg, if you will not offer me chloroform." I promised, but I had not the courage to take the knife in my hand to perform the operation without first going into the next room and taking a little stimulant to nerve myself to perform my duty.

While cutting through the flesh, Charlie Coulson never groaned, but when I took the saw to separate the bone the lad took the corner of his pillow in his mouth, and all that I could hear him utter was: "O Jesus, blessed Jesus, stand by me now!" He kept his promise, and never groaned.

That night I could not sleep, for which ever way I turned I saw those soft blue eyes, and when I closed mine, the words, "Blessed Jesus, stand by me now!" kept ringing in my ears. Between 12 and 1 o'clock I left my bed and visited the hospital, a thing I had never done before, unless specially called, but such was my desire to see that boy. Upon my arrival there I was informed by the night steward that sixteen of the hopeless cases had died and been carried down to the dead-house. "How is Charlie Coulson; is he among the dead?" I asked.

"No, sir," answered the steward, "he is sleeping as sweetly as a babe." When I came to the bed where he lay, one of the nurses informed me that about 9 o'clock two members of the United States Christian Commission came through the hospital to read and sing a hymn. They were accompanied by Chaplain R——, who knelt by Charlie Coulson's bed and offered up a fervent and soul-stirring prayer, after which they sang, while still upon their knees, the sweetest of all hymns, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," in which Charlie joined. I could not understand how that boy, who had undergone such excruciating pain, could sing.

Five days after I had amputated that leg he sent for me, and it was from him on that day I heard the first gospel sermon. "Doctor," he said, "my time has come; I do not expect to see another sun rise, but, thank God, I am ready to go, and before I die, I desire to thank you with all my heart for your kindness to me. Doctor, you are a Jew; you do not believe in Jesus; will you please stand here and see me die, trusting my Saviour to the last moment of my life?" I tried to stay, but I could not, for I had not the courage to stand by and see a Christian boy die rejoicing in the love of that Jesus whom I had been taught to hate, so I hurriedly left the room. About 20 minutes later a steward, who found me sitting in my private office covering my face with my hands, said, "Doctor, Charlie Coulson wishes to see you."

"I have just seen him," I answered, "and cannot see him again."

"But, doctor, he says he must see you just once before he dies." I now made up my mind to see him, say an endearing word, and let him die, but I was determined that no word of his should influence me in the least so far as his Jesus was concerned. When I entered the hospital I saw he was sinking fast, so I sat down by his bed. Asking me to take his hand, he said: "Doctor, I love you because you are a Jew; the best Friend I have found in this world was a Jew."

I asked him who that was. He answered: "Jesus Christ, to whom I want to introduce you before I die; and will you promise me, doctor, that what I am about to say to you, you will never forget?"

I promised; and he said: "Five days ago, while you amputated my arm and leg, I prayed to the Lord Jesus Christ to convert your soul."

These words went deep into my heart. I could not understand how, when I was causing him the most intense pain, he could forget all about himself and think of nothing but his Saviour and my unconverted soul. All I could say to him was. "Well, my dear boy, you will soon be all right." With these words I left him, and 12 minutes later he fell asleep, "safe in the arms of Jesus."

Hundreds of soldiers died in my hospital during the war, and I only followed one to the grave, and that one was Charlie Coulson, the drummer boy, and I rode three miles to see him buried. I had him dressed in a new uniform and placed in an officer's coffin, with a United States flag over it.

That dear boy's dying words made a deep impression on me. I was rich at that time, so far as money is concerned, but I would have given every penny I possessed if I could have felt towards Christ as Charlie did; but that feeling cannot be bought with money. Alas! I soon forgot all about my Christian soldier's little sermon, but I could not forget the boy himself. I now know that at that time I was under deep conviction of sin, but I fought against Christ with all the hatred of an orthodox Jew for nearly ten years until, finally, the boy's prayer was answered and God converted my soul.

About 18 months after my conversion, I attended a prayer-meeting one evening in the city of Brooklyn. It was one of those meetings when Christians testify to the lovingness of their Saviour. After several of them had spoken, an elderly lady arose, and said: "Dear friends, this may be the last time that it is my privilege to testify for Christ. My family physician told me yesterday that my right lung is very nearly gone, and my left lung is very much affected, so at the best I have but a short time to be with you; but what is left of me belongs to Jesus. Oh! it is a great joy to know that I shall meet my boy with Jesus in heaven. My son was not only a soldier for his country, but also a soldier for Christ. He was wounded at the Battle of Gettysburg, and fell into the hands of a Jewish doctor, who amputated his arm and leg, but he died five days after the operation. The chaplain of the regiment wrote me a letter, and sent me my boy's Bible. In that letter I was informed that my Charlie in his dying hour sent for that Jewish doctor and said to him: 'Doctor, before I die I wish to tell you that five days ago, while you amputated my arm and leg, I prayed to the Lord Jesus Christ to convert your soul.' "

When I heard this lady's testimony, I could sit still no longer. I left my seat, crossed the room, and taking her by the hand, said: "God bless you, my dear sister; your boy's prayer has been heard and answered. I am the Jewish doctor for whom your Charlie prayed, and his Saviour is now my Saviour."

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

"That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10:9, 10.—Selected.

A Medic Boosts Prohibition

The Council of the American Medical Association recently held its meeting in Chicago. The Rev. R. W. Gammon, reporting the meeting, says :

"Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, who is chairmon of the Council of Medical Education of the Association, declared that the Eighteenth Amendment from the standpoint of personal hygiene and public health is the most important legislation ever passed in America, and that if it were in the power of the nation to legislate out of existence tuberculosis or cancer, such legislation would be passed over night and strictly enforced. He contends that drink did more injury to the people of this country before prohibition than either of these plagues, and that prohibition has accomplished an enormous amount of good already, and that with better enforcement it can accomplish much more for the health and welfare of our people. He states that the medical profession as a whole recognizes this fact and supports the Constitution and the Volstead Act, and that those of the medical profession who were taking advantage of a certain provision of the Volstead Act make up a noisy and active minority that is selling its soul for a mess of pottage. He thinks that the government made the provision for the use of alcohol as a medical agent altogether too liberal. In comparing the present with the past in this regard, he said that honest physicians formerly never prescribed one hundred pints of whiskey in a period of three months, and he holds that ninety-nine out of a hundred prescriptions written for whiskey are boot-legging prescriptions and are a disgrace to the medical profession."

A PLEA FOR SPIRITUALITY

In California last August I saw dry and barren land just across the road from fruitful ranches. The one was like a desert, the other was like an Eden. The difference was not in the natural fertility of the soil; that was the same. It was in irrigation. Wherever the water from river or wells flowed were fields of tall alfalfa, gardens of delicious vegetables and groves of luscious fruit.

It is just so in the religious world. There are pastors, churches and members whose lives are as arid as a desert. The days are monotonous, existence is a drudge. No birds make music all the day, no foliage grows, no flowers bloom, no fruit ripens. They are devoid of spirituality. They are unirrigated by the Spirit of God. They have "a name to live," no more. They count in the numerical statistics as the desert counts as a part of the area of the earth, but that is all.

With others, religion is their vital breath, service is a daily delight, and in their lives flourish the fruits of the spirit—"goodness and righteousness and truth."

The most important thing after salvation is spirituality. Salvation is a free gift; spirituality is a cultivation. One is the soil which God created; the other is the improvement which man makes on that soil under the divine blessing. We can do nothing to procure salvation, we accept it: we grow into spirituality by personally using the means of grace.

Those means are prayer, reading the scriptures, and worship and service. Prayer is as essential to the health of the soul as air is to the health of the body. The scriptures are as necessary to spiritual vigor as is food to physical strength. Worship is as vital to religious development as are wholesome social relations to human happiness. Service is as indispensable to spiritual growth as is bodily exercise to the athlete.

My appeal is that the Christians of this country busy themselves with these divinely appointed means. Take firmer hold upon the horns of the altar of intercession; study afresh the scriptures, forsake not the assembling of yourselves together and consecrate yourselves anew to the service of the Master.—Adapted from the Christian Index.

Some fine things have happened in these two weeks. On the A. C. B., English Street went over the top. New charges entering this list are Gibsonville, Cleveland, Rockingham, Yarborough, and Democrat. The promotions on this list are Forsyth, Granville, Mount Hermon, Pleasant Grove, and Mecklenburg. Burlington still leads with a fine contribution.

The G. C. B. has two promotions—Granville and Mount Hermon. The Woman's Home Missionary Society has six promotions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has 11 promotions and one new entry. The College list has two charges to go over the top—Winston-Salem, First, and Yadkin College charge. Three new entries, and a contribution from Saxapahaw.

When our children come home from school with their report cards we all are made glad when these cards show promotion. I think God, too, is glad when the reports from His children show promotion.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

INFORMATION WANTED

About 1882 there appeared in the first edition of "Band of Mercy Melodies," a hymn beginning "Maker of earth and sea and sky," by Miss Emily Bryant Lord. Information about this writer is earnestly requested and anybody who can give it will confer a great favor by writing to Our Dumb Animals, Boston, at once.

FLOWN

A fly and a flea in a flue were imprisoned.
Now what would they do?
"Let us flee!" said the fly.
"Let us fly!" said the flea.
So they flew through a flaw in the flue.

Doubt Cast On Find

Doubt has been thrown on the alleged "missing link" skull which Dr. C. J. Heberlein, a Dutch professor, found in Trinil, Java, last fall. The man who in 1892 unearthed part of an ape-man's skull in the Trinil district of Java—Prof. Eugene Dubois—says that photographs of the Heberlein find indicate that it is no more than part of the leg bone of a prehistoric animal resembling the elephant. He points out the fact that remains of these creatures are frequently found in Java. The truth of the matter will be determined when the scientific world has an opportunity to examine the alleged skull.

REV. D. A. BRASWELL
Part of His Life Story

My dear Brother:—I want to thank you for your words of encouragement in the Methodist Protestant Herald of January 20. I said when I read your article, Why did he write that just now? I said, Surely God caused him to say that just now. I had been under a dark cloud and a heavy burden of sickness, great loss by fire and other ways. And sitting by a dying wife all night a part of the time, and trying to preach and do church work without much salary. And the long drawn-out sickness had brought me to feel like my life was a complete failure and my friends had about all forgotten me. When I read your article I said, No, they have not all forgotten me. And better still the Lord has not forgotten our labor of love. I want you to know if you never help another poor heavy-hearted preacher you have helped this poor man. None but the One who knows the secrets of all hearts will never know what I have gone through in the past four years. And no one knows the sacrifices I have made to help build up the Kingdom of God through the Methodist Protestant Church. Please give me space in the Methodist Protestant Herald to say a few words about the work of the past.

I was the means in getting a small church built in Anson county by the name of Friendship. I united with that church. The members all moved away and it went down. I preached four years at McFarland, and four years at New Hope near Monroe. I got a very good church built at both places. I farmed for a living at that time. I had a wife and seven children to provide for. I got almost no salary for preaching. I would work on my farm until Friday evening, and drive 31 miles to New Hope and conduct three services on Sunday, and drive home Monday and work on the farm until Friday, and drive to McFarland and conduct three services on Sunday. I kept this up for four years. These were great days in my life. We had some of the best meetings of my life. I think you will hear about them in heaven

On the 17th day of January, 1894, we moved to Concord, N. C. During that year I got a small band of Methodist Protestants together and organized a church. At the next conference Brother J. S. Dunn was put in charge of that society. And for some cause it went to pieces. I held a meeting here in 1893 and had 60 converts. Concord has too much history to give it all here. 1895, I was sent to Old Albemarle Circuit. I spent six years with those good people. During those six years I got five churches built; the most of them are alive, and all of them ought to be alive. I love those dear people. I would like to tell you all about my experience among those dear people. I prospected for the Methodist Protestant Church from Wilmington to the Virginia line. I visited the oldest town in the state, Bath, and other towns. It would take too much time and space to tell all about that work.

1901 I was sent to the Mountains. I spent three years up there. While I was up there I got a good church and parsonage built at Democrat. And I got a society organized at Asheville. And got our folks worked up to where they thought they could build a church. I did quite a lot of prospecting in the mountains.

1904, I was sent back to Concord, N. C. The first year I had Rockwell, Fairfield, Alexanders chapel and Concord. During the year I held a meeting at what was then called Patterson Mill. We had 319 converts and on the second Sunday of the meeting I opened the doors of the church and 148 persons united with the M. P. church at one service. That was the greatest service I was ever in. Concord was made a station that year. We held a meeting at Concord and had over one hundred converts. The finance of the church went from $400.00 to $2,600 the first year. We built a parsonage the second year. We paid the debt of the church the first year and painted it. We built a good church at Roberta the third year. The Concord church grew very fast all the time I was here. I had 72 in my Sunday school class when I left here. I was sent to Gibsonville. I spent two years there. We paid off $600.00 debt on the parsonage while I was there.

I was sent to Denton the next year. And while I was there we got a real nice church built and almost paid for. It's true that it got burnt down. We got one nice church built at Charlotte and one of the dear young men whom I licensed to preach is serving that church. I am proud of him; he is doing a great work there. We are going to build another good church in Charlotte. And we want you who read this article to help us to pay for our lot and we will go in the Building and Loan and close the church in soon. Please help us at once. Send the money to D. A. Braswell, at Concord, N. C. I just know you will all help us some. I have spent thousands of dollars for the church. It will all come back some time multiplied a thousand fold. I am very lonely and sad. I have set in to try to redeem my little property. The same God that blessed old Job is still on the Throne. God bless you all. Pray for me. Your brother in Christ and truest friend.

D. A. BRASWELL.

TRAFFIC IN HORSES FOR FOOD

Those familiar with humane affairs in England know that one of the most trying problems there is the abominable export traffic in old horses, sent to the Continent for food purposes. Now comes the regrettable announcement that negotiations have been completed by which a firm in Regina, Saskatchewan, has agreed to supply horses to satisfy the liking for horse-flesh consumers in Europe. It is said that wild horses are increasing too rapidly in British Columbia, and presumably this supply as well as cheap, worn-out animals, will be drawn upon for export. A Belgian firm has agreed, the report runs, to receive at least 35,000 horses yearly, all quartered and ready for the Continental butcher to place on sale at retail. Naturally the Canadian Societies are stirred up about this situation, and have the best wishes of their fellow-workers on this side of the line for success in remedying it.—Our Dumb Animals.

A RELIGION OF POWER
Rufus M. Jones

There have been many ways of regarding religion, and different persons today think of it differently. It is very common to speak of it as something which one "gets" or "accepts." "He got religion," the neighbors say, or "he has always kept his religion through every trial." It is not uncommon to think of it as a statement of belief or faith which a person holds. "I accept the doctrine of the Trinity, of the atonement, and of eternal life, and eternal punishment, therefore I have religion;" thus many a person explains his religion. To such a one it consists largely of correct definitions. Another class of persons care nothing for definition; they consider religion to be a good life; they say: "I do about right, I live up to my light, and I do not believe God will be hard on me."

There is still another way of reviewing religion. It is the power of God manifested in life. It does not begin with definitions, it does not consist of living about right, it is not something one "gets." It comes and gets the person. He does not keep his religion, but his religion keeps him. It is a power, a force, just as real and just as persistent as that which we call gravitation, and its effects are just as sure. No definitions of electricity would ever light a man's house, or move a trolley car. The first step is to let the current in and the house becomes light, or the car moves. Everything bases itself on the ultimate, invisible power, which is simply RECEIVED. This is true of religion as it is of mechanics. There is no religion apart from God, and until a man comes to God and God gets him, the man is not truly religious. It consists first and last of possession—God's possession of us and our joy in the sense of His ownership. A religion without power would be like a gravitation which did not draw anything, or like electricity that had no force. Religion is spiritual gravitation. It draws the soul away from everything else to its true Central Sun. The first effect of it on a person is to beget love. Love is the unfailing sign of religion. A loveless religion is as impossible as a waterless ocean or a treeless forest. If a man's religion does not flood him with love, it is the wrong kind of religion.

We have been speaking of what religion seems to us to be, now a word about how it comes. There has been in our world but one Person who was perfectly divine and perfectly human. He showed what it means to be a son. He also showed how to be a son, and He plainly said to the whole race, "I am the Way." Religion means getting to God, Christ is the way, and love is the sign.—Pennsbury Leaflet.

—Philadelphia has long been famous as the home of the Liberty Bell. Now it has another bell—the largest in the Western Hemisphere. The big bell is 9 1-2 feet across, 7 3-4 feet high and weighs more than 17 tons. It hangs in the tower of the Wanamaker department store building. That store is one of the biggest in the United States.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Deviney

Cynthia Jane Deviney was born December 25, 1851. She put her trust in Jesus while young and joined the church at Shiloh about 50 year ago, and remained a true member till her spirit was called home on February 23, 1927.

She leaves two children, Samuel Deviney, of Liberty, N. C., and Mrs. Mary Nixon, of Greensboro, N. C.; 14 grandchildren to mourn her departure.

Her death took place in Greensboro where she was making her home; but her body was brought back to Shiloh to be laid in the cemetery of the church she had loved so long.

God blessed her children in giving them a Christian mother. Then, too, in allowing her to stay on earth till she was 75 years, one month and 28 days of age.

May the children trust in mother's God and meet her in heaven. A. O. LINDLEY.

Julian

Edith Delphina Julian was the daughter of Hodgin and Asenath Fentriss, and was born October 16, 1856. Early in life she accepted Christ as her Savior and joined Bethany M. P. Church when it was first organized and remained a faithful member through life.

It was on June 8, 1882, that she was married to George S. Julian. This union was blessed with three children: Clarkson S. Julian, Cedar Falls, N. C.; Mrs. Florence A. Aldridge, Asheboro, N. C., and Mrs. Atha E. Redding, Spencer, N. C., who survive; also ten grandchildren, one brother, P. P. Fentriss, Worthville, N. C., and one sister, Mrs. Martha Giles, are living.

But her bereft companion and children feel the loss most keenly. They have our deepest sympathy.

She joined the church at the age of 18 years, and felt an interest in her church as long as she lived. She was a member of our Missionary Society of Bethany.

Sister Julian had been suffering for some time. A short time before the death angel came she said, "I want to go." She loved her husband and children; but also loved God. So, on February 23, 1927, at the age of 70 years, four months and seven days, her spirit was called to heaven.

Her funeral services were held at Bethany on February 24, 1927, where the body was laid to rest.

Surely, one of our best has been called from us. May the hope of meeting her in heaven cheer all who mourn for her.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Baynes

In the death of our friend and neighbor, Mr. Johnathan Baynes, Bethany has lost one of her most loyal members. Late in the afternoon of March 3 his spirit quietly slipped away to go back to God. He lacked only 16 days of living his 77th year. He came into the church about 30 years ago and had been faithful in his service, always willing and ready to do his share of whatever his church proposed to do. He served on the board of trustees a good many years. His church will miss him; so will his home and community. Shall we mourn his departure? Rather let us be glad that the poor, worn, tired body has laid down to rest, thus setting the spirit free to enter that home prepared for it by our loving Savior.

AUTOMOBILES AND CHILDREN

Every thoughtful motorist dreads the streets where children are playing. In one of our Worcester county towns the other day a beautiful little boy of five years, on the way to kindergarten, was run over by a truck, dragged, killed and terribly mutilated. The truck driver was hardly to blame, for the child ran in front of the approaching giant; but the sad fact remains that the boy is dead.

Chief Reeves, of Swampscott, has a plan for educating children to beware of autos. He has launched the A. B. C. club. (Always Be Careful.)

The membership of this new organization is made up entirely of youngsters in whom the chief hopes to instil a deep-rooted conception of the term caution."

A yellow tag, about the size of a silver half dollar, is the insignia of membership. On one side of the tag is printed: "I am a member of the A. B. C. club, which means 'Always Be Careful.'" On the reverse side is a rhyme composed by Chief Reeves, as a motto for the children to aid in reducing the number of accidents among the younger generation.

The motto reads:

"I keep my eyes wide open,
I stop and listen, too,
Danger awaits at every turn
For me and you.
I look to left and right
As I homeward go,
I stop at corners,
Watch my step, and
I go slow."

THE HUSKY DAUGHTER

Cook has quit and mother's cleaning off the kitchen shelf;
Shelf is high and mother's short—has to stretch herself.
After she has done with that, the pantry must be swept—
One would think the cook forgot where the broom was kept.
After that she'll take the stuff from the ice-box stalls,
Wash it out and put things back; roll some butter balls,
Beat some eggs and whip some cream and bake the Sunday pies—
Daughter's at gymnasium, taking exercise!

Last week, when the housemaid left, mother cleaned the rugs—
Got the big ones on the line after many tugs;
Waxed the hardwood living room, pulled the heavy weight
Of that big lead polisher—lunch made daughter late
Getting to the down town place where the classes meet
For the calisthenics that will put her on her feet.
Seems to Ma a husky girl with observant eyes
Might not have to leave her home for some exercise—Strickland Gillian.

MARRIED

Dowdy-Perryman

Many friends throughout the state will be interested to learn of the marriage of Mr. David Astor Dowdy and Miss Iola Perryman, who surprised their friends by motoring over to Salisbury and getting married on Tuesday, February 15th. The young couple went on to Asheville for a brief honeymoon.

The bride is the attractive and accomplished younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Perryman, and has been a member of the church choir for several years, and has taught a class in our Sunday school. She attended N. C. College for Women besides the local high school.

Mr. Dowdy is secretary and treasurer of the Mann Drug Company, and was educated at the State University. He is a young man of good business ability, fine habits, and splendid promise. He has affiliated himself with our church.

These excellent young people are popular with a large circle of friends, who are extending warmest congratulations and best wishes for a life of happiness and usefulness. The newly wedded pair have returned to High Point, and will make their home temporarily with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Perryman, on Lindsay street.

Jennings-Coltrane

On the evening of February 10th at the parsonage, Mr. Ralph Jennings and Miss Henrietta Coletrane were united in marriage by the writer. Both are prominent young people of Worthville. W. H. NEESE.

Davis-Newton

A very surprising event for the many friends was the marriage of Mr. Luther Davis and Miss Blanche Newton, Saturday, February 19, 1927. The young couple motored to York, South Carolina, and were married there. They were accompanied by Miss Maggie Mann, Mr. Marvin Blackwelder, and William Newton, the later being the brother of the bride.

Mrs. Davis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Newton. She holds many offices in the church and Sunday school, and also in the other organizations of the First Methodist Protestant church in Concord of which she is a member.

Mr. Davis has been a resident of Concord for sometime and holds a position in the plumbing business here.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis are making their home with Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Winsell, for the present. The many friends of this young couple wish for them a long, happy, and prosperous life. A FRIEND.

RELIGION IN BUSINESS

I have just returned from a funeral where a mother lay cold in death and a number of little ones stood over her lifeless form weeping, besides a husband who does not claim to be a Christian. It makes us feel sad to know a loving mother has gone and left a number of small children with an ungodly father.

We wonder why God comes in the home some times and takes the one who is most needed and sometimes takes the little sweet babe from the mother's arms, but we don't know. It is not for us to know. One thing we do know, is God doesn't make mistakes or do something wrong, it is for somebody's good. Each day I live I see some of the evidence of God's great power which makes me stand more firm and steadfast. As I started out in a new year I looked back on 1926. I can see where I have made many mistakes; not the things I have done altogether but the things of neglect.

I will mention a few where God has made me feel. First, I was fully intending to go to conference; let my subscription expire on the church paper, carelessly forgot the date and when I went I was two days too late. I have found that neglect has played a great part in the downfall of many a man. But in the outset of the new year I asked God to forgive me of all those things and give me another chance, and also promised Him I was impressed with any of his work I would do my best in the new year.

Like many others I found myself grasping after the dollar, not having time to pray as I should. I have always prayed in the home at night and find it a great help to me and family.

I was also impressed that this was not enough. I should take time to pray in my business. It has always been my motto for each man to be on the job and have his machine ready at seven o'clock so we might do a good days work, and never take time to consult with God, or ask him to help me and all the hands to be honest in the day's work. I told God I would stop all that. When the whistle blows for work now we all gather around the fire and read a few verses in the Bible and pray. I think if there was ever a time when people needed God in their business is when they have eighteen men to manage and do it in an honest way. This bunch of men are all good workers but very few are Christians. I did not tell this to boast but set some new resolutions for the new year. If there ever was a time when people should be good it is now. I know some one will say it is narrow to spend time to pray each morning with a crowd of workers, but I feel it my duty. I don't pray that I might be more prosperous in my business but that I should have the wisdom to be a better man and to do the will of my Father. I feel that God holds us responsible for the management of our business and we as leaders should be safe ones. If one of these men curses he loses his job and we never hear a curse word all day. This is a help to me indeed; this was stopped about three years ago. May God help us all to see more of our duties as we get older is my prayer. May God bless the editor and all the readers.

Yours in His name,
W. D. MOORE.

THINK, DRIVER, THINK

So soft, so tender and so small,
So encompassingly my all
So wondrous that God should give me
Life moulded so exquisitely!
My baby—all my own to love,
Sent just to me from heav'n above;
My heart, spirit, all glorified,
Now in a baby's soul abide.
Angels smile and o'er us hover,
Smile again as she says, "Mother!"

A wandering of little feet
Adventuring across a street;
The shriek of siren, grinding brake,
The cry a broken heart will make!
A wail of hopeless agony,
The moaning of a man—his plea!
The silence of the one who kneels
And little heart, stilled, gently feels,
And, Oh! the stillness of a babe
In arms of childless mother laid!

Please, God, let some young mother meet
This sweet new angel, guide her feet,
That she may never miss or know
The loss of mother-love below.
Please, God send to the mother here
New courage and new vision clear,
Again with love her heart imbue,
This mother of an angel new.
And afterwhile, somehow, some way,
Give to the driver peace, I pray.

—R. A. Grady.

DON'T STOP JOHN'S PAPER

Don't stop John's paper, editor,
For he could not live without;
Surely he will want to know
All the activities round about
Throughout the church from East to West,
From North and South as well,
From Japanese and Chinese shores,
And the land of William Tell;
What's new way down in Bambur-land,
As well as up Northeast,
The news from Red Bird's changing day
And Europe's topmost crest.

Why, man alive, he'd miss the vision
Of his beloved church,
With teeming millions deep in need,
And leave them in the lurch;
He could not see beyond the borders
Of his own local perch,
He'd narrow down and shrivel up without the inspiration
That comes from reading every week your grand old publication.

Now there are many other reasons
Why John's paper shouldn't stop,
But I know I need not give them,
And the subject we will drop.
From now on, Mr. Editor, whenever a man writes in,
And tells you to stop his paper, you should at once begin
To pray for that dear brother and inquire as to the "Why,"
For his pathway will be rocky and things will go awry,
If this friendly weekly visitor ceases coming to his door,
We're fearful he will lag behind and we'll hear of him no more.

—E. S. Hengst in the Evangelical Messenger.

MARK HOPKINS ON HIS LOG

By Arthur Guiterman

Mark Hopkins sat on an end of a log
And a farmer boy sat on the other.
Mark Hopkins came as a pedagogue
But taught as an elder brother.

I don't care what Mark Hopkins taught,
If his Latin was small and his Greek was naught;
For the farmer boy he thought, thought he,
All through lecture time and quiz,
"The kind of a man I mean to be
Is the kind of a man Mark Hopkins is."

Philosophy, language, medicine, law,
Are peacock feathers to deck the daw,
If the boys who come from your splendid schools
Are well-trained sharpers or flippant fools.

You may brag of their age and ivied walls,
Of their great endowment and marble halls;
And all their modern features!
Of their vast curriculum's scope and reach—
But what about the teachers?
Are they men who will stand in father's place?
Who are paid, best paid by the ardent face,
When boyhood goes as boyhood can
It's faith and love to a fine true man?

No spoken word, nor written plea
Can teach young hearts what man should be;
Not all the books on the shelves—
But what the teachers are themselves.

For education is making men!
So it is now, so was it when
Mark Hopkins sat on an end of a log
And a farmer boy sat on the other."

THEN HE WOKE UP

There was a brother got the thought
That he was strictly "it";
Just to get even with his church,
He quit.

The church folks bore it wondrous well,
They never wailed, nor moaned nor tore;
But said, "As you go out, don't slam
The door."

The brethren round the place
Did not go moping all that day;
They smiled and said good-bye and went
To pray.

He thought: "They do not realize
That I have left them to their fate,
So much the better; let them go—
But wait!"

And then he ambled down the street,
And confidently told the town,
"Now, fellows, watch and see the church Fall down."

Somehow or other it went on;
The whole thing didn't go to smash.
They just felt sorry that he was
So rash.

It rather stunned him that the church
Went calmly on through day and night,
As well as when he used to keep
It right.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

BRO. BRASWELL SEES AN OPPORTUNITY

Second Church, Charlotte.—Sunday was a busy day. I taught the Bible class, voted the church to transfer to our new quarters, elected church officers, preached at 11 a. m.; three car loads of us drove 18 miles east of Charlotte to a schoolhouse. I preached at 3 p. m. to a most attentive congregation. We had an old-time revival service such as we do not see every day. That service may mean another church. We drove back to Charlotte. I visited some sick folks. I preached against at 7:30. We had a good service. I went home with a family after preaching. We had a happy service in the home. There are seven nice girls in the home. I asked them all to unite with the church next Sunday. I think they will. I drove 60 miles during the day. No, be honest, don't you think that is a very good day's work for a 17-year-old boy?

Look and listen! We are moving to new quarters in Charlotte. We have found an ideal place for our church. If we can secure it we will never regret it. But the whole church will rejoice over it some day. We will be the first church on the ground in a new part of Charlotte. We will be in the midst of new homes. We will have to raise $120 before we can have the deed transferred. My little band has not got that $120. Neither have I; if I had it, I would advance it at once. I am doing my very best to redeem my own property. My little band has all they can take care of at present, taking care of the other lot and chapel. We mean to sell out where we are just as soon as we can; then we can take care of the new lot. I want our people at large to make up the $120 at once and send it to me at once and let me have the deed transferred. We are all dlighted with the deal. We feel like it is too good to let pass without seizing it. We are planning to build a good church, a much better one than we had planned to build at the other place. As soon as we get the lot secured, Brother D. A. McLauren is going over with me and he will draw up a plan for the church and we will show you what we have in mind to do. We will build a much better chapel on the new lot than we have on the present lot. When we get the new chapel up, we are planning to hold a rally. Brother Little has promised to come and be with us then. We are planning to have Dr. Dixon with us this spring. I feel sure he will be delighted with our now lot. It is on a hard surface street and it is paid for; the water and light lines run right in front of the lot. It is a fine corner lot. I have got the man holding the lot until I can get back there next Saturday morning not later than 9 o'clock. It want to be able to change papers in a few days. When you read this remember that we are dealing with an opportunity of a lifetime, and let every body send some help at once. I see something in this deal for the future of our church in Charlotte. But if we are the first on the ground we must act now. I have said enough for all who are interested to read between the lines. I will tell you more later. I am paying my own expense and working for nothing. Brethren, help me get the $120 at once. Please send the money to me at Concord. My address is 83 Ann Street, Concord, N. C. Please respond at once. May our Father continue to bless you all. Pray for me.

D. A. BRASWELL.

P. S.: Brother D. A. McLaurin has already given $40 on the other lot and chapel, and given me $5.50. What if all our people who could would do that well? If all, or one-third, of our people would do that the Charlotte church would go up right now. And I would not have to pay my own way to make it go up. Let us look at this new church ten years ahead and think what it will be if we do what we can and ought to do now. Our people have money enough to pay the debt on the College, and run the College, and the Children's Home. D. A. BRASWELL.

Jerusalem.—We had a much larger congregation last Sunday than at any service during the present conference year. A number of visitors worshiped with us. We were glad to have some of the members of the church present for the first time this year. Among them were Miss Maud Hedrick, of near Denton, and Brother John Ward, of near Lexington. Mr. H. G. Easley, of Burlington, accompanied the pastor and assisted in the service by playing the organ, singing a solo, and making a brief talk at the conclusion of the sermon.

Our services for both Sundays in February were suspended on account of the rain and bad condition of the roads. We are hoping for another large congregation at the next regular appointment, which will be next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, when the Lord's Supper will be administered.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

South Lexington.—The Sunday school took an upward step in attendance last Sunday with 203 present. It was an ideal day for church and Sunday school attendance. Brother W. H. Kindley, assistant superintendent, directed the Sunday school in the absence of Brother H. C. Koonts, whose mother is critically ill at this writing.

The congregation for the morning church service was larger than usual, and Pastor Ridge delivered a good sermon on the theme, "Religion in the Home."

One of the largest congregations of the present year was at the Sunday night service, and Brother Ridge seemed greatly inspired in the delivery of his message. He chose as a text, Luke 9:53, "And they did not receive him because——." It was a very helpful sermon. The church was about filled with members of the church and a large number of visitors.

Mr. H. G. Easley, of Burlington, a blind musician, who has been the guest of Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Way for several days, was present at the service last Sunday night and sang a beautiful solo, "Somebody Knows, 'Tis Jesus." He gave a pipe organ and piano recital at the First M. E. church on Monday night.

All of the regular services will be held next Sunday, beginning with the Sunday school at 9:45, preaching by the pastor at 11 a.m. and at 7 p.m. C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Yadkin College.—The work is progressing very nicely here. Our faithful pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, did not fill his appointment the first Sunday in this month, owing to bad weather. He has filled all other appointments, giving us splendid sermons. We are always glad to have Mrs. Bethea worship with us.

We enjoy reading the reports from pastors and reporters. Glad to see the nice reports from Mecklenburg, as we are interested in Rev. W. T. Totten and his work.

Our Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Davis March 6th. Our village was saddened by the death of Miss Elizabeth Howard February 16th. She was loved by all and is greatly missed. She was a member of the Ladies' Aid society, a faithful member of the Sunday school as long as she was able to attend.

A member of the M. P. church at Dulins, Mr. Albert Owen, has been in a hospital at Charlotte for several weeks. The last report was that the doctors thought he was some better. His many friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

Mr. J. B. Charles, who has been sick for some time, is improving. His daughter, Mrs. J. C. Robinson, of Lawrenceville, Va., recently visited him.

Mr. and Mrs. H. U. Oaks and daughters, Miss Carmen and Mrs. Jackson of High Point, visited at the home of Mrs. J. D. Davis some time ago.

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Casstevens (nee Miss Esther Owen) of Clemons, were recent visitors of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. L. Owen.

Mrs. Bradley Brooks, who spent several weeks with her mother, Mrs. J. A. Hartley, has returned to her home in Winston-Salem.

The many friends of Rev. C. B. Way, a former pastor of the M. P. church, were glad to have him visit them last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Sides, of Lexington, spent Sunday with her sisters, Mrs. Flora Dale and Miss Linnie Hartley.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Young, of Churchland, and Miss Bettie Nelson, from Mebane, who is taking a training course at Churchland, visited friends here Sunday.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove. — Brother Reynolds preached a good sermon Sunday morning after which he administered the Lord's Supper to a large number.

We were glad to have Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon and daughter with us the fourth Sunday. Mrs. Dixon made a splendid talk at the close of the Sunday school. Dr. Dixon preached a helpful sermon from the subject, "Stewardship of Self, Service and Substance," bringing out clearly that we should find our place in life and fill it until God calls us home. We hope these good folks will pass our way again soon.

The Workers' Conference was not held Wednesday evening on account of the heavy snow. The Sunday school superintendent, I. A. Teague, stated Sunday that he was unable to set a time then for the meeting as he is at the bedside of his father most of the time who is in a serious condition.

The Ladies' Aid will meet Wednesday in the home of Mrs. S. L. Murphy.

MRS. RALPH KENNEDY,
Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our Sunday school was well attended yesterday, there being an increase of 34 over the previous Sunday. We are trying to get our Sunday school organized in a systematic way and we hope to have a better Sunday school now than we have had.

There was a large congregation at the evening service yesterday. The W. F. M. Society gave their thank-offering service and the following program was rendered: Hymns 482 and 479. Duet, "Tell Me the Story of Jesus," by Mrs. W. E. Knight and Kathleen Shearin. Solo, "Alone," by Mr. C. R. Knight. A missionary reading by Louise Brown. Reading on Prayer, by Mrs. W. A. Ellington. A missionary talk by our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer. He gave us a splendid talk or sermon, rather. We all can have a part in God's services. Are we doing our part? Our thank-offering was taken and it amounted to $8.00.

Our W. F. and Home Missionary Societies meet with Mrs. E. T. Ellington Tuesday afternoon. All members are urged to be present as we want to elect new officers for the year.

Our Sunday school is planning to have the Easter pageant, "There is Hope of a Tree," on Friday evening, April 15.

Sorry to say that some of our members are sick. May God bless them and if it be His will may they be fully restored to health.

REPORTER.

Denton Church.—We are glad to say that our Sunday school is still on the gaining side. We find in our record book last year that the second Sunday in March was rainy. The report shows that attendance a year ago was 16; attendance yesterday, 112. Offering a year ago, 48 cents; offering yesterday, $2.85.

Our Christian Endeavor was in charge of Mr. C. A. Hoover. The service was enjoyed by all present.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Henderson's children have the mumps. Mr. Henderson is busy working for our church and Sunday school. When he is not at one of the churches preaching he is out getting new members. If the old members fail to come to church service or Sunday school he goes to see why they were not there. So come, people, don't let our good pastor have to come after you.

The Ladies' Aid Society meets at the church next Saturday evening at 3 p.m.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Liberty-Siler City.—In the absence of our pastor, who is away at the Seminary, Rev. W. M. Pike preached for us Sunday on the subject of "Stewardship." He preached a plain, forceful sermon. Come again, Mr. Pike.

Our pastor, Mr. Gibbs, will preach for us the third Sunday morning, (next Sunday).

The fourth Sunday our President, Dr. Dixon, will be with us, both at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

We had a large number present at Sunday school Sunday morning.

One of our faithful members, Mr. Shelly Pickett, is very ill with pneumonia. May he be restored to health if it is the Lord's will.

The Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. F. A. Shepard Wednesday afternoon.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

BERTINE SHEPARD, Reporter.

Palestine, Flat Rock Charge.—You haven't heard from our church in quite a while owing to the sickness of our reporter; but we are living and progressing.

Our Sunday school seems to have taken on new life. Attendance is better than last year. We have a good superintendent and he is always on hand. We had 63 present last Sunday.

Next Sunday is our preaching day. Brother Trogdon always brings us a good message. We do like to hear the old-time religion preached.

The good mothers of our community have started a prayer meeting and seem to enjoy it fine. They meet every Wednesday at 2 p.m. at some neighbor's.

Best wishes to the Herald and to the members of all the different churches and others who read it.

T. G. YOUNG.

Harmony, Yarborough Charge.—Our pastor filled his regular appointment the fourth Sunday and Sunday night, giving us two good sermons.

A Christian Endeavor Society was also organized. We have had no Christian Endeavor for several years and we are glad to have it revived.

Our Sunday school is doing fine with a regular attendance of about 50.

The Woman's Missionary Society still has its faithful few, and we hope to report a Ladies' Aid in the near future.

We note with sorrow the death of the father of one of our former pastors, Rev. N. M. Harrison. We sympathize with him in his bereavement.

EDNA HUGHES,
Reporter.

Cedar Falls.—We were very sorry last Sunday that our pastor, Rev. Fred Lowe, was ill and could not fill his appointment here; but he was very careful that we would not be deprived of a sermon at the appointed time, so he very kindly asked Rev. G. B. Free, of Asheboro, Star Route, to fill his place. Mr. Free gave us a very splendid sermon; his subject was prayer. He stated that without prayer the spiritual life would die. God grant that we may grasp that blessed privilege to pray without ceasing.

MRS. CHAS. LAUGHLIN.

Haw River Circuit—The Ladies' Missionary Society of Reidsville gave a recital at Midway Sunday evening to the delight of all. To say that it was fine is putting it in mild form. The collection was $60.80. This amount has been sent to Mrs. Taylor.

They will be at Mizpah the third Sunday at 2:30 p. m., and at Friendship the first Sunday in April at 2:30 p. m. If you want to get a real treat come out and hear them.

PASTOR.

Rockingham.—Our Sunday school is steadily increasing in number. We have now on roll 199. The teacher of the Card class, Miss Lizzie McQueen, has moved away and Miss Nettie McLean has taken her place.

The teachers and officers of our church had a very interesting monthly meeting on last Tuesday night, March 8, at the home of Mrs. D. E. McKenzie. She served refreshments at the end of the meeting. The next meeting, which will be in April, will meet at Mr. R. F. Gardner's.

Our mid-week prayer meetings are still holding out with interest. We have the good fortune of having our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, with us at these meetings almost every time. For a usual thing after the lesson is read by a volunteer our pastor makes us a very inspiring talk on the lesson.

Since we last wrote we have had two noted ministers of the M. P. denomination visiting in our community, Rev. D. A. Braswell, the father of our present sheriff, came on a visit. Rev. Braswell is a very appreciated man around Rockingham. He was with our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, in a meeting last year. He also come over to our church and made a few talks. Rev. Phillips was also over here. Mr. Phillips was with us last year in June in a meeting. This meeting only lasted a week as he was overloaded with meetings at this time. He will be with us again in June for a two weeks' meeting. Our boys and girls' prayer circle grew out of his meeting last year. We are glad to welcome Mr. Phillips and Mr. Braswell back at any time.

We ask the prayers of the Christian people to be with us in our work that we may become stronger in doing the things that the Heavenly Father would have us do and that we may always be a progressing church.

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

High Point.—As the second in the series of Lenten sermons, Rev. P. E. Lindley brought us a beautiful and timely message on "Jesus, the Merciful," Sunday morning. The choir rendered a lovely anthem, "Hear My Cry, O God," and a mixed quartette sang "Holy Hour," by Nevin, with most pleasing effect. At the evening service Rev. Lester Ballard delivered an impressive message on "Self-Denial."

The Ladies' Aid Society held a very interesting and inspiring meeting on Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. W. C. Lyndon. There was a good attendance. The president, Mrs. C. C. Robins, was in the chair, and the minutes were read by the assistant secretary, Mrs. Clyde Cox. It was announced that the sum of $150 was raised from the little aprons sent out with a request for a penny for each inch of the measure of the waists of those to whom sent. Then from the recent sale of house dresses the sum of $65 was realized. After the conclusion of business, delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, and a delightful social hour was enjoyed. We were much pleased to receive a new member in the person of Mrs. John C. Whitesell, a recent bride.

The topic for Christian Endeavor this (Monday) evening is "How to Conquer Circumstances," and Prof. P. E. Lindley will be the leader. Following this meeting, a unique social will be held, and "A Trip Around the World" will be enjoyed, the countries visited being Africa, Hawaii, Japan, Alaska, and America.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society for children between the ages of 6 and 12 years was reorganized Sunday afternoon with Miss Myrtle Davis as superintendent.

The Junior Mission Circle will meet at the church Saturday afternoon with Mrs. R. M. Andrews, superintendent. This body of little people is a live wire organization.

The second quarterly conference will be held Wednesday, March 23rd, and heads of all organizations are expected to come and bring reports of their work.

Elaborate plans are being made for the annual meeting of the N. C. Federation of Music Clubs, which will convene here March 31-April 2, and the day sessions will be held in the First Church. The recital by Miss Helen Pugh, girl pianist of Asheville, will be given at High Point College on the evening of April 1.

The sympathy of many friends is extended to Mr. Henry T. Hancock in the loss by death of his father, Mr. I. F. Hancock, aged 78 years, and a resident of Randolph County. He was buried at Pleasant Hill, near Seagrove, on last Saturday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Hancock and their children attended the funeral.

President R. M. Andrews announced that the first real baccalaureate sermon for High Point College commencement will be delivered on May 22 by Dr. Thomas H. Lewis, of Washington, president of the General Conference, and the address will be given by Judge I. M. Meekins, of Scotland Neck, former Republican candidate for governor of North Carolina, on May 23.

A strip of land 70 feet in width has been donated to High Point College by friends of the institution, extending from Montlieu Avenue to Lexington Avenue. East College Drive will be moved farther east from the girls' dormitory. This plan will be quite an improvement.

Dr. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, came over last Tuesday to assist in the funeral services for Mr. Albert A. Holton.

Many thanks are due Mrs. J. W. Harris for her generous contribution of $25 to the treasury of the Ladies' Aid Society in memory of her beloved mother, the late Mrs. J. J. Welch. This gift is greatly appreciated.

Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews went to Burlington last Sunday to visit his brother, who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Whitesell, who were married last September, the bride having been Miss Madge Moffitt, of Burlington, have moved to High Point to make their home and have rooms at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Garrett, on West College Drive. We welcome them to our congregation.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett and daughter, Mrs. John Walker, Jr., left Saturday for Tampa, Fla., for a visit to Mrs. H. S. Meredith, nee Miss Jessie Pickett.

A fine prayer service under the leadership of Mr. A. A. Hill was enjoyed at the midweek meeting last Wednesday evening.

The many friends of Capt. A. M. Rankin will be pleased to know that he is expected at home from Hot Springs, Ark, next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny have returned from a trip to Atlanta and other points in Georgia.

We are sorry to note the illness of Dr. E. F. Allman, the new superintendent at the Children's Home.

Alleghany, Davidson Circuit.—We were glad to see so many at church yesterday. There were several visitors from other churches.

Brother Bunch Lanier, our faithful superintendent, was at his post and we had a fairly good Sunday school.

Brother Ridge preached another good sermon. He always has something good to tell us.

Some of our friends are still sick, and cannot be with us. Remember them. Pray for all.

ABIGAIL COGGIN,
Reporter.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our pastor was with us again today and gave to us a wonderful message on "Peace." His sermons grow better from time to time, and we are becoming more attached to him as we see and know him more. I feel that he is a God-sent man, one that feels and shows his possession of the right spirit.

The second quarterly meeting will be held at our church on Saturday before the second Sunday in next month at 2 o'clock. Hope all the official members can and will be present.

We are very glad to say our pastor has a new way of traveling from his various churches as he has a new car which will enable him to get around and see his members more.

We are planning to begin our Easter services very soon.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Stanley.—A large crowd was present at church Sunday night to hear the sermon presented to the young men by our pastor. Mr. Hill, as usual, preached a powerful sermon. I never saw an audience any more interested. Everybody looked straight at the preacher, which expresses that he was telling something worth while.

On next Sunday, March 20, the old people will have charge of the services and sing old-fashioned songs. All-day services, dinner on the grounds. Everybody cordially invited to come.

On Saturday before the first Sunday in April the second quarterly conference will be held. All the official members are urged to attend.

Best wishes to the Herald readers.

BRANCH MEETING

Henderson.—The president of the missionary societies is very anxious to get the names and numbers of delegates who will attend the Branch Meeting to be held here April 19-21. Each society should elect their delegates as soon as possible and send the names to Mrs. L. R. Gooch, Henderson, N. C., also stating when they will arrive. This kindness will assist greatly the committees in charge of securing homes for the delegates.

Let us hear from each society, as we are planning for a great meeting and wish to share the joy and blessings with others.

REPORTER.

Draper.—Our work here is getting along fine, considering the rainy weather and flu. There is lots of sickness in Draper now. But we are looking forward when spring comes for better times in our church.

Our revival meeting will begin the first Sunday in April with Brother B. M. Williams as pulpit help. Pray for our meeting.

We have received into the church five new members since conference.

On last Sunday afternoon we conducted the burial service of Mrs. Alice Croom, the beloved mother of one of our members. She was a good mother and a consecrated Christian. She is gone but not forgotten.

Would be thankful to any brother preacher reading this for any information he can give me of a second-hand gospel tent 40x60 feet, that's for rent or for sale. Write J. S. Riddle, Draper, N. C.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

I saw in this week's issue a piece Brother George Laughlin wrote and thought I would like to say a few words about him and his good and faithful wife.

I am one of his converts that was almost ready to fill a drunkard's hell when he came over to Macedonia, a little church on the Why Not circuit, about 14 years ago to help Brother J. H. Stowe in a special meeting. He preached with such great power I believe I was the meanest man in that place. I could not stay away from the altar and the meeting closed and left me there, but the next time he came he found me one of the happiest men in all the world, which was a year later. I was then superintendent of the Sunday school, and I have been happy ever since. This dear old man has been pastor's help at Macedonia for the past 14 years, and has a lifetime invitation to come as pastor's help. Since that time he has been in my home and I have been in his. I went to his home about Christmas with two of my little daughters, found him and his wife in the yard sawing wood as happy as you ever saw a young married couple, and I never in all my life spent a more pleasant night anywhere. It is wonderful to see how happy anyone can be at the age of 72, and it is not me alone he has helped; lots more in that vicinity. Hope to have him again this year. Can't say much about that circuit, for I am away down here in South Carolina, but a word from the dear Old North State would sound good. We have one of the greatest governors in history. I want you all to read about him.

Yours in the name of Jesus,

W. D. MOORE.

THE VIOLINS OF GOD

Into the woods at eve I went
Alone, and softly trod,
To seek if haply I might hear
The violins of God.

A russet carpet for my feet
The tall, gray pine trees shed,
And ghostlike in the balmy dusk
My silent footsteps sped.

When rich and sweet from fragrant heights
Rang out the clear refrain,
As if an angel touched the strings
Again and yet again.

'Twas brimmed with all immortal things,
That poignant, liquid strain,
Life, death, and love, and fairyland,
And triumph over pain.

All earthly thoughts slipped from my soul,
Light mounting to the skies;
He little recks of care or woe
Who dreams in paradise.

And that is why at eve I flit
Through pathways seldom trod,
Where haply I may chance to hear
The violins of God.

"OUR FATHER WHO ART IN HEAVEN"

In a body they stood in the Sunday school assembly room, Juniors, Seniors, Baracas, and Philathias.

As the superintendent led in concert, they reverently followed, the children of the church; "Who art in heaven," The groceryman with his family of seven, "Hallowed be thy name."

The President of the State Music Club, the Secretary-Treasurer of the city's leading hardware firm, and the Vice-President's family, and many employees, "Thy kingdom come."

Here societies not devotees of fashion, but lovers of life, and filled with its elixir and withal so benignly good to add, "Thy will be done."

Worshipfully in subdued voices in the simplicity and faith, buoyant faith as of childhood they repeat it.

There the working girls arrayed in fluffy attire emblematic of inner joy and the love for the beautiful, "Give us this day our daily bread."

The noble elder lady whose dextrons hands, and fine taste, have fitted hundreds from the city's throngs in the changing season's latest and best array. Chiming in came all the choir with its strong alto, beautiful and compelling soprano, its inimitable contralto, and its deep toned bass and "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," penitently they prayed.

There stood, too, the auctioneer whose brother and he can check out one hundred thousand each, and there the richest boon, to any church, God's humble, Christian, poor.

Oh! the diversity in professions of this assembly, "Lead us not into temptation." And the kindest-hearted dentists, up in their professions and its ample lucrativeness.

The plumber who from the freezes as of Lapland relieves our dire situation, and the post office corps. "But deliver us from temptation," importunately they plead. The boarding house keepers with viands rich, the farmer with his rich acreage, the machinists and the mail clerk.

Here the realtors backed by or representing a million.

As the pastor with his degrees from the colleges, "For thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory forever. Amen."

Our Father, like incense let these prayers arise to thee. They come from loving hearts. Our only guerdon, that contained within petition. As a church may she stand in solid phalanx around this temple in its majestic beauty and within a body compact each in love and defense of the other and sublimely alert to the defense of thee.

And, oh thou living Christ! forbid that one should fail the goal for which we all are striving. With hooks of steel clutch us, and bind us about Thyself.

We thank thee for this prayer near two thousand years since thou didst utter it. And one hundred and seventy million, nine hundred thousand adherents today repeat it.

As we stand and repeat it before thee in a body thus lost in prayer, may we be reinstated, our characters transfigured, our lives transformed, and may we in the acme of religion, faith, repeat it.

Oh! men of the world, men of sin, I adjure you, can you find a place so good, more sublimely blessed?

Personally in tenderness she received us, and like a bulwark stands about us and as a ward she has tended us, and our heart responsively flows out in love to every one of these.

Oh! Christ of the Eternal, consume pride and arrogance, for this God's soul hateth.

Our Father, save us an unbroken family, and may we behold the forty and four thousand arrayed in white..

Oh! Grace Methodist Protestant Church, gift of the living God, thou harbinger of good from the Eternal.

Here stand thou, in this great commercial and educational center, a part of the Infinite plan—a stronghold, a citadel. Stand thou a fortress, impregnable and irresistible, reaching out thy hands to save the last, this thy greatest mission.

To other faiths, alien to none, a benediction stand thou to all mankind. With doors ever ajar to the throngs of the city, the weak from its broad avenues or city's slums.

By the side of the highway of life, standing thou to

"The men who pass with the ardor of hope,
The men who faint in the strife.
From mountains of wearisome height,
And weep thou with the strangers that mourn."

As thy towering spires, immaculately point men to God.

When we in rapturous victory repeat anew with senior and junior pastor and wives in the great beyond, "Our Father who are in heaven."

Oh! thou lighthouse by the vast sea of life, shine thou in divine effulgence, in every inch within the circumference of this city. Send forth thy beams, broad thy waves of light, out far, far out, to the millions on board and their ship men, that shipwrecked crews and stranded mariners may be rescued and spiritually restored, 'neath thy warmth and love. This thy divinest mission. League on league, over the main ships are halting, and skiffs are sinking, turbid the water and fathomless, slowly, painfully the knots are made, deafening the sounds of the billowing deep. (Friends, the warfare is hard).

Treacherous the waves, undulating, and looming. Buoy thou they up and on. Pass thou on to them compass and chart as you point them anew to the Pilot, till anchored secure they, too, shall rest in yon distant harbor of life.

FANNIE O. KIRKPATRICK.

LOVE FOR A DOG

One of the most extraordinary cases of faithful love for a dog is that of Dr. J. M. Neale, the translator of the hymn, "Jerusalem the Golden." So great was his love for his dog "Pombal," his constant companion, that after its death he never kept another, and for upwards of eight years, in his journal, he never failed to mark the number of days after Pombal's death. The last number he set down was 2,956. —Boys' Weekly.

TOBACCO MEN AND LAWS

Will H. Brown

The teeth in the anti-tobacco law in Utah are being extracted by the action of some judges in remitting fines. The Tobacco Leaf publishes three incidents, where each defendant had been found guilty of violating the law and given the minimum fine of $100 imposed by the law. In one case the judge remitted $90, in another $75 and in a third $80.

One of the urgent needs of our country is men in office who will be true to their oath of office. To impose a fine provided by law, and then to remit the larger part of it, except for a very unusual reason, is to encourage further violation. Such judges are not friends of justice, but of injustice.

Where officers of the law will not favor the tobacco men who violate the law, every possible means is resorted to to have the law repealed, as has been the case in Kansas, at three sessions of the Legislature—1921, 1923 and 1925. Each time the Legislature has stood firm against the friends of the weed who would set aside the law. Kansas officials refuse to be bulldozed.

When anti-tobacco laws are enforced the tobacco men object, and when some other laws are enforced they likewise object. A tobacco organ says that when the order was given in Denver to stop gambling in cigar stores it meant a loss of $300 a month for some dealers.

The fight that is being waged against tobacco in this country has been taken up in Great Britian—and by an American woman, too: Lady Astor, the first woman to sit in the British House of Commons. In opposing a move to reduce the tax on tobacco she said: "I am horrified at the attitude taken by the liberals. There is a great deal too much smoking already." She won her case by a vote of 272 to 116.

When it came to John Wesley's knowledge that one of his preachers was in needy circumstances, he sent him the following letter: "Dear Tommy: Trust in the Lord and do good. So shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." He inclosed in the letter a five-pound note. When Tommy returned his thanks, Wesley was greatly delighted with his reply. It ran thus: "Reverend and Dear Sir: I have often been struck with the beauty of the passage you quote, and I am bound to say that I have never found such a useful expository note on it before."—Christian Register.

—Port Fuad, named in honor of Egypt's king, is a new port on the eastern side of the entrance to the Suez Canal, opposite Port Said. The development of the site, which was interrupted by the war, was actually begun fifteen years ago when the Suez Canal Company decided to transfer its workshops from Port Said. Recent progress on the project has been quite remarkable, and a town of considerable size has come into being. A plan is under consideration to make Port Fuad the terminus of the Palestine Railway, instead of Kantara which is two hours' journey southward by rail.

—The health bulletin published by the North Carolina State Board of Health declares that it is now possible to eliminate diphtheria as a cause of death. This can be done, it declares, "by giving every child between the ages of six months and six years sufficient toxin-antitoxin to make them immune to the disease for life." Toxin-antitoxin is not simple anti-toxin, but is a definite laboratory mixture.

"Redeeming the Time, Because the Days Are Evil"

The Apostle Paul saw enough evil in his day to move him to issue this exhortation to the Ephesian Christians. In the great wicked city of Ephesus all the evils of the known world were gathered to do their worst. It was necessary that the little band of followers of Jesus do their utmost to stem the tide of iniquity. Paul does not counsel his readers to give up in despair and let the wicked world go on its way to destruction. He calls them to earnest and vigorous activity that they may resist the evil influences so strong among them. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful, works of darkness, but rather reprove them." Wake up! Walk circumspectly! Redeem the time! Make the best of your opportunity! Use for all it is worth the divine power that has come to you as a believer in Christ!

Are not our days evil enough to make pertinent to us Paul's injunction to the Ephesian Christians? What other age of the world has seen the powers of evil so well equipped for their work? We call Sunday the Lord's day and make special effort on that day for the Kingdom of Christ, but every day is Satan's day and the day of his cohorts. They have no day of rest. They are active all the time and in all possible ways to seduce the young and all others into the ways of evil. Amusements are prostituted, leisure time that should be profitably employed is used in pursuit of sinful pleasure, wealth is made a curse, and poverty is made an excuse for evil indulgence. Truly our days are evil because so many men and women are working to make them evil, and it behooves all Christians to be very zealous and active for the righteousness that Christ came to establish in the life of men.

Fallacy of "Manifest Destiny"

History records a number of instances of the employment of the argument of "manifest destiny" to win advantages in contests between nations. Those who use this argument take advantage of appearances to create the presumption that God has willed the conquest of the less fortunate party by the other. The circumstances themselves are pointed to as evidence that God is on the side of the apparently stronger body. It is useless to contend against God, and if men can be made to believe that they are struggling against the powers of Heaven which have already decreed their defeat, they are intimidated, their morale is broken, and they fall more easy victims of the power against them.

The author of the Second Book of Kings in the Old Testament gives an example of the employment of the fallacy of "manifest destiny." We see Jerusalem besieged by the armies of the Assyrian conqueror, Sennacherib. His general, Rabshakeh, demands the surrender of the city, calling attention to the sweeping conquests of these armies in other lands. Everywhere they had gone, they had been victorious. Hamath and Arvad and Sepharvaim and Hena and Ivah and Samaria have gone down before them. How will Jerusalem stand? Is it not obvious that it is destined to the same fate that had befallen the other places? Rabshakeh spoke in the Jews' own language that the people might be affected with fear and thus become more ready to surrender without resistance. But the Prophet Isaiah could not be deceived by the fallacious argument; he counseled stubborn resistance until such time as God Himself would bring deliverance from the threatening foe, which delievrance came in the most surprising and terrible manner through the death of 185,000 men of the invading army in one night.

Cortez in the conquest of Mexico is said to have been greatly aided by an ancient prophecy which predicted that the country would be visited by a great evil about that time. This made the superstitious people yield to the Spanish conquerors whom they believed sent by the gods to fulfill this ancient prophecy.

President McKinley at the time of the Spanish-American war is said to have been influenced by the feeling that it was "manifest destiny" that we should acquire the Philippine islands. It is true that the islands passed under our control through the fortunes of war, but this by no means justifies our holding possession indefinitely. We cannot rightly presume that God wishes us to hold them forever in subjection because He permitted us to acquire temporary control.

In the World War the German emperor used this fallacy of "manifest destiny." The power that he had seemed to him to justify the presumption that God was especially with him and therefore he was to be feared by those who refused to acknowledge his right to rule over them. They might expect to be conquered because in resisting him they were resisting the invincible power of God.

Some political writers in the United States today are endeavoring to justify our interference in Nicaragua and Mexico by using this argument of "manifest destiny." It is bound to come sometime, that those countries will be attached to ours, say they; why not now? It would be better for the people of those countries if they were attached; why not forcibly attach them? Thus they use the jesuitical doctrine that a good end would justify the use of immoral means. Thus one error leads to another.

This fallacious argument of "manifest destiny" has even been used to intimidate small and weak religious denominations. "It is evident that you will sometime be swallowed up by larger bodies; why hold out further? Why not go bodily into larger bodies now?"

This fallacy is based on the satanic suggestion that there is something better than righteousness, that worldly success is more to be aimed at than simple conformity to the will of God. To follow this fallacy is to march into the jaws of disaster. We cannot bring God to our side by falsely claiming that He is on our side. When we move in the paths of righteousness, we are on the side of God, and we are in ways of safety and enduring success.

THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY

The question has been asked, Are men "miraculously" called to the Christian ministry? I would prefer to say that they are divinely called. Call it "miraculous" if you wish, we will not contend about terms. But that men are divinely called, specially called of God to this work we have not the "shadow of a doubt." Thousands of men today, and all during the past of Christianity, are, and have been, as certain of a special call of God to this work, as they are of anything. All Christians are under obligation—or call, if you choose to call it that— to do all the good they can, but over and above all this, there is the special call of God to preach the Word. All the prophets and apostles were specially called and qualified for the work. Even the priests were "called of God as was Aaron." "No man taketh this honor unto himsef." See Heb. 5:4. It was the false prophet that was selfcalled, who "prophesied out of his own heart." See Ezekiel 13:2, 3, 17. In I Cor. 12th chapter, Paul enumerates the "spiritual gifts"—not intellectual gifts, but spiritual—that God has given the church.

Let a man possess ever so much intellectual qualifications, unless he has the spiritual gift, or qualification, the special endowment that God gives personally to each one of his "called" ones, he'll be sadly deficient in the prime qualification of a gospel preacher. It is the personal, individual belief of this writer that a man called of God to preach the gospel has an insight into the meaning of the Word that others do not have. If not, why is he called? Why is it that some persons of average mentality, read the Bible much all their lives and never get much of an understanding of it? But to the question, Are men specially and divinely called to preach the gospel? Yes, a thousand times, yes. Thousands of men are as sure of this as they can be of anything. Because one man has not been "divinely" called is no proof that others have not been called. He is no competent judge of a thing of which he knows nothing. Many men feel this call before they are "converted." This writer has heard a number of men so testify. Among them Rev. W. W. Amick, and that more than once. We've heard him say, "I've always been a preacher."

If this writer can be excused for referring to himself, he will say he was "converted" more than 51 years ago, and at once began to conduct prayer meeting, "speak in public," etc., but for 18 months or so after his conversion he never dreamed of being a preacher. But one day, all alone, while reading the Bible, all unexpectedly and as suddenly as lightning from a clear sky, the conviction came. Not audibly nor outwardly, but inwardly and consciously. Only those who have had a like experience know how one feels. For some two years he tried to persuade himself that it was a mistake, a delustion, a trick of the devil. But the conviction grew, intensified. It haunted him day and night when not asleep—was never off his mind. He could not pray unless he would acknowledge to God this call. To try to cast aside this call and try to pray, the "heavens were brass;" but confess this call to God and all was clear, peaceful, assurance. He felt then, and he feels so still, for one to presumptuously enter this holy calling is a desecration of it. The rebellion of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram he does not forget. Let us be careful lest we "offer strange fire before the Lord."

Permit us to quote from an editorial in the last Methodist Protestant, "The Preacher and His Job":

"This is a big subject and we have no idea of attempting to exhaust it. The preacher has a job, definite, distinct, and imperative, and the job belongs to the preacher who is called of God to a holy task. No other man ought to dare to invade the sacred precincts of the pulpit but the man called of God. And God has His way of making men know His will. He has a way of making men conscious of a divine call. The minister's job is a holy task committed to him by the great God."

We unqualifiedly endorse these words of Dr. Benson.

It has been said that all the "call" that is needed is to "recognize a need, and the ability to meet that need is all the calling that is required or necessary." To feel one's "ability" to meet the "need" is diametrically opposed to the feeling of God-called men in the matter. They feel their inability. They shrink from the divinely imposed task. If they could see any way around this task and at the same time please God and save their souls they would never assume it. This is the testimony of all whom we have ever heard express themselves. And our reading agrees in all this—the numerous testimonies of great preachers. Look at Moses and Gideon and Jonah and others. This was not because they were bad men, but because they had an appreciation of the momentous task imposed, and felt their utter inability to meet it. Thousands have felt so since, and quaked and trembled at the thought. Men have travelled, buried themselves in business, pleasure, and even dissipation to get rid of the "impression." But God followed them wherever they went, until finally they surrendered and entered the work. We heard one man say, nearly 50 years ago, that he was called to preach, but he shrank from it. He went clear to California, but God and the call were with him there. Finally he surrendered, went to preaching, and returned to his native state and died a member of the Western Conference of the M. E. Church, South. We never sat under his ministry but we felt that a man of God was in the pulpit. That peculiar sense of awe and reverence that belongs to the man of God seemed to emanate from him. When such men are in the pulpit sinners feel in the pew. We could name numbers of men of this kind—nearly all of the old school. Levity and jesting were far from them. Just the looks of some men carry conviction to the heart. Just a word, or look, from Charles G. Finney has been known to cause sinners to fall. Such never occurs in the ministry of self-called men. If God wants a man to preach he'll let him know it. He does not send some man to tell him. He goes himself. Oftentimes the man God calls men would not, and do not, call. They "turn them down," or try to. Many might be named—Bishop Marvin, for one. Of course God does not call idiots or fools to preach. He does not need to. There are enough sensible people without resorting to such. Fools may sometime be self-called; for, "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," is a fact as well as poetry.

J. F. Dosier.

A DANGEROUS HABIT

The fault-finding habit is a bad one. It is easily acquired and not readily broken. We live in an imperfect world. Everything is flawed and defective. Institutions all blunder and fall short of the ideal. Persons are all erring creatures and their faults give us offense. But one should not pay too much attention to the faults of others or to the defects of the world in which he lives. He may become a chronic fault-finder, and in that case he will become a grumbler. If he is not careful, he will degenerate into a growler. And if he growls long enough, he will degenerate into a snarler, and in the end he will become a cynic, he has reached the bottom. There is nothing lower than cynicism. A cynic is of no account either to himself or to anyone else. He is a nuisance and a stumbling block. He did not intend at the start to become a cynic. He began by finding fault, and the habit grew on him until his mind became twisted and his heart sour.—Dr. Charles E. Jefferson.

PROTESTANT CONFESSIONAL

The Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick's pea for the restoration of the Confessional in the Protestant church is a strange reversal of the judgment of the Reformation that expressed the utmost abhorrence of that institution, and an indication of the distance that some of our Protestant churches have drifted from their original moorings.

It must be admitted that there is a natural urge in the human breast to confide its troubles to same wise and sympathetic friend or counsellor. As a matter of fact, the Protestant church already has, and always has had, an unofficial Confessional. Every Protestant minister from time to time becomes the sacred confidant of some troubled and perplexed soul who seeks spiritual consolation and wise counsel at his hands (not at his feet, as in the case of our separated brethren, of the Roman Catholic church). The Protestant comes to his minister voluntarily and because he has a real need of the minister's counsel. Such a voluntary approach surely is far, far better than the forced approach to the Confessional that is demanded of Catholics. For only when the heart is stirred up by the promptings of the Holy Spirit to a sense of sin and to a need of spiritual counsel and consolation and of advice in ethical problems can the heart be made better by the wise guidance of a minister. Then, too, the profound errors and evils that attach to the Catholic system of private auricular confession, and the abuses that creep into that system (abuses admitted even by Catholic theologians themselves in their most learned Latin works), make the Protestant system of voluntary confession the better one.

One thing that Protestant periodicals could do to strengthen and better the state and condition of both the church and its members is this: the institution of a department in these periodicals for the treatment of cases of conscience. Religion and morality are so closely connected that one implies the other. But it is not always easy for even a pious person to determine the right course of moral action when he has to choose between alternatives. Many factors force themselves upon one who has to take some moral course of action: viz., one's natural inclinations, the state of one's knowledge, questions of expediency, consequences, etc. I do not say that all these factors—for instance, the question of the consequences that follow upon an action performed on moral grounds—ought to determine a moral act. They ought not. For example, no one ought to refrain from a right act on account of unhappy consequences that may ensue to himself. Nevertheless, such factors and considerations always force themselves upon our cogitations when we have to choose between alternatives of moral action, and perplex and confuse us, and often make a right and wise choice very difficult. In such cases the counsel and help afforded us by good and wise men are very valuable. I am pleading here, not for the system of casuistry founded and built up by the Jesuists, to which I am opposed on more than one ground; but simply for the Christian help that it is the duty of all followers of Christ to afford one another.

Let me give one example of a case of conscience that troubled me somewhat for a number of years. When I was a theological student, financial straitness forced me to accept a scholarship granted me by the seminary. This money was a great boon to me, but later on when I reflected that I had done nothing to earn it, I questioned whether or not it was my duty to return it when it was in my power to do so. I finally settled the matter in this way. If I returned the money my action would be a stultification of the Christian charity that had afforded me the money, and a denial of the Christian principle of helping others with superfluous wealth. There are myriads of these cases of conscience. By all means let us have open discussions of these matters in our religious journals. Of course the names of the persons concerned should be kept secret.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES HOOPER.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, March 9, 1927.

The Church and the Secret Orders

The church must recognize the members of secret organizations as men who have souls to be saved, men who need the service and influence of the church of Christ. The church should not severely rebuke men for forming associations unless it has evidence that these associations are evil in their spirit, tendencies or methods. The church should recognize the fact that the principles and methods of a secret order may possibly be unobjectionable in themselves considered. It is conceivable that associations of men may be formed outside the church which will really be auxiliaries of the church, helping in a different way to accomplish the same good objects or some of them.

On the other hand, the fraternal orders outside the church should recognize the fact that the church has a divine mission which no other body of men can accomplish. To the church have been committed the oracles of God. The church has a Christ to proclaim. The church has authority from above. The church has the keys of the Kingdom. The church has the ordinances of the sanctuary. A fraternal order is doing its members an unspeakable injury when it persuades them to believe that their order can do for them all that the church can do for them. The order may have a high moral code. Some of the orders do have. We have heard their members say that if they would live up to the teachings of their order, they would need no salvation. What a killing error that is. There is no other name given under heaven among men by which men may be saved than the name of Jesus Christ. If a fraternal order can justify its existence it surely cannot do so by the plea that it can take the place of the church. That is infinitely too high a claim.

The church and the good fraternal orders—we are assuming that there are good ones—should be on friendly terms with each other. Each can help in making the world better, and there should be no disposition to forbid other servants to serve because they do not "follow with us."

THE TRANSFORMING POWER OF JESUS

No man is hopeless, no prejudice too ingrained. Jesus can save the worst.

Jesus is the seeker—the shepherd of souls searching for His sheep.

God is interested in our career. He is forever trying to stop us on the downward path and turn our thought and our footsteps to heaven.

More of us would be chosen vessels if we were willing to let God do His will with us, as Paul was.

We cannot be transformed against our will. We must yield ourselves unto God. Hard iron can not be moulded; nor can a hard and selfish heart.

Not only the evil need to be transformed. Moody was not a bad man, yet his life was transformed; it was brought into line with God's will and purpose for him.

Philip Cabot tells us that he was an agnostic until he was over forty. Then his thoughts turned to God and all his life was changed. God, who had been nothing to him, became the very breath of life.

Peter was transformed from a coward into a brave man; from a narrow Jew into a preacher to the Gentiles. Jesus changes even a man's nature.—Atlanta Central Presbyterian Weekly.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Flat Rock

Saturday and Sunday, March 19th and 20th, were given to Rev. J. B. Trogdon and his people on Flat Rock. The second quarterly conference was held on Saturday afternoon at Flat Rock and was well attended. The reports were good and the spirit of the meeting was fine throughout. Pastor's salary was paid almost to date, with a good showing on budgets. Bethel church had paid some in advance on pastor's salary. They are planning to raise their college assessment during the next few weeks. The people love Brother Trogdon and are standing by him in the work. We predict for them a splendid year in service for the Master.

On Sunday morning Mrs. Dixon spoke at Flat Rock while I preached at Palestine, and we both met splendid congregations. The people gave earnest heed to the Word. Sunday afternoon I preached to another fine congregation at Bethel. It was a beautiful Sunday, and it was made a very joyful day for us because of the hearty reception and response given us by the people of Flat Rock Circuit. It is always a pleasure to visit them.

Church Extension

We do not know what further to say, nor what to do about Church Extension money. Most earnest pleas are coming to us for help, and we have no money for Church Extension except as the charges pay that money on their annual conference budget. The Conference Treasurer informs me that the February collections have only brought in about $500 for Church Extension. Once more we are asking very earnestly that money collected on A. C. B. be sent in at once to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C. We are anxious to hold a meeting of the Board of Church Extension that much needed help may be given to some of those charges which are dependent on the Board. Please give us your very best support during the next two weeks and let us see what can be done.

High Point College

Just now is the very best time to line up students for High Point College for next fall. Surely our 92 charges can fill the dormitories at the College with boarding students next fall. An average of two students from each charge, as per the suggestion of Mr. T. T. Hicks, in the HERALD some months ago, would put 184 boarding students in the College. Many charges should put more than two students there, but surely we can average that many. The College now has an A grade rating, so any and all of us can cheerfully urge our own young people to enter our own College. Each pastor can do the College a fine service by getting the names of our own young people who are graduating from high school this spring and sending these names and addresses to Dr. R. M. Andrews at a very early date. Please do this without fail.

A Fine Plan

One pastor and his people are planning a loan fund in their local church for two worthy young people, who could not go to College but for the loan. The church proposes to loan each of these young people $100 per year while in College and then let the young people pay it back to the church, and keep it as a perpetual loan fund for worthy young people of that community who would like to go to College but cannot without help. We commend this plan to other churches and communities.

That Summer School For Preachers

Some weeks ago a few of us met in the High Point College and discussed plans for a Summer School for our young preachers, the school to be held this coming summer, and to last for five or six weeks. At that time a committee was appointed, consisting of R. M. Andrews, P. E. Lindley, Paul S. Kennett, and A. G. Dixon, to take the matter under advisement and if practicable plan for a school for this summer. Your committee has considered the matter well and has counted the cost, and we find that it would be very difficult to finance the school this summer in the midst of the many other things that must be done. So, while we do it very reluctantly, we feel that of necessity we must give up the thought of such a school this year. We sincerely hope that such a school may be planned in the near future.

Summer Conferences

We trust that all pastors are planning to attend the Pastors' Summer Conference, and that many workers and also many young people are planning to attend the Young People's Summer Conference July 18 to 25. We should have 300 or more of our pastors and people there for that entire week. A fine program is in course of preparation for these conferences. We are asking all our people to permit pastors to come to stay over the fourth Sunday in July with their young people for the close of the conferences.

Sparkles From the Field

West End: "Twenty were received into the church during the two weeks' meeting which closed last Sunday night."

High Point College: "The High Point College debating teams won their first laurels of the year last night by winning from both Guilford and Lenoir-Rhyne Colleges. The debates were held under the auspices of the North Carolina Forensic Council, and the question discussed was whether the United States should immediately recognize the soviet government of Russia.

"The High Point College debaters will meet teams from North Carolina State College within the next few weeks. Against Guilford, G. W. Andrew and W. M. Loy upheld the affirmative, and against Lenoir-Rhyne, O. C. Loy and J. Elwood Carroll defended the negative. The Guilford College team met High Point at the local College, while High Point met Lenoir-Rhyne at Hickory."

This is fine for High Point College, and the four young men winning in these two debates are four of our young ministers who are already serving in the pastorate.

Easter Services

Surely all our churches are planning special services of some kind for Easter. This is a very special season, and demands our very best efforts for Him who loved us and gave His life for us. It is not yet too late to order Easter programs from Rev. J. M. Sheridan, D. D., 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., and prepare for the regular Easter exercises. At any rate, let each church and Sunday school plan to make a special offering on, or near Easter Sunday for Home Missions.

Appointments

Sunday, March 27th, Liberty.
Sunday, April 3rd, Guilford Charge.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

—Be an example. Our duty is to lead aright. If we walk on the edge of a precipice, younger folks will imitate us. We may not fall over, but they may. Lead younger folks in safe places.

Denominational Enterprises

FOREIGN MISSIONS

While attending the World's Missionary Conference in Edinburgh in 1910, I heard Dr. Davidson, the archbishop of Canterbury, in the opening of a great address assert with great firmness—"the place which belongs to the missionary enterprise is the central place of all." If we agree with this statement then we can reasonably expect the pastor, usually regarded as the key-man, to have knowledge of the missionary agencies of his church, and to show an interest in their plans. This interest can be shown by giving Missions their place in his public prayers and addresses. Inspirational information is the great need of the hour. He can show his interest also by co-operating with the missionary agencies in carrying out their plans. The attention of the church is being called at present to the proposed plan to make the coming Children's Day Service a memorial to Dr. Klein, and to use part of the offering in the erection of the Klein-Coulbourn memorial church at Nagoya College in Japan. Every pastor in the denomination ought to be greatly interested in this plan of the Union Board, and ought to leave nothing undone whereby this service and offering will be eminently successful.

Upon the pastor rests the responsibility to create and direct the missionary zeal of his church to advantage. The need for a missionary church is greater than for missionary societies in the church.

Laymen Needed

In our denomination the laymen somehow have not manifested the zeal in world evangelization that the laymen in several other denominations have shown. Great missionary conventions and conferences have been held by the laymen of other churches, but I can not recall any held by the men of our denomination. On November 16, 1906, in connection with the Centennial Celebration of the famous Haystack Prayer Meeting, the Laymen's Missionary Movement was formed. Its purpose was clearly stated by Mr. J. Campbell White, its first General Secretary, as follows: "The Laymen's Missionary Movement stands for investigation, agitation and organization: the investigation by laymen of missionary conditions; the agitation by laymen of an adequate missionary policy, and the organization of laymen to co-operate with the pastors and missionary boards in enlisting the whole church in the supreme work of saving the world."

Since its organization 20 years ago, the Laymen's Missionary Movement has produced wonderful results. Its history has been that of the wave—rolling far up the beach, and then receding. The time is upon us for the in-rolling again of this great movement. Let us pray for it.

The Changing Problem

The student of world-conditions today is impressed with the changes being produced by the seething spirit of nationalism, and the plea for self-determination. Very naturally our missionary enterprises are vitally involved in these changes, and adjustments will have to be made.

The situation in China is giving missionary agencies much concern. Personally, I am not greatly concerned, for the reason, that where injustices obtain the gospel always disturbs, and conditions in China at present are closely associated with the standards of personal, national and international justice, held up by the missionaries.

My candid opinion is that when internal political strife subsides in China, and a stable government is once more established, the evangelization of China will go forward by leaps and bounds.

In the meantime, we must be much in prayer, and much in preparation to take advantage of the new day that is coming for Chian.

God has answered prayer in providing us with a medical missionary for India. After a few months of additional preparation, Miss Lacy will go to Dhulia to take charge of our hospital there.

We are needing a missionary for Kalgan. When Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom leave nevt September for their furlough, our only missionary there will be Brother Horace S. Williams. Pray the Lord of the harvest to send us a laborer for this needy field.

J. C. Broomfield.

EASTER

The Sacrificial Envelopes

For many years the General Conference has designated Easter as a time when the Annual Conferences and local churches should make offerings for the furthering of the work of Home Missions.

Until a few years ago, this was a special offering and greatly aided the Board in its important work. The offering now can be applied by the local churches on the General Conference Budget. This Easter offering is still a great factor in the Board's financial plans. During the winter, the amount received from the General Conference Treasurer is small so that it becomes necessary to secure loans to meet the monthly obligations of the Board. It is therefore with deep interest and concern that we look forward to the Easter offering to replenish the treasury and aid in paying the indebtedness incurred. This year is no exception and we send out this earnest appeal to all our churches to come to our assistance by making just as large offerings on Easter Sunday as possible.

We have prepared and distributed to all the churches, as far as we have been able to reach them, Sacrificial Envelopes, by which daily offerings may be made by the individual church member, or friend as an expression of gratitude to their Lord and Savior, who not only suffered upon the cross for the sins of the world, but in His resurrection tiumphed over sin and death and brought light and immortality to light and imparts to every believer the blessed assurance, "because I live, ye shall live also."

I appeal to the pastors and others who may have charge of the Easter service to distribute the envelopes to both old and young, and explain to them how the envelopes may be used. Emphasize the sacrificial phase of the offerings to be made.

If any churches or schools may not be able to hold the special service, they can use the envelopes and have an offering. Send to me at once for as many as needed. All Easter supplies are sent free of charge.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL INSTITUTE

One of the encouraging signs of the times is the ever-increasing interest in Daily Vacation Bible School work. Everywhere pastors, superintendents, teachers and other leaders in the field of religious education are awaking to the wonderful opportunity afforded by the summer vacation to give some continuous and constructive training to boys and girls who otherwise would be idle.

Last year we had five Daily Vacation Bible Schools in Methodist Protestant Churches in North Carolina. Already this year, inquiries for information and help have come in from fifteen pastors who are interested in putting on such schools on their charges this summer.

To give definite and practical aid to all who are interested in Vacation Church School work, we have arranged a three-day Vacation Church School Workers' Institute, to be held in First Church, High Point, beginning Monday afternoon, April 4th, and closing Wednesday night, April 6th. Sessions will be held afternoon at 3 p. m., and at night.

Leading Vacation School experts have been invited and workers have an unprecedented opportunity to secure practical assistance and information.

Watch for the program in next week's HERALD, and write me for further information.

Plan now to attend our Institute for Vacation Church School Workers at High Point, April 4, 5, and 6!

ENDEAVORERS IN SERVICE

One of the principles of Christian Endeavor is "Service for Christ." Its motto is "For Christ and the Church." It is not difficult to prove that Endeavorers throughout the Methodist Protestant Church are living up to the ideals of the movement. The following items gleaned from reports sent to my office during the last few weeks will give some idea of the extent of the service being rendered to the Church and the Kingdom by our host of fine young people in Christian Endeavor:

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Methodist Protestant Church of Alexandria, Virginia, supplied the church with fuel during the past season at a cost of approximately $100. The Sunday school recently purchased a new piano for the use of the school.

The Senior Society of Connellsville, Pennsylvania, has won superior recognition in the state and county unions for the past two years. Last year they won the Efficiency Shield presented by the county union for the best work in the county, and they are planning to keep this shield! Four members of this society are officers in the County Union. There are three wide-awake societies in this church, Junior, Intermediate, and Senior.

The Good Cheer Committee of the Adult C. E. Society of Hampden Church, Baltimore, Maryland, is supplying a widow and six children with coal this winter.

The Senior Society of Asheboro, North Carolina, makes regular visits to the County Jail and also to the County Home and holds services for the prisoners and inmates. This society has a total membership of 40, of which 38 are members of the church.

The Senior Society of Asheville, North Carolina, purchased a large bulletin board for the use of the church.

Doesn't this sound like real service, Attica, Ohio, Endeavorors sent two boxes of clothing to Alvan Drew School at Pine Ridge, Kentucky; held a lawn fete and used the money to send delegates to the Summer Conference at Sabina; held a sun-rise breakfast on World Peace day; appointed a committee to aid the pastor by ushering, taking the offering, passing hymnbooks, welcoming strangers, etc.; gave two pageants for the missionary society; and sang Christmas carols for the shut-ins of the community.

The Seniors of First Church, High Point, North Carolina, are a rather modest bunch! In a recent report, after mentioning a few things they had been doing, they rather timidly suggested that they had held the Banner given by the State Union for the best work done for the past two years! Among other things, this society pays $5 each month for the support of an orphan at our Children's Home; they have a membership of over 60, with an average attendance of 40; a monthly social is held with from 75 to 100 present on each occasion; and they gave last year to missionary causes over $150. The last state convention was entertained by this society.

Fowlerton, Indiana, Seniors have sent a gift box to our mission station at Dhulia, India.

Bloomingdale, New Jersey, Seniors raised money to help paint and repair the church and are now trying to get the money to purchase new pews.

Hollisterville, Pennsylvania, Seniors bought clothing for ten children from poor families so that they might attend Sunday chool.

This very fine tribute to the evangelistic spirit of Christian Endeavor comes from Rev. H. L. Crawford, pastor of our church at Eagletown, Oklahoma: Two members of the society gave themselves to Christ and began using their influence to bring their friends. Before their confession, not a member of the society had openly confessed Christ as their Savior. Now, practically all of the members are professing Christians.

Westheight Seniors of Kansas City sold 112 Scripture Text Calendars and used the proceeds for their society work. they presented a play called "Deacon Dubbs" and were called on to repeat it five times in the city, clearing more than $60 on this; they presented a pageant, "The Keeper of the Keys," to the church in which very forcefully were brought out the standards of Christian Endeavor.

The Endeavorers of St. Paul's Church, Inwood, Long Island, gave a play, "The New Co-Ed," last spring and turned over half of the proceeds to pay off the mortgage on their church. Six delegates went from this society to the State C. E. Assembly held at Montour Falls. At the New York State Convention at Saratoga Springs, a member of this society presided at the piano during the sessions.

Villars Chapel, of Clarksville, Ohio, has purchased a piano for the church and are paying regularly toward the pastor's salary.

Garwoods Church, of the Onondaga Conference, is indebted to their Endeavorors for money with which to finish paying for a basement built under the church building. A total of $118 was contributed by this society to this cause. They have also purchased chairs and a communion set for the use of the church.

Among other splendid services, the Lake Como, New Jersey, society is paying particular attention to the Allenwood Sanitorium and to the patients there, sending offerings, paying visits, and arranging for post-card showers. Just before Christmas last year, a gift of "Canned and Dry Goods" was made to this institution.

The Endeavorers of Luray, Missouri, arranged a special service and sent flowers to all the shut-ins in the community on Mother's Day last year.

In order to give the church in Wilsonville, Alabama, a new coat of color, the Endeavorers gave a box and ice cream supper and turned over the proceeds to the church officials. Members of the society also helped in the work of putting it on.

The very first society to reach a total of 200 points on the Standards Chart, published by our Board, was the Senior Society of Mount Vernon, Ohio. This entitles them to the first Blue Seal awarded. Congratulations, Mount Vernon! Rev. R. C. Tolbert, president of the Ohio Conference Union, is pastor of this live society.

THE DEAD AND THE ALIVE CHURCH

Jesus Christ appears to the church at Sardis as the One who had the seven Spirits of God and the seven stars. He comes, then, as the giver of life and light. This church had no heresies like Ephesus and Thyatira. It had no immoralities like Pergamos. The devil was not fighting through Jew or heathen; it had no persecutions. It needed none, for its present condition suited Satan. It was a dead church, and that is all Satan or the world desires. It had a name to live. It appeared active, and people spoke of it as such. But He who judges justly pronounced it unsatisfactory. The trouble was with its life. It was not absolutely dead. There were some things which still remained, but they were ready to die. In some of the very lower animals, muscular movement may be seen after life is extinct. A train may keep in motion after the steam or other power has been shut off. Some institutions keep up routine action after their vitality and spirit are dead. It is well for any church or any soul to note how much of its action is due to life and how much to routine and reaction.

What causes such a state as this? The Saviour gives us a suggestion when He says, "Except ye eat my flesh and drink my blood, ye have no life in you." Here is the cause of all spiritual deadness, separation from the life of Christ. Not feeding on Him, not eating Him. The cure is to return to Him, and thus feed the life that remains through personal relation with Him. These people of Sardis had a high reputation. But the keen, fiery eyes of Christ saw through it and behind it. The movement of mere enthusiasm without conviction; of machinery without life; of appearance without reality; of inspiration without knowledge, all meant nothing to Him. The remedy for this was to awake, watch, or else God would come as a thief in the night. There was a spark left which might be blown into a blaze. There were a few souls not altogether dead. To these appeal was made that if they awoke and overcame the slumber, their names would not be blotted out of the book of life. Spiritual death is a greater peril than any other evil.—Dr. David S. Kennedy, in The Bible Champion.

THE MODERN BALLROOM

Rabbi Wise, of New York, said (in 1914): "Nearly all men and women were shocked when the wretched modern dances were engaged in for the first time. If one were to enter a New York ballroom today for the first time after ten years' absence he would be struck dumb with disgust and astonishment at the degeneration which has come to pass within a little time." . . . . Dr. John Haynes Holmes writes: "Dancing today, even among our so-called 'best people,' is indecent. In watching a dancing party at a seacoast resort this past summer, we noticed all kinds of dances and postures which, in the settlement and community center dances in the New York slum districts, the chaperones are under strict orders to forbid as immoral. Nowhere in our social life today is there such evidence of degeneracy as on the dance floor. The music is barbaric, the dressing immodest, and the dances brutally sexual."—From "Modern Religious Liberalism," by John Horsch.

STANDING UP UNDER FIRE

"Cowards!"

"Fraidy Cat!"

"Mamma's nice little apron-string man!"

Such were the names flung out in the intensity of youthful scorn at the lad who stood there looking at his companions with flushed cheeks and flaming eyes, his whole being expressing defiance.

The afternoon sun shone through the wide windows of a large, pleasant room, the "den" of one of the older boys at whose home the club was meeting, and scattered about in different positions indicative of the different temperaments were boys of various ages, and all of whom considered themselves young men.

Just every-day, happy-go-lucky boys they were, that need only the right viewpoint of life to make the eyes of their mothers glow with happiness, and to cause each father's voice to echo his pride as he says, "This is my son."

Bright, open-faced lads they were, on whom the world had not yet left its mark. Their clear eyes met your own with all the frankness that had nothing of which to be afraid, nothing to hide, and this of itself is worth more than gold.

Today was the first meeting of the Up-to-Date Club, as it had been named after a discussion that took up the greater part of the session. They did not really know much about clubs, but they had heard older men and boys speak of their clubs, so they had decided that it would be great fun to have a club of their own. Besides, it was the proper thing to belong to a club. Hal Winston said so, and he ought to know, because his brother, Bert, who was working in the city, belonged to three and he had declared that any fellow who was considered anybody belonged to a club.

After the business of the club had been attended to, the boys had gathered in groups, chatting and laughing, some making ready to leave, when Hal Winston, the club's president, rapped for order. Turning, they saw on a table in the corner of the room, a bottle of wine and packages of cigarettes.

There was astonishment depicted on every boyish face at the sight, for all of the lads gathered here had been carefully raised, and the little village they had called home knew little of such city ways.

"Come, fellows, help yourselves," and Hal's voice rang out hospitably, as he selected a cigarette and proceeded to light it, his chest swelling as if that act had suddenly pushed him into manhood. Then he stopped and poured out a glass of wine, calling on the crowd to help themselves. "Got it in the city a few days ago," he explained genially.

The lads hesitated at first, looking blankly at the boy, then the wine and cigarettes, then, with a spirit of bravado, they all stepped forward to help themselves. That is, all but one young fellow.

He stood back, his lips set, his eyes flashing, as he watched his chums gather about the room, when Hal called out, "Come on, Roy. Don't be backward about coming forward. Come on and join the gang," giving another pull at his cigarette. Roy turned at these words.

"Is this a club or a saloon?" he demanded with withering scorn, his shoulders straightened, his lips curved over the words that he had said with such bitterness of inflection.

The boys, stopped midway in their acceptance of their host's hospitality, looked first at Roy, then at Hal. That boy himself stood, not knowing just what to make of it all, then responded hotly:

"Why, a club, of course, silly. Did you think it is a Sunday school picnic?" tilting his cigarette at a more acute angle, as he watched Roy.

"Well, if this is a club, you can just count me out. I belong to no club that patterns after a common saloon. Just cross my name off your list, please." Then as he heard a snicker, his cheeks flushed a deeper scarlet, but he did not waver. "Do I make myself plain?"

There was a moment's silence, then, "Hear, hear," called Hal in a loud, mocking voice, and echoed by several others, who wished to show their independence as well as to "stand in" with Hal, the son of the richest man in their town.

And now all were watching Roy as he stood, very brave to all appearance, yet wishing in his heart he could turn and run out of the doors. For he was only a "kid," just fifteen, with all a boy's dread of ridicule. Then it was that the names of "coward," with all the others, were flung at him, until the whole room seemed to echo forth and back the cutting words. Do you think it was a small thing to stand there and listen to the mocking, cutting words? You boys will know just how Roy felt, and you may even think it would be easier to face a cannon's roar than to meet such a battery of scorn and ridicule. Roy stood still for a long second, gazing straight into the faces of the boys whose mocking eyes seemed to pierce his very soul.

"Yes, mamma's boy, if you will," his voice ringing out defiantly. "But listen, I promised my mother, when a little fellow, beside the bed of my dying father, that I would never touch liquor in any form and to keep my lips clean from tobacco, and I am right here to say the fellow who will break his word to his mother is a cad. So there." His scorn now matched theirs, and the boys were awed in spite of themselves.

They all knew the story of how Roy's father, a brilliant man, had died from the effects of strong drink, and as they hesitated while the impulse for good strove within them, Hal again jeered: "So we have a parson among us. Be good, little boys."

Roy looked straight at the speaker, then turned to go, when Rex Dunham, the oldest of the group and the acknowledged leader of the "bunch," stepped to the lad's side, and laying his hand on his shoulder in a protecting manner, drawled in his usual lazy way:

"Parson, fellows? Well, then, you have two of them, and didn't know it, did you? So fire away. Two can stand it better than one, I guess." He looked at the astonished boys, a new expression on his usually smiling face. The boys, to use their own expression, were "paralyzed."

Rex Dunham, who had money to burn, or his dad had, which, to them, meant about the same; Rex, who was their leader in everything; Rex, who had never been known to "preach," now turned "goody-goody." Hal did not dare to turn his battery of sarcasm on Rex, so he just stood and waited for what might come next. Rex went on:

"I too, promised my mother, long ago, to let liquor, tobacco and cards alone, and, I, too, say that a fellow who will break his word to his mother is a cad of the worst kind. And, yet, soberly, I don't know that if it hadn't been for this kid that I would have said anything. Just let you go your way, while I should have gone mine—and a different way it would have been. But he fought for his principles and every one of you ought to honor him for it." Rex straightened until he seemed to the boys to be at least ten feet tall. Then—

"Well, fellows, which is it to be—a club or a saloon? If a club and the right kind, I stay with you. If a saloon, just cut me out. If a club, you will just have to cut that out, too," pointing to the wine and cigarettes. "Which is it to be?"

Hal turned quickly, gathered up the cigarettes, tossed them out of the open window, threw after them the wine bottle, and followed them with a pack of cards that had been in a drawer of the table, all ready for the occasion. Turning, he faced the boys.

"Mothers win in this crowd, every time," his cheeks flushed from excitement and shame. "My mother did not know this, boys, I'll be honest enough to admit, and there would have been something doing if she had guessed, you'd better believe. Well, what do you say? Think we can run this club without any extras? Eh, fellows?" Every lad there agreed with him when Rex again spoke.

"By the way, why did you name this the Up-to-Date Club? Why the mystifying name?" He looked a bit amused, then smiled as Hal explained that his brother, Bert, had suggested that name.

"Huh, huh! And of course you fellows thought that, to be up-to-date, you must smoke and drink and gamble, eh? Well, if you keep your eyes open, you will see that the men who are really up-to-date, who amount to something in life, are the men who let liquor and tobacco and cards alone. They have to have clear heads and keen brains to compete with the rest of the world, and those things," pointing to where Hal's "entertainment" lay on the ground outside, "make success a very dubious affair. See?"

Then, as if realizing for the first time that he, too, had been taking the part of "preacher," he laughed in embarrassment.

"The parson has spoken, so let's go," and slipped his arm in that of Roy's, he turned away, leaving a "bunch" of very sober lads behind.

Afterwards when a name was proposed for membership Hal was heard to remark, "It takes a mighty clean fellow to get into our club. No gamblers or drinkers or cigarette fiends need apply."—Florence Jones Hadley, in Baptist Standard.

"COVER MY DEFENSELESS HEAD"

John Wesley's famous hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul, Let Me to Thy Bosom Fly," has brought blessing and comfort to untold thousands. Many years ago a soldier in the Confederate Army in the Civil War spoke in public of the help this hymn was to him. He said: "I was a mere boy and had just been drafted to service. One night I was put on outpost duty in an advanced and lonely place. I was informed that the enemy was close by. I knew that my life was in danger; the bright moonlight made me plainly visible. To keep up my spirits and quiet my nerves I began to sing the hymn, 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' and by the time I came to the words, 'Cover my defenseless head with the shadow of Thy wing,' I had recovered myself. It seemed as if all my fears had vanished, and I paced my beat the rest of the time, until relieved, as fearless as if it were daytime. I felt that my prayer was answered."

This was spoken in public before a number of people who had gathered. While he was speaking, a man sitting near gazed at him with evident and increasing astonishment. When he finished his story, this second man exclaimed: "This is most extraordinary. That very night I was in that very wood on scout duty with a detachment of Federal troops. We knew that we were close to the Confederate lines. As we approached the edge of the woods we heard a clear voice begin to sing 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul.' We crept softly forward, not knowing what was there. Presently we saw plainly in the moonlight the solitary figure of a Confederate sentry, pacing his beat, and it was he who was singing. Instantly a dozen muskets covered him, waiting for my order to fire. Just then he sang with a feeling of trust and pathos, 'Cover my defenseless head with the shadow of Thy wing.' I ordered the guns lowered and said to my men, 'Don't touch that boy! We will go back to camp.' Then taking the ex-Confederate by the hand, he said, "That hymn saved your life that night. And your trust in God, your invisible protector, reached my soul and saved me.'"—Our Hope.

THE BEST GIFT

"I'm afraid—I haven't given you—the right kind—of gift." It was Christmas night, and the words, punctuated with sobs, came from my little eight-year-old girl.

"Why, yes, you have, dearie," I replied. "Didn't you give papa your love and a promise to be good and kind to all your brothers and sisters?"

"Yes, but I don't think that was enough. I ought to have given you something to show it."

In the morning she had climbed into my bed and as she snuggled up to me she said, "Papa, I haven't got you any Christmas present." I knew how little money she had had to spend, and so I said, "Well, you can give papa your love and that will be better than any gift." And she had dressed and gone down into my study and on a scrap of paper had written:

"Dear Papa: My Christmas gift to you is my love and to be a good girl and to be kind to the rest of the children. Yours truly, Maxine."

As I remembered that little note I felt a tightening in my throat and took her in my arms and said, "No, dearie, your love is more precious to papa than any gift you could have given.'

And then, like a flash, it dawned upon me that in this experience of my fatherhood, God had given me a vision of His own Father-heart.

If we really love Him, though our only manifestation of it be a love note on a scrap of paper, it is acceptable to Him.

—Rev. H. L. Bailey, in Zion's Herald.

THE LONG-EXPECTED MESSIAH

D. L. Moody

And she brought forth her firstborn Son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.—Luke 2:7.

The natural human heart is like that inn at Bethlehem—no room for Christ! All true saints of God for four thousand years had been gazing out into the future, looking and listening that they might hear the footfall of the Coming One. Bible students think that when Eve brought forth her firstborn and said: "I have gotten a man from the Lord," she thought he was the Promised One. And right on for four thousand years the mothers in Israel had been looking for that Child. And now the time has arrived. He appears on earth; and the first thing we read is that there is no room for Him!

He came on no secret mission. He tells us what He came for: "to seek and to save that which was lost." He came to get His arm under the vilest sinner and lift him up to God; to bind up the broken-hearted and to comfort those that mourn. And yet from the time it was announced in Jerusalem that He had come, until He was put to death on the cross, the sword was not put back into its scabbard until it had pierced the very heart of the God-man.

CRITICS DENY BUT DO NOT DISPROVE

Modern naturalism has not disproved direct and specific Revelation: it simply denies it. Its fundamental conception of God and the world is simply the negation of the Biblical conception. It starts by assuming that the Biblical conception is fundamentally false, and then imposes upon the Biblical records a naturalistic and evolutionistic criterion before which the Bible, as it stands, is bound to be descredited. In order that this arbitrary theory may be satisfied, the Bible records are subject to such unheard-of mutilations that the process would appear more than farcical if it were not more than tragical.—John Thomas, in London Christian.

1 Per Cent on Budgets For Superannuates

English Street $. 50

Four new names are added to the A. C. B., Anderson, Pinnacle, Midland, and Thomasville, West. On the G. C. B. one new one is added, Community Church Thomasville, thus heading the list. On the College list three new names are added, Chatham, Connelly Springs, and West Thomasville.

Chatham, Connelly Springs and Charlotte charges and Spring Hill Church on Thomasville, West, go over the top on College Assessment. On the W. F. M. S. Haw River and Yarboroughs are new.

We most heartily welcome these new names and congratulate all those that went over the top on any budget. Not knowing what the assessments are for the Women's Societies I can't say whether any of these have gone over or not. But if they have not they soon will as their year soon ends, and they do not fall behind. As their year does not end with the Conference year so it is hard to say when they are over the top, but just after the Branch meeting we will try to get the list of all those that went over the top for the Missionary year.

English Street Church is the first to report on the 1 per cent on Budgets to be paid the Superannuate Permanent Fund.

Besides those that went over the top and the new entries there are two promotions on the A. C. B., Randolph and Saxapahaw; and Mt. Hermon's remittance helped them to hold their place. On the G. C. B. there is one promotion, West Thomasville. Two promotions on the College list, Granville made the largest gain and heads the list, West End goes up to second place. There were splendid gains made on the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies. See whether you got credit for your contribution.

Our treasurer, Mr. V. W. Idol, tells me that we are a little ahead of what we were last year this time. That is fine and very encouraging. He says however that we are behind on the A. C. B. what we were this time last year. We can soon change that. A number of our larger and stronger charges have not sent in any yet on the A. C. B. I am sure they will soon be attending to that. Now is the time to work. If it is left until the end of the year it will be hard to get and will not be a full year's work as far as working at the Task is concerned and we will be likely to fall short. Remember that what you do not collect will be missed in the Superannuate Fund and the Church Extension Fund. There seems no way of helping this to let's raise it all. That 1 per cent on church budgets goes to the Permanent Fund for Superannuates. This is a much needed work and we do hope that the amounts will be paid in from every charge.

Praying for all and trusting that this will be the best year with each one, I am yours in His dear service.

A. G. DIXON.

Offerings by Churches and Individuals

Concord Station, $33.38; Fair Grove Church, Haw River Circuit, $3.50; Mrs. Florence Guice, $5; Mrs. D. I. Gaster, Sunday Eggs, $2.75.

Sunday School Offerings

Pleasant Grove, $8.01; Philathea Class, Henderson, $13.75; Creswell, $3.04; Bethel, $2.17; Shiloh, Randolph charge, $5; North Davidson charge, $6.81; Mill Grove, $4.60; Haw River Mission, $3.40; Shoals, $3.55; Henderson, February and March, $16.08; Hickory Ridge, Forsythe circuit, $5.75; Bethany, Randolph circuit, $1.80; Midway, $6.30; Mebane, $11.95; Whitakers Chapel, Enfield charge, $19.58; Mitchell Grove, Guilford circuit, $1.75; Mt. Lebanon, Randleman circuit, $5.70; Beginners class, Harmony, Yarborough work, S. C., $2.00.

We appreciate very much each contribution. It means much to the Home in carrying on this work. May the Lord bless you in your giving. A few of our good women are giving the amount of their Sunday eggs. I am very forcibly impressed with this, and wonder if more of the women would not like to help in this way. I am sure they will receive a blessing in so doing. I am requesting that anyone sending contributions, from the various churches and Sunday schools, to please give plainly, the correct address, also the church or Sunday school and the charge from which it comes. We wish to send a letter of acknowledgement and thanks, and it is impossible to do so without this information.

RALLY DAY

Missionary Rally Day was observed at Mt. Zion church, which is in the Eighth District. Mrs. T. L. Speas and Mrs. John Hunter are the District Chairmen. Mrs. Speas presided.

After the devotional period, conducted by Rev. A. L. Hunter, pastor of the church, the following program was given:

"Home Missions," Mrs. W. C. Hammer.
"Foreign Missions," Miss Eleanor Orrell.
"Young People's Work," Mrs. C. L. Whitaker.
"Stewardship," Mr. J. Norman Wills.

Rev. Carey Whitaker made a few appropriate remarks, urging the ministers and laymen to encourage and cooperate with the women in their missionary activities.

The program continued throughout the afternoon. A substantial luncheon was provided by the good women.

The meeting was well attended, and a great deal of interest and enthusiasm manifested on the part of the different churches represented.

High Point College Items

S. Robinowitz, a Hebrew of High Point, is giving a medal for efficiency in oratory this year.

In the inter-collegeiate debate last week High Point College debaters won over both Lenoir-Rhyne and Guilford College debaters. G. W. Andrew and W. M. Loy met the debaters from Guilford College at High Point College and Elwood Carroll and O. C. Loy met the debaters from Lenoir-Rhyne at Hickory. The query was resolved that the United States should immediately recognize the Soveit government of Russia. On March the 31st these same debaters will meet debaters from State College. The affirmative will be upheld by Mr. Andrew and W. M. Loy at Raleigh, while the negative will be upheld by O. C. Loy and Elwood Carroll at High Point.

Keith Harrison will represent High Point College in an intercollegiate oratorical contest at Raleigh next week.

Commencement sermon will be preached on May the 22nd, in the First M. P. Church by Dr. Thomas H. Lewis; the commencement address will be delivered by Judge I. N. Meekings, on Monday the 23rd, in the college auditorium at 11 a.m. The Class Field Day exercises will precede the address.

The new catalogue will be off the press about the first of April. We are adding some new departments and several new instructors. Prof. C. R. Hinshaw becomes the head of the department of Education. Prof. Hinshaw has had several years experience in public school work. He served as superintendent of public school in Gates county, has been superintendent of several high schools, has his master's degree from the University of N. C. and is spending the present year at Teachers' College, Columbia University. Mr. Stanley Pugh of Findlay College, Ohio, becomes the head of our business school. Mr. Pugh is a young man, has had two years experience teaching. Is a member of the M. P. Church and comes with fine testimonials.

Miss Mary Todd of Missouri will teach expression or public speaking here next year. She comes highly recommended, has had valuable experience and is a young woman of fine personality.

Miss Bessie Battle, now Mrs. Chas. W. Moseley, taught art here this year and will return next year.

Prospects for a large enrollment next year are most encouraging. But few of the students now with us will fail to return and assurances of a large freshmen class greatly encourage us.

West End, Greensboro.—We began our revival meeting the first Sunday in this month and closed last Sunday night. The results were not all we had hoped for, yet it was a good meeting.

We missed some of our most faithful members who were kept away because of sickness in the families. The pastor did the preaching and an encouraging number of the members of the church were there at every service and worked faithfully throughout the meeting.

The choir was faithful and efficient, there at every service and on time and gave as inspiring music as it has been our privilege to listen to for some time.

As a result of the meeting a goodly number were converted and 22 members received into the church. Last but not least, the church was revived and many Christians made stronger and pastor and people encouraged. The following is a list of the names of the members that have been received into this church since conference, besides the pastor and family: Mrs. M. E. Yates, Clarence Edwards, Mrs. J. A. Black, Mr. J. A. Black, Mrs. C. W. Raulshon, Mr. C. W. Raulshon, Miss Freda Neville, Mr. Perry Stine, Mrs. Perry Stine, F. V. Black, Mr. H. W. Nigh, V. C. Nigh, Louise Hendrix, Pearl Hendrix, Mrs. S. E. Ratledge, Grover Morgan, Leona Morgan, Mr. T. J. Hicks, Mrs. T. J. Hicks, H. B. Hicks, Roy Hicks, Harrell Pugh, William J. Barbee, Miss Mae Dixon, Adelade Pleasants, Una Pleasants, Paul Leonard, Leonard Routh, Aline Routh, and Mrs. A. B. Stone.

J. D. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

—Mrs. G. F. Millaway was taken to Long's Hospital last Monday with serious sinus trouble. It is feared that an operation will be necesary . Dr. J. C. Broofield recently had an operation for similar trouble, but is out at work again. Such trouble seems to be due to influenza or grippe in many cases. We hope that Mrs. Millaway's trouble will yield promptly to treatment.

—Rev. W. D. Reed has our sympathy. He has had great trouble. He was called from the sick bed of his wife to go to Lincolnton to see his daughter, Mrs. Lackey, who was also sick, and arrived just in time to see her breathe her last.

—West End meeting lasted two weeks, closing last Sunday night. It was a good meeting with several converts to be numbered as one of the results.

—On April 26, 27, and 28, Burlington is to be host to a large number of Sunday school workers from all parts of the State who will be in attendance at the Annual Convention of the North Carolina Sunday School Association.

—"I have always taught, and do teach, and shall teach, I doubt not, till I die, that in resolving to do our work well is the only sound foundation for any religion whatsoever."—Ruskin.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

AN APPRECIATION

A note in the Herald of last week stating that N. M. Harrison, Sr., had passed away and only those who had lived in that community could realize how much he would be missed, is certainly true. Having been the pastor of this good man for seven years and neighbor to him all that time, it is easy to speak of his virtues as they were outstanding.

I do not know that I ever sat in the pulpit of any church during the funeral service of any person that caused me to have such mixed emotions as the other day when Brothers Stubbins and Spencer were performing the parts assigned them. I could think of so many times that I had seen Brother Harrison in the services there in both church and Sunday school and of his faithfulness. I would rejoice that I had the privilege of being associated with him so long and then the thought would come that in front of me were the remains of all that was mortal of him and it was so sad to me.

Brother Harrison was an unusual man to his pastor. He was just as good to him in the last days as the first. Not always true of some of our good church people. Sometimes we differed as to the best thing to be done in certain cases, but when the pastor decided to go ahead and do what he deemed to be best, Brother Harrison would not stand off and say, "Well, if you want to go against my judgment, make it go if you can; I will have nothing to do with it," but he would help you just as much as if you had followed his plan. It takes a great soul to boost a thing when you doubt the wisdom of it. But such was the loyalty of this man that he did not let petty things keep him from his duty.

It was good, too, to be in his home, for he loved him family and spared no pains to do everything for them that would help them to make a life. He succeeded in that, too, as all know that with the help of his good wife they raised a family of children that are loyal to the Kingdom and they are regular standbys for the pastor at the home church. For the number I never served a more loyal family anywhere. God bless them in their loss, for it is great.

Brother Harrison was a great business man. Any man that can do business in a community for 50 years and never make an assignment of any kind is a fine manager. He did much for the poor. It was a touching sight to see the colored folks file in and out to view his remains. They knew that they had lost a friends.

He was an enemy to all things that would have a tendency to hurt the morals of the community in which he lived. He was outspoken against evil in any form. Yet he was one of the gentlest of men. Kind, courteous, a typical Southern gentleman. Words fail me as I think of this "great man in Israel that has fallen today." I cannot think of any man that will be missed in more ways than this one in his church, home, and community, for he was a man of affairs.

May the God of all grace sustain the dear ones at home who feel this bereavement so severely. May the church find in someone who is left a leader that will take up the work in a measure at least that the cause that Brother Harrison loved so much may not suffer for lack of leadership. And may we all who knew this man and loved him find an inspiration in his life that will lead us on to greater faithfulness and service in the Kingdom of God. N. G. BETHEA.

PHILATHEA MEETING

The Mizpah Philathea class held its regular business meeting Sunday at the church. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. H. J. Jones; minutes read and roll called by assistant secretary, Miss Annie Tate. The president then reminded the different committees of their duties. As there was no further business, the meeting adjourned to meet again in April. REPORTER.

Albemarle.—The Ladies' Aid Society held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. C. W. Hatley with 24 members present. We are proud to see so many interested in this work. The committees all had good reports, showing that much progress is being made. The visiting committee reported 104 visits. Ways and means reported that plans are being made for putting on our play in the near future.

It was decided that we have a "dollar social" next month, each member to earn a dollar and report at the meeting how it was earned.

We have decided to discontinue our plans for putting improvements in the church and save all our money to go toward a new church which we hope to start as soon as necessary plans can be arranged. We have a beautiful location for a church, where the parsonage now stands, and a beautiful brick church on this lot is our aim.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the hostess, assisted by Miss Bertha Hatley, served delicious refreshments consisting of brick cream and cake.

MRS. JOHN U. WHITLOCK, Cor. Sec.

Harmony, Yarborough Ct.—The W. F. M. S. met at the church for our thank-offering service with our usual number of active members taking part. We were glad to have our pastor, Brother Cowan, with us; he gave an interesting, helpful talk on missions. We have changed the date of our regular meeting from Thursday to the fourth Saturday afternoon, February 1, in order to have Mr. and Mrs. Cowan with us. We have seven active members and seven honorary members. Our thank-offering contribution was $10. We are glad of so good an offering in our small society. Only the active members took part.

INA WOOD, Sec.-Treas., W. F. M. S.

March 14, 1927.

Democrat Charge, Pleasant Gap Church.—Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday with a great message, which was enjoyed by everyone. The attendance was good.

We think lots of our new pastor and his family. We think Mr. Bell is a wonderful man.

He also preached another wonderful sermon at Democrat in the afternoon, after which the quarterly conference was held.

Our consolidated Sunday school at Democrat is coming on fine. Since our class at Pleasant Gap is small in number we have united with them. Everybody seems to be interested and is working hard to make the school a success. The attendance is good considering the season. We believe it will be better when the weather moderates.

PEARL HENSLEY.

Shoals, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Circuit.—Sunday, March 13, was a fine day. Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, gave us a wonderfully good sermon as he usually does, and I believe all who missed it lost a great feast for the soul.

We have had quite a lot of whooping cough and some other sickness in our community, but we are glad that that is almost over now.

Our Sunday school is doing very well at present. Of course, there is lots of room yet for improvement. We believe when spring is fully come there will be much more interest taken in the Sunday school. We heartily hope so. Love and best wishes to everyone.

REPORTER.

Union Church, Halifax Charge.—Although we had the largest snow on record for many years recently, it did not prevent the holding of our regular appointment Sunday afternoon. We also had Sunday school, but the attendance was small. We find consolation and encouragement in these words of our Master, "Where only two or three are gathered together in my name, I will be with them."

Our congregation showed some results of the severe weather, but there was not a very large decrease in the attendance. I sincerely believe that good seed were planted in the hearts of those present by our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer. Surely those seed will bear much fruit for the kingdom of God. The good influence of Mr. Spencer during his work on Halifax Charge has indeed led many sinful hearts to that safe Anchor of all troubled souls, Jesus Christ.

RUTH LEWIS, Reporter.

Asheboro.—The Woman's Foreign Missionary met with Mrs. W. F. Redding Monday afternoon, March 14th.

The president, Mrs. J. S. Lewis, called the meeting to order and conducted the devotional. Then the meeting was turned over to the program leader, Mrs. Clyde Hendricks. Mrs. Hendricks discussed the fifth and sixth chapters of "Moslem Women," our study book for the year.

A tribute of respect and love for Mrs. R. R. Ross was read by Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, and was approved by the society.

A goodly number was present and much business was transacted. This being the time for the election of officers, they are as follows: President, Mrs. J. S. Lewis; vice-president, Mrs. W. C. Hammer; recording secretary, Mrs. Earl Bulla; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. C. E. Davis; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John Swaim; treasurer, Miss Esther Ross; assistant treasurer, Miss Lollie Jones; auditor, Mrs. Hal Walker; record agent, Mrs. Clyde Hendricks; thankful boxes secretary, Mrs. W. M. Ridge; secretary Young People's Work, Mrs. J. T. Pugh.

Delegates to the annual Branch meeting, which will be held in Henderson April 19-27, are as follows: Mrs. J. S. Lewis, Mrs. John Swain, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Mrs. W. R. Hamlin, Mrs. Earl Bulla and Mrs. C. E. Davis. We were dismissed by prayer by Rev. J. E. Pritchard.

MRS. JOHN SWAIM, Cor. Sec.

Denton Church.—Our Sunday school was in charge of the Junior Baraca and Junior Philathea. The Bible reading was by Robert Loftin. A quartet was composed of Miss Blanch Hoover, Jewell Lanier, Kate Sexton and Sallie Maie Frank. They sang Held By His Hand.

Attendance yesterday, 27; attendance year ago, 52; offering yesterday, $3.45; offering year ago, $1.38.

Our good pastor filled his appointment here yesterday. His sermon was a great one and the people enjoyed hearing him.

Our Christian Endeavor was in charge of Mr. R. C. Powell, this service was well attended. After this we are glad to say that Canaan choir came and took charge in the place of Denton choir for preaching.

Just before Mr. Henderson read the Bible reading, the Ridge quartet from Canaan sang "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me."

At the close of the service the Ridge quartet sang "Whosoever Will May Come." The house was full and some didn't get in.

We were glad to have Rev. C. E. Ridge with us.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Stanley.—Sunday was a great day for the people at Friendship. Each service was enjoyed by all, especially the singing by the old folks.

At 11:00 o'clock our pastor delivered an excellent sermon.

We were indeed glad to have with us Rev. Mr. Anderson of Albemarle, yesterday. Mr. Anderson preached a thrilling sermon to an audience of attentive listeners.

We had a wonderful prayer meeting last night conducted by Mrs. Hill. Mrs. Hill preached a real sermon. The many testimonies were an inspiration to all present.

The Ladies' Aid Society of this church is doing a good work. We hope for them a great success.

REPORTER.

Henderson.—Our work is moving on in such a splendid way that I hesitate to write each week; however, if there is not room for the report, truly we will take no offence if it is carried over. But I feel that such progress and interest shown in our Lord's work needs comment, and I also feel that if spurs our leaders on to greater things. Our Sunday school is increasing in attendance each Sunday and we are hoping to continue. Several classes had a perfect attendance yesterday and the work of the Junior Philathea is attracting attention.

Rev. R. A. Hunter continues to preach the simple truths from Sunday to Sunday and their effect and influence is felt and seen by the attentive congregations which worship at our church.

The Ladies' Aid Society met last Monday afternoon, March 7th, with Mrs. T. H. Hight. The president, Mrs. S. R. Watson, conducted the devotionals, after which the necessary business of the society was transacted. They voted to buy eight screens for the primary department to use in the basement. Also many plans and suggestions were discussed concerning the entertainment of the delegates for the Branch meeting. Following this Mrs. Walter R. Grissom gave a very interesting sketch of the life of Annie Howard Shaw. The meeting closed with prayer and the hostess served refreshments.

On Thursday night, March 10th, the Philathea class held their business meeting at the home of Mrs. C. F. Tanksely, Jr., Mrs. H. A. Jordan, assistant hostess. The president, Mrs. C. F. Tanksely, presided. After the general business routine and collections of dues it was learned that our treasurer would be able to pay all outstanding bills and also give a check of $13.75 due the Children's Home for support of an orphan there. The program committee gave a splendid report in which Mrs. J. B. Martin favored the class with several piano solos, which were greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Chas. E. Ellis then gave two very witty readings, which were entertaining indeed. After adjournment the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

MRS. CLYDE L. FINCH.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, filled his appointment last Sunday p.m. with a splendid sermon.

We were glad to have as visitors Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Presnell of Asheboro.

Our Woman's Home Missionary Society held a short meeting Sunday afternoon; received two new members and finished paying up on dues for this part of the year which amounted to $10.60.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the management of Mr. B. C. Presnell.

We hope as spring opens up our number will continue to increase.

We are planning to hold Easter service for which we will begin to make preparations next Sunday.

Our pastor conducts a service each Friday night at the home of Mr. J. B. Presnell for the benefit of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school and others that wish to attend. All that can should take advantage of this as they are sure to be benefited by attending.

Our hearts have been made sad recently by the death of the oldest member of our church, Brother J. T. Williams. Grandpa Williams was a good man and will be missed so much although he had been in declining health for about three years and not able to attend church often during that time.

He bore his afflictions patiently although he wanted to get well, but the Lord saw best to take him home. He fell asleep in his rocking chair shortly after trying to sing.

I am going home
I am going home
I am going home
To die no more.

REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington.—Yesterday was Baraca Day with us, and hard work and a good program brought out a large attendance, especially at the morning hours. The Sunday school record showed 490 present, and we are sure that there were enough late comers to run the number up to 500. A large congregation assembled also for the preaching service at eleven o'clock. Prof. T. C. Johnson and the college orchestra were down for these services, and both the music and the sermon of Prof. Johnson were highly enjoyed. A pleasing feature of the morning service was a solo, "The Lost Cord," sung by Mr. Roy Bethune, with orchestra accompaniment.

We are indebted to these college friends for their splendid help in these services, and we shall be glad to have them come our way again. Prof. T. C. Amick and his family, from Elon College, worshiped with us in these services, and Prof. Amick, by special invitation, taught the Baraca class. He is a former teacher of this class, and they are always glad of an opportunity to hear him. There were many other visitors in these services that we were glad to note, and to have worship with us. The night attendance, though not so large, was very good. With this service we begin a series of Sunday night evangelistic services—harmonizing with a city-wide program—to terminate with Easter. Through these special services we hope to stimulate the spiritual life of the city, and to reach some, at least, of the unsaved of the community. We have now in our church here an interesting group of our children that we are meeting from Sunday to Sunday in an effort to prepare them for church membership. We hope to receive them on Easter Sunday, and others, we trust.

Our recent effort to enlist tithers has resulted thus far in the enrollment of 31. We are still working at it, and our hope is to considerably increase this number.

Our missionary organizations are meeting to night to close the work for this missionary year. They will go to the branch meeting in April with their budgets paid in full, and a good report for the year's work. Every organization that the Home and Foreign Societies provide are on our missionary program, and functioning well. But here, and along all other lines, there is so much to be done, and we are doing so litle! so little! The Lord help us, and fit us for larger things in his service.

S. W. TAYLOR.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—Our work does not seem to be progressing very fast at this time but since spring is opening we hope the work will move along a little faster.

Our pastor, Rev. J. T. Sisk, filled his appointment yesterday at 11:00 o'clock with a splendid sermon.

The Sunday school is preparing to give an Easter program Easter Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock, April 17. The second quarterly meeting will be at Union Chapel Saturday before the first Sunday in April.

REPORTER.

Fountain Place.—We had a good day yesterday, March 20th. We had two fine sermons by our pastor and one of the best if not the largest attendance at our Sunday school that has been known in the history of the Baby Church. We had 93 present. Our Sunday school is growing; every Sunday we are adding new members to our roll. The Christian Endeavor is doing some very fine work. The Intermediate Society is planning a special program for March 27th, which will be a Missionary program.

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies are doing some very fine work. The misionary society will give a supper in the basement of the church Saturday evening, March 28th and at the same time will sell a quilt. This will be for the benefit of the missionary society. Mrs. Charlie Amick, the wife of our Sunday school superintendent, who has been sick for several weeks, does not seem to improve very fast. Our prayers go up in her behalf, that she may soon be restored to health again. MRS. J. W. SHARPE.

Asheville.—The March meeting of our Brotherhood was held at the parsonage, and was well attended.

Our Missionary Society held a good meeting last week. Mrs. Hayes, of Brazil, South America, made a most interesting address on conditions in that country.

Brothers E. C. Fawcett and E. H. Pratt attended the Laymen's Conference at the Asheville school last Saturday and Sunday.

Our new ushers are: Brothers G. M. Foster, Ralph Beacham, Richard Hanner, and L. S. Neville.

Mrs. Ceris Pickens, mother of Mrs. C. W. Bates, is recovering from a fractured arm which she suffered by a fall a few days ago.

A number of our Sunday school children have measles. The attendance is thereby cut down. Preparations for our Easter service are under way. REPORTER.

State Street Church.—On Thursday night of last week Brother Ballard, assistant pastor of First M. P. church High Point, gave us an entertainment of rare enjoyment and instruction in the form of a picture exhibition of scenes from his recent trip to Palestine. His lecture in connection with the pictures and two songs that he sang in his splendid way made the evening most interesting and helpful. A silver offering was taken which will go on the fund for a piano for the primary department of the Sunday school. Brother Ballard gave his fine program entirely free, would not take even his expenses from the offering, so we are indebted to his generosity, for a liberal sum on the piano fund.

Dr. Owens, pastor of the First Baptist church here, asked Brother Bethea to bring his congregation over to the Baptist church Sunday night and preach for both congregations, Dr. Owens being engaged in revival services in Albemarle. Quite a large audience attended from both denominations and also many visitors.

Our revival meeting will begin the first Sunday in May. Brother Gerringer of Calvary church, Greensboro, will conduct our meeting. This will be the second time Brother Gerringer has been with us and we are looking forward very hopefully to this meeting.

Misses Rose and Anna McCanlas of Pennsylvania spent part of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Bethea and were with us in all the services Sunday. Of all the legion of delightful visitors that have been to visit at the parsonage none have excelled these ladies. Surely Mr. and Mrs. Bethea should be congratulated on the number and quality of their friends and the frequency with which they come to see them. This is a natural result of the fine hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Bethea.

REPORTER.

Oak Grove.—Everything seems to be moving along very nicely with us.

Our Sunday school is doing splendid work this spring, and is still improving.

We now have a large number on roll and are expecting more this summer.

We are very glad to have back with us Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Peeler who take a great interest in Sunday school work.

On Sunday afternoon, March 13, we had with us Mrs. Dixon who gave to us a very interesting talk on Foreign Misions.

Our Christian Endeavor society is moving along nicely. Last Sunday night several interesting talks were made by the members.

The intermediate class gave a debate. Resolved that a college education is worth a million dollars, the affirmative side winning.

REPORTER.

Yarborough Chapel.—Indeed the past week has been a week of wonderful activity with us here at Yarborough Chapel. On Tuesday night the Church Trustees met at the parsonage with all members but one present; every item of interest to the church was gone into; they voted to take more insurance on both the church and the furnishings of the church, and truly, friends, we have a very valuable treasure in the handsome furnishings of the church here, and we are very proud of it indeed. The reports of the trustees read were very interesting and very encouraging. On Wednesday night the stewards met at the parsonage for their monthly meeting with only one member absent; the reports were unusually good they say, and since a sermon on tithing, the stewards report that some of the members have doubled their pledge which had already been made, a partial report was made from the every member canvass which has not been completed yet, but the report so far is much better than any that has been given for the same length of time in several years. The ladies met with us on Friday night and reorganized the Ladies' Aid Society; this was a very enthusiastic meeting; they have plans on foot to repair, clean, and varnish the furniture in the parsonage, and also to clean and polish the furniture at the church, with the love and good will of this loyal group behind us I am sure that the parsonage will be well cared for in the future. Owing to a resignation on the board of parsonage trustees their meeting which was scheduled for Thursday night of last week was called off until one night this week in order to elect another trustee to fill the vacancy on Sunday morning which was done, so the trustees for the parsonage will meet this week; we have all departments of the church well organized at the present and everything is going nicely.

Many, many thanks to the ladies for the nice new set of China which was christened while Dr. Dixon and wife were our guests. The Christian Endeavor Society met Sunday evening with Miss Gladys Wilson as leader. It was one of the best Christian Endeavor meetings that it has been my privilege and pleasure to attend; this group of the church is marching steadily on. They are planning to give an April Fool party on Friday evening, April 1st, at the parsonage, and I am sure that an enjoyable evening is in store for all that will come.

Indeed the progress here so far has been far beyond our fondest hopes, as the difficulties seemed almost beyond us when we first arrived on the field, but with the help of God and a faithful and loyal few, we have overcome and are well on the road to a far better year than has been here for some time. Really we are told the outlook here is the best for many years in spite of the hard times for the past two or three years, and we thank God for it. Our church has decided to work (in place of the three acres as Dr. Dixon mentioned in the last isue of the Herald) five acres. So you see that is better still. Now for the good news we have been wanting to tell since we began writing this letter; a nice Ford Coupe was seen driving into the parsonage yard on this (Monday) afternoon, and what JOY we had when the news finally reached us that it was ours; this was made possible as a token of love and appreciation (of the greater part of our congregation here) for our work since coming here. I cannot find words to express our appreciation, and the joy it gives us to know the spirit of the people who love us to this extent, may God help me to serve them well in return is my prayer, and may God in His love repay them doubly for their kindness to us. Truly our hearts are made glad to be able to labor with, and for these good people here and may we serve them faithfully and long.

The good things we receive from time to time are so much appreciated and welcomed also, and the royal entertainment we receive from the folks here we know comes from the heart, and we are very grateful for it.

Next Sunday being the regular appointment at Harmony church, we will give you a report from there later on. I fear that if I should give it now some of the brethren might want to take my field from me, so will write again.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor.

Palestine, Flat Rock.—Sunday was a good day for us. The house was mostly filled. Good attendance at Sunday school, interest good, and seems every one enjoys it.

Dr. Dixon, president of our N. C. Conference, was with our pastor and preached as sweet a sermon as this writer has ever heard. It was a delight to hear him. Dr. Dixon explains the truths in such a simple and plain way that even a little child could understand. May each one of our members be led to know his or her place as God would have them know it, and then do the work that our Lord and Master would have us do by His help.

We hope our President will not wait so long to visit us again.

Pastor Trogdon's planning a circuit rally to be held at Gideon's Grove some date this spring. We shall look forward for a great day, and hope it may so unite the entire circuit that all members may be brought closer together and closer to God, as a church and people.

Garrett Young, one of the noble young men of our church, will give weekly, semi-monthly or monthly report of our Sunday school hereafter. Watch for his reports.

The reporter will try to report every two months as usual. More of our people are taking the Herald than usual. Wish it could go in every home in our church. It's just like a letter from loved ones and friends, full of cheer and helpfulness.

Uncle John Landreth has returned from Penna. where he visited his son. He was at church Sunday. Hutton Tucker, who underwent an operation in High Point Hospital, has recovered and was at church Sunday.

The reporter and her father have recovered from an attack of flu.

The Stokesdale club will hold service at Palestine first Sunday in May, immediately after Sunday school.

Best wishes to Herald and readers.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The first Sunday afternoon the pastor preached to a very good congregation.

Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Isley and Miss Bessie Holmes worshiped with us. The pastor was with the Christian Endeavorers that night and told a very interesting story. The Juniors have been hoping he will come again and tell another story.

A large congregation was out the third Sunday. Some said the pastor beat himself, but how do they know? his sermons are all good.

A committee of girls, Ruby Isley, Mary Wood, Viola Thompson, Mable Crabtree and Cora Loy were appointed to collect money to paint and make some repairs on the church.

The Woman's Home Missionary had a called meeting after preaching. Miss Annie Livengood spoke about the work of the organization.

We were glad to see Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vestal at church for the first time since the cyclone.

Now that spring is here and the mud is drying up the attendance at Sunday school is increasing, but there is room for more and some faces are still missed from among us. I wish more of the older people would come, especially those who have children, it is better to bring your children.

REPORTER.

Mebane.—Last Sunday morning we had an attendance of 186 for Sunday school, and fairly good for church service. Our pastor preached especially to the young men in the congregation at eleven o'clock. This message was very inspiring and helpful. On the first Monday afternoon in this month at three o'clock the Ladies' Aid society held an interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. Charlie Jobe. Thirty-four present. Three visitors. Collection, $14.30. Devotionals were led by Mrs. George Wyatte and Mrs. J. E. Barnette. After the business meeting Mrs. Jobe served fruits and candy. The April meeting will be with Mrs. George McAdams. At the school auditorium Friday evening of last week under the auspices of the Foreign Missionary society, Rev. E. Lester Ballard presented pictures of the holy land and explained in a forceful and interesting manner the different scenes as they appeared. Something around $40.00 was taken in at this time, the Foreign society receiving as their part $20.85.

The Home and Foreign Misionary societies met jointly at the parsonage with Mrs. Suits Monday evening at 7:30. Twenty eight present. The program was in charge of the Home society. One new member was received into the Home society and one into the Foreign. Total collection $55.60. Pleasing reports from the William Nicholson Mission Band, Buds of Hope and Precious Jewels were given at this meeting. Officers for another year were elected. Delegates to the Branch meeting were also elected at this time, Miss Mary Jobe and Mrs. J. E. Foust from the Foreign society, Mrs. Edward Suits and Mrs. Hyfill Jobe from the Home society. During the social hour Mrs. Suits served fruits and candy.

Our April meeting will be with Mrs. June Smith. Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson, students at High Point College, were at home the past week-end.

REPORTER.

High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday Prof. P. E. Lindley delivered a strong sermon on "The Spirit and Power of Unity." The choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "The Path of Life," and Mr. Clarence Schultheiss, whose voice is much admired by High Point people, sang "The Lord is My Light," by Speaks with fine effect. At the evening service Rev. Lester Ballard gave the message, "Looking at Jesus," which was the first of a series of sermons he plans to present to the congregation. The anthem was well rendered, "Lift up Your Heads," by Hopkins, and a beautiful duet was given by Mrs. Hobart Allred and Clarence Schultheiss.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, which has been reorganized with Miss Myrtle Davis as leader, is progressing nicely, and meets on Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The second quarterly conference will convene on Wednesday evening after prayer meeting. Every member is expected to be present, and all officers of the boards and different organizations are urged to bring written reports of all work since November 1.

The young people's Christian Endeavor Society is meeting this (Monday) evening with Miss Pearl Leonard leader, and the topic is, "How Can We Improve Our Minds?" These young people are doing splendid work.

The sympathy of a large number of friends is extended to Dr. R. M. Andrews in the loss of his brother, Mr. Lee Andrews, of Burlington, who passed away last Tuesday after a long period of invalidism. Dr. and Mrs. Andrews and children and Prof. P. E. Lindley as a representative of the College attended the funeral on Wednesday at Burlington.

We are pained to announce the death of Mrs. Henry Koonce of Lexington, the mother of Mr. A. J. Koonce. She was 81 years of age, and was buried at Beulah Reformed church, near Lexington last Friday. Much sympathy is expressed for this highly esteemed family, who are very loyal members of our congregation.

We are delighted to see Capt. A. M. Rankin at home from a stay of a few weeks at Hot Springs, Ark. He is much improved in health.

Mrs. O. O. Young and daughter, Eleanor, of Henderson, came over to spend Saturday and Sunday with Miss Mary E. Young at High Point College.

Mrs. W. C. Hammond, the efficient secretary of the Board of Public Welfare, went to Richmond, Va., last week on business.

Earl Teague, who holds a position at High Rock, spent Sunday with home folks here.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid Sarratt of Charlotte, motored here Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. June Gray.

Delegates to Branch meeting at Henderson, N. C., April 19-21 have been elected from Woman's Foreign Missionary Society as follows: Mrs. C. L. Whitaker President and Mrs. H. U. Oakes Secretary by virtue of their office, Mrs. H. A. Garrett and Mrs. S. D. Shelton, alternates, Mrs. W. P. Pickett and Mrs. E. L. Douglas. From the Home Missionary Society the delegates are Mrs. E. L. Ballard President and Mrs. R. T. Rickens Secretary by virtue of their office, Mrs. J. H. Walker, Jr., and Mrs. W. M. Crouch, alternates, Mrs. P. T. Crawford and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt.

Mt. Hermon Charge.—Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Payne of Graham reunited with Cedar Cliff church, March 13. For several years they have been members of the Reformed church of Burlington. We are glad to have them return to their old home church.

The members of Bellemont church have paid for their electric lights. They have also paid over one hundred dollars on the recently purchased property. The young Christian Endeavor at Bellemont has celebrated its fourth meeting and is progressing nicely.

Miss Annie Livengood, a student at High Point College, addressed the W. H. M. S. at Friendship church, March 19. Much business was transacted previous to Miss Livengood's speech. The Christian Endeavor at Friendship has created much interest and has caused the purchase of three lamps. Mrs. Polly Isley, one of Friendship's oldest members, died March 13. A full account of her death will appear in this paper.

Mt. Hermon members have been warmed up and are on the road to church improvement. A number of young people were appointed to solicit funds which will be used towards the erection of Sunday school rooms and the paintings of the entire structure.

J. ELWOOD CARROLL, Pastor.

First Church, Spencer.—Our second quarterly conference met Saturday evening in an interesting session. Official members present gave good reports. Sunday 11:00 a.m., our pastor, Rev. T. G. Madison, gave us a good sermon. Subject, Training Our Young People. He brought to us the great responsibilities of training our young people for service for the church. We had a good congregation. Following the preaching service the Lord's supper was administered at 7:00 p.m. Evening service his subject, Overcoming Temptations. Both sermons were helpful and inspiring. Brother Madison is doing good work here. Our people like our pastor.

Our Sunday school is still growing both in interest and number.

Our Christian Endeavor is doing good work. We ask the prayers of the Christian people that we may grow and become a stronger church and that we may soon have a building of our own to worship in. The little chapel will not hold our congregation much longer if we still continue to grow as we have for the last few weks. We have a large number of children in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. Preaching services the first and third Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.— The missionary societies held a very interesting meeting with one of the members, Mrs. C. A. Smith, Wednesday afternoon, March 16. A financial report showed that we almost have our budget raised and we hope to be able to report it paid in full by 31st.

Officers for the new year were elected. Delegates to Branch meeting were elected after which the literary program was given.

The Clay township Sunday school convention will be held in this church next Sunday afternoon, March 27th.

Mr. Thomas, president of Guilford county Sunday school association, will be with us and other speakers will be Rev. E. Frank Lee of Greensboro and Miss Ida Millis of Guilford College.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Circuit.—The Myra Crawford M. C. held their Thank-offering service last Sunday with a short program of recitations and songs by the children and a sermon by the pastor. Collection amounted to $5.70. These children have done a good year's work and are planning better things for next year. We were glad to have a good many visitors from a distance worship with us Sunday; among them we found the Misses Maynard and Mr Turrentine of Salisbury, the Misses Maynards of Greensboro, Mr. and Mrs. Shuemaker of University Station, Mr. Henry Isley and family and Mr. D. M. Lewis of Burlington, Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Lewis of Graham.

REPORTER.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our Sunday school was well attended yesterday, and we are glad to say that we are improving in interest as well as attendance. We now have an attendance banner and it is interesting to see each class work for the banner; our two smallest classes won yesterday.

Our Christian Endeavor Society is also growing; we have fifty or more each Sunday night and every one seems to enjoy the meetings very much. It is so encouraging to see our boys and girls taking an active part in these meetings. Last night the meeting was led by Howard Apple. On next Friday night, March 25th, our Christian Endeavor Society will give a play, "The Deacon's Courtship." The proceeds will be used for our building fund for our new church. Come everybody, and have two hours of fun and at the same time help a good cause.

Prayer meeting yesterday was conducted by Brother Henry Wilson, and in the afternoon a large majority of our Sunday school went to Sharon Baptist church to the country Sunday school convention. We are sorry to report that our pastor's wife is sick. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

I have just received a message over the phone that our dear pastor and wife have lost one of their daughters, they have our deepest sympathy. May our Heavenly Father comfort their broken hearts, is the prayer of one who knows by experience how to sympathize with them.

Best wishes to the Herald.

A Two-Sided Question

We open our columns to a discussion of a question of missionary policy, whether the women should have a separate missionary board. We gladly do so because it is an important question and because it is an unsettled question. In the present state of thought concerning it, it is a two-sided question. One may find himself in good company whichever side he is on. But we should not be satisfied with being in good company: we should earnestly desire to be on the side of right.

It may be argued on the one side that the women as well as the men are represented in the church board elected by the General Conference. Objection may be taken to the practice of speaking of this board as the "men's board," since it represents the whole church. It may be urged that it would be fairer to speak of the "whole church's board" and "part-of-the-church's board," in comparing the two organizations.

But even so, this does not settle the question of the right of the women of the church to form and operate a supplementary missionary organization. All citizens are taxed to support our state universities and all citizens theoretically exert an influence in shaping the policy of these institutions of higher education. But this fact does not exclude religious denominations from the right to build and maintain denominational colleges. Churches do build denominational colleges because they wish to exert a stronger moral influence than is exerted in the state universities or because they wish to teach some phases of truth not taught by the state universities. Few intelligent people question the right of the churches to conduct church schools. Intelligent churchmen recognize the need of church schools so keenly that they feel that the church must have its schools, even at great sacrifice.

In missionary work the same sort of a situation exists. We have denominational missions doing important work. The means are obtained by appeals to both men and women of the church, and both men and women contribute—a little. These offerings aggregate enough to accomplish much good, but still there is need of much more work and of some kinds of work not done or even attempted. Women have felt moved to bestir themselves in behalf of women and children especially, and against great odds and at much personal sacrifice on the part of many have for years persisted in their efforts. We believe that if the whole truth could be told, the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society would appear as the leading misionary workers of the church. They have worked because they realized the distressing need of their work and because they felt free to direct their help to the relief of the need they so keenly and painfully sensed. Shall we take from them this freedom and reduce them to mere earners and collectors of means? Would they be likely to be as efficient in that capacity? It is contrary to human nature to believe that they would. We may exhort them to "pray, pay, and obey," but women are "folks" as really as men are, and when they feel called to serve in a particular way in Christly work, does not ordinary respect require that we not only give them liberty, but that we give them our Godspeed and our financial help. I am ashamed of some of the restrictions that our General Conference has put upon the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

Another Lesson From the Birds

Jesus drew a lesson from the birds. A lesson for anxious men and women. For men and women anxious about food and raiment. "Behold the fowls of the air," said he; "for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?"

But men and women have another great anxiety. An anxiety about the great journey that begins at the end of this life. How dreadful it seems. The chilly darkness holds for us we know not what terrors. Who will guide our flight through that perilous night? We timid mortals shrink back at the very thought of it. But the birds of the air may give us assurance here. They on the approach of winter leave the icy north and make their way to the sunny southland. Who guides them? What power sustains them in their marvelous flight? They move in order. Their migration is a well planned and well executed achievement. There must be in it an Intelligence greater than their own.

Mr. Archibald Rutledge, of our own State, a life-long student of the birds, in an article in the American Magazine for March, points out the lesson the migratory birds may teach us human creatures regarding our own migration to the land prepared for our future habitation. We quote here a paragraph or two regarding the tiny humming bird familiar to us all:

"It is the first of October. As yet there has been no frost. The flowers are brilliant with those poignant colors of farewell that flaunt triumphantly, flouting the dread of winter. Most gaudy are certain gladioli; and about these a single ruby-throated humming bird is, in his dainty fashion, exceedingly busy. He is wholly concerned with the wild honey dew in those gorgeous bells, hanging to him, like a huge carolin from the swaying spire of the stem. Yet this tiny fairy, as frail as thistle down, is on the eve of a prodigious journey, such a one, indeed, as might appall the oldest traveler. He is starting for Central America tonight. Yet he seems joyously unconcerned, probing with ecstatic bill the iridescent depths of the mighty bells. He does not appear to be buying travelers' checks. He isn't rushing around packing luggage and purchasing tickets. Something in his heart tells him that the time has come; but he knows that all is well. He has something to sustain him besides his wings. Perhaps it is what all of us must have. Into the air he vanishes. . . . But my thoughts are with the tiny traveler, somewhere out in the vast twilight settling over the world. I cannot be beguiled away from the thought of him.

"The winter is past. Spring is here, bringing me into the garden again. Perched on a twig of a lilac bush is my faerie adventurer. Safely he had come that immense journey. He had had no compass. He had traveled in the darkness, by the air route. Who had taken care of that tiny spark of life? Who had buoyed up those gossamer wings? Who had charted the course for this tiniest of aerial mariners? Who had sustained that palpitant elfin heart? I have but one answer; and the more I study migration, the more I am

"WHY TROUBLE THE WOMAN? FOR SHE HATH WROUGHT A GOOD WORK"

By Lee Anna Star

To Reverend David Abeel, a godly missionary from China, belongs the honor of having first organized Christian women for the redemption of their sisters in benighted heathen lands. His soul was burdened over the appalling degradation of the sex throughout the Orient, and he determined to arouse Christian womanhood to a sense of its duty in this matter. He visited England and organized a Society for the Promotion of Female Education in the East. In 1834 he came to the United States and was a guest in the home of Mrs. Thomas Doremus, of New York City. We quote from an address delivered at Northfield, commemorative of the efforts of this godly man:

"Long and earnest recitals of his missionary experience revealed the deplorable condition of Oriental women: circumscribed in their lives through customs, hoary with age, considered the slaves or chattels of men, yet yielding in their restricted power, a baneful influence on the life of the nations. The conviction deepened in his soul, that the only way to transform these pitiable lives, was through a special service of Christian women, who in the strength of perfected ideals, should echo the Master's words: 'I say unto thee, arise.'"

Mrs. Doremus' ardent soul was stirred; she caught the inspiration and exclaimed: "Lead! and I will follow." Kindred spirits responded, and a society, "eager to carry life and light to the darkened homes of heathen women," was formed.

But now a difficulty arose. A chorus of protests went up from the mission boards of the churches. These boards were made up of men, and men only. They did not look at this movement from the women's viewpoint. Instead of welcoming these new recruits as allies, they rated them as rivals. We quote again from the Northfield address:

"The arguments put forth were old: An independent society of women was not needed; women were stepping outside their legitimate province, and interference at this initial stage of missions would complicate their management, and diminish financial help."

The last named argument was, to the minds of the objectors, the most serious. If these women had been content to carry out an educational programme, under a directorate of men, it might not be so objectionable; if they would gather funds for the church boards, accepting such allowance as the men deemed advisable, a woman's organization might be tolerated, but to associate themselves together with a view to manage their own affairs and to control their own finances, was not to be considered.

Dr. Abeel, with his years of experience as a missionary, and with full knowledge of conditions, was convinced that women would know best how to approach their own sex, especially so in heathen lands where custom decreed the seclusion of women. Further, he believed that there would be more interest and enthusiasm on the part of Christian women, and larger results achieved, if they were permitted to manage their own affairs. His appeals had no weight with the boards, and his efforts were futile.

With a heavy heart Dr. Abeel returned to the waiting women and reported failure. He stated the objections offered. Well he understood that, for the time being, these meant disaster to the enterprise, but with faith in the ultimate triumph of the right, he uttered these prophetic words: "Never give up the idea, and in the Lord's own time, it will be realized."

Twenty-six years went by; an entire generation of heathen women had passed into the unknown future, without a Christ, without a Savior; without an opportunity to hear the story of his love, but still the boards were obdurate. An independent organization of women was not to be tolerated.

These astigmatized boards could not see that an educational programme, one of the features of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, would make new converts to the cause of missions, and thereby increase the income of the church boards, as well as finance the work of the woman's society. We are safe in affirming that an examination of church records will verify this statement. Convert a wife and mother to the cause of missions, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred you have converted the husband and the young people of that home also.

The writer wishes to make plain her position in this matter. We are not calling in question the integrity of the men who sat in these boards, we are not impugning their motives. No doubt but they were God-fearing men. They had a zeal for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom, but "not according to knowledge." They were convinced that the surest way to achieve large results was for the women to work under the supervision and control of the men's boards. Their motive was right, but their method was wrong. We say this in anticipation of much that will follow.

In the spring of 1860, in the providence of God, a returned Baptist missionary, Mrs. Frances B. Mason, came to the assistance of the faithful women who had waited and prayed so long. She addressed the New York Female Bible Society, and gladdened the hearts of her eager listeners by announcing that now, for the first time, the zenanas were open to outside influences. She urged them to send Bible readers into these human prisons. Even as she spoke, there came to her as an inspiration, this question—Why not organize the women on the plan urged by Dr. Abeel, and make such organization independent of the denominations? The women who waited on her message caught her inspiration and responded to her call. The result was the organization of the Woman's Union Missionary Society.

It is aside from our purpose to rehearse the successes of this enterprise, further than to say that women from various denominations flocked to its standard. Branches were established in Boston and in Philadelphia; missionaries were sent to distant lands; mission homes were established in India, China and Japan. Around these homes clustered every form of mission work for women and girls—orphanages, boarding schools, and evangelistic teaching. Medical work was inaugurated and women physicians were sent to India and the Far East. A number of hospitals were erected; one in Calcutta and another in Shanghai, China. In the latter alone, eight hundred thousand patients have been treated.

When the church boards saw that further opposition was useless, that the women had discovered an outlet for their zeal, that they had found a field outside the denominations and were laboring therein, and contributing money to the Woman's Union Missionary Society's enterprises, they decided it would be the wiser plan to allow them to organize within the various denominations where they could be kept under the surveillance of the men's boards.

We use the term "men's boards" in preference to the usual designation, in order to avoid confusion. A multiplicity of titles, such as "Foreign Missionary Board, Foreign Missionary Society, Union Board, Executive Committee, Joint Committee, General Executive Board, ets.," make it difficult for the general reader to keep in touch with the situation.

The brethren should not take exception to the expression "men's board." Such boards are composed of men, and men only. They are elected or appointed by ecclesiastical bodies where no women are seated. This was true of the time of which we write, and with very few exceptions, is the case today. Furthermore the work of these boards in heathen lands, is, in the main, among men and boys. They have almost exclusive control of this line of service. The women's boards on the other hand, have charge of the work among women and girls.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church was a direct outgrowth of the "Woman's Union Missionary Society." For some time prominent women of our denomination had been actively identified with this organization. Mrs. Eliza Sands and Mrs. Martha Booth Claney had gathered money, and distributed the publications of this society from year to year. Reverend Dr. Collier, stationed at Connellsville, Pa., raised funds in his Sabbath school for the education of girls. Rev. C. H. Williams, corresponding secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, followed his example, and in time we had seventeen girls in the home of the Woman's Union Missionary Society at Yokohama, Japan.

In 1879 Miss L. M. Guthrie, a missionary in the employ of the Woman's Union Missionary Society, came to Pittsburgh. She had labored in the home at Yokohama, where she was brought into close touch with the girls the Sabbath schools of the Methodist Protestant Church were educating. She sought the acquaintance of the women of our denomination residing in Pittsburgh and its vincinity. A meeting was called. The result was the organization of the "Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church." It is needless to recite in detail a story so familiar to that portion of our readers who are interested in the question under discussion. The receipts of the new organization for the first year were only $318.16, but with faith in God, and zeal for the enterprise, the heroic women engaged Miss Guthrie to serve as their first missionary. The receipts for the second year were $1,380.16. Leading ministers of our denomination lent their encouragement to the undertaking, but others stood aloof. Reverend C. H. Williams, corresponding secretary of the Men's Board, was especially sympathetic and gave his approval. It was doubtless through his influence that an agreement was entered into by the two organizations. The men's board would pay Miss Guthrie's passage money, if the woman's society would be responsible for her salary.

The sudden demise of Miss Guthrie on reaching the Pacific Coast will be recalled by all who are familiar with the history of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. In their disappointment and grief the young society turned to Miss Brittan, a former colaborer with Miss Guthrie, and a missionary of the Woman's Union Missionary Board in Japan. Satisfactory arrangements were made, and in a few weeks Miss Brittan was on her way to her new field of labor. On her arrival she rented a building and opened a school. The record says: "She was very successful, and in a few weeks was obliged to rent a larger building." Later it was necessary to furnish her two assistants.

The General Conference of 1880 accepted the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, recognized it as one of the boards of the church and placed it on an independent basis. This was very unsatisfactory to the men's board, which desired it to be made an auxiliary. With the increase of receipts in the women's society, the dissatisfaction grew.

Up to this time there had been harmony between the two organizations, but during the third year, 1882, the storm broke. We quote from "The History of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society," pages 54 (1919):

"It was during the third year that a storm of protest arose because of the independent relation granted the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society by the General Conference in 1880. The Board of Missions desired to have the young society as its auxiliary, and to have all its funds paid into its treasury. To this the society would not agree. Difficulties multiplied when the society proposed to buy or build a home for the work in Japan. The question in dispute created a war of words for some time, even reaching the point where the Board of Missions suggested that it might be better for the woman's society to retire from Japan. The society intimated that they might take up independent work at some other point in Japan. It was some time before the misunderstanding was adjusted."

The history by Mrs. H. A. Miller (who was one of the early workers in the society and in close touch with the situation) records as follows:

"This, the third year of the society, had been one of great trial and perplexity to the office bearers. Considerable friction had arisen between the Board of Foreign Missions and the society. The independent relation given the society by the General Conference of 1880 was not well received by some of the brethren. . . It was the wish of the board that the society be simply an auxiliary to it, paying all moneys into that treasury and having no further responsibility as to its funds or administration. An offer from the board, proposing a union on this basis, had been presented to the executive committee of the society, but after most careful consideration was declined.

"Afterward, the Board of Missions, not having enough money to purchase the property selected by Miss Brittan, desired the society to make over to it the 'Brick Fund.' Decided opposition was expressed, and the society felt that as its own distinctive work among women and children was to be maintained, it must adhere to its original purpose, and for that reason it refused to yield to the offer for union, or to relinquish the independent position given by the General Conference. Its purpose was to have its own building, so that when the Board of Missions would commence evangelistic work, by sending out ordained ministers, the society could then take up all the work which was being done among women and children and carry on its work on its own specific lines.

"The difficulties which the society experienced at this time in its purpose to control its own funds, were somewhat similar to those of a sister denomination while attempting the same thing. 'Rivals! Rivals!' cried the parent board, 'We can not allow our field to be thus intruded upon. If they want to work, let them gather for our garner; no need of two barns for what can be put into one.'"

But this was not all. Two years later the men's board objected to the woman's board taking up work among the Eurasian children. These were neglected children of socalled Christian parents. According to the record, they were brought up in a condition far worse than the poor heathen around them; "the heathen are taught some form of religion, while these poor children are taught neither religion nor morality." The opposition of the men's board was such that Miss Brittan severed her connection with the Methodist Protestant Mission, and carried on the work independently. This cost the woman's board the loss of a valuable missionary, "after serving very successfully for five years, leaving a good record of work well done."

When the General Conference of 1884 convened, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society presented a petition. Among other things, it desired the right to control its own funds. It also asked that the society be given the right of "carrying on all internal arrangements of their departments in such a way as was deemed best by the society to secure success."

The General Conference accepted the petition, congratulated the women on their achievements, commended them for the business-like manner in which the work of their board had been transacted, etc., etc. At this point we quote from Mrs. E. C. Chandler, as given in her "History of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society," pages 63 and 64:

"The conference, in its consideration of the petition from the society, proceeded in a manner rather unusual; that gave evidence of lack of information on the part of many of its members, at the same time indicating well laid plans on the part of a few.

"The Committee on Foreign Missions, after considering the petition as presented by our society, accompanied their report to the General Conference with seven distinct recommendations, which were styled 'Rules for governing the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church,' but which were in reality a new Constitution. No time was allowed for discussion. The conference adopted the recommendations, acting under the impression that the foreign work would thus be best preserved and promoted."

Time and lack of space prevent our recording these seven rules in detail. We quote Mrs. Chandler's comment on the fourth, "and most vital:"

"The liberal Constitution under which the society had been working, would be taken from it, and it was to be placed under the Board of Missions, the society being simply an auxiliary of the board. All power was taken from it. Even the appointment of its missionaries, and their remuneration, and the designation of their fields of labor. All appropriations, and all official acts were to be presented to the Board of Missions before they could be legally carried out. Thus the "Independent Sovereignty," which for about four years had rested like a mighty incubus on the minds of certain conservative brethren, came to an untimely end."

When the woman's society became acquainted with this action of the General Conference, there was great disappointment. Two years later, at the annual meeting in Pittsburgh, we find the women discussing this question: "Is it wise, in consideration of our increasing expenses, to pay from our auxiliaries moneys into the treasury of the Board of Missions?"

When the General Conference of 1888 convened, the woman's board again presented a petition, asking for a restoration of its former independence. In a large measure the request was granted, but it wrote in the rules for the government of the society the following provision: "The society shall work in harmony with, and under the advisory supervision of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church."

We call attention to the fact that the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Home Missionary Society are the only boards in the church that have been placed under the supervision of other boards. All others are amenable only to the General Conference. Even the Board of Young People's Work, the latest born of our denomination, was not placed under guardianship. We ask, Why this discrimination? Are these women inefficient? Are they incompetent? Are they incapable of managing their own affairs? We are told that for every effect there is a cause, and we are wondering what is the cause of these two women's boards being placed under surveillance. Is it assumed that men are endowed with better judgment in such matters? Let us review the work and see where the women have blundered:

The Woman's Board purposed building a home for the work in Japan. The men's board opposed, to the extent of suggesting that the women retire from the field, although they had pioneered the work. The women carried out their plans and success crowned their efforts.

The woman's board decided to take up work among the Eurasian girls. The men said, No. The women went ahead, and results justified their decision.

The Women's Board resolved to open upon mission work in China. The men's board disapproved. October 5, 1909, the Reverend Charles S. Heininger sailed for China under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church, and today we have in China a mission plant of which the entire denomination is proud. During the controversy over taking up work in this field, the writer was pastor at Canton, Illinois. The annual conference that year was held in the church of which the writer was pastor. The executive secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions was in attendance and delivered an address. In the course of his remarks he expressed the board's disapproval of the enterprise, and added: "I have been asked to put my foot down on it." The thought in the writer's mind at that moment was—that would be a bad thing for your foot.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society felt called to build a Children's Home at High Point, North Carolina. The Men's Board of Home Missions shook its head, but the Woman's Society pursued the even tenor of its way, and today the Children's Home at High Point is valued at $250,000.

HOME MISSIONS—S. O. S. CALL

From whom does this call come!

From the Board of Home Missions which is making a heroic effort to have the greatest Easter celebration on April 17 in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church. Easter is less than three weeks off and what is to be done by the churches and Sunday Schools must be done quickly.

To whom is this urgent call sent?

To the many pastors and churches scattered over twenty-six states of this great country that have not sent to the Board of Home Missions for Programs and other material necessary to make an interesting and profitable service in all of our churches. Every song, recitation, in fact every part of the service bears on the Easter season and the triumph of our risen Lord over the grave and sin.

This call is to remind the pastors and churches to send their orders to the office of the Secretary of the Board of Home Missions without another hour's delay, otherwise the churches, and particularly the people, will be deprived of having a part in this great festival of the christian church. It should be our prayer that on Easter Sunday hundreds of young people, and others, who have postponed their acceptance of Jesus as their personal Savior should do so, and unite with the church, also present their offerings commensurate with their ability for the extension of our Lord's Kingdom.

It becomes both the duty and privilege for every church large and small, in the city, town and country, to make Easter a day of joy and triumph. If it is now so late that you can do nothing more, send for Decision Cards and Sacrificial Envelopes and use these in the Sunday Schools and churches.

J. M. Sheridan, Secretary.

Another Lesson From the Birds

inclined to give it. God is in the night. And when the time comes for our migration hence to a land unknown, through a misty darkness, He will not desert us. In the huge rainy night, in that cavernous and monstrous dark, the frailest abide secure. In that flight amid other spheres than ours, I believe we shall know what it means to be sustained by Everlasting Arms."

WHOSE HOUSE

My father came into our house soon after I was married and looked around. We showed him every room, and then in his rough way he said to me: "Yes, it is very nice; but nobody will know, walking through here, whether you belong to God or to the devil." I went through and looked at the rooms again, and I thought: "He is quite right." So we made up our minds straightway that there should be no room in our house, henceforth, that had not some message, by picture or wall text, to tell that we served the King.—Selected.

A DAY WITH THE GIRLS AT THE SCHOOL OF MANY FRIENDS, LINTSING, SHANTUNG, CHINA

ETHEL M. LONG

Ding! Dong! goes the rising bell at six-thirty, which means that Golden Fragrance is awake and at her job of bell-ringing. Some of the girls are earlier still and are busy in their rooms or are out in the yard studying their lessons—too often, alas! for the quiet of the neighborhood, they study aloud in the good old Chinese way, although in these days lessons are not supposed to be memorized.

Here comes Autumn Fragrance with her heavy quilts over her shoulder, going to the line to spread them out, for those in her room air their bedding today. Other girls are bringing hot water from the kitchen for washing face and hands; the two cooks have been up four hours getting the morning millet on, and they have water already heated. Six of the girls are out in the yard with big brooms, (made of a tall, stiff weed that grows in our school-yard), sweeping the ground around the dormitories and school building, while others are inside the school rooms mopping floors and dusting. Precious Orchid has a broom almost as large as herself, while Bright Virtue runs around with a cloth dusting off the seats around the big trees.

If we look into the bedrooms we see various "big sisters" combing the hair of room-mates who in their turn will do the same thing for others. This task is a time-consuming one, for the hair must be combed out very carefully and a string held in place behind while the hair is braided, and then a bit of yarn is wound around most carefully a dozen times or so, until there is about an inch and a half of bright color at the top and bottom of the braid. Finally the first breakfast bell rings calling the group whose turn it is to get the food onto the tables.

There are six long tables in the dining room for fifty or so girls, and a square one in the center for the four Chinese teachers. A pair of chopsticks is put at each place then a bowl of millet gruel and later a plate of steaming millet bread and a pail of extra gruel, along with saucers of salted vegetables—they get their salt by eating this salted vegetable along with the other food they eat. At the second bell the girls come trooping in scattering to their particular tables, They ask the blessing in song before sitting down. There are a few older girls at each table to look after the younger ones and they all stay at the table until the teacher in charge permits them to leave.

The Chinese as a rule do not talk much at table, but our girls are getting the habit and sometimes they can be heard at the foreign house next door where the unmarried women missionaries live, so very cheerful is their conversation! After the meal is over another group clears away the dishes, which doesn't take as long as in America. The bedrooms are put in order next and there is time for more study or play before the bell rings for prayers at half-past eight. From then on until 12:30 the girls are in school except for ten minutes in the middle of the morning. Their lessons are much the same as in America but of course everything is in Chinese, since ours is only a six-grade shcool and we have no English, so that the numbers in arithmetic and the maps and the staff for music are all that would look familiar to an American boy or girl who might happen into the class room.

The last period of the morning is hand-work, and that they like the best of all. Those who earn money by crocheting are busy with that work, while the others embroider, or do tatting, or make fancy things of paper, etc. Just now the older girls are making ends for their long round bed pillows, covering paste-board with white cloth, writing a character on it, and then filling the character with beads or embroidery. They are very skillful with their hands and enjoy nothing better than to be allowed to do hand-work.

Dinner comes at 12:30 and the menu is much like breakfast with the addition of vegetables and sweet potatoes in season. Cabbage is a great stand-by and egg-plant is much enjoyed in the fall. Bean sprouts are a treat and bean curd and bean strings are bought once in a while for a change. Twice a week they have meat or eggs put into the soup, and once a week thy buy bread made of white flour. Their diet is very simple: we wish they might have more, but the fourteen dollars they pay a semester for food seems like a good deal to them and with food so high we can't buy other things for that amount of money. The teachers have charge of the food money and make it go as far as they can.

School starts again at two in the afternoon and lasts until 4:30 when the pupils go out to the courts for games. In the fall term basket ball, volley-ball, tennis, and circle games are popular, while in the spring much time is spent on drills and folk dances and singing games. We are fortunate in having a large yard, the west part of which is given over to courts and play-ground apparatus, and these courts are a lively place from four o'clock on. The day school children of the first and second grades come over from their building near the church and one of our older girls, with the name that translates best "Bravery in Action," helps the teacher lead them in games; at the same time the women from the Bible Training School come over and exercise under the direction of Miss Murphy, our new evangelist. Then the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth grades come out and have a merry time, getting as much exercise for their lungs and throats usually as for their bodies. The swings, teeter boards and giant stride add much to the enjoyment of school life and much to the health of the children. After exercise come baths for eight or nine girls a day, in the little bath-room with primitive stone jars arranged along both sides of the room. The jars have holes bored to let the water out, and here are big kettles next door from which the hot water is poured into one of the tubs. While these girls are getting baths, "between the dark and the daylight," the other children are often in the yard playing games—kicking a shuttle-cock made of a cash with a piece of sheep-skin fastened to it, or throwing jack-stones made of pieces of broken water-jars rubbed smooth, or catching the balls. The older girls keep at their sewing—shoes or garments—or crocheting as long as possible and often beg the teacher to turn on the lights so they can work a bit longer before supper time. The teacher is wise and usually thinks it is better for them to play a while and not to be bending over work all the time. Electric lights in the dormitories are just new this semester and we are so glad for the friends who made it possible for us to have them. Our lights were always poor at best and it is like magic now to be able to turn them on and off at will.

Supper comes at six o'clock, and about the same food is served as at breakfast. Study period is from seven to eight, with a short service of worship at the end. Then the day closes, as it began, with the ringing of the bell by Golden Fragrance at eight-thirty. Then lights out and another day of work and play is ended bringing, we hope, the Kingdom a little nearer to us here in China.

—A very young reporter complains because we omitted parts of her report. We regret to have to do that, but sometimes we are compelled to leave out parts of some reports in order to find space for parts of other reports. Surely our young friend would not have us leave out all of somebody else's report in order that all of her report may go in, including the least important parts.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Liberty

Sunday morning, March 27th, dawned bright and beautiful, and at a reasonably early hour I was on my way to Liberty to serve as pastor for one day in the place of our young Brother F. L. Gibbs, who is taking the course in Westminster Theological Seminary in connection with his pastorate on Liberty and Siler City Charge. When I reached our church in Liberty the Sunday school was in session, and a very interesting Sunday school they have. Young Brother Reitzel is the superintendent, and he is doing his best to make his a progressive, front-line Sunday school. They have set for their goal 225 in Sunday school, and they are hoping to reach that number within the next month.

Both the morning the evening congregations were good, and it was a pleasure to preach to them. This church has already paid their A. C. B. and College Assessments in full for the year, and they give assurance that the G. C. B. will be paid in full. The people of Liberty as well as those of Siler City are very much in love with their young pastor, and are anxiously awaiting the first of May, when Brother Gibbs will be with them full time.

On Sunday afternoon I had the pleasure of meeting with the Workers' Council. In this meeting the reports from every department of the Sunday school were good. At 6:30 I met with the C. E. Society and participated in a splendid program. It was a full day, but a very pleasant day. The church is well organized, and the organizations are actively working in Kingdom service.

Mr. A. S. Pickett, who has been very ill, is much better and gives promise of being up again now soon.

Mrs. George F. Millaway is at this time in the Wesley Long Hospital here in Greensboro, and is very sick. I have not heard from her this morning, but was in to see her for just a few moments Saturday afternoon. She seemed to be suffering very much. Her many friends, and the many friends of her devoted husband, Rev. George F. Millaway, will earnestly pray for her speedy recovery.

The Budget Reports

Some very good reports on the budgets are in hand this morning, but we will not undertake to publish them this week. Mrs. Dixon very kindly works out those reports for me each week and gets them ready for publication, and just at this time she is in the High Point Hospital for a few days' treatment. We trust that by the time this reaches our readers she will be back home and getting along all right. If nothing prevents, we will run the budget reports next week.

The High Point College

Please Note—The High Point College is putting on a Business Course this Fall, so if any of our young people are contemplating taking a business course they will do well to get it at High Point College.

Also, please note the College is in need of the amount of College Assessment laid by the Annual Conference on each charge. This amount in each case is small, and it is to help meet this year's expenses at the College, so please send this amount from your charge to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C., as early as possible. Several charges have already done this; let the others respond soon, please.

The College is doing fine work. Let us show our appreciation by standing back of it in every way.

Last week we reported that our High Point boys had won the debate over both Guilford College and Lenoir-Rhyne College. Following that it gives us pleasure to report that last Friday night in Raleigh, Keith Harrison, representing the High Point College, won the first annual state oratorical contest of the North Carolina Inter-Collegiate Forensic Association. Keith Harrison contested against a representative from Wake Forest, one from Elon and one from State and was "easily the winner."

That Easter Service

Are you getting ready for that Easter Service? Easter marks one of the most important events in the history of the development of the Christian Church. It should be appropriately celebrated by each church and Sunday school. Our General Conference asks all of our churches to observe it with appropriate services, and an offering for Home Missions. It is now perhaps too late to order the programs and get ready for the regular program; but it is not too late for each church and Sunday school to plan to make a worthy offering for Home Missions. And it is not too late for each church and Sunday school to plan for a Decision Day service on or near Easter Sunday.

Institute For Daily Vacation Bible Workers

Lawrence Little, general secretary of the Board of Young People's Work, and Mrs. H. W. Maier, superintendent of Children's Work of the same Board, are announcing a very important Institute to be held in our First Church, High Point, April 4 to 6. This Institute is for the benefit of our workers who have been wanting to get first hand information on how to conduct a Daily Vacation Bible School. You will do well to have representatives at this Institute.

Sparkles From the Field

Roberta—"To date we have had 61 professions and reclamations in our revival services."

Burlington, First—"Four hundred and ninety present in Sunday school last Sunday, and late-comers ran the number up to at least 500. Our recent effort to enlist tithers has resulted in the enrollment of 31. We hope to enroll others yet."

Fountain Place—"Our Sunday school is growing. Every Sunday we are adding new members to our roll. The C. E. Society is doing fine work."

Mount Hermon—"Mount Hermon members are on the road to church improvement. Funds are being solicited for the erection of Sunday school rooms and to paint the entire structure."

Spencer—"Pray for us that we may soon have a building of our own to worship in. The little chapel will not hold our congregation much longer if we continue to grow as we have for the last few weeks."

Why Not—"Our pastor conducts a service each Friday night for the benefit of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school and others who may wish to attend."

Albemarle—"We have decided to discontinue our plans to improve the old church building, and save all our money to build a new church as soon as plans can be arranged. We have a beautiful location for a church, where the parsonage now stands, and a beautiful brick church on this lot is our aim."

Yarboroughs—"A nice Ford coupe for the pastor and his family, the gift of the people of the charge."

Appointments

It is rather a disappointment to me that I cannot get appointments made a little farther in advance; but, after all, it need not make a great deal of difference since pastors always know in good time when I am to visit their charges.

Sunday, April 3rd, Guilford Circuit.

Faithfully yours in His service, A. G. Dixon.

OUR STORY PAGE

IF YOU PLEASE

"No," said Mother Watson, firmly. "Becky shall go and nobody else."

"Why? Why? Why?" demanded three disappointed voices.

"I hate to tell you," replied Mother Watson, "but since you insist—it's because Becky is the only one among you who has any manners."

"That's right!" sighed John, the oldest boy. "Becky is the politest one."

"But I could be polite if I wanted to," said Bob, the youngest.

"So could I," put in big sister Bert.

"Well, you aren't and you don't," replied their mother. "Becky has naturally a polite disposition. She'll be a credit to the family, so I'm going to let her go."

There was nothing more to be said. Aunt Paula had offered to take one of the children down to Florida with her for the winter. There would be swimming in the ocean every day, and flowers instead of snow and sleet! Besides Aunt Paula was a very delightful person, who liked children better than grown-ups.

Becky was the smiling one during the days of bustle and excitement that followed. She had to have thin clothes to wear. She was going to school in Florida, so she stopped going to the old home school, and that was like having another vacation. The others noticed that she got more and more polite. In fact, she said, "Excuse me" so much that they began calling her "The Elephant's Child," after the Elephant in the story book.

It was just too wonderful for anything when at last the little girl found herself in Florida. And the ocean was real warm.

"Why, last summer in Massachusetts, the water was so cold it made our legs ache when we went in for our swim!" she told her Aunt. "I like this warm water. I must write and tell Bert about it and 'splain about the Gulf Stream and all that."

"Did you learn to swim last summer?" inquired a kindly gentleman from their hotel, who was standing in the water nearby.

"Oh, yes, a little. I can paddle about three strokes at a time, but I like to keep one toe on the bottom, because—well, you know, it sort of makes you feel safer," answered Becky.

"It would," agreed the gentleman, winking at Aunt Paula. "How would you like to try this life-belt? Then you'll feel safe without keeping one toe on the bottom."

Becky thought it would be great fun and thanked the gentleman very prettily when he put the life-belt on her.

"Now you can go out as far as you like, for you can't sink," said the gentleman.

Becky thought he seemed anxious to have her try out the life-belt, or was it that he wanted to speak to Aunt Paula without anybody hearing what he said? Becky thought it would be polite to wade away, so she said, "Thank you. Excuse me. If you please." And began to wade out.

The gentleman turned and began to talk to Aunt Paula who seemed pleased. In fact, she soon found out that the gentleman had been a college friend of Becky's father and knew a lot of people Aunt Paula knew. They were so interested in what they were saying, that they hardly notice a small voice cry: "Please!"

In fact, sad to say, Becky would have drowned then and there if some of the swimmers had not gone to her. What happened was this. Becky was only ten and very slim, as ten-year-old girls really should be. As she walked out with the life-belt, it began slipping down, until it circled her hips instead of being right under her arms. Suddenly a big wave came swelling along. It was a gentle wave, but it was big. It lifted Becky right up, and the first thing she knew, her head was going down and her feet were going up. You see, her head and upper part of her body were so much heavier than her legs, and the life-belt had slipped down so far, that instead of floating head-up, she was feet-up. Just as her head was going down, she managed to cry: "Please help me!" but the "please" was the only word heard, for by the time she had reached "help me" her head was under water.

She held her breath and saw the green water swirling around. She was sure Aunt Paula would be grabbing her in half a second.

"I mustn't forget to thank her," thought Becky.

Just in time, as the poor little girl got ready to take a breath anyhow even if she'd be breathing in the sea, somebody grasped her feet and in a moment she was right-side-up.

"Sputter! Sputter!" went Becky. "Th-th-thank you!"

"The poor child's almost drowned!" cried an indignant voice. "It's a wonder her mother wouldn't take better care of her."

"Where's this little one's mother!" called someone else, and Beck felt herself being towed along towards shore.

"Oh!" it was Aunt Paula seeing her little charge for the first time. "How careless of me! Oh, dear! Suppose she had drowned! Oh, dear!" And Aunt Paula began to cry real hard.

"It was all my fault, fool that I am!" exclaimed Aunt Paula's friend.

"Excuse me," said Becky. "Don't cry. I'm perfectly all right, thank you. Please, don't cry, Aunt Paula."

"But why didn't you call for help, child?" demanded the gentleman.

"I did," said Becky, "if you please, didn't you hear me call? Oh, excuse me, I didn't mean to contradict you!"

"I heard somebody say 'please,'" said Aunt Paula. "I might have known it was you, Becky."

Everybody was standing close around Becky saying:

"Poor little thing!"

"Wonder she isn't dead and washed out to sea!"

"She had a narrow squeak, I want you to know!"

"If I hadn't happened to have looked up—"

"Me too. Something made me look up. It must have been her Guardian Angel."

"And the first thing she said was 'thank you.'

"Don't forget to thank the Lord, little girl."

Aunt Paula took her away at last, and Becky looked very thoughtful. Finally she said:

"Aunt Paula, I've decided not to be quite so polite. I want to be a credit to the family, but when I was drowning I was too polite, wasn't I?"

"You should have yelled 'Help' at the top of your lungs," replied Aunt Paula.

"Well, it was a lesson to me," sighed Becky.

"There's a happy medium in everything," snuffed Aunt Paula, blinking back more tears.

"Pl-I mean, don't cry, Aunt Paula!" said Becky. "I promise I won't be so polite any more!"—Selected.

OUR SUFFICIENT GUIDE

Be content to wade through the waters betwixt you and glory with Him, holding His hand fast, for He knoweth all the fords. Howbeit ye may be ducked, but ye cannot drown, being in His company; and ye may all the way to glory see the way bedewed with His blood who is the Forerunner.—Rutherford.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Harrison

Nathaniel Mason Harrison was born in Nash County, near Ringwood, N. C., February 28, 1854, coming to Brinkleyville when a young man. He lived and did a business here for nearly 50 years.

When a young man he professed faith in Christ, and united with the Methodist Protestant Church at Bethesda Church on Halifax Circuit, where he lived a faithful, consistent Christian life, and faithfully served in his church until God called him from a life of active service for his Master to the mansion he had prepared for him beyond the skies.

Mr. Harrison had held important offices in his church for many years and at the time of his death he was secretary of his quarterly conference and superintendent of the Sunday school and steward and treasurer of his church, and has served faithfully in all of these offices.

He has been secretary of his quarterly conference for a number of years and a business man, he was never too busy to attend to the business of his church. With him his Heavenly Father's business came first.

As Sunday school superintendent I have never seen one so faithful; he didn't let anything keep him away from his Sunday school. It didn't make any difference about the weather, you could depend on him; he often attended his Sunday school when he was not able to be there. I don't think he had missed a Sunday since I have been on the work until he was taken seriously ill, and after he went to the hospital he often spoke of his Sunday school and dictated a letter to his clerk and told him where he would find the Sunday school literature, and to give the Sunday school his best regards and to tell them that if he could not be with them in person he would in spirit.

As steward and treasurer of his church he was no less faithful. He loved his church and pastor, and was continually looking after his needs. He often spoke of the different pastors that have served this charge and I have never heard him criticise any of them, but he loved them all. I don't think there is a layman in our church anywhere that will be missed more by his church than the deceased will be missed by his church, and not only his church, but other churches as well as the entire community will feel our great loss.

Mr. Harrison was loved and respected by everybody who knew him, and by the colored people as well as the white people; a number of the colored people lined up and marched in to view the remains at the residence, and at the grave they stool in a group nearby with bowed heads and tears coursing down the cheeks of some of them, for they, too, realized they had lost a good friend.

The deceased departed this life in the Sanitorium at Rocky Mount on Saturday night, March 5th, 1927. The funeral services were conducted in Bethesda church, Brinkleyville, N. C., Monday afternoon, March 7th. The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington, and Rev. R. C. Stubbins, of Enfield, after which he was laid to rest with Masonic honors by Royal Arch Lodge No. 497, of which he was a member. This service was attended by the largest crowd we have even seen in the rural district.

His nephews acted as pallbearers, and his body now rests in a beautiful plot selected by himself in the cemetery near the church, beneath a mound of beautiful flowers.

He was first married to Miss Ellen Norman, of Brinkleyville, in 1879; one child, Mrs. W. G. Holliday, of Enfield, N. C., survives this union. He was married again in 1885 to Miss Kate Allen, of Littleton, N. C. His widow and the following children survive: Mrs. E. R. Nelson, Henderson, N. C.; John H. Harrison, Wilson, N. C.; Mrs. Horace Mitchell, Haynes City, Fla.; Mrs. Thomas Hunter, Wilmington, N. C.; Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., of Greensboro, N. C.; Misses Ethel and Helen Harrison, of Brinkleyville, N. C., and one brother, Dr. J. M. Harrison, of Littleton, N. C. He left the testimony that he was ready to go, so let us all prepare to meet him in the mansions above.

His pastor,
C. L. SPENCER.

White

Walter Ray White, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. White, was born on December 15, 1899, and departed this life on March 5, 1927. He professed a hope in Christ and joined Union Grove Methodist Protestant church early in life, and remained faithful until death. In December, 1925, he was united in marriage with Miss Nina Jurney, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Jurney. He is survived by his wife, parents, six brothers and one sister.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. D. Hardy, of High Point College, a former pastor and teacher of the deceased, Rev. Grady White, of Olin, and the writer.

Walter was a young man of exceptionally good character and was loved by all who knew him. I have known his from boyhood, studied with him in the school-room, played with him on the playground and associated with him as a boy friend, and I always found him to be four-square. He will be missed in the home, church and entire community, yet he has left behind him a life-monument that will be to each of us a challenge to a life of consecration and service for the Master.

Bivins

Mrs. John A. Bivins died March 11, 1927. Funeral services at Efland church Sunday afternoon, March 13, conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. D. R. Williams and Edward Suits.

Sister Bivins lived to the age of about 74 years. She joined the Baptist church several years ago. Four years ago she transferred her membership to Efland M. P. church, where she remained a consistent member until death.

The large congregations for the funeral services showed the esteem in which her memory is held.

She leaves five sons: O. E., C. A., G. G., Hubert, and Edgar, and a number of grandchildren to mourn their loss.

May God comfort all the bereaved ones.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Harrison

Whereas the hand of Death has appeared in our midst and taken away our loved and honored brother and Sunday school superintendent, Nathanael Mason Harrison, therefore be it resolved:

First, That our Sunday school has lost a most earnest and faithful leader, whose loyalty and devotion were an inspiration and whose noble example will help us who remain to be more faithful to the task he has left; so that "being dead he yet speaketh;"

Second, That this, Bethesda church suffers the loss of a most consecrated and loyal member and an efficient and faithful official, who was ever ready to take an active part in the work of his church, to contribute liberally, in his modest and unassuming way, of his time and means towards any enterprise pertaining to its interests, and who never allowed the strenuous demands of his business to interfere with his church duties;

Third, That the community at large has lost a kind and helpful friend, one who was quick to lend a helping hand to those in need, in sorrow or misfortune, and great is the number of those who have known kindness or material aid at his hands;

Fourth, That while we feel keenly our great loss, and while we extend our sympathy to the sorrowing family, we are confident that he has entered into that realm where his treasures were laid up "where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt nor thieves break through and steal;"

Fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Methodist Protestant, a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald, a copy spread upon our Sunday records and one sent to the bereaved family.

MRS. L. B. STREET,
MRS. C. L. SPENCER,
MRS. E. A. PERRY,
Committee from the Sunday school.

Teague

John Bell Teague, son of I. B. and Esta Roberts Teague, was born in Davidson county July 15, 1860, and died at his home, High Point, Route 4, March 9, 1927, aged 66 years, seven months and 24 days. In 1887 he was married to Amanda Cecil. To this union 11 children were born, seven now living, while four died in childhood. The living children are: Ivey A., J. C., who lives in Warrenburg, Mo., R. F., W. W., J. T., S. C., and one daughter, Mrs. Bessie Johnson, who lives near the old home. He also leaves nine grandchildren and many friends and a companion who mourn his departure. He has a twin brother, Mr. E. E. Teague, of Thomasville; also one brother who lives in High Point, and a sister, Mrs. Henry Wright.

Our deceased brother was confined to his bed since last July. He had two operations in a High Point hospital, but died in his home where he had lived for the last 40 years. He was an employee of the Snow Lumber Company for 30 years.

Brother Teague was a highly respected citizen, loved by his neighbors and those who knew him. He was a kind father, but never made any profession of religion until a short while before his death. In his last moments he said he was happy, ready and willing to go.

The funeral was conducted at Pleasant Grove Church by the pastor, assisted by Rev.

E. Suits and Rev. J. H. Motion, both former pastors of the church.

The deceased was the father of our efficient Sunday school superintendent, Brother I. A. Teague, and to him we extend the hand of sympathy. It was he who was praying by the side of his father in the lonely hours of the night, when God saved him. We also extend our sympathies to his dear wife, who administered so tenderly to her husband through all his sickness. May the God of peace comfort all who mourn.

GEORGE L. REYNOLDS.

Martin

On January 10, 1927, Mrs. Ella Martin, widow of the late W. M. Martin, passed to her reward. Mrs. Martin was born February 23, 1851, being at the time of her death 76 years old. She was the mother of seven children, four daughters and three sons, one son and one daughter having preceded her to the grave.

Mrs. Martin was a life-long member of the Methodist Protestant Church, having joined the Hawkins Chapel church early in life, and transferring her membership to the Henderson church in 1915, when the family moved here. The writer had known her only a little more than a year. She was one of the first members visited by him after moving to Henderson, hearing that she was in feeble health and was not able to attend the services. She was most cordial in her reception of the "new pastor" and showed from the very beginning that she was vitally interested in the church and the welfare of its pastor and members. She was indeed a "mother in Israel" and will be greatly missed by all who knew her and had learned to love and respect her.

The funeral services were held in the Henderson church, attended by a large number of friends and acquaintances. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.

Her physical life here is ended, but her influence for good will live on while her sweet, unselfish spirit rejoices with the angels of God.

R. A. HUNTER.

Ledbetter

Many of our people will be interested I think to know something of the passing of Brother Ledbetter, who for several years served in the N. C. conference of our church, but who for the past few years has been preaching in the Christian conference. When he passed on to his Eternal Home on March 9, 1927, at the age of 59 years and 21 days, he was doing Mission work in the Mountains of Virginia. He was both teaching school, and preaching at two places a few miles a part. He had rung the bell, and opened a window when he had a stroke of paralysis. He had not been sick. After the stroke came he was leaning against the window. Being unable to speak he beckoned a neighbor with his hand. His friend came to him immediately, for he was just across the road from Brother Ledbetter. His friend called another neighbor, and they summoned a doctor from Hillsville, a few miles away. But Brother Ledbetter was not able to speak anymore, so his friends could understand. So, stricken about 9 o'clock, he passed away about one o'clock p.m.

On March 11 his body was laid to rest in Shiloh M. P. church cemetery, Randolph charge. Dr. Atkinson, of Elon college, Dr. C. H. Rowland, of Greensboro, and Rev. Mr. Witten, of Reidsville, all of the Christian church, and Dr. T. M. Johnson, Revs. G. F. Millaway, T. F. McCulloch, J. F. Dosier, W. H. Neese, and the writer of the M. P. church, attended the funeral.

Brother Ledbetter leaves his mother who is now in her one hundredth year. He also leaves one brother who lives at Greensboro, and one sister, Mrs. A. M. Hemphill of Julian, N. C., with whom her mother lives. These in addition to Brother Ledbetter's wife and children have our deep sympathy.

How near we are to death! But how beautiful to go while faithfully doing our work!

A. O. LINDLEY.

Williams

John Tyson Williams was born in Union Township Randolph county, N. C., October 8, 1847. He was the son of Ned and Martha Williams. He passed away quietly sitting in a rocking chair at his oldest son Russell's, where he had made his home for some time Saturday morning, March 12, 1927. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Vuncanon December 26, 1871; to this union were born 12 children, five of whom preceded him to the life beyond. Brother Williams was a member of New Hope Methodist Protestant church. He was a consecrated Christian man. He was a charter member of the church named above.

He was also a charter member of Welch Memorial Methodist Protestant church, High Point, N. C., while living there. To show their appreciation of Brother Williams' aid in getting the church started, the church sent a beautiful wreath of flowers for the grave as a token of their esteem and love for him. The value of Brother Williams to his church and community was shown in a measure by the large number of people attending the funeral and the many floral tributes from his church and friends. The funeral service was conducted by his pastor in Pisgah M. E. church at 2:30 o'clock p.m., Sunday, March 12, after which his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

He leaves to mourn their loss a companion, two sisters, one brother, three daughters and four sons and fifteen grand-children and a host of friends. May his relatives and friends be sustained by the Spirit of Him who doeth all things well.

D. I. GARNER.

Armfield

Mrs. Emily Hassill Armfield was born in Guilford county, N. C., October 29, 1836, and departed this life February 24, 1927. She was married June 8, 1861, to Albert Armfield. To this union were born five children, two of whom preceded her to the spirit land. She was left a widow fifty-two years ago; her husband died at the age of 33 years.

She is survived by three children, Mrs. E. F. White, Mrs. A. V. Ward, and Mr. A. F. Armfield, all of Greensboro. She leaves twenty-four grand children, thirty-four great-grand children and a host of friends who mourn the loss of a true and faithful friend.

She professed faith in Jesus Christ when she was eighteen years of age and united with Hickory Grove M. P. church where she was an active and faithful member till four years ago she transferred her membership to West End M. P. church, Greensboro, of which she was an honored member till God called her to her Heavenly home.

J. D. WILLIAMS.

TRIBUTE OF LOVE AND RESPECT

The members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church of Asheboro have been called upon to bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father in the removal of one of our best beloved members, Mrs. R. R. Ross, who for many years was president of the organization and a charter member. We therefore offer this tribute of love and respect:

Resolved, That we as individual members of this society ever remember the beautiful, unselfish and self-sacrificing character, the kind and gentle manner of Mrs. Ross and that we thank God for the privilege of knowing and working with her.

That we express our gratitude to the Giver of all for her exemplary life, her loyalty and faithfulness to her church and her Christ.

That we may ever remember her faithful service and that her life, her example and her influence may be an inspiration to our society.

In the passing of Mrs. Ross her loved ones and friends have suffered an irreparable loss, the Church and Missionary Society have lost a devoted and consecrated worker who was ever ready and willing to do cheerfully her part toward furthering God's Kingdom.

May the memory of her consistent Christian character incite us to better, nobler lives, and may we when the last call comes hear the words which so aptly fit the life of our deceased member, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Resolved, that we express our sympathy to her husband, to her daughter, our efficient treasurer, and the other members of the family, and commend them to the comfort of the Heavenly Father, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the Missionary Record, the Methodist Protestant Herold, the local papers, and recorded in the minutes of the Missionary Society.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. W. C. HAMMER,
MRS. JOHN SWAIM,
MRS. EUNICE HAYWORTH.

Stewardship Cards

Please have the stewardship cards signed and send to me as soon as possible. Our Branch wants to make a good report to the Board this year.

Make your reports on Stewardship and Tithing to me as well as to the corresponding secretary. We must stress tithing and intercessory prayer more in our Auxiliaries. The Missionary Record always has excellent material, so that no auxiliary need lack literature on the subject.

This call is to both Home and Foreign societies. I have more cards if you need them. Please do your best.

DR. HARRIS GLASCOCK,
Sec'y for both Home and Foreign Societies

—J. Harris Heath whose illness we reported was buried at Tabernacle last Saturday. He was in his 75th year. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn assisted by Dr. T. M. Johnson. Brief talks were made by Rev. W. F. Kennett, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Rev. T. F. McCulloch and the editor of the Herald. Brother Heath leaves his wife and one daughter. His departure leaves for them a great vacancy.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Siler City.—The Wednesday evening paryer service was conducted by Mr. L. L. Weaver.

Subject: The Needs of Our Church. Talks were made on the subject by members of the church and members of the neighboring churches. Many good suggestions were mentioned. A meeting of this kind was a help to everyone present.

Ninety-six were present at Sunday school Sunday morning.

Little's Cross and Crown system has been started in the Sunday school for perfect attendance. We hope that this may help to increase the Sunday school, and also the work of the Sunday school.

We were glad to have our pastor, Rev F. L. Gibbs, of Theological Seminary, Maryland, to preach for us Sunday morning.

His topic: "The way of the cross, the path that leads to God." This is one of a series of sermons on paths that lead to God. We were favored with some violin music by Miss Moore, Miss Congleton, accompanied by Miss Pace at the piano.

Miss Mary Ellis sang beautifully, "He Loves Even Me."

Preparations are being made toward the Easter exercises. REPORTER.

Burlington.—Sunday, March 20th, at First M. P. church was the Banner Day. The morning service was in charge of the Baraca class, it being Baraca Day. Prof. T. C. Amick, one of the former teachers, taught the class and his teaching was very much enjoyed. We also had with us the orchestra from our High Point College. For the Sunday school and eleven o'clock hour they gave us some very fine music. They were given a rising vote of thanks by the church and we want them to visit us again. We also had with us Prof. Johnson, a member of our High Point College faculty, who preached for us at the eleven o'clock hour one of the best sermons it has been our privilege to hear. He drove home the fact it takes manhood and womanhood to be a Christian. We want to hear Prof. Johnson again.

The Baraca class had 165 present Sunday morning, the greatest number present we have ever had at any time and the other classes of the church had a good attendance too. The auditorium was used Sunday by the Baraca class because their class room would not seat those present. For the eleven o'clock hour the auditorium and the Baraca class room was full. This church needs a larger building. We have a large Sunday school and we can't do the best work with the building we have. Visitors are always welcome.

South Lexington.—There were 210 in Sunday school last Sunday. The men's class made a good record, having 48 present, four of whom were new members and two were visitors. Brother C. L. Hedrick, the able teacher of the class, is attracting new members and holding the old members remarkably well.

The morning church service last Sunday was well attended, the congregation being slightly larger than usual. Pastor Ridge delivered a helpful message on the subject of the feast of the passover as it was observed by Christ and the twelve disciples. Following the sermon the Lord's Supper was observed, the writer assisting the pastor in serving the elements to a large number who participated in the ordinance.

A large congregation was present at the night service and Pastor Ridge delivered a forceful sermon on consecration. He gave an invitation at the close of the sermon to the church for a consecration in preparation for the revival services to start next Sunday night. The church people responded to the invitation. Four persons requested prayer.

Two deaths have occurred in the community of South Lexington church since our last report, one of whom was a member of the church and the other the mother of our Sunday school superintendent. Brother C. B. Yates died on Monday, March 14, after a lingering illness. Funeral services were held on the following Wednesday in the church at two o'clock in the afternoon, conducted by Pastor Ridge, who was assisted in the service by Rev. D. A. Braswell, of Concord; Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor of State Street church, and the writer. Brother Yates was president of the men's class of the Sunday school. He was at one time superintendent of the Sunday school here. Ten children survive, besides his mother, one brother and one sister. They have the sympathy of the church and Sunday school.

On Friday afternoon, March 18, funeral services were held at Beulah Reformed church near here for Mrs. Henry Koonts, mother of Brother H. C. Koonts, superintendent of South Lexington Sunday school. Pastor Ridge and Rev. W. R. Shelton, pastor of the First M. E. church here, conducted the services. Mrs. Koonts was about 81 years of age, and was apparently in good health until about two weeks before her death. The relatives of this good woman have the sincere sympathy of the church and Sunday school.

The second quarterly conference for the South Lexington charge will be held at Mt. Carmel church Saturday afternoon of this week at 2 o'clock. Brother Ridge, the pastor, will conduct the conference. A full attendance of the official members of both churches is desired at the conference. Nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference will be named.

Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, pastor of Flat Rock charge, has been secured to assist in the revival meeting which begins next Sunday night. He is expected to arrive Monday and preach his initial sermon Monday night. Rev. N. G. Bethea, pastor of State Street church, has agreed to be present all the time he possibly can during the meeting and direct the singing for the services. He will be out of town the first half of the first week of the meeting, but is expected during the remainder of the meeting.

Mrs. M. B. Deaton, a member of the Sunday school, who has a patient in the Davidson Hospital here, has recovered sufficiently to return to her home. She underwent a successful operation.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Asheville.—Following the sermon yesterday morning we had a congregational meeting for the purpose of instructing the Trustees to proceed with our building project. Only three votes were cast against it. We have already found a desirable loan. The Trustees will meet this week to perfect the arrangements. We expect within the next three weeks to be actually at work on the enlargement. The loan of $7,500 will be a great burden upon our people here, but they realize the absolute necessity of going ahead. We are doing so by faith. We shall be glad of any help that the friends of our enterprise here may feel like giving. I have given eight of the best years of my life to the church here, because it has seemed to me there is no more important field, although there are many larger, in the entire denomination. If those of you who read this feel that it is important, you will want to help us.

Last night the young ladies of the Christian Endeavor Society gave the missionary play "Two Masters." It was splendidly done, and those who saw it are loud in praise. The offering was given to the Society to be applied to their pledge on the Conference Budgets.

Last Sunday night Brother E. C. Fawcett gave a talk on his impressions of the Layman's Evangelistic Meeting to which he went as a representative of our church. The address was helpful, and we believe much good will come from it.

The Foreign Society has raised almost enough to make Mrs. Greenwood a perpetual member. The balance will be in hand before the close of the Branch year. Relatives of Mrs. Greenwood, who are not members of our church, are planning to make her a perpetual member of the Home Society. So this good woman, whose presence is so greatly missed among us, will go on contributing to the finances of our Missionary Societies forever.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Second M. P. Church, Charlotte.—We are glad to say we are going to move our little church. We feel like we have found the place where the Second M. P. church should go up in Charlotte; we shall not be much further than four or five blocks from where we are, but we will be on a hard surface road with all improvements paid for. That will mean a great help to the cause. Our lot will cost as much again as the other lot; yes, more than that, but the location will make up for that.

We are planning to have our Easter program and an egg hunt too.

Our Ladies' Aid have paid $15.00 on the flooring and paid $12.25 on pastor's salary and $12.75 for Literature and still have some in the treasury, for the last three months, and they are still working.

We are planning to run a ten or fifteen days meeting just as soon as we get our little church moved.

Friends and readers of the Herald, please pray for our meeting and our little church.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville.—The four churches of Gibsonville are planning for a series of pre-Easter union services during Holy week. The purpose is that people and pastors may more fully appreciate the great events and facts leading up to the crucifixion.

The fine community spirit is further manifest by the fact that the same four churches—all there are in Gibsonville—are planning to hold a community Daily Vacation Bible School probably the last of May or first of June.

Our Woman's Home Missionary Society has its full budget for the year and is enjoying a brief breathing spell before the Branch meeting. The pastor and some others are very desirous that we may have representatives in that meeting.

The Sunday school institute for Rock Creek township will be held in our church on the afternoon and evening of April the 10. There will be an exchange of workers at the Sunday school hour of the forenoon of the same date.

Perhaps the most pleasing, and useful, and inspiring event in our church life for some months was the visit Sunday evening, the 27th of March, by a group of young people from High Point College under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. The exercise by these High Point College Endeavorers took the place of both our C. E. meetings and the preaching service.

Our local Christian Endeavor Society is taking up to us a new line of activity by holding prayer and song service in the homes of people not able to attend church. This is already bringing spiritual cheer to the homes and joy into the lives of our young people.

Following Stewardship month our Sunday school superintendent has brought to the school sort of echoes of the great teaching of Stewardship by telling of something he has seen or read on the subject or by reading to us a clipping on the subject.

T. M. JOHNSON.

Shiloh, North Davidson Circuit.—The Christian Endeavor Society met at the new home of Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Troxler last Friday night. We were glad of having the privilege of meeting with our beloved pastor. He has a nice home.

It's a great help to us all to have Mr. Troxler in our Society. He is always willing and ready to help us in any way he can. May God continue to bestow upon him and his family both spiritual and temporal blessings.

We had a good number present Friday night. Christ says, "Where two or three are gathered together in his name He will be with them." It's a fine thought to know that Jesus will meet with us if we are in the right. May we shun the evils of this world, and look unto God for higher and nobler things.

Now spring is coming every thing is putting forth new life. The roads are getting good. So may we as Christian Endeavorers put on new life and work more in the Master's vineyard this year than we ever have before. May we all continue to pray that our society and church will grow both in number and spirit.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—We are glad to report a gradual increase in attendance in Sunday school, a few new members, and fairly good collections. Our superintendent has suggested that each one make a special effort to give a larger offering for a few Sundays in order that our financial affairs may be placed on a more substantial basis. This means for both Sunday school and church.

Easter literature has been ordered. A commitee will be appointed on next Sunday to arrange the program.

We wish to commend the Christian Endeavor society for the continued good work they are doing. Meetings are held each Sunday evening at 6:30. Executive meeting held once a month. It is gratifying to note that out of the forty-five members of this society forty are members of the church. Let us pray that the other five may soon unite with the church, and these young people may so consecrate themselves to the Master in His work that their influence may reach out over broader fields of usefulness until large numbers now in the darkness of sin may be made to see the Truth, the Light, and the Way.

The W. F. M. S. and the Home Missionary Society have their meetings jointly. The societies met March 11th with Mrs. C. M. Brown. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Mrs. Percy Payne, president both societies; Mrs. G. W. Brackett, vice-president (Foreign); Mrs. J. W. Thacker, secretary; Mrs. E. J. Payne, treasurer; Mrs. G. C. Brinson, vice-president (Home); Mrs. W. M. Crouch, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. C. M. Brown, Record Agent.

The April meeting will be held with Mrs. J. W. Montgomery on April 6th at 2:30 p.m. A Home Mission program is being prepared.

Miss Loula E. Thacker and Mrs. M. L. Bailey were elected delegates to the branch meeting in Henderson in April. No alternates elected, although Mesdames Payne, Thacker, and Crouch are expected to attend by virtue of office.

The congregation was delighted at the morning service, Sunday, with a pleasing solo by Miss Avanell Hubbard, of Los Angeles, California, who is visiting relatives in this section. Miss Hubbard has a wonderfully sweet voice. We hope she will sing as often as she can during her stay here.

Miss Lelia Hedgecock is home again after an extended visit in Los Angeles, California, among relatives.

REPORTER.

Flat Rock, Vance Charge.—We are wide awake and busy as the spring bee. Our Sunday school is doing fine; our regular attendance stands between seventy and eighty. We also have a good prayer meeting every Sunday night with good attendance. Our pastor, M. P. Chambliss, has helped to put our prayer meeting in budget form now. We have our programs planned for three months ahead; in that way each one that is to take a part has the opportunity of studying his or her part weeks ahead. We had our first meeting on this plan last night and it proved very successful. Our pastor is fine; he puts interest in everything he undertakes. He is giving us tests on the New Testament now. I must tell you about it, for this is the most interesting idea he has given us yet. He types off 20 questions, hangs them in our church and we recopy these questions, take them home and look up the answers; write down both questions and answers, also references, and hand them back to him at the end of two weeks. He takes them home and grades them just like a school teacher grades test papers only he uses red ink to mark our mistakes. We get them back corrected with the average written on the outside of the envelope. We are going to take up collection in near future to help pay for red ink, for it's surely red-letter-day for us when we get our test papers back. We don't know for sure what the P in his name stands for, but we are guessing it to be Paul, for like Paul he gathers sticks to keep the church fires burning and some times a viper will seize his hand and bite deep, but if he feels any effect we can't tell it, and we have certainly been close observers. We have been reading with much interest Brother Cowan's letters, and rejoice with him in that he has made such a good impression on his flock. Brother Cowan is really a very impressive man, he was a visitor on our charge last year and I can assure you he left an impression here that will last a long time. May he serve his present charge long and well.

Wishing you all a prosperous and busy year in your church work.

I am faithfully yours,

AN OBSERVER.

Flat Rock Vance.—The Woman's Home Missionary society met last Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. A. E. White. All our members present except one. All committee reports were good. Treasurer's report showed we were over two dollars on safe side of our apportionment. The nominating committee report was read and adopted, as to officers, as read: president, Miss Mary V. White; vice-president, Mrs. W. B. Reavis; recording and corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. P. Hester; treasurer, Mrs. N. J. Parrott; Record agent, Mrs. A. E. White, secretary, Buds of Hope; Mrs. F. M. White; delegates to branch meeting, Mrs. F. M. White and Miss Mae Brame; secretary of Young People's Work will be elected at next meeting as we wish to discuss and plan it with Sunday school and the Sunday school leaders. Chairman presented to the society the names of Misses Annie and Rosa Satterwhite and Mrs. B. W. Jones which asked to be removed from our roll as active members. We very much regret this loss, for it is indeed a loss, as it leaves us only seven active members, one of those being a new member. We are looking forward to branch meeting with much interest, as it will be so near us. Hope our people may be filled to overflow with inspiration, and we may have our best year yet in mission work.

M. V. W.

Denton Church.—Our Sunday school was well attended yesterday. We are sure glad to see our people coming and working together more than ever before. Our attendance yesterday was 110. Attendance a year ago, 55. Collection yesterday, $3.20. Collection a year ago, $1.75.

There was a mistake in the Herald last week. The attendance at Sunday school should have been 127, not 27.

Our Christian Endeavor was well attended yesterday evening. Many good things were said that made us enjoy being present.

REPORTER.

Graham.—Our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, gave us one of the best sermons of the year on "All Things Are Mine."

We were very glad to have Miss Madge Woods of Elon College, sing for us at the morning service.

There were 148 enrolled for Sunday school and the different departments are doing splendid work.

On next Sunday night the men's chorus will have charge of the song service. This chorus directed by Mrs. Fletcher Steele have been giving some fine selections.

Miss Mattie Cheek, one of our faithful members, continues quite ill.

Mrs. Alfred Neese who underwent an operation at Rainey Hospital is recovering nicely.

REPORTER.

Concord.—Since the Christmas holidays this church has been so busy that little time has been left for reporting on the things undertaken and accomplished. We have held several special services on Sunday evenings, which were directed to building up greater interest in the night services. The efforts have met with gratifying success. On almost every occasion the house was crowded to capacity. The effects are apparent even when there are no special services. Last night, for instance, the congregation was double, and more, what it had been on usual Sunday evenings prior to the special services.

February we held special services which proved a great blessing to the church. The following members have been received into membership recently: Edward L. Beaver, Mrs. Fred Herrin, W. A. Cline, Mrs. W. A. Cline, Durwood Cline, Merideth Cline, S. C. Cass, Mrs. S. C. Cass, Louise Brown, Adolphus Lomax, Mrs. G. H. Hendry, Dessie Lee Little, Mary Melton, Homer Dorton, Mary Polk, Ethel Overcash, John Aycock, Joyce Edsel, Lillian Wylie, Lelia Wylie, Mrs. S. C. Denny, Clyde Waddell, John Burris, Luther Davis, Agnes Polk, R. W. Fink, Mrs. R. W. Fink, Harvey Wilson, Louise Robbins, Ada Melton, Robert Pinion, Grover Heneycutt, May Eury, W. J. Bailey.

The February meeting of the Men's Brotherhood was well attended. Fifty present. Several new members. Mr. C. F. Ritchie of the Ritchie Hardware Company and Superintendent of the Sunday school of the First Presbyterian church of Concord, gave a stirring and helpful address at the meeting which was much enjoyed by all present. At the March meeting Dr. A. G. Dixon will be the principal speaker. It is being looked forward too with much interest.

On last Sunday the Sunday school laid $300 on the altar of the church to apply on the college note which is being carried at a local bank. The remaining part of the note is now taken over by those giving in the note and thus the church is relieved of further obligations in this matter. This is much appreciated by the pastor.

Following the recent meeting the brethren came in great numbers preceding the Wednesday evening meeting and brought "out of their treasures things new" and things abundant and thus the parsonage pantry was well filled with the best of provisions. These tokens of precious sentiments are heartily reciprocated by the pastor and his wife. It would require too much space perhaps to try to set down the names of those having part in the affair. But we know them all by name and we appreciate what they did.

The Sunday school has made a new record during the present quarter. The superintendent announced yesterday that the highest record set prior to this quarter had been two hundred sixteen. It has run above two hundred sixty thus far, upon an average, this quarter.

The Ladies' Missionary Society has been circled off into four circles, and thus reorganized and is starting off in a fine way. One circle is preparing and will give on Sunday night, April 10th, the pageant entitled "The Awakening of Mr. Smith." A missionary service is being planned for Thursday night, April 14th, at which time Mrs. Dixon will address the women on the work of missions.

Every phase of the entire church program is alive and moving on. We are having very crowded conditions in the work of our Sunday school and Brotherhood especially.

I have purposedly saved the most interesting part of my report until last, and now I give you a clipping from the Concord Daily Tribune of last Saturday which speaks for itself.

After a number of preliminary meetings the official board of the First Methodist Protestant Church unanimously has voted to recommend to the Church a building program that would give the church and Sunday School Departments a modern building.

If the proposed building is carried out it would mean that the parsonage would be removed and the present church building would be salvaged and thus clear the large lot of all buildings.

It is planned to build in the center of the lot a modern departmentally arranged church and Sunday school building in the shape of the letter T. The church auditorium will face on Ann Street and the Sunday school building will face on Moore Street.

It is proposed that the new buildings be constructed of tapestry brick of scratched joints. The proposed plans will call for the auditorium and the Sunday school building to be of about the same dimensions over all, each to be sufficiently large to accommodate 500 persons. The proposed plans call for the Sunday school building to have a finished basement with two stories above. It is to be steam heated and have plumbing of modern character. It is estimated that the cost will be about $30,000.

Rev. G. H. Hendry, the pastor of the church, and the official board are very optimistic over the outlook for the new church which will fill a long felt need.

Asheboro.—Many things of interest have happened here in the past few weeks that have not been reported. There have been quite a lot of sickness and several deaths among our people. Just after my last letter appeared Mrs. Mary East Smith, wife of Carl D. Smith, died at the age of twenty-one years and was buried at Pleasant Hill M. E. church in Moore county. Mrs. Smith united with our church here on profession of faith during the pastorate of Rev. L. W. Gerringer.

Recently, Mrs. James Scott, whose church membership was at Flags Spring M. P. church on Why Not circuit, died at the home of her son, C. L. Scott here. The funeral was conducted by the writer, as was also that of Mrs. Smith. A week ago, Mrs. John R. Ferree who lived between Asheboro and Cedar Falls passed to her heavenly reward. The funeral was conducted at Cedar Falls by the writer assisted by Rev. George Laughlin of our church and Rev. Mr. Shaw of the Baptist church. Mrs. Ferree was the mother of Thaddeus and A. O. Ferree both of whom are members of our church here in Asheboro.

Another death that brought sorrow to our people was that of Mrs. Randall Presnell who died at the residence of her son John Presnell. Mrs. Pressnell was past eighty-five years of age and had spent her long life in the service of her Master. She was a member of the Baptist church but loved everybody. The funeral services was held in the home of her son John Presnell and was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Morris of the Baptist church, assisted by the writer.

Yesterday the writer was kept in bed with cold but the services went right on. The superintendent of the Sunday school informs me that 204 were in Sunday school and the offering for the Children's Home amounted to $64.00. Rev. Mr. Wolff, a member of the Disciples church, conducted the morning services and the Senior Christian Endeavor society had charge of the evening services.

The organizations of the church are carrying on the work as usual. Congregations are good. More later. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Charlotte, First Church.—The W. F. M. S. held their thank-offering service last Sunday evening with a pageant, "Hold me close to Thy Cross." Although short it was very impressive and considered one of the best given here. The delegates to the Branch meeting in Henderson are Mrs. C. A. Stikeleather and Mrs. C. O. Garmon. The apportionment is paid in full.

The W. H. M. S. met last Tuesday with Mrs. B. W. Little with an interesting meeting. Mrs. L. M. Harward was elected delegate with Miss Naomi Faulkner as alternate. The Home Society went over the top.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet the first Monday with the president, Mrs. J. H. McCall, on Parwood Ave.

A committee is working on an Easter program for the Sunday school. Presentation of the First Easter will be given on Easter Sunday evening. There is also a committee to plan an egg hunt for the children on Easter Monday.

Miss Thelma Grier will assist in the choir for some time. Her services are appreciated. We enjoyed a solo by Mr. Donald Kiser last Sunday morning. Mrs. W. A. Neal, our pianist and choir director, knows how to find good talent.

Our church is uniting with the churches of the Piedmont and Elizabeth sections and the Christian Men's Club of the city in an evangelistic campaign to begin the first of May and continue through the 22nd. Gypsy Smith, Jr., will be the Evangelist. Preparations are being made for prayer services.

We were glad to have Mr. C. T. Surratt of Denton, brother of our pastor, and Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Austin of Hickory in our congregation Sunday evening. The second quarterly conference will be held on Thursday evening, April 7th, Mr. John Garmon, brother of Mrs. Henry Muse, died last Saturday. The funeral was held at Roberta church Sunday.

REPORTER.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Our Sunday school was well attended yesterday. We have 113 on roll. Our Christian Endeavor society is growing. We have a large number each Sunday night. Last night the meeting was led by Miss Pearle Wray, and each one enjoyed this meeting. We had one new member last night which made our Senior roll 58. Our Junior society is also doing good work.

The Sunday school is preparing to give an Easter program Easter Sunday night.

The second quarterly meeting will be at Matthews Chapel Saturday before the third Sunday in April.

Best wishes to every one.

LOUISE BOWEN, Reporter.

Cid, Denton Charge.—The cottage prayer service will be at Mr. Ben Parrish's next Saturday night. These meetings have been meeting with good spiritual success; in the last two Saturday nights there have been three converts, two of them over 50 years of age. There were shouting and praising God over victory. On last night it was 12 o'clock when they dispersed. May the good work still continue. We had a fine Sunday school today and also accompanied by a fine testimonial meeting. Interest just fine. Pray for us, brethren.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kindley worshiped with us today, also Mr. and Mrs. Howard Younts of Lexington. Mrs. Younts acted as organist. We were sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Webster Bingham. He was buried at Farmers.

We are looking forward to the second Sunday in April at 2 p.m. which is our preaching day.

We are very sorry to note that Mrs. Joe Delk's health is right bad. While we hope for a speedy recovery.

We are glad to read such encouraging reports in the Herald.

Mrs. John Delk was a pleasant visitor of Mrs. N. N. Lanier last Friday afternoon.

Mr. J. A. Lanier has moved his family back to his farm from Thomasville, also Mr. Bert Kindley has also.

Rev. C. O. Leonard gave us on today a splendid talk, also our faithful superintendent, Mr. Ben Parrish, as well as many others.

Sunday school at 10 a.m. next Sunday and those that don't attend the meeting are missing grand opportunities that never can be recalled.

Mrs. N. W. Lanier was elected assistant secretary and treasurer on last Sunday. Prof. Rudd Newsom of Lexington, was a pleasant caller of N. W. Lanier last week. We hope to get him to come and sing for us some Sunday.

Second Church, Charlotte.—Attention please. I wrote an article to the Methodist Protestant Herald a few days ago asking our folks at large to help us raise $130.00 that we might be able to secure that nice lot in the most hopeful locality in Charlotte. We need more than that but we must have that much in a few days. Only about four of our people have responded. I have been sick with the flu for about three weeks, and I have not been able to look after my work. If I had the money I would gladly give it myself, but I have not got it. I am giving my time for almost nothing. I do hope enough of our people will respond at once so we can have the papers transferred by the first of April. May our Father continue to bless you all. Pray for me. I need your prayers during these lonely hours. The nights are long and lonely.

Yours in His name,
D. A. BRASWELL.

Cid, Denton Charge.—The cottage prayer service at Mr. Ben Parrish's Saturday night was very largely attended, spiritual interest real good. Had two penitents. It goes to Mr. Webb Kipleys next Saturday night, then to Mr. Leonard Lambeth, then to Mr. Milton Hughes.

We had a large Sunday school Sunday. When a man gets saved he is then ready and willing to take his wife and children out to Sunday school.

There was one of our distant neighbors got saved one day last week in the field plowing. He had attended some of these prayer services. His father and two brothers had recently been saved.

Mr. Fuller Hughes is real sick and is expecting to have to go to a hospital soon.

Mr. T. Ross Cameron took a relapse with the flu and has been in bed for a week but is recovering slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. David Kindley of Lexington, also Mr. and Mrs. Howard Younts, were with us at Cid Sunday.

Sunday school next Sunday, third of April, at 1:30 preaching at 2 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson. Rev. Avery Wooddell begins a special meeting at Kindley school house the first Sunday in April at 11 o'clock.

REPORTER.

Randleman Charge.—On account of the illness of the pastor the appointments on this field were filled last Sunday by Rev. J. F. Dosier and Rev. Gurney Ferree, Mr. Dosier preaching at Mt. Lebanon Sunday at 11 and Mr. Ferree preaching at Level Cross at 3 p.m. and at Worthville at 7 p.m. We appreciate very much the kindness of these men.

Mr. Neese has been confined to his bed for several days and his condition does not seem to improve. Quite a number of our people here are sick and we desire the prayers of the readers in their behalf. All the Missionary societies on this work have gone "over the top" in raising their Budget for which we are grateful.

Delegates elected to represent the Home Society at the Branch meeting in Henderson are Mrs. J. L. Hall and Miss May Caudle. We expect the Foreign Society to be represented also but do not have the names of the delegates at this time.

MRS. WM. H. NEESE.

Caroleen and Shelby.—We were indeed glad to have Dr. and Mrs. Dixon with us on March 8th and 9th. Dr. Dixon held the second quarterly conference at Caroleen. His timely remarks between the general routine of business brought inspiration to all present. The church seems to be moving on with a steadier grip on the different problems that come to it.

Mrs. Dixon gave us an inspiring address on the one hundred percent organized church; this proved to be of great help to us. As a result a Junior Baraca class has been organized and a Junior Christian Endeavor society. These have as their leaders two of the most wide awake workers: Brother F. O. Upton as teacher of the Junior Baraca and Miss Gertrude Murry as superintendent of the Junior Christian Endeavor. We hope for them a wonderful success.

Shelby.—We were prevented from holding the quarterly meeting at Shelby while Dr. and Mrs. Dixon were here on account of the heavy rains Wednesday and Wednesday night. Only a few braved the storm and came out, but the inspiring messages by Dr. and Mrs. Dixon seemed to put new life in those who heard them. The church was assured of the sympathy and prayers of the entire body of the conference; this brought great encouragement to the church and will cause them to stand even more loyal to the church.

A Correction.—There appeared in the Herald of March third a report from the Shelby Methodist Protestant church in which Brother Frank Glenn had the title of Reverend prefixed to his name. I don't know where this mistake came in or who is responsible for it, whether the writer or the publisher, but let it fall on who it may:—Brother Glenn hasn't entered the ministry yet; while he does love chicken as well as the most of preachers this is no sign that he has gone to preaching; but I believe that if Brother Glenn should decide to go into the ministry he has faith enough to believe that Jesus meant what he said when he said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteous ness and all these shall be added to you." This is enough to strengthen the heart of any poor preacher who is striving to build up the Kingdom of our God. "My God will supply all your needs," says the apostle Paul. Isn't it a great thing to have a God that will look after the needs of his faithful ministers? It is true the preacher has many duties and his hardships are many and his work is hard, but after all the consolation that the true preacher has is the God who has called him in to service will give him out of his bountiful store house enough to live upon. May God bless every minister of His and make him a power for God and his Kingdom is my humble prayer.

Yours in Kingdom service,
L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

Stallings, Mecklenburg.—The Ladies' Aid met the seventeenth at the home of the president, Mrs. M. L. Stallings. The president gave a talk on "The Social and Spiritual Activities of the Aid." Because of the absence of several members very little business was transacted, but it was decided to give an oyster supper Saturday night of the 26th. Since this was considered rather late in the oyster season, it was afterward changed to ice cream, cake, and sandwiches. Old Man Winter was insulted (it seems he's loath to leave us) and expressed his disapproval. However the young folks didn't seem to mind and the pro ceeds were better than we expected.

The next monthly meeting will be with Mrs. R. A. (Grandma) Drye, and we are glad. I think everyone who knows this gentle elderly lady loves her. May we have more like her. We hope more of our members will be present at this next meeting. We received five new members at our last meeting and we expect the older members to set them a good example.

Christians, pray for us, that we may walk in the spirit of love, and really enjoy giving of our time, strength and means to the upbuilding of God's Kingdom.

REPORTER.

High Point.—The second quarterly conference convened last Wednesday evening following a short prayer service. Rev. P. E. Lindley and the associate pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, made interesting reports of their work during the quarter. Mr. Ballard announced that he and Mrs. Ballard have commenced a round of visits to the congregation, and hopes soon to call on every family and become acquainted with each member. Considering the membership of 630, it will be a big task. Mr. Lindley reported an accession of 12 members since November 1st, but we have lost two by death, Messrs. G. P. Pitts and A. A. Holton, and three have asked for transfers, having moved away from the city. The Junior church, the latest innovation in our work, is flourishing and growing rapidly in interest and attendance, one mother having remarked that she cannot keep her children at home since the organization of this new feature. The services are conducted by Rev. Mr. Ballard in the Assembly room at 11 o'clock every Sunday morning. The question of a Daily Vacation Bible School for the children of the church next summer was discussed, and it was decided to employ a man to have oversight of the troop of Boy Scouts 25 in number, who will go to Camp Uwharrie for two weeks next summer. The Christian Endeavor Society gave a splendid report, and also the Sabbath School. The two Woman's Missionary Societies reported that their budgets have been raised in full with some specials in addition. The Home Society has raised $600 this year. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas donated $100 to Scholarship Loan Fund in High Point College; Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Montgomery gave $50 to a Scholarship at Pine Ridge, Ky., and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny have given their yearly subscription of $100 to a Pine Ridge Scholarship.

According to our custom, the quarterly conference was followed on Sunday morning by the celebration of the Lord's Supper, which proved to be a very sweet and impressive service, in which almost the entire congregation communed. The unusually large number of young people, who joined in this delightful communion, was noticeable, and if this is an indication, the future of the Methodist Protestant church in High Point is assured. Rev. P. E. Lindley was assisted by Rev. J. D. Hardy of the college.

The monthly meeting of the Mission Study Class was held Monday afternoon at the church, and Chapter VI of "Moslem Women" was given by Mrs. S. D. Shelton. A new plan is to be tried out in the Missionary Societies next year. Dues and all other donations for the various causes will be collected in envelopes, which have been secured for this purpose. It is hoped that the business meetings and the study class can be combined in one monthly meeting.

The sympathy of many friends goes out to Mrs. John S. Pickett in the loss by death of her father, Mr. R. B. Sams, who passed away at his home in Trenton, N. J., last Thursday after an illness of a few weeks. Mrs. Pickett had been at his bedside several days, and will remain with her mother for a month. Mr. Sams was at one time a resident of High Point, and is most pleasantly remembered by many of our townsmen.

We wish to extend much sympathy to Mrs. C. L. Gray and Mrs. W. C. Hammond in the death of their uncle, Mrs. Thos. S. Groome of Greensboro, which occurred last Thursday.

We are much pleased to note the safe arrival at home of Mrs. Louise J. Diffee from a tour of 60 days to Palestine and the Holy Land, Egypt, and places of note in Europe. The latter part of her trip, however, was marred by illness, having contracted bronchial pneumonia just before leaving for home. She was quite ill on the steamer the entire trip across the Atlantic, but we are delighted to know that she is improving now at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. H. Tomlinson.

Rev. P. E. Lindley has been elected a member of the Board of Public Welfare of High Point, and we feel sure that he will enter this new work with characteristic enthusiasm and vigor.

Mr. Samuel L. Davis, local business man, will give a medal annually to the young lady of High Point College, who writes the best essay.

Representatives of High Point College will meet N. C. State College team in debate here in the College Auditorium next Thursday evening.

The N. C. Federation of Music Clubs, which will convene in the First church next Thursday morning, promises to be an interesting event, and High Point people are happy to welcome these talented musicians to the city for the first time.

Liberty-Siler City.—March 20th was a great day for us at Liberty and Siler: 96 were in the Sunday school, this being the largest attendance on record. Special music was furnished at the morning service by Misses Ellis, Pace, Corgleton and Moore of Siler City. We were very glad to receive into our fellowship Miss Pearl Moore and Mr. Marvin Phillips. Miss Moore is the new president of our Christian Endeavor and Mr. Phillips has been active in our work for some time.

In the evening the writer was at Liberty. Everything going nicely. The Christian Endeavor looked like a full congregation. They assembled to hear a message on "The Christ of the Indian Road." A good congregation was present for the evening service.

Mr. A. S. Pickett who is one of our oldest and most faithful members has been seriously ill with pneumonia. He was improving slowly last Tuesday and I trust he is 'most well by this writing.

Report came today of a good prayer meeting at Siler City.

April 10th will be decision Sunday in the church and Sunday school at Liberty. I will be at Liberty Sunday morning and Siler City Sunday evening.

Best wishes to my dear people and Herald readers. F. L. GIBBS.

Pleasant Hill, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, delivered a splendid sermon yesterday, March 27th.

Our hearts were made sad about two weeks ago when our faithful Sunday school superintendent, Brother I. F. Hancock, passed into the great beyond. He had been Sunday school superintendent at Pleasant Hill for several years and was ever faithful to his post of duty. We will miss him very much.

We have elected Wm. Staley to succeed Brother Hancock as superintendent, and T. J. Bean assistant and we feel sure Brother Staley will make us a good superintendent.

We have also elected Lonnie Bean sexton and Ernest Spencer assistant.

The second quarterly meeting was held Saturday at New Zion church. S. S. Cox and Frank Hulin were nominated for delegates to our next annual conference.

(Miss) FLONIE COX, Reporter.

Spring Hill.—Our pastor, G. W. Andrew, filled his appointment March 20th with a good sermon. We had a large number for Sunday school and preaching also. The people of Spring Hill church were glad to attend the birthday dinner at Mr. T. J. Jones of Mechanicsville Sunday after church service. He is the oldest member in the church. A large crowd of members attended and several relatives and friends. We hope that Mr. Jones will have many more birthdays. There were lots of good things to eat and everybody had a good time.

EULA SWAIM, Reporter.

Kernersville.—We are very glad to have a preacher and wife on the circuit once more. It surely seems good to exchange visits with each other.

We have been doing some repair work on the church this spring and are hoping to do more.

The Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. Charlie Helper this week. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Lowdermilk. After the business meeting the plan for a Missionary Society was discussed.

The meeting adjourned.

REPORTER.

Greensville Circuit.—The officials will take due notice hereof and govern themselves accordingly. The second quarterly conference will convene at Matthew's Chapel on Saturday before third Sunday in April; preaching at 11 o'clock, lunch for members of quarterly conference, business session. Important business, brethren. REV. H. L. POWELL.

NOTICE

To the chairmen of the Woman's Work of the various districts of our conference.

If a District or group meeting of any kind has been held in your District and not reported to me please report same and state if possible how many organizations were represented, how many representatives attended, and the number of churches in your District where there is no organized missionary effort.

Thanking you for this information promptly.

The Branch meeting at Henderson is just ahead of us and it is earnestly desired that a goodly number of our workers attend. Be sure to arrange to be present for the first service Tuesday afternoon, April 19th. We think the delegates from the rural churches will find this service especially helpful.

MRS. W. T. HANNER.

NOTICE TO RANDLEMAN CIRCUIT

Rev. W. H. Neese is sick, but the quarterly conference for Randleman charge will be held at Level Cross on Saturday, April 2, at 2:30 p.m. Rev. A. G. Dixon will preside.

My report last week showed a credit of $200 to J. M. Cutchin, Jr. Brother Cutchin has been a steadfast friend of High Point College since its organization; he has made very liberal contributions heretofore, and has had a way of sending the treasurer a check at just the time when it would do the most good. It would not require a great many friends such as he has proved to be to make the work of the treasurer an easy and delightful one. This is the first payment on a new pledge of $1000.

This week we report another generous contribution; that of Brother R. M. Cox, who sends $1,000 to apply on a recent pledge of $5,000, and pays $50 on the Endowment Fund. Brother Cox has also made liberal contributions heretofore, but is one of the number who have undertaken to put High Point College upon a solid financial basis, and his contribution at this time is likewise most timely and is highly appreciated.

The gift of $10 in memory of our esteemed brother, N. M. Harrison, deserves special notice. A friend of Brother Harrison's, who was unable to send flowers, sent a check and requested that it be used in the way which it was thought our esteemed brother would most prefer that it be used. The family, after consulation, decided that nothing would have given Brother Harrison more pleasure than to make the gift to High Point College.

Dr. C. L. Whitaker, at the time of his death, had an unpaid balance of his pledge of $100. The treasurer hesitated to bring this to the attention of Mrs. Whitaker, knowing quite well the difficulty our ministers have in accumulating anything of consequence during their life-time. But when it was finally mentioned to her, she said she had no other thought than to pay the pledge in full, which she did at once. This but emphasizes the fact with which I was already familiar—that our college has been built largely through the sacrifice of many of our people—and when people show their interest in any cause to the extent of making sacrifices for it, its success is assured.

The financial plans which are under way have been unexpectedly, but only temporarily, retarded. It is expected that they will be carried out fully within the next few weeks. In the meanwhile, the treasurer has been impressed with the fact that it would be so very easy to meet at least the pressing requirements of the college if there were anything like a united effort to do so, but the task is an impossible one without full co-operation.

J. NORMAN WILLS, Treasurer.

—The following four Sunday school specialists of continent-wide reputation have already been secured to speak in the Burlington convention, and other prominent speakers will be added to the list: Dr. Norman E. Richardson, Evanston, Ill., Professor of Religious Education, Northwestern University; Mrs. Maud Junkin Baldwin, Philadelphia, Pa., Supervisor of Children's Work for the United Lutheran Church; Dr. Percy R. Hayward, Chicago, Ill., Superintendent of Young People's Work for the International Council of Religious Education; Dr. Seldon L. Roberts, Philadelphia, Pa., Director of Leadership Training for the Northern Baptist Church.

A Man That Didn't Know What to Do

It often happens that children want to do something, but they know not what. This story is about a man that had energy for action, but was at a loss as to what he should do. He was convalescent, and would soon return to his regular occupation, but this particular day he was not expected, yet he felt that he would like to be doing something. Unable to think of anything, he prayed: "Lord, what wouldst Thou have me to do?" He believed in divine providence and divine guidance, and prayed in faith. While waiting for direction he resolved to go out for a walk. He found on the road a man in trouble with a broken-down car. The man had been trying till his strength and patience were almost exhausted, but he could not get everything adjusted. There were some operations that required the help of another man. The convalescent invalid lent a hand and soon had the man on his way. The invalid accepted a ride with him and they engaged in conversation.

Soon they heard a vehicle behind them and looking round saw a policeman following. Presently the officer gave the command to halt, and bounded upon the running board with drawn revolver. The driver made no resistance, but stopped his car. A search was made and evidence found that the driver was a bootlegger. Both men were arrested and taken to police headquarters. The invalid gave explanation of his presence in the car, but the officer simply said, "You may tell that to the judge." Both were required to give bonds or go to jail to await trial. The invalid telephoned to friends who promptly came to his relief. The other man had no friends in the city and saw no way to escape jail. But the invalid's nearness to prison walls awoke his sympathy for the man, and he promptly offered to stand surety for his appearance at court. This was accepted and the man was at liberty.

His first impulse was to escape from the state in the day of opportunity he had, and leave his new-found friend to take the consequences. But the more he thought of this course, the more despicable it seemed. Though he was a bootlegger, there was a spark of honor in him, and he began to be ashamed of himself for having thought of basely deserting his friend and benefactor. He was on hand when the trial came and took upon himself full responsibility for the violation of the law, confirming the story of the invalid's accidental and perfectly innocent connection with the event. The invalid was cleared and the other man found guilty and visited a sentence of fine or imprisonment. He had no money to pay his fine, and imprisonment seemed inevitable. But the invalid was not done yet. He came forward with an offer to lend the man the money and take his note for the amount. The man was deeply impressed and gladly accepted the offer.

Can you guess the rest of the story? That bootlegger was so wrought upon by the noble goodness of the invalid that he resolved to live a better life. He set himself to earn honestly the money to repay his friend and did so. More important still, he was led to recognize the goodness of God,

Chapter Three, Verse Sixteen

Matthew: And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him.

Mark: And Simon he surnamed Peter.

Luke: John answered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire.

John: For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

Acts: And his name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

Romans: Destruction and misery are in their ways.

I Corinthians: Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

II Corinthians: Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away.

Galatians: Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.

Ephesians: That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man.

Philippians: Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

Colossians: Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

II Thessalonians: Now the Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all.

I Timothy: And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness; God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory.

II Timothy: All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness.

Hebrews: For some, when they had heard, did provoke; howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

James: For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work.

I Peter: Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

II Peter: As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own destruction.

I John: Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

Revelation: So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth.

"WHY TROUBLE YE THE WOMAN? FOR SHE HATH WROUGHT A GOOD WORK"—Matt. 26:10.

By Lee Anna Starr

The later editions of our Discipline have omitted the provision that the Woman's Society be placed under the "advisory supervision" of the Men's Board, but have retained the following admonition: "This Society shall act in harmony with the Board of Foreign Missions." Quadrennium after quadrennium the Woman's Society has been enjoined to "act in harmony;" to "cooperate heartily" with the Board of Foreign Missions. In not a single instance has it been laid upon the Men's Board to "act in harmony;" to "cooperate heartily" with the Woman's Board. What inference must we draw from this? Either that, in the estimation of the General Conferences, the women were the disturbing element, or that the men were endowed with superior judgment; in which case it was the bounden duty of the women to defer to them in all controverted matters. It seems to the writer it would have been more in equity to have counselled both Boards to work in harmony each with the other.

When the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was recognized by the General Conference of 1880, it was stipulated that said Society must not gather funds in any way that conflicted with the regular collections of the Men's Board. The latter must have the right of way. Article IV of the Constitution read:

"The funds of the Society shall not be raised by public collections in our churches, but by securing members, life members, honorary members, and in such other ways as the Society may determine, and which shall not conflict with the regular collections of the Board of Foreign Missions."

It was allowed that the Woman's Society could raise funds at a public meeting, provided such meeting was not held in a church of the denomination. It is only in recent years that the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has been granted the privilege of holding thank-offering services in our churches which have auxiliaries. In every way the Men's Board was given the advantage. For years an assessment has been laid on every local church in our denomination for the maintenance of Foreign Missionary work, and every penny of this money goes into the treasury of the Men's Board. In addition to this the law of the Church provides for a Children's Day service. The receipts, entire, are turned over to the Men's Board of Foreign Missions.

The World's Survey volume reveals the fact that fifty-nine percent of the membership of the Protestant churches in the United States, are women. This being the case, any one can see that women, being in the majority, and as liberal contributors as men, furnish the major part of the funds that go to sustain the Men's Boards—not only the Foreign, but all the Boards of the Church. All the money raised by the Woman's Boards, both Home and Foreign, aside from the Thank-offerings, are raised outside the Church, and represent personal sacrifice. Yet from some quarters comes the cry—"The women are raising too much money, and the men are not having a fair chance." The President of one of our Annual Conferences was so distressed over the unfair advantage the women were having, that he called attention to the matter in his annual address.

The General Conference of 1896 met at Kansas City, Kansas. The General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was in annual session at the same date and in the same city. Reverend Eugenia St. John, the first woman minister to be seated as a ministerial representative in a General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Churrh, was present. An episode occurred that deserves mention. A leader in our denomination, a member of the Men's Board of Foreign Missions, one who had much to do with the divestment of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the right to manage its own affairs and control its own funds, at the General Conference of 1884, was a representative at this Conference of 1896. When the report of the Committee on Missions was up for discussion, this brother did his utmost to have the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society placed in subordinate relation to the Men's Board. One remark impressed itself on the writer's mind. It was in substance as follows: "The law of the Church requires that the women confer with our Board. As a matter of fact they have not consulted us for four or five years." When his proposition was put to a vote, the fair-minded men who sat in the General Conference, knowing the sentiment of the members of the Women's Board in attendance, defeated it by a substantial majority.

The writer of these articles has always claimed that if the women could have a fair hearing before these ecclesiastical bodies, they could obtain justice—not in the early history of the movement, but in these latter days. The trouble is that the women are at a great disadvantage when this question comes before the high courts of the Church for adjudication. With but few exceptions, women are excluded from these legislative bodies. As a rule, only men sit in the "Chief seats of the Synagogues," while the women are the "hewers of wood and the drawers of water to the entire congregation." Now and then a delegation of women are granted a brief hearing through their Chairman, as a courtesy, but even this is rare. They are not members of the conclave; they cannot participate in the debate; they have no vote in making up the verdict. Their opponents, on the other hand, are as a rule, members of this deliberative body; they have ready access to the Committee on Missions; they may participate in debate on the floors of the House; they may vote in the final disposition. In every way they have the advantage.

The writer was a visitor at the General Conference of 1908, which met in Pittsburgh. During the procedure a resolution to place the Woman's Home Missionary Society under the control of the Men's Board of Home Missions, was introduced. So far as the writer could learn, not a woman from the Home Society was present—at least she was not in evidence.

A minister from Washington, D. C., made an impassioned appeal in behalf of the resolution. He depicted the chaotic conditions that prevailed in the Woman's Society, and the disaster that threatened, and wound up by making a statement that went strait to the heart of every man seated in that General Conference. He said—and Oh! the emotion in his tone—"The women do not agree among themselves!" Even as we write there rises before us the solemn faces of the members of that General Conference. Men never disagree; they always "see eye to eye;" they are always "Of one mind in the Lord." Take for example, Paul and Barnabas in their conference about taking John Mark on that second Missionary journey; Paul and Peter during that theological discussion at Antioch. The multitudinous religious sects down through the centuries are irrefutable proof of the harmony that has prevailed among the brethren. Calvin and Servetus were shining examples; Luther and his contempories; the fathers of Methodist Protestantism and Episcopal hierarchs a hundred years ago: Fundamentalists and Modernists of these latter days.

Now after these epochs of unamimity among the brethren, it naturally grieved them to the heart to learn that the sisters of the Woman's Home Missionary Society were not at perfect agreement on some of the matters that came before them. The writer was present when the vote was taken. It was unanimous. The Woman's Home Missionary Society was taken over bodily, with all its appurtenances, and placed under the supervision of the Men's Board of Home Missions.

Nicodemus said to the Jewish Council: "Doth our law judge a man, except it hear from him and know what he doeth?" Festus said to the accusers of the Apostle Paul: "It is not the custom of the Romans to give up any man, before that the accused have the accusers face to face, and have had opportunity to make his defense concerning the matter laid against him," but here was a high Christian Court, pronouncing judgment, without notice, without summon, without a hearing of the accused, without an opportunity for defense. The writer does not recall a single word spoken in behalf of those women before that General Conference. Naturally when the Woman's Home Missionary Society learned of its disposition, it was indignant. It could scarce be otherwise. If, as was claimed, the members could not agree among themselves, they agreed with the men less. The result was that after season of trial, the Men's Board offered no remonstrance to the women's petition for a writ of separation. Today the Woman's Board of Home Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church stands on the same basis with all the men's Boards of the denomination, and like them, it is not required to keep the peace.

No other Board of the Church has been treated as has been the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. It has been tossed about like a football in our General Conferences. It never knows at the opening of the session, what its status will be at the close. The General Conference of 1880 placed it on the same basis as the other Boards of the Church; the Conference of 1884 deprived it of all administrative authority, diverted its funds, and made it an auxiliary of the Men's Board; the Conference of 1888 restored, in part, its former privileges, but placed it under "advisory supervision." The last General Conference, 1924, did its utmost to merge it with another Board. The only thing that saved it from such disaster was its charter.

It would be interesting to tabulate all the measures that have been presented in the various General Conferences, bearing on this question. The Men's Board of Foreign Missions has been an ardent lover.

The reader must not think that these experiences have been peculiar to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church. Far from it. In almost every denomination there has been the same struggle on the part of the Woman's Boards to gain independence, and on the part of the Men's Boards to control. The controversy began back there in 1834, when Dr. Abeel sought to organize the women for special service, and it has continued ever since. "It will never be settled, until it is settled right." In some denominations, the battle has been won; in some it is waging; in some, it is yet to come.

In a sister denomination, a few years ago, the conflict was at its height. An ecclesiastical conclave was in session to determine the matter. High lights of the Church were in attendance. The President of the Woman's Society was an invited guest and sat on the platform. She had a place on the program. The matter was discussed pro and con. The advocates of the merger were, as usual, effusive. Sincere? Certainly they were. They believed it best for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. As the President of the Woman's Board mused, "the fire burned;" as she listened, her heart was hot within her. When the time came for her to speak, she laid aside her prepared address and stepped out on the platform, and this is what she said: "This is not the first time I have heard of a man trying to marry a woman for her money." That was all, and resumed her seat. Today the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the United Presbyterian Church stands erect; it has attained its majority; it receives and disburses annually over a $100,000. Women are seated in the Super-Council, the highest official body of denomination; and three women are on the Budget Council of its General Association. This Church has 164,996 members, and pays annually for Home and Foreign Missions, $2,561,445. The Methodist Protestant Church, with 186,557 members, pays annually to the same interests $368,566. One of the high lights of this sister church, in his enthusiasm over the work that is being accomplished by their Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, said to a group of fellow ministers, "I not only favor giving the Woman's Board independence, but I would vote to put all our mission work under their supervision." Much of the friction that has existed between the Woman's Board and the Men's Board in the Methodist Protestant Church, has been caused by attempted restrainment, and after this the disbursement of funds.

It may be charged that some of the statements in these articles are harsh. Not so. They are only plain statements of harsh facts. It is time that some one should speak out on this question. The future status of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be a live issue in our next General Conference. It is only fair to the men—and we trust, women—who shall sit in that Conference, that they should be made acquainted with all the facts in the case. If the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society cannot have a hearing on the floor of the Conference, it is only a matter of justice that it be allowed to speak through our Church papers. It is no more harsh to state the facts—every one of which can be verified by reference to Church records—than it was harsh for the Lord Jesus to say to those meddlesome disciples: "Why trouble ye the woman?" "Let her alone." "She hath wrought a good work."

1922 the President of the General Conference, Dr. Thomas H. Lewis, called a meeting of the Church Boards at Pittsburgh. The General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, being on the list, arranged for its annual session at the same time and place. While the women were thus assembled, there was presented to them by the President of the men's Board, a document bearing on its title page these words: "The following is a suggested constitution for the proposed Union Board of Missionary Administration." Here was a new proposal from the Men's Board. The submitted constitution was the work of its hand. We subjoin the Preamble:

"In order that the Missionary work of the Methodist Protestant Church shall be conducted in the most efficient way possible, we recommend the organization of a Union Board of Missionary Administration, whose function shall be to administer the work being done by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, the Woman's Home Missionary Society, and the Board of Foreign Missions, and the Board of Home Missions."

The Woman's Home Missionary Society, and the Board of Home Missions both declined to enter such alliance, so that later their names were stricken from the Preamble. There remained but the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Men's Board of Foreign Missions. When this document was introduced, it caused considerable controversy. A few members of the Board had been appealed to in private conversation and were disposed to favor the adventure, but the majority were of a different mind. When the matter came up for discussion in the meeting, the President of the Men's Board addressed the women. He assurred them most earnestly that this was not a merger; it was only an "experiment," and if unsatisfactory, could be dissolved. Considerable opposition developed, and a motion was made to lay on the Table. This motion carried by a substantial majority. After adjournment, the writer asked the President of the General Conference this question: "Does not the proposed Constitution, to all intents and purposes, nullify the Constitution of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society?" He hesitated a moment, then answered, "Yes." The writer was fully convinced of this, before he gave the answer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ITEMS

The Rally Day Offerings

It will not be possible to give the final results of the Rally Day offerings for this year until after the first of May. The total to February 28th was $16,105.25.

That is the largest offering ever given the Board of Education for any special day and $2487.78 more than received last year. As there are still two months of the fiscal year we anticipate a substantial increase over the above totals.

The reports from the Adrian College field men continue encouraging. The response in the Onondaga Conference is truly inspiring. Although this is the smallest conference in the Adrian group they went over their quota thirty-five per cent. The results in the Pittsburgh Conference are satisfactory to date and it is hoped the final report will be as good as that from Onondaga.

The campaign for students for Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, is already a success. The outlook for the summer school which opens June 6th is very bright, present indications pointing to a substantial increase over last year. Several of the members of the Board of Regents report one or more students secured for the opening in the fall. It is hoped to more than double this year's enrollment.

The details of the withdrawal of the Methodist Protestant Church from the merger with the United Brethren in Kansas City University are nearly completed. When the papers are exchanged the main features of the transaction will be made public. Up to the present time no insurmountable difficulties have been encountered and the negotiations have been carried on harmoniously.

Another ministerial student has been added to our list recently. That makes thirty-three receiving assistance from the Board this year. Return payments have been to date far below the amount received last year, but the income on invested funds has been larger. We need, however, fifteen hundred dollars by April 30th to meet our obligations to our beneficiaries this year. Appeals are going to former beneficiaries in the hope sufficient funds can be secured so there will be no deficit.

This has been the best year in the history of our Student Loan Fund activities. The return loans have been more than twice the amount ever paid in one year and the attitude of those now out of school is commendable in almost every respect. We have helped eighteen students this year. Of the money required thirteen hundred dollars is still unprovided for. The regular payments of principal and interest are due April 1st and we anticipate a generous response at the time.

HOME MISSIONS

Easter Celebration

The two great events which the christian world looks forward to with intense interest are Christmas and Easter. We are now approaching the season when all believers in the Lord Jesus Christ are turning their minds and hearts toward Easter with joyful anticipation.

Easter is the morn of victory, the triumphant day. The crucifixion had taken place, the tragedy of the cross had been enacted on Calvary. Hope had died in the hearts of the followers of the Lord Jesus. They trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel, but alas! their expectations had come to naught. This was the state of mind of His followers when Mary returned from the tomb to inform the apostles that the risen Lord had appeared to her in the garden. This at first they believed not. It seemed to them as idle tales. Later Peter and John hastened to the sepulchre and when they saw they believed. From that hour hope revived in the hearts of his followers. This hope became stronger as Jesus continued to show himself to his disciples.

From that day to this Easter has been a joyous season throughout the christian world. Though there may be different ways of celebrating this event everything tends toward joy and gladness. With some it will be expressed in flowers, with others in dress. Millions of money will be spent during the season for flowers. There is no way to estimate this amount. Perhaps an equal sum in dress. We are not condemning these, although it would seem to be out of harmony with the spirit of the occasion to carry them to extremes.

We think however the scriptural way, and that most pleasing to our Risen Lord will be in glad acclaim of our faith and devotion to him who died for our sins according to the scriptures, and rose again the third day according to the scriptures. We therefore appeal to our Methodist Protestant friends everywhere to make preparation that in their churches, with song and sermon, with Easter anthems and other suitable services they may seek to glorify him who says to all "I am the Resurrection and the life."

There is nothing more appropriate than for the children to have some part in the services of the church on this glad day. They may not understand much of a profound sermon on the great truths of the resurrection. Their minds and hearts however will respond to a simple service in which they have some part. In the exercises prepared by the Board of Home Missions for use in our churches every hymn, every recitation, including the Pageant, bears directly on the glad Easter day and the resurrection of our Lord. We have all been busy making preparation; the climax will be when we enter our churches to offer our worship and adoration to him who has brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, and make our offerings for the preaching of that gospel to every creature. We also pray that on this victorious Easter day many, who have never confessed Jesus as their personal Savior, will do so and unite with his church.

We have done what we could during the weeks that have passed, not only to furnish the churches and Sunday schools with an appropriate service, but to urge all to make Easter a day of great triumph. I am sending return postals to all of our pastors requesting them to make reports that results both in reception of members and offerings made may be sent out through our church papers, to every pastor and church in the denomination.

THE DENOMINATIONAL OUTLOOK

Arkansas.—The membership of the recently organized church at El Dorado have purchased half a city block on which they propose to build a hundred thousand dollar building. Work will start within the next month.

Eastern.—Rev. C. D. Sinkinson, D. D., pastor of Christ Church, Atlantic City, made the opening prayer on the first day of the present session of the New Jersey Legislature.—— The church at Kearny has been completely renovated, new roof, metal ceiling, electric fixtures, new carpet.——The Willing Workers class of the First Church, Lynbrook, have placed a velvet carpet in the Sunday school room of the church.

Georgia.—The men's club of the Pearce Chapel church have remodeled the basement for Sunday school rooms, and have assumed the payment of the insurance on the church.

Indiana.—During the past four years the Home Department of the Victory Memorial Church, Indianapolis, has contributed $1182.65 to the Sunday school and church.——The special meeting at Logansport resulted in thirty-five professions and twenty additions.——Fifteen members have been added to the church at New Haven. The church has purchased a lot next to the church and expect to enlarge the present building.——The church at Elkhart has the largest Men's Brotherhood in the conference.——An electrically lighted bulletin board has been placed in front of the Unity Church, Indianapolis.——A new parsonage is to be built for the Hopewell church.

Illinois.—The church and parsonage at Ellsworth have been greatly improved, largely through the efforts of the Ladies' Aid.——Two lots adjoining the Southfield, Chicago, Church, have been purchased by the congregation on which a community building will be erected. To pay for the lots, which cost $5,000, the church is running a grocery store.

Iowa-Missouri.—An all-day service in observance of the Day of Prayer for Missions was held in the Luray church, delegates to the meeting being present from a number of churches in the Conference.——Two members of the Luray church have given the lot next to the church to the congregation. The present parsonage, some blocks away, will be sold, and a new parsonage erected on the new lot.

Maryland.—A number of charges in the Conference have made substantial increases in salary for next year.——The Harrison Bible Class of Congress Street Church, Washington, D. C., contributed $431 during the year. The ladies of the church held an oyster supper and cleared $450.——A new church costing $20,000 is being built for the Mt. Carmel congregation, Howard charge.——Twenty-three members were received into the Taylor Memorial Church, Philadelphia, on a recent Sunday.——$1,200 has been expended on improvements on Wesley Chapel of Kent.——Rev. R. W. White, pastor of Trinity church, Baltimore, has been given an Essex coach by the membership of the church.

Michigan.—A Methodist Protestant Church has been organized at Unity.

Mississippi.—A parsonage is being built for the pastor of Choctaw circuit.——Eleven women of Mosley Bridge church brought in 3,200 Sunday eggs, valued at about $70.

Ohio.—The Ladies' Aid of the Cambridge church pledged $10,000 toward the new building, and have paid $4,000 to date. The Sunday evening services are being broadcasted.

Pittsburgh.—Rev. J. R. C. Clark, pastor of First Church, North Side, Pittsburgh, preached to the members of the order of United Americans in Carnagie Hall. The order presented the church with a beautiful American flag.——Twenty-one members have been added to the Youngstown church as a result of the recent meeting.

Washington.—The new Seaview Church, Seattle, was dedicated on Sunday, February 6. The church cost $25,000.

West Virginia.—On Sunday, March 6, the new church at Spencer was dedicated. The completed building with furnishings cost $33,000. Of this amount $16,000 was raised on the day of dedication.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Bible does not contemplate a missionary society in the church. Christ gave but one missionary commission, and that was to the whole church. No Christian is exempt from the obligations of this commission.

The supreme business of the church is to make Christ known to all men, and our missionary societies ought ever to be regarded as channels through which the whole church functions, and to which the whole church gives its support.

It is a real privilege to be able to participate in the greatest enterprise in all the world—that of world evangelization.

We have a pardonable pride in being identified with big things. Our part may be humble, but we can feel the thrill of belonging. The story is told of a humble German workman, who said to a group of tourists, who were admiring the fine proportions and magnificent towers of Cologne cathedral, "We did a fine job, didn't we?" "We," said the tourist, "what did you do?" With apparent pride, he answered, "I helped mix the mortar." Missions is big business, and its privilege ought to thrill you.

The founder of the famous China Inland Mission tells us that God said to him: "Hudson Taylor, I am going to evangelize the interior of China, and if you will go along, I'll use you to do it." He went, and the world knows the marvelous results that followed, and that are still being achieved. God's programme for the evangelizing of all the world is going through, and he will use you if you will co-operate. What a privilege to carry a world in your thinking, and planning, and giving and loving! The mythical Atlas carried the world on his shoulders, but the Christian Atlas can carry the world in his heart. Not only is carrying the gospel to all men a big enterprise—it is also the most successful international enterprise of the present day. The progress of missions is the burning bush of church life, aflame with the presence of God. The history of this progress is unique in many regards.

The missionary achievement of the first three centuries was remarkable. If the pace established in Paul's day had continued, the world would have been evangelized long ago. This progress was interrupted, when in the year 313 Emperor Constantine joined hands with Bishop Melchiades, thus uniting the church and the state. Harnack says "the church of Constantine drove into the wilderness, and into solitude, those who wished to devote themselves to religion."

This gave rise to monasticism, and out of the monasteries came those who evangelized northwestern Europe.

For fifteen hundred years the church had virtually no missionary programme. A few loyal souls, such as St. Francis, of Assissi; St. Patrick, St. Colombo, Father Zavier and Raymond Lull, kept alive the missionary spirit.

Then followed the Reformation in the sixteenth century. This movement was a protest against the tyranny of Rome in matters of faith and polity, but it was not a Re-formation of the church on the apostolic basis of world evangelism. We miss in the reformers not only the note of missions, but even the idea of missions. This apathy continued for nearly three hundred years. Then there came a simultaneous awakening in Europe, Great Britain and the United States.

The voices of Count Zinzendorf in Germany, Carey in England, and the Hay-Stack Prayer Meeting Band in New England, were heard throughout Christendom, calling the church to her God-ordained task; and now for a century and a quarter the appeal of heathendom has been increasingly accepted.

The following figures will indicate the increasing response of the church to her missionary obligation: When the Ecumenical Conference of Missions met in New York in 1900, the United States and Canada reported 5,000 missionaries, supported by an annual budget of $7,000,000. When the World's Missionary Conference met in Edinburgh in 1910 these same countries reported 7,000 missionaries supported by an annual budget of $12,000,000. In February, 1925, at the great missionary conference in Washington, D. C., these same two nations reported 19,000 missionaries in the field, and $44,750,000 raised in 1924 for their support. These figures show in twenty-five years a four hundred per cent increase in missionaries, and a six hundred and fifty per cent in income.

Such progress can not be duplicated in any other international institution doing business on a similar scale. If I had the space I could show for your encouragement that our own denomination has kept pace with this wonderful progress.

OUR STORY PAGE

ADAM AND EVE

"Children! Children!" chided Aunt Ruthie. "Stop wrangling about whose daddy is the nicest. Just think how fortunate you are to have daddies who think so much of you and who are such fine men. Besides, little cousins should agree, and when you come to visit me, I want you to be happy."

"May we go over to the Park, Aunt Ruthie?" begged Winnie, of the chestnut locks and deep blue eyes. "We could roll down the little grassy knolls and pick flowers."

"Oh, please let us," entreated Hilda, hopping up and down excitedly, her soft yellow curls bobbing like little golden flowers on their stems.

"I think," smiled Aunt Ruthie, "the wild flowers must be out in blossom. Some of them are golden and some are red, and the children are allowed to pick them. But don't pick too many, for you must leave some for other little people who go there to play also."

"We'll just take a few," promised Lettie, her black eyes snapping.

"All right, you may go," decided Aunt Ruthie. "When the big bell rings for five o'clock, come home and I shall have a surprise for you."'

The children were delighted to find themselves in the big, open field. The grass was green and velvety, and bright flowers peeped up at them every way they turned for a kind old gentleman had left money to scatter flower seeds broadcast every year so that the children could pick bright blossoms when they came to Hills and Dales Park.

All at once, Winnie stopped very short and scarcely breathed.

"Hush," she said softly to Hilda who was running too. "Don't move or we'll frighten them."

Lettie was picking a big poppy and didn't see for a minute those two friendly little red squirrels sitting there on their haunches, each cracking a nut and so interested in doing it that they just looked around at Winnie and Hilda and went right on as though there wasn't anything to be afraid of at all. And of course there wasn't, for the little girls would not have hurt a single hair on their small bodies.

The children kept very, very quiet and when Lettie looked up and saw the bright-eyed little woods people, she almost squealed with delight. But she thought just in time not to do it, and the squirrels went right on cracking and eating and chattering together.

When they each finished the nut, they looked expectantly at Winnie and Hilda, as much as to say, "It's your turn to give us something now." And the children laughed right out. They couldn't help it.

Hilda tiptoed farther away and beckoned for Winnie and Lettie to follow her.

"I've got a nickel," she said. "Let's go down to the little candy store we passed coming here, and get some nuts for those squirrels and feed them. Come on, quick, before the squirrels run away," shouted Lettie, already off like the wind.

The girls were not gone very long and when they came back to Hills and Dales Park, there wasn't a red squirrel in sight! They were much disappointed, and Lettie was for eating up the nuts rather than carrying them around.

Winnie shook her head.

"No," she said, "who knows but those squirrels may come back any minute? And besides, we've got to pick out names for them."

So the children sat down on the grass and suggested a lot of names, and finally they agreed that Adam and Eve would be nice names. Adam was the squirrel with the tail like a plume, and Eve the one with the tail which looked as though it had been partly broken off. The children wondered what accident had happened.

"Maybe Eve was in the war," hinted Lettie, "and was lucky to get away with her life."

"I don't believe it," differed Hilda.

"I think," frowned Winnie, "that some ole cat mos' caught Eve and she got away by pulling her tail right off."

"Or maybe the cat bit it off quick as a wink," said Lettie.

"Hush," warned Hilda, and sure enough, right in front of them, running and leaping over the little hillside were Adam and Eve. The children were delighted.

Lettie said, "Give me the bag of nuts," and she tossed two gently over near their little visitors.

"Let me give them some," demanded Hilda, and she tossed two more.

Clearly the squirrels were expecting a treat of this kind, for they didn't act a bit surprised, and began cracking and eating again as though it were the most ordinary thing in the world for squirrels to be fed in this manner.

Winnie hadn't said a word, but she had put her hand into the bag and had taken a couple of nuts out.

She crept very,very near to Adam and Eve, going so slowly that her cousins didn't realize what she was doing. Then when the squirrels had cracked the nuts lying about them, Winnie held out her hand and made a soft little noise a good deal like that of the squirrels themselves.

The little furry creatures looked her over carefully, putting their heads first on one side and then on the other. Evidently they approved of her, for first Eve came and then Adam followed and took the nut Winnie held for him right out of her fingers. The children could scarcely keep still, they were so pleased.

"Let's catch them," Lettie whispered, "and take them home and let Aunt Ruthie see them."

Winnie didn't say anything for a minute or two, but she was thinking deeply. She threw a couple more nuts to Adam and Eve.

"Remember," Winnie remarked, "there are only two squirrels and three of us. We'll not be at Aunt Ruthie's many days more, and we couldn't divide the squirrels up, and besides Adam and Eve would be unhappy if they were separated, and it's more fun for them out here than shut up."

"I'd like to take 'em both home with me," pouted Hilda.

"The very idea," cried Lettie. "You don't suppose, do you, that you can have everything in sight!"

It really looked as though Hilda and Lettie were going to have another dispute, and Aunt Ruthie wouldn't be there to settle matters.

The squirrels must have felt that it was time for them to disappear. So they chattered their thanks, shook their tails, and were off like little streaks of fire in the setting sun.

Just then the bell clanged and said, "Go home! Go home! Go home!"

The little girls started as fast as they could go to see who would be there first.

Aunt Ruthie was watching for them.

"How nice," she exclaimed, when they told her about Adam and Eve. "I am glad you decided to let them live in the park among their friends. Come and see what I have for you."

On the back porch, Aunt Ruthie had set a small round table. There were flowers in the middle, and sandwiches, and big bowls of strawberries with cream, and ice cream and cake—a regular party. And you can imagine how pleased the children were when they saw that the ice cream was in the shape of little squirrels with bushy tails over their backs.

"See," giggled Winnie, "my squirrel is running away!"

So it was, for it was a warm day, and the cunning little front paws were melting rapidly.—Selected.

A VALIANT BOY SWIMMER

William Wrigley, Jr., offered twenty-five thousand dollars to that person who would swim the Catalina channel lying between Catalina Island and the California mainland. It was a fine advertising scheme for the real estate development which Mr. Wrigley was making on Catalina Island, but a challenge to the world's best swimmers as well, making it well worth their while. Many swimmers went to California for the race. To many the feat seemed impossible of accomplishment. The channel is twenty-two miles across. The thermometer told the swimmers that the water was fifty-four degrees—too cold for a long swim. The tides were such as to render no aid to the swimmer. It was, all admitted, more difficult than the English channel. With all the others, there went to California a 17-year-old boy from Toronto, Canada. He had no money, so he and a friend started across the continent on an old motorcycle. The machine gave out in Arkansas, and a couple of honey-mooners bound for California picked them up and carried them into Los Angeles. The boys looked up an acquaintance, Henry O'Byrne, of Santa Monica. O'Byrne had come west from Canada to enter his daughters in the race, but feeling sure that they couldn't make it, he undertook the training of this 17-year-old lad from Toronto. George Young gave promise. He believed that he could swim that twenty-two-mile stretch of icy water. He felt that he had to swim it. His mother was sick, crippled, and poor. He started with the other hundred swimmers and soon took his place along with the best of them. One by one red flares from the accompanying boats of the other swimmers gave notice of their withdrawal from the race. Soon only a few remained. Young was among the few. At last, tired from his fifteen hours and forty-five minute swim, he clambered to land. He was the first, the only one of the hundred-odd swimmers to cross the Catalina channel. He said that as he fought his way through the icy water, and through the tangled seaweed he thought of his mother and of her need. Back in Toronto the mother, Mrs. Jennie Young, lent her swimming boy the strength of her prayers. Young received the prize of twenty-five thousand dollars, and sent it to his mother. His managers set to work to realize on the immense popularity of this young swimmer, and it is believed that he may make more than a hundred thousand dollars out of it. It is one of the greatest swims recorded in sporting annals, and the thing which is admirable about it all is the motive which kept the laddie going when it seemed that heart and muscles failed.—Selected.

—High Point College scores another victory in intercollegiatet debate. This time it is North Carolina State College that is vanquished. The representatives of High Point were J. Elwood Carroll and O. C. Loy, while State was represented by H. M. Stott and J. D. Conrad. The question debated was whether the United States should immediately recognize the soviet government of Russia. The debate is described as "interesting and informative."

—According to report Asheboro churches have just taken a religious census of the town (or city) which will be of great practical value to ministers and other church workers. "Pastors now have a card record of every person in town, their address, age, whether a member of any church, where membership is held, local church preference, whether they attend Sunday school, if so, where, and whether they have family prayer."

YOUR SILENT PARTNER

"For more than 20 years," writes a man of business, "I was in business for myself with the Lord as a silent minority stockholder—a minority stockholder as far as the profits were concerned, though He had furnished all the capital. I was conscious of this partnership and I tried to be fair with my partner. I had promised to give a certain per cent of the profits, if there were any, to Him. I kept that promise through the years. After a while I became ashamed of the small amount I had promised the Lord and gave more, and I also promised that I would give much of my time to the Lord's work."

How have you been treating your Silent Partner who furnished all your working capital, all your living energy, all your mental acuteness with which to direct your business from year to year, all the favoring conditions and circumstances and everything else that has contributed to the success of the undertaking in which you have become engaged?—Selected.

SOWING IN TEARS

Weeping times are suitable for sowing; we do not want the ground to be too dry. Seed steeped in the tears of earnest anxiety will come up all the sooner. Truth spoken in awful earnestness has a double life about it.

Our heavenly seed could not fitly be sown laughing. Deep sorrow and concern for the souls of others are a far more fit accompaniment of godly teaching than anything like levity. We have heard of men who went to war with a light heart, but they were beaten; and it is mostly so with those who sow in the same style. When thine eyes are dim with silver tears, think of the golden corn. Bear cheerfully the present toil and disappointment; for the harvest day will fully recompense thee.—Selected.

GOD'S WORD

We must make a great difference between God's Word and the word of man. A man's word is a little sound that flies into the air and soon vanishes; but the Word of God is greater than heaven and earth, yea, greater than death and hell, for it forms part of the power of God, and endures everlastingly. We should therefore diligently study God's Word, and know and assuredly believe that God Himself speaks to us.—Luther.

—Rev. G. F. Millaway is preaching nightly in Calvary church with his usual fire and force. He makes a strong impression upon the congregation. Some of the unsaved are yielding to the appeals he makes and asking to be prayed for. Brother Millaway's wife has been in Long's hospital for two weeks very ill, but we are glad that a turn for the better took place in time to permit him to fill his engagement with Calvary church. He preaches with power because he knows from his own experience that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to those who believe it sufficiently to try it. Brother Millaway sees a great difference between being in Christ and out of Christ.

—We read that many missionaries in China are unwilling to leave their posts even when warned to do so by the United States government. Some will call it fool-hardiness, but others will think of it as evidence of their faith in God and in the people for whose uplift they are working. Let us pray that their consecration to their tasks will be honored of God to the furtherance of the Gospel. It may be some of them believe it a time when they should die for the sake of their Lord who called them to service there. All honor to those who count not their lives dear unto themselves if by the sacrifice of life they may save men from death in its most dreadful meaning.

New additions to the lists for the two weeks: On the A. C. B. there are four: Tabernacle, Alamance, Spring Church and Union Grove. On the College there are eight—Spencer going over the top, with Mt. Pleasant, Lebanon, Orange, Calvary, Flat Rock, Enfield, and Spring Church entering. On the W. H. M. S. there are five: Community, Fountain Place, Welch Memorial, Spencer and Weaverville. On the W. F. M. S. there are seven: Vance, Gibsonville, Randolph, Mt. Hermon, Lebanon, Tabernacle and Welch Memorial.

On the College assessment Union Grove and Spencer went over the top and Bethel church on Alamance charge. On the W. F. M. S. the following paid in full for the missionary year from April to April, some going over quite a bit: Asheville, Mt. Pleasant, Whitakers, State Street, Hollister, Union Chapel, Salem, Hickory Ridge, Mt. Zion, Graham, Thomasville Community, Lebanon, Bethesda, Winston-Salem First, Reidsvlile, High Point, Mt. Carmel, Pleasant Hill, Fair Grove, Charlotte, Henderson, West End, Burlington, Calvary, Grace, Maple Springs, Worthville, Mebane, Asheboro, Tabernacle, Bethel and Burlington Y. W. A.

The promotions on the A. C. B. are Anderson, Flat Rock, Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Hermon, Why Not, Saxapahaw, Cleveland, and Denton. Friendsship by a contribution holds their own place. On the G. C. B., Liberty-Siler City and Forsyth. Leaders for the week are Burlington on the A. C. B., Community on the G. C. B. and Granville on the College. Just a fine report. There will be a goodly number of promotions, we think, next week. Will you and your church be among them?

We are glad to make a correction in favor of Vance W. H. M. S. this week. A contribution that should have been credited to them was credited elsewhere. We gladly make any corrections when we can get the straight of it. For this reason will the missionary auxiliaries be very careful to state the name of their charge when sending in money? We cannot print the names of individual churches, sorry to say—unless they report over the top;

so sometimes where there are several churches of the same name we do not know where to credit the contribution unless you state to the treasurers which charge you are on. Thank you. Yours in His dear service,

A. G. DIXON.

N.B.—Late reports indicate an error in the above report, Spencer having gone over the top on the G. C. B.

A CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank all those who have sent me birthday cards and letters and presents. I have received a good many and Brother J. H. Stowe has been to see me. I am sure it has done me more good than flowers will after I am laid beneath the sod.

Praying God's blessings upon each and every one, Your friend,

G. A. LAUGHLIN.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. P. H. Angel and family wish to express their thanks to their many relatives and friends for the kindness and sympathy shown them during the illness and after the death of their beloved father and husband, P. H. Angel; also for the many beautiful floral designs.

NOTICE

Our second quarterly conference will meet on Easter Monday, April 18. All-day program. Rev. R. C. Stubbins will be with us and preach for us at 11 a. m. and hold our conference in the afternoon. There will be dinner on the ground. Everybody from all the churches on the work is invited. Come one and all. We will have a day's program.

MOTHER'S DAY PAGEANT

The girls' Literary Society of Alvan Drew School, Pine Ridge, Kentucky, under the direction of Miss Byrd, one of our High School teachers, prepared and presented a very fine pageant entitled "The Spirit of American Women." It is an exaltation of motherhood and so is very appropriate for use on Mother's Day. Parts for thirty or more girls; one scene, easily staged. We have printed the pageant on our own press and will send a samply copy free for inspection, provided you return it if you decide not to use it, or pay for it. Price $.25 or one dozen copies postpaid for $2.50.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Howard

Delilah Elizabeth Howard, daughter of Joseph and Eliza Howard, was born in Davie county, N. C., December 7, 1847.

She lived with her parents in Davie county till their death, 1807. She then at the age of sixty years, with her sister Mary, moved to Yadkin College, and the rest of her days lived with Mr. John Taylor and his wife, the parents of Rev. S. W. Taylor. Mrs. Taylor was her sister.

At about the age of twenty she professed religion and joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Dulins, Mocksville circuit, where she ever afterward kept her membership; but at her new home she was a faithful worshiper and worker in the church. Her interest in the Sunday school was especially noticeable.

Her pleasant smiles, kind words and helpful deeds made her loved by all.

More than a year ago she fell and was crippled and could not for months walk. Later she gradually improved, till she was going again, much of the time upon her crutch. During the Christmas holidays her last illness commenced. At first the change to an inexperienced observer was hardly perceptible. She said that she was not sick; but week after week she gradually grew worse till she unconsciously passed away, February 16, 1927, at the age of seventy-nine.

A large number of friends gathered at the home funeral. Her body was placed in the Advance cemetery.

She left one surviving brother, Samuel Bryan Howard, of Belews Creek, N. C., and two sisters, Mrs. John Taylor and Miss Mary Howard both living at Yadkin College.

"Let us be patient, we who mourn with weeping,
After some vanished face;
The Lord has taken, but to add more beauty
And a diviner grace.
When through the storm and tempest safely anchored
Just on the other side,
We shall see that dear face through death's deep shadows,
Not changed, but glorified."

W. T. TOTTEN.

Hancock

Isaiah Franklin Hancock, born August 6, 1848, died March 10, 1927. He was married in 1869 to Miss Savilia Chrisco. To this union were born five children, four sons and one daughter. His first wife died in 1888. He was married in 1892 to Miss Lenoria Lowdermilk, who still survives him. Isaiah Franklin Hancock was a member of Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant church for more than sixty years. He was superintendent of the Sunday school between 25 and 30 years. I have seen some of them whom he taught rise up while he was living and point to the old man and thank him for his faithfulness in teaching them the word of God. Yes, we feel that Brother Hancock was a true worker in the vineyard of the Lord, and that he has heard the welcome voice of Him whom he served and trusted bidding come up higher. Brother Hancock though old in years would walk many times to his church and Sunday school which was a distance of some four or five miles, while others thought it too rough to go. May his influence cause others to do likewise.

He leaves to mourn their loss a companion, three sons and one daughter and many relatives and friends. One son preceded him to the life beyond. May the bereaved family, relatives and friends be comforted by the Spirit of Him who mourned with them that mourn and rejoiced with them that rejoiced.

D. I. GARNER.

Little

Alexander Marlboro Little was born November 13, 1852, and departed this life March 16, 1927. Mr. Little had been in poor health for some time, but seemed to be happy in the Kingdom service. He professed faith in Christ the year of the great earth quake, joined the Methodist Protestant church and remained a faithful member until death. At the funeral a Bible was placed on his breast open at one of his favorite passages, the 90th Psalm. The funeral service was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. E. C. Taylor of the Baptist church, and Rev. R. C. Kirk of the M. E. South, at Fairfield church. Mr. Little leaves to mourn their loss, a companion, thirteen children, forty-one grandchildren, and a host of friends.

We pray that God's richest blessings may rest upon the relatives and friends left behind, and that they may be faithful until the end.

Siler

Many good people have been called to Heaven, but I doubt if any one has been called away who loved his church more, or held the affections of his neighbors more than John Siler of Zion M. P. church, of the Chatham charge.

Some years ago his wife died and the children all moved to Raleigh or had married and gone away from the Siler home. It became necessary for Brother Siler to move to Raleigh. The people at Zion felt, "We cannot do without John Siler." Though moved away, he still remembered Zion, his home church, and sent his contributions. His health failed or his son would have moved back to the old home with the father. But God called Brother John Siler to Heaven. On March 11, 1927, his body was brought back to Zion where a great throng had gathered to pay a tribute of respect to their friend and loved one.

Rev. T. F. Andrew of the Friends church, a neighbor, had charge of the funeral. Rev. W. M. Pike and the writer of the M. P. church assisted in the funeral services.

How beautiful to have lived such a life that the neighbors feel, "We just can't do without him." But God has a higher service in Heaven for such as he. Were the history of Zion church written, the part that Brother Siler has taken would stand out in a marvelous manner.

May his mantle fall on another who shall be worthy and willing to lead the people to better things.

His children have the deep sympathy of their many friends in their sorrow.

A. O. LINDLEY.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—We had an unusually large congregation the fourth Sunday morning and Mr. Fogleman preached a beautiful and inspiring sermon. We had some special music and Mr. Polk Garrett of Henderson favored us with a solo. Mr. Garrett has been kind enough to come out to our church each Wednesday evening to choir practice and has been leading the singing preaching Sundays. There has been much improvement in the singing since he has been with us, and we hope that he will continue to help us.

Our Sunday school has been doing nicely, and since spring has opened up we hope to do a great deal better.

We have Christian Endeavor meeting every Sunday evening and have had a good attendance all winter. We have had some real interesting meetings, and parctically all of the boys and girls respond when called upon to lead. We have had three socials this winter and they have been thoroughly enjoyed.

Our Home and Foreign Missionary Societies have done splendid work the past year. We have paid our budget in full. Our last monthly meeting was held in the church the third Sunday afternoon. Circle No. 1, of which Mrs. J. M. Barnes is chairman, had charge of the program. Mrs. L. E. Barnes conducted the devotional service. Mrs. T. A. Stone read an article, "Prayer," from the Missionary Record. Mrs. W. A. Perdue read "My Idea of Stewardship," and Miss Leah Davis in an impressive way told us of the need of missions, with special reference to foreign missions. The question box was conducted by our president Mrs. N. F. Parham. Officers were elected for the coming year, and we also elected delegates to branch meeting. Our next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Emily Floyd, which will be in April.

No definite plans have been made for Easter service. You will hear from us concerning this later. REPORTER.

Democrat Church.—We are sorry we haven't been reporting much from here. But it isn't because we have failed. We are getting along better in our Sunday school and church work than we have in the past three years.

The people seem to have more interest and try to do more. We have a good attendance and are expecting more when the weather will permit.

Our pastor, Rev. H. W. Bell, fills his appointments and delivers inspiring and helpful sermons. His family also is a great help to our Sunday school.

Let us work together and help each other and try to do more for God every day.

Best wishes to the Herald and to all.

JESSIE WILLIAMS, Reporter.

Bessemer City Church.—We had very good attendance Sunday at Sunday school, also at church service Sunday night. Brother Carson delivered a very interesting sermon to a very attentive congregation. Our C. E. society president was absent Sunday evening on account of sickness in his home. We had a very brief service. The C. E. society gave an oyster supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Fortenbery which was much enjoyed by the young folks. The C. E. society is a great help to the young folks. They seem to take an interest in attending the Sunday evening services.

The Ladies' Aid society still have their meetings and they are a great help to the church in general.

Our special meeting will begin second Sunday in May, with Rev. J. M. Farrell as pulpit help. Don't forget to pray for us that we may have a glorious revival. We need a gracious revival in the hearts of our people here that they may be up and doing for the Master.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Welch Memorial.—We have not been doing any extraordinary things, but I think there are many things worthy of mention. We have a splendid Ladies' Aid Society which means much to the church; they held their last monthly meeting with Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Ward, about forty-five present including visitors. Among the visitors were Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Moton, and Mrs. Willis Lee, Brother and Sister Moton were not strangers, as they have been associated with the Society for five years in the past; they are always welcome to meet with our people in any of our meetings. Mrs. Lee was not a stranger either, as she was one time a member of our church and the Ladies' Aid Society; after moving to Mechanicsville she with her family united with Brother Hutton's church. We were glad to have her with us in our meeting. We also have a live Missionary Society, or Societies, as we have both Home and Foreign. It is two in one; both meet at the same time and transact their business together. These Societies held last monthly meeting with Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Ridge in Archdale; the attendance was not so good, as several of our members were sick. The president, Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, was not present because of illness; she has been quite sick for the past few days; we hope she will soon recover. One of the most interesting events in our last Ladies' Aid meeting was the collection which amounted to something over sixty-five dollars. Several of the ladies had sent out some little aprons and overalls to their friends with the request that they measure their waist and return a penny for each inch. We also have a wide awake Senior Chrisian Endeavor Society, which is doing things worthy of mention. They won the banner at the last City Union; this union meeting was held at the College. The society purchased a piano last year for their use, also a nice office desk; they are holding regular weekly prayer meetings, in the different homes; they also hold an early morning service each first Sunday. These meetings are very helpful and inspiring.

Our Sunday school is also very encouraging; we had two hundred and eighty some odd present last Sunday; we are looking for over three hundred next Sunday. The school is planning an Easter Service; we hope to succeed in putting on an interesting program; we are using the program sent out by our own publishing house.

Yes, it was the Baraca class, and the Young Men's Bible class which made it possible for us to have that nice Bulletin Board, which you see placed on the corner of our church. It is the Winters Interchangeable Model M, it is one of the best. We appreciate it so much. We will try to preach through it to the public.

We are planning to begin our special meeting the third Sunday in May. Brother S. W. Taylor will be our pulpit help. We are looking forward and praying for a great meeting. Brethren and friends, pray for us.

T. E. PIERCE, Pastor.

Hollistter, Halifax Charge.—Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday with a wonderful sermon. Mr. Spencer is preaching a series of sermons on different questions. On the fourth Sunday in February he preached on the question, "What's the Matter With the World?" Sunday his subject was, "What's the Matter With the Church?" They were splendid sermons. Wish more of our people could have heard them. On the fourth Sunday morning in April he is going to preach from the subject, "What's the Matter With the Home?"

At the morning service Sunday an offering was taken for High Point College. Just before the offering was taken our pastor prayed a special prayer for High Point College. Following the preaching service the Lord's Supper was administered.

Our Sunday school is doing very well now. There is lots of room for improvement, and we hope as the spring has come that our Sunday school will take on new life, and the people will become more interested in Sunday school and will attend regularly.

The Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary societies met with Mrs. E. T. Ellington on Tuesday afternoon, March 15. There were a large number of our members present. We were sorry our pastor and wife could not be with us, as Mr. Spencer had to conduct a funeral that afternoon. We elected new officers. They are as follows: President, Mrs. C. L. Spencer; vice-president, Mrs. W. N. Ellington; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Williams; secretary of thankful boxes, Miss Kathleen Shearin. The meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. T. C. Williams. The hostess, assisted by Miss Alma Crawley, served cake and jelly. Our April meeting will be with Mrs. W. J. Galloway.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Palestine, Flat Rock Charge.—Sunday school is doing fine; our regular attendance stands between 65 and 75. We are glad to see our people coming and working together more than ever before. It's a fine thought to know that Jesus will meet with us if we are in the right.

On March 29th we were made sad when death claimed one of our church members, Mr. Jasper Sharon. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved wife and children.

The Stokesdale Evangelistic Club met last Sunday morning immediatedly after Sunday school. It was one of the best meetings that it has been my privilege to attend. I think it was enjoyed by all present.

Now spring is coming every thing is putting forth new life. So may we as Sunday school workers put on new life and work more for the Master. May we all continue to pray that our Sunday school and church will grow both in number and spirit. T. G. YOUNG.

Calvary.—Our church is trying to have a part in the evangelistic campaign that is on in Greensboro. The pastor has been talking on the subject of evangelism in the Sunday and mid-week services, and is very earnestly endeavoring to get the members of the church to realize their duty and responsibility in personal evangelistic work. The women of the church have been holding prayer services for several weeks in preparation for the special services which began Sunday, April 3. In his sermon Sunday morning the pastor gave some of the essentials of a revival. He said that the church must be interested and make a united effort. The confidence of the world in Christ and religion depends on a united church.

We are very glad that Mrs. Millaway's condition was so much improved that Mr. Millaway could preach for us on Sunday evening; and we expect him to preach each evening during the week

We had unusually good congregations at both services Sunday, and we are encouraged to hope that we will have a good meeting.

Next Sunday is to be observed as Decision Day in our Sunday school. In preparation for this the teachers in the classes and the pastor at the close of the Sunday school have been helping the children to be ready for this service.

Our Sunday school is gradually growing. The young men's and young women's classes both have contests on, and are gaining several new members. The attendance in the primary department has been affected quite a good deal by whooping cough and chicken pox.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society has taken on renewed life and is having much better attendance and very interesting meetings. We have had some enthusiastic debates recently. REPORTER.

Midway Church, Guilford Circuit.—Our work is progressing fine. Sunday school is increasing in interest as well as in number.

We were indeed glad to have Dr. and Mrs. Dixon with us last Sunday evening. Dr. Dixon filled Mr. Loy's regular appointment at 7:30. He brought a very inspiring message which I feel sure was enjoyed by everyone. Mrs. Dixon organized a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at that time. About twenty-two people joined this society.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Yesterday was a good day at Friendship. Our pastor gave us another one of his splendid sermons. His sermons are all good and we have learned to admire him very much; he seems to put his whole soul into anything he undertakes and we believe that a great future lies before him.

May we all work together in such a way that this may be the best year's work in the history of Friendship church.

Everything seems going that way now.

We are proud to see the interest manifested by both young and old in the church service and Sunday school.

The Christian Endeavor is moving on fine. The young people especially seem very much interested in it.

A number of the members of our Woman's Home Misionary Society went to Mt. Hermon yesterday afternoon to attend the society meeting down there.

Among other things, Friendship has purchased a new stove since Christmas that not only adds to the appearance of the church inside but also to the comfort on a cold day.

Mr. Carroll has already mentioned our new lights.

A program is well on the way to be given Easter. Everybody seems interested. The exact hour has not been set but I presume it will be Sunday night.

We were glad to see the large crowd with us yesterday from Burlington and Alamance. Come again, folks.

Last, but not least, we must mention the fact that we were much interested in the High Point College debate last week and doubly proud that they won. Our pastor and two of the other debaters. The Loy brothers are "our boys" too. Pray for us that we may all do more for our Master. REPORTER.

Saxapahaw Charge.—Brothers H. G. Paris and H. H. Lindley are the nominees for delegate to our next annual conference. Either one of these good men would make a splendid representative for Saxapahaw Charge. The second quarterly conference also, on recommendation by the pastor, appointed one interested person from each church to assist in raising the college assessment during the next thirty days.

A bulletin board has just been placed on the public road near Orange Chapel church which reads as follows: "Orange Chapel Methodist Protestant Church." All four churches on Saxapahaw Charge now have suitable markers.

The Baraca class of Saxapahaw church is raising money to purchase a large Bible for the pulpit.

Two of the churches on this charge, Concord and Saxapahaw, are arranging Easter programs. The other two churches will take offerings for the Board of Home Missions.

We are sorry to report that a number of our faithful members are very sick with the flu. We hope they will soon be well.

H. L. ISLEY.

Forsyth Tidings.—Electric current has recently reached the Mt. Carmel church and it is fine to have the church well lighted. This is the third church to be lighted with city current during the present pastorate, and the fourth church is hoping to be so fortunate as to be able to have electric lights in the near future. We believe in lights and better lights and more of them.

The Mt. Carmel church is not quite completed but will be in a very short time. The brethren are working at night to complete the work. Most of the work of building this splendid church has been done by free labor by the brethren of the church.

The Maple Springs people have recently completed excavation for the basement of the church to be moved and rebuilt in the near future. This work is to be completed by contract and the trustees are now waiting for bids. When plans are completed this will be a church sufficient for present needs and the grounds and building will be greatly beautified. The plan is so arranged that other units of a larger church plant may be added at any future time.

A new piano has recently been placed in the Hickory Ridge church. This adds much to the music.

The present pastor has had the privilege of seeing three of the Forsyth churches well lighted, three of them either rebuilt or the project under way, while we believe the fourth building project is in sight, and the fourth church we hope will soon be lighted. And the third church has been supplied with new musical instruments. This is no boast on the part of the pastor but he is happy to be among people with progress.

At present we are in the midst of a revival at Hickory Ridge, conducted by the Billy Sunday gospel teams. These services have not been attended as well as we would have liked but good has been accomplished. A good meeting last night (Sunday night). The meetings will perhaps continue during most of all this week. The Billy Sunday men have done great good throughout this entire country. Over 5,000 people have been converted as a result of their efforts.

Some of our people are at present confined at their home because of sickness. Mrs. Fannie Lash and the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Slate both of the Hickory Ridge church are quick sick. Members of the Faw family of the Mt. Carmel church were kept at home yesterday because of sickness. Mr. Nissen and Mr. Cash, while not members of the Mt. Carmel church, but members of the Sunday school, are both sick at this time. Prayers for the recovery of these sick people are requested.

In His name,
GEORGE L. CURRY.

Henderson.—Our various organizations and societies are busy preparing for the coming of the Branch meeting to be held with us April 19, 20, 21st. We are looking forward to this event with much interest and hope to share the blessings and joy with all the state societies. It is especially urged by Mrs. W. T. Hanner that all delegates from the rural auxiliaries be present at the opening session, Tuesday afternoon, April 19th, at 2 p.m. If any of the societies have not sent in the names of their delegates yet, let me ask that they do so as soon as possible, also stating at what time they will arrive. This information should be sent to our president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, and will be greatly appreciated.

The Young Ladies' League met at the home of Miss Lettie Finch, March 17th. The president, Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh, called the meeting to order and the general business of the society was conducted. It was learned from the treasurer's report that our missionary budget was paid and a favorable report given. The articles for Bethel Home were collected and a committee appointed to send the box as soon as possible. The program committee gave a splendid report during which Rev. R. A. Hunter read an interesting paper on our mission work done in Pittsburg, by the M. P. Home Missionary Society. A similar reading was given by Miss Alice Falkner, telling of the work done among immigrants, which was very touching and impressive.

A duet was then given by Master C. L. Finch, Jr., and Miss Lucille Finch. In conclusion Miss Eleanor Young recited two interesting readings which were greatly enjoyed by all. The hostess then served delicious ice cream and cake.

The W. H. M. Societies held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. A. O.

Young, Monday afternoon, March 21st. The president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, presiding. During the business session a great many plans were made and voted on, most of them concerning the coming of the Branch meeting. A number of ladies from the rural churches were present and very willingly offered their assistance in making the Branch meeting a success. We hope that they will feel that this is their meeting as well as ours and that all the neighboring societies are planning to be with us in large numbers. This will be an opportunity and privilege that no real Christian can afford to overlook. We need to know more about our work and by increasing this information we will also increase our interest.

Another very important motion was made and carried by the society, that we join the other societies of our local churches, in appealing to our city council for a better class of road shows, and that our schools be more careful in sponsoring pictures shown especially for children. At the close of the business session the treasurer reported all dues paid in and the various junior societies paid up in full. For this we are very thankful. The meeting was closed by prayer offered by Mrs. R. A. Hunter. The hostess then served refreshments.

The Philathea class held its regular business meeting with Mrs. R. A. Hunter, Thursday evening, March 31st. The vice-president, Miss Gertha Trodgen, presiding. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh, followed by prayer, by Rev. R. A. Hunter. The roll call, reading of the minutes and treasurer's report was then given. Reports from special committees were also heard. A new committee was appointed to purchase a curtain for the organ loft. It was also voted by the class that we continue the support of an orphan in our Children's Home. The class decided to become agent for the McCalls magazine and thereby increase our treasure. During the social hour pen and paper was passed and each member wrote a few lines to our absent president, Mrs. C. F. Tankley, Jr., who has been a patient in Watts hospital for some time. The Junior Philathea's then gave a musical program which was greatly enjoyed. The hostess then served a lovely salad course followed by candy.

Miss Katie Cook who was in the Maria Parham hospital last week for treatment has returned home we are glad to note.

Mrs. C. F. Tankley, Jr., who has been at Watts hospital in Durham is expected home today.

We have enjoyed some splendid music at our church services, since Miss Mabel Harris, of Baltimore, has been with us.

Both services were well attended yesterday and two wonderful sermons delivered by our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter.

The morning sermon, dealing with the three distinct natures of man. "The man the public sees you to be;" "The man you know yourself to be;" and "The man God knows you to be," was clearly portrayed and should cause each Christian to more fully understand himself, and thus be more careful of his influence.

The evening sermon was a direct call and appeal for the regeneration of the heart in the Christian as well as the sinner. To reform is well and good, but to regenerate is necessary for salavation, and can only be accomplished by the blood of Christ, was the main theme of this service. A large congregation was present and a number of visitors shared with us the blessings of the Sabbath.

Friendship, Stanly.—Sunday, March 27, we had the opportunity to have Rev. D. A. Braswell of Concord to preach to us at the usual preaching hour, 7:30 o'clock. He preached an excellent sermon. We are always delighted when he can speak to us.

Yesterday our pastor presented a wonderful message to a large congregation. We feel that he is one that is on fire in the work of the Master.

The second quarterly meeting was held here Saturday, April 2. The meeting was transacted in a spirit of love. The nominees for the annual conference were: Mr. J. H. Snotherly, W. V. Hatley.

Our prayer services are increasing and adding much to the success of the church work.

REPORTER.

Porter Church.—On last Saturday, April 2, our community was made very sad by the death of little Opal Fultz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Fultz, after an illness of four weeks. All that loving hands could do was done, but God knows best and He saw fit to take her home.

She lacked only a few days being six years old. She was a member of the card class of our Sunday school; she will be missed there as well as in the community and home. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor at the church and her body was laid to rest at Granite-Quarry cemetery.

The church and community extend their heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved ones.

On the fourth Sunday in March Rev. D. A. Braswell of Concord preached for us, but owing to sickness in the community the congregation was not what we would like for it to have been. We were very glad to have him with us and we hope he will come again.

Our second quarterly conference was held on last Saturday afternoon. The nominees for delegate, Mrs. Hattie Marley and Mr. Jonah Coble.

Our regular preaching day will be next Sunday; we hope to have a large crowd present.

South Lexington.—The Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 206, which was about the same that it has been for several Sundays.

There was no preaching service last Sunday morning because of the pastor's appointment at Mount Carmel church. The writer attended the service at Mount Carmel and heard a "country sermon" by Pastor Ridge. His country preaching is just as good as the town sermons. The Lord's Supper was observed at the Mount Carmel church last Sunday morning and a large number of the people participated. "The Supreme Gift" was the theme of the sermon.

The special meeting began at South Lexington last Sunday night with a good sermon by Pastor Ridge on the subject, "Distance, Return and Welcome." A large congregation was present, the church auditorium being completely filled. Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, pastor of Flat Rock, will arrive today (Monday) and do the preaching during the meeting which will continue for two weeks. We will report more about the meeting next week.

The second quarterly conference for the South Lexington charge was held at Mount Carmel church last Saturday afternoon with Pastor Ridge presiding and Brother C. L. Hedrick, secretary. Both churches on the charge were fairly well represented by the official members. The business of the conference was transacted in a harmonious spirit. Reports from the pastor and officials of the conference were very encouraging. The report of stewards showed the charge was behind about $120 on pastor's salary. The pastor reported 42 services held, 190 visits made and four new members at South Lexington for the first five months of the new conference year. Brother C. L. Hedrick, of the South Lexington church, was granted license as an exhorter. This was done without any solicitation on the part of Brother Hedrick, and he expressed his appreciation to the conference in a few well-chosen words. Nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference are Brother C. L. Hedrick and H. Grady Swicegood.

Flat Rock Circuit.—We are still on the map and have been very busy. We have had a good deal of sickness among our people and several deaths. On March 3, 1927, Johnton Baynes passed away. Age 76 years, 15 days. He had been one of the pillars of Bethany church for 'most all his life and will be greatly missed in his church and community. He was a great character.

On March 29, 1927, the death angel took from us Brothed Jasper Sharron, and Brother Penn Henley Angel, both dying near eleven o'clock. Brother Sharron was one of Palestine's faithful members who will be greatly missed in his church and community, but most of all in his home. Brother Angel was a member of Gideon's Grove and gave the land upon which the church stands. He was a great leader in his church and community for good, and will be greatly missed. All these bereaved ones have our deepest sympathy and prayers. On yesterday at 3:00 o'clock Brother Leftwich and this writer said the last words over the lifeless form of Sister Bill Knight, who was laid to rest in Eden cemetery. A good woman has gone from us who will be greatly missed in home and community.

Brother John Thorp who has been sick for four months is better.

Sister Hailian Tucker is right ill at her home near Madison.

Mrs. George Friddle who suffered a stroke of paralysis a few months ago has improved some.

There is right much flu in this part at this writing.

On March 19th our second quarterly conference convened in Flat Rock church at 2:00 o'clock. Dr. A. G. Dixon presided over the meeting. There was a large attendance and the spirit of love prevailed throughout the meeting. All the reports were very encouraging. Brothers W. N. Ogborn and D. P. Lemons were nominees for delegates to annual conference. Palestine and Gideons Grove raised pastor's salary $25.00 each. Bethel church is planning to raise theirs. Brother Nessie Gorden has paid his pastor $5.00 each quarter not to be applied on the present assessment. Bethel church has a light plant now which cost $325.00. Palestine has raised the money to paint their church and it will be painted in a few weeks. Uncle John Landreth says he is going to have a bell on Palestine church in the near future. Everything looks favorable for a successful year along all phases of the work. May the dear Lord richly bless all those who are cooperating in anyway.

On March 20th Dr. Dixon preached at Palestine at 11 a.m. and Bethel 3 p.m.; it seemed to this writer that he preached two of the best sermons I ever heard him. Mrs. Dixon made a fine address at Flat Rock church at the same time. 11 a.m. We were delighted to have them spend the night with us Saturday night. Come again.

May the dear Lord bless our Zion and give all the brethren great success this year.

JOEL B. TROGDON.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Pastor Garner gave us a splendid sermon yesterday at 11 o'clock. Subject, The Power of the Resurrection of Christ. Also preaching at night; his subject was Backsliding. This was also a fine sermon and we all should be very careful not to take some of the steps he spoke of. Memorial service will be held on the first Sunday in May, as usual.

Beginning next Sunday night we are to have ten lessons in the study of the Bible. Our pastor is to conduct these studies.

The Clyde Auman Missionary Society has paid their budget which was $50.00 and $1.00 in general fund. Total, $51.00.

Think the Home Society has also paid theirs in full.

Our special meeting will begin the third Sunday in August. We are expecting Rev. J. Clyde Auman to assist Brother Garner.

REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Rev. M. C. Henderson, our faithful pastor, filled his appointment at Cid on yesterday at 2 o'clock and as usual gave us a most useful message.

On the previous Sunday at Sunday school we had 68 present, collection 94 cents; this being right much improvement from a year ago. We have been on gaining grounds all this year.

Glad to hear the good news from Roberta!

We were so glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Ivey Leonard and children of near Thomasville to worship with us Sunday. Mrs. Leonard acted as organist; she plays well. Come again.

Several young men from High Point attended our Sunday school Sunday.

I am glad to learn that Piney Grove has started up Sunday school after going in to winter quarters. Glad to hear that Mrs. Joe Delk is convalescing.

The second quadterly conference will convene at Canaan on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in April at three p.m. This will be the time to appoint nominees for the annual conference.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—We reorganized Sunday school, April 3rd. Seemed to be very much interest taken in the work.

There will be Sunday school next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Also preaching at 11 o'clock by our pastor.

We ask the prayers of Christian people.

SUPERINTENDENT.

Glen Raven.—The second quarterly conference was held here Saturday evening. Pastor made a very interesting report. Mr. C. C. Garrison, our church treasurer, reported our A. C. B. paid in full, which will be sent today. Also our college assessment in full. This puts our church on honor roll, for both A. C. B. and college.

Yesterday was a fine day for us. Our Sunday school was well attended, also a large crowd for church service. Rev. T. A. Williams brought us a fine message. The congregation was delighted with a quartette at both morning and evening services by Mr. V. L. Bookout, Misses Alice and Geneva Dixon and Elick Johnson.

Rev. J. L. Love preached at night as pastor was not well. Mrs. C. C. Hurlin and Mrs Bessie Hornaday are now training the children for an Easter program which will be given Easter Sunday night. Our Baraca class are giving a program Easter Monday night (at church) for the purpose of boosting the class.

The Ladies' Aid Society have changed their time of meeting from second Sunday to one night in the week. They have recently bought a new stove for the parsonage.

Our Thursday night prayer meetings are fine; the most interesting one I ever attended. Our young people recite in concert one of the Psalms each night. Miss Geneva Dixon is leader for this week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Thompson, of Charlotte, N. C., were visiting their uncle, Rev. T. A. Williams, Sunday.

REPORTER.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—There were 109 present in Sunday school yesterday. Good interest shown in all the classes. We now have 163 on roll, our contest ending next Sunday. Senior, Intermediate, and Juniors entered the contest; Seniors and Intermediates seem to be running close. Our quarterly report showed 73 new members this quarter.

Pastor Ridge gave us a splendid sermon yesterday, a large congregation present; lots of visitors. We want every one that comes to our church to feel so welcome that they will want to come back again.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Morris of Salisbury, was among our visitors yesterday; also Mr. and Mrs. Whit Skeen of High Point, and Mr. and Mrs. Edd Headrick, of Lexington.

Lineberry and Pleasant Grove are preparing a short Easter program to be rendered at Pleasant Grove church, Sunday evening, April 17, 7:00 o'clock. Our church will also have an Easter service at 11 o'clock in the cemetery. All the graves will be decorated. Address by Mr. W. T. Hall, and talks by others. Special songs by the choir. The Juniors will have an egg hunt.

Flada Lax, member of the Primary department in Sunday school, who has been in the High Point Hospital, is home again improved.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Liberty church Saturday afternoon, April 23, 2:00 o'clock.

REPORTER.

Efland, Orange Charge.—There was a Sunday school convention in our church Sunday night, April 3. We were glad to have with us Rev. Lawrence Little. He delivered an address which was very much enjoyed. We also had with us Mr. T. O. Pender of Mebane and the choir of the West End Baptist church of Hillsboro. The singing rendered by these people was beautiful and was enjoyed by all. A good many Sunday schools were represented.

Since the last report death claimed Mrs. John Bivins, one of our faithful members. She will be missed by the church and all who knew her.

We had 98 at Sunday school last Sunday. This is the largest number we have had present in some time. There were only 66 the fourth Sunday. We hope to get our entire enrollment back in a few more Sundays.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Roberta.—The heating plant installed in our church the first of March is proving very serviceable this spring, since the weather continues to be cloudy and cool.

The third Sunday in March we had a series of meetings to begin and continue a week. Rev. C. H. Hill of the Friendship church at Albemarle did the preaching. Mr. Hill brought us powerful messages and the meeting was a great success. There were 73 professions and 32 joined the church; and there are still others to unite with us.

Following the meeting an epidemic of influenza broke out in our community and our work was somewhat checked.

Pastor Short and his family have had the influenza, but he was able to come to church Sunday. Although he was physically weak he brought us a great message.

At the evening service we were glad to have Rev. A. G. Loftin of the M. E. church, Concord Circuit, preach for us. He brought us a wonderful sermon.

We were also pleased to have Rev. J. T. Sisk of Mocksville, our former pastor, worship with us at the evening service. He brought a quartette and favored us with special music.

We are sorry that one of our faithful members, Mr. John C. Garmon, was recently called to his heavenly home. Mr. Garmon lived an entirely devoted Christian life and passed away at a ripe old age. His consecrated service to his church and his influence and encouragement to his fellowmen have left many marks that can never be erased. We very keenly feel the loss of this good man. The family and loved ones have our deepest sympathy and prayers. May our Father who doeth all things well comfort them in their sorrows.

REPORTER.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—Brother Powell Sunday morning brought us a plain and helpful sermon, his subject being "The Christian Life."

Owing to the bad weather through the winter months, we have put off our night preaching; but now spring is here, we will be benefited by our night sermons as usual, beginning on the third Sunday night of this month.

Our Sunday school is still moving forward. Some Sundays the attendance is very small, but we are not discouraged, but try the harder to make the Sunday school more interesting. We are going to work for a better school in the future, with the Master's help.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Matthews Chapel on Saturday, April 16.

One of our nearby church members, Mr. J. H. Walton, has been sick for some time, but we trust and pray that he will soon recover and be with us again.

—In company with Rev. W. F. Kennett we visited two of our aged friends last Sunday afternoon. They were Brother David H. Hunter and Sister Angelina Causey. Brother Hunter will be 95 years old next August. He wonders whether there is an older Methodist Protestant in North Carolina. He has been one of the pillars of Tabernacle church. He is not now able to attend church, but retains his interest in the church. He subscribes for and reads both the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Protestant Herald. He was present in one of the sessions of the last Annual Conference and was introduced to that body. He is still bright and cheerful to a remarkable degree. Sister Causey is no less wide awake, but feels that she is just waiting for the summons from above. Both have many friends and are thronged with visitors at times.

Jesus' Resurrection and Ours

Our hope of living again is based on the fact that Jesus survived death. Had the tomb held him, we could have had no other thought than that the tomb would hold us. Because He now lives, we hope to live also. Is this a reasonable hope? Is His resurrection a prophecy of ours? Was our resurrection really involved in His? Could He not have arisen alone of all the sons of men? Or do the same causes that operated in his resurrection inevitably result in ours? We can argue that what is true of one drop of water, is true of every drop of water; but can we reason that what was true of Jesus will be true of every individual man? Surely not. There were differences between Jesus and other men that must be considered in any inference. Jesus was a sinless man. Jesus was the incarnate Son of God. Jesus died not for Himself, but for others. All other men die for themselves. Death is in God's plan concerning them. Can we expect that God will reverse His plan for us and bring us back from the dead? In our hope of a resurrection, we do not expect a reversal of God's plan, but we expect the initiation of a new purpose. We do not expect to come back into the present life, but we expect to go forward in a new life, a better life than this. And we expect this, we entertain this glorious hope, because Jesus pictured this destiny for us, if we through His power become sons of God. His resurrection was not the cause of ours but the evidence of ours. His resurrection justified our faith in him. The same power that brought him from the tomb will bring His true followers from the tomb, not to go on in the present state of existence, but to live the superior kind of life into which he has entered. Even Jesus' resurrection was not a return to the present life. It is true that His body came forth from the sepulcher, yet He did not continue his former life. Paul wrote that there is a natural body and there is a spiritual body. Our future bodies are to be spiritual bodies. It is not a necessary inference that our bodies will rise because the body of Jesus rose. The true inference is that because He lives we may live also. The question of the precise mode of existence is a secondary one. No one need be worried about being put in possession again of the same material particles that composed his body at death. I am persuaded that God has for us some better thing than we can now imagine. Our bodies here are marvelously adapted as a medium between us and our material environment. What an amazing adjustment is that of the ear to sound; that of the eye to light. We cannot know the nature of our future environment, but we expect it, if we are true sons of God, to be far more glorious and satisfying than the present, and that we will be put in communication with this glorious and joyous environment by a "spiritual body" exactly adapted as a medium between our souls and our environment. Those who are merely expecting a return from the grave to continue the present sensuous existence are not expecting enough. In this

Sabbath Laws

The sabbath day is a necessity for the promotion of religion and morality. It is also a necessity for hygienic reasons. For these reasons laws should be passed by the state protecting the sabbath from violation. There may be difference of opinion as to the appropriateness of some acts of legislation, but all right-thinking people will agree that people should be protected in their right to worship and in their right to rest. Would a mill have the right to run seven days in the week and require all employees to work seven days in the week? Such a program would not be permitted and should not be permitted. It would be sacrificing the greater to the less. It might be objected that it would be wrong to require a person to rest who wishes to work. But the purpose of the law is to give the persons who need rest and wish to rest the opportunity to do it. And the man who thinks he has energy enough to work seven days in the week clearly has no right to work on the sabbath in such a way as to interfere with the rest of those who need to rest and wish to rest.

It is true that people cannot be forced by law to engage in worship on the sabbath day. But it is not the object of sabbath laws to force people to worship on the sabbath day. The object is to protect in their right to worship those who wish to worship. Those who do not think enough of God to worship Him on the sabbath day at least should not be permitted by their sports or their labors to interfere with the worship of the God-fearing. Christian people should stand together in demanding of their legislature reasonable sabbath laws.

Tragedy at the Children's Home

Our Children's Home at High Point has been remarkably free from mishaps of a serious nature. But last Sunday one occurred that caused great grief in the Home. A car was wrecked returning from church, and Homer Finch lost his life and Sam Coble and Paul Guice were landed in a hospital, considerably injured. There were ten boys in the car and several others were slightly injured. The car was driven by Ben Bulla, aged 16. It seems that a car in front started to take a side street unexpectedly and Bulla was unable to stop his car in time to prevent a crash. After striking the other car, it veered and struck an electric light pole. Mr. Bulla, the driver, has the name of being a careful and capable driver. Officers are investigating, trying to place the responsibility. Even with no one to blame for the occurrence, it is a most deplorable occurrence, and those most affected may be assured of the sympathy of many others. Homer Finch leaves a mother and sister, Mrs. Ida Finch and Miss Hope Finch, of Linwood, N. C.

"WHY TROUBLE YE THE WOMAN? FOR SHE HATH WROUGHT A GOOD WORK"

By Lee Anna Starr

When the joint petition of the Woman's General Executive Committee, and the Men's Board of Foreign Missions reached the General Conference, it was referred to the Committee on Missions. The report is found on pages 55-58 of the Journal of the General Conference of 1924. Said report was adopted by the General Conference.

The writer desires to commend the action of the President of the General Conference on this occasion. He advised agaist the merger of these two organizations under existing circumstances. It is claimed by some that he favors the union. Whether this is the case or not, the writer is not prepared to say, but we do know that he rose above his personal predilections, vacated the chair, and spoke from the floor of the house. He pointed out that the vote in the Women's General Executive Committee was almost a tie. On page 29 of the General Conference Journal we have this entry:

"Before announcing the order of the day, President Lewis addressed the Conference, proposing the Conference drop all matters of consolidation at this Conference so far as immediate action is concerned. He discussed the proposition of merging certain Boards at some length."

If the General Conference had followed the advice of Dr. Lewis on this occasion, it would have been better for all concerned. Representative J. P. Morgan, of the Alabama Conference, moved to amend the report of the Committee on Foreign Missions, by referring that part of the report which proposes a reorganization of the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Misisonary Society, to a special Committee. The motion was lost.

The Finance Committee also had something to say on this absorbing theme. Page 93 of the General Conference Journal we read:

"There should be a consolidation of the Boards; the two Foreign Boards into one Board, and the two Home Boards into one Board. Your Committee feels that this is the best solution of the situation."

We notice that in this report there is no recommendation that our two Boards of Publication be consolidated. On page 90, we read in this same Committee's report, as follows: "The Budget System, however, needs:

"(a) The restoration of initiative to the various Boards, in that at present there is too much pooling of interests and division of receipts."

The report of the Committee on Missions, which was adopted by the General Conference, reads as follows:

"The Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society having agreed on a basis of union, as set forth in the accompanying Preample and Constitution, your Committee would recommend the union of these Boards."

Joined with this, as part of its report, the Committee submits the following Preamble:

"In order that the Foreign Missionary work of our denomination shall be conducted in the most efficient way possible, we recommend the organization of a Union Board of oFreign Missionary Administration, whose functions shall be to administer the work now being carried on by the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

"The Constitution herewith submitted shall not interfere with the normal organization, activities, or legal identity of the Board of Foreign Missions or the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society."

The first paragraph of this Preamble does not appear in the latest edition of our Discipline. The second paragraph has been incorporated in the first Article of the "Constitution of the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration of the Methodist Protestant Church," with the exception that the word "Constitution" has been sricken out and "regulations" substituted.

We call special attention to this final paragraph of the Preamble, and which now forms part of Article I of the Constitution. It provides that the Constitution of the so-called Union Board shall not "interfere with the normal organization, activities, or legal identity" of the merging Boards.

It was on this proviso that the fifteen women of the General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society agreed to petition the General Conference for the merger; it was on this proviso that the Committee on Missions recommended the union of the two Boards, and this was the warranty the General Conference gave when it proceeded (to the best of its ability) to consolidate the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Men's Board of Foreign Missions.

With these facts in mind, we now ask the reader to turn to page 69 of the latest edition of our Discipline and read Article V of this same Constitution:

"The Union Board shall have authority to make its own rules and regulations, to fill all vacancies occurring in the interim of the General Conference, establish missions in foreign lands, employ missionaries and organizers, fix salaries, supervise their work, and change and remove them as the interests of the work may demand . . . . to control and apply the funds in the treasury, to prepare and distribute literature, to develop missionary education throughout the Church; and to publish a periodical in the interests of its work."

Now we ask any reader of these pages, When the so-called Union Board has done all the things here indicated, has it "interfered with the normal organization, activities, or legal identity" of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society? To the writer it seems that after it has taken over all the administrative authority—the establishment of missions; the employment of missionaries and organizers; the fixing of their salaries; the supervision of their work; the determining of their place and time of service, they have interfered very seriously with their normality, their activities, and their legal identity. There is nothing left for these women to do, but secure new members, pay dues, and be thankful. We suggest that they surrender these last three prvileges also.

It may be urged that this Constitution places the two Boards on the same level; there is no discrimination. We answer that we are not concerned about what happens to the Men's Board. Our only concern is for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The Men's Board wrote this Constitution; it generated this entire plan for a merger; it is not apprehensive about what will happen; there is every probability that the same men who constitute the present Foreign Mission Board, will be seated in the Union Board also. In fact, the Constitution so provides. As to the two organizations' being on a level, our answer is that there is a great contrast in the way the level is attained. One Board levels up, while the other Board must level down before the two stand on the same plane. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is a solvent body; it has no indebtedness. The Men's Board, on the other hand, is staggering under $30,000 liabilities.

Now if these two Boards merge, they pool their receipts. Article IX of the Constitution of the so-called Union Board, reads as follows:

"The Union Board shall administer the incomes of the Board of Foreign Missions and of the Woman's Missionary Society from whatever sources secured, and shall apportion the same according to the needs of the work, provided, however, that funds given for special purposes shall be applied to the purposes for which they were given."

There was no escaping the last reservation, for the law of the State so demands. "To control and apply the funds in the treasury" is also named as a prerogative of the Union Board in Article V of this Constitution. Now if the two Boards are consolidated, the Woman's Board will be compelled to share the indebtedness of the Men's Board. The receipts of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society are $60,000 per annum. Every penny of this is needed to finance its enterprises in Indian, China, and Japan.

We return now to the General Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The fifteen women who voted to petition the General Conference to unite the two organizations on the basis of the Constitution submitted, exceeded their authority. Their act was illegal. It was a violation of the charter. The writer has been assured of this by competent attorneys; by attorneys who are not strangers to the Supreme Court of the United States. A copy of this charter appears in the Annual Reports of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and also in the History of this same Society by Mrs. E. C. Chandler, page 25. The charter makes the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society a self-administrative body, and no Board nor yet the General Conference, can nullify that charter. No ecclesiastical body within the State of Pennsylania can set aside a charter granted under the laws of this State, or for that matter, any other commonwealth. State law is higher than ecclesiastical law. The Geneeral Conference may instruct its Boards to alter or amend their charters, but it cannot itself, change one jot or tittle.

The Men's Board of Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society are constituted on an entirely different basis. In the Men's Board the power is lodged in the hands of five men who so long as they keep within the charter are amenable to the General Conference, and the General Conference only. This Board has no dues-paying membership throughout the denomination. It is otherwise with the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. When a small body of timid women appeared before the General Conference of 1880 and asked for recognition as one of the Boards of the denomination, it was stipulated that the organization they represented should not gather its funds within the churches. Its sustenance must come from other sources—"By securing members, life members, honorary members," etc. The Society accepted the terms and proceeded along these lines. Today it has over 10,000 dues-paying members who constitute the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and not the small fraction who sit in the General Executive Board. When the Committee on Missions reported to the General Conference that the Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society had agreed on a basis of union, it misstated the case. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society had not been consulted. It had no opportunity to express itself. When the General Conference desires a change in the charter of the Board of Foreign Missions, it must so signify to the five men who constitute that Board, and they vote on the question, and it requires a majority vote to pass the measure. When the General Conference desires a change in the charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, it must submit the matter to the over ten thousand members who constitute the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and not to its Executive Board. When the fifteen women who sat in that General Board voted to turn over the funds, and all the administrative functions of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, to a prospective Union Board, without a referendum, they exceeded their authority by a long, long distance. Furthermore the writer has been repeatedly assured that the action of the General Conference in this matter was also illegal. It could not survive a test in the courts.

So far as the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is concerned, the so-called Union Board has no legal status; its assumption of authority is but a gesture. A draft from the so-called Union Board, on the funds of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, is but "a scrap of paper" unless validated by the Executive Committee or the General Executive Board of said Woman's Society. The Eexecutive Treasurer of the Woman's Foreign Misisonary Society was on legal ground when she served notice during the last General Conference that she would not honor such demands. Quite recently the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Society decided to return one of its missionaries to the foreign field. The vote was well nigh unanimous. When the matter came before the so-called Union Board, it arrogated to itself the right to countermand the action of the Executive Committee. The charter of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society insures to it the power to make its own Constitution and By-Laws. Article V of the Constitution reads:

"The Executive Committee hereinafter named shall have power to fill all vacancies occurring in its own body in the interim of the year, and shall transact all business committed to it by the Society, subject to revision at the Annual Meeting."

One of the duties delegated to the Executive Committee by the Society during the interim, is that of placing and instructing its missionaries.

(2) The act of the fifteen women who voted to petition the General Conference to merge these two Boards on the basis of the Constitution submitted, or for that matter on any basis, was illegal in the second place, because it was a violation of the Constitution of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Soicety. As has just been noted, the charter insured the Society's right to formulate its own Constituion and By-Laws, so long as it did not violate its charter. The Constitution thus provided, conferred on its General Executive Board certain powers, and imposed on it certain responsibilities. The powers were not unrestricted, nor the responsibilities elective. Attached to both was the following definite restrainment: "And transact any business that the interests of the Society demand, provided that all plans and action shall be in harmony with this Constitution." The Society never empowered its General Board to overstep that boundary line. Anyone who reads carefully the last paragraph of Article V of the Constitution of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and compares it with the first half of Article V of the Constitution of "The Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration," will see at once that the latter is a complete negation of the former—or would be if the act of the General Conference had been legal. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society never empowered its General Executive Board to petition for a merger on the basis of a document that would nullify the Constitution of the said Woman's Missionary Society. Because of this the action of the fifteen women who so voted was illegal. They overstepped their limitations.

(3) In the third place the voting for a merger without a referendum was unjust. Back in the auxiliaries of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society are over ten thousand members. These women are the rank and file of the organization. Patiently they have toiled and sacrificed to make the Society what it is. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has been blessed with officers and leaders of more than ordinary ability and devotion, but with all this, the Society could not have attained its present proportions without the faithful women who month after month have met together in their homes or elsewhere, and planned and toiled and sacrificed to raise the funds to finance the enterprise. Now to turn over all the administrative functions, and funds, and even property to a new and unknown Board without consulting these faithful ones, was an act of injustice. Take for example our Missionary Record. In 1885, only six years after its organization, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society launched this enterprise—almost in fear and trembling. Today it is a self-supporting magazine. For thirty-nine years it came into our homes, bearing on its title-page these words: "The Woman's Missionary Record, Official Organ of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society." How is it today? Across that title page is written these words: "The Missionary Record, Official Organ of the Union Board of Foreign Missionary Administration." Taken over bodily, without consulting the women back there in the auxiliaries, who made it a possibility. The so-called Union Board elects its editor, and all details are worked out by its Board of Publication.
by its Board of Publication.

The writer would not condemn the fifteen women who voted for the merger of these two Boards. They are noble women—every one of them. They have given years of voluntary service to the sending of the Gospel to women and children in heathen lands. They are loyal to the core, but they were misled; they voted under a misapprehension. They accepted the assurance that the proposed union was not a union, it was only an "experiment." They believed the interests of the Society were preserved by the proviso in their petition, and that "the normal organization, activities, or legal identity" of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society would not be interfered with. Along with all this was the fact that the document they were asked to support was thrust upon them in the closing hours of a busy session of the Executive Board. As has been stated elsewhere, there was but one copy of the proposed Constitution in the meeting. There was no opportunity to make comparison with the Charter and the Constitution of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society; there was but little time for discussion. We have every reason to believe that if those fifteen women had understood the full import of the document they were asked to support, they would have unanimously rejected it.

Let us now consider the objective in the mind of the men who have been back of this entire enterprise to consolidate these Boards. We allow them to speak for themselves. Open before the writer lies a letter, received a few days ago from the President of the so-called Union Board. It is dated March 24, 1927. We quote his words verbatim: "Our denomination at the present time is engaged in an experiment that has for its recognized ultimate purpose the consolidation of all our missionary work, at home and abroad, under one Board." There is nothing ambiguous about that statement. It is defi nite..

The "tentative constitution," which was the substructur of the present constitution of the so-called Union Board, read as follows:

"The name of this organization for the balance of thi quadrennium shall be the Union Board of Missionary Admin istration of the Methodist Protestant Church, and thereafte to be known as the Board of Missions."

Dr. Broomfield, in his tribute to Dr. Klein, in the issu of the Methodist Recorder, January 8, 1927, says: "For number of years Dr. Klein has cherished two ambitions. Th first was to have all our Foreign Missionary work under th care of one Board." In the Prefatory of the Annual Repor of the so-called Union Board, 1926, we find this entry:

"During this quadrennium, we are expected to demor strate the need and the efficacy of a Union Board, and th necessary cordial relations between the members of two cor stituent organizations have been maintained, and efforts t operate as a real Union Board in all particulars, will be cor tinued, as in no other way can the plan approved by the Ger eral Conference be carried out."

Now, in these statements we are explicitly told that, in th plan proposed, the so-called Union Board is to give place t another oragnization to be known as the "Board of Missions. This "Board of Missions" is to merge the two Home Board and the two Foreign Boards; moreover, it is to be a "rea union," nothing half way about it. It is to be a merger wit teeth in it.

Now there is not the slightest probability that the tw Home Boards will consent to this consolidation. They rejecte the "experiment," and it is not at all likely that they wi venture the real thing. This being the case, there will be le only the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Men Board of Foreign Missions.

This proposed new Mission Board is not only to take ov all the administrative functions of the Woman's Foreign Mi sionary Society, the appointment of its missionaries, th designation of their fields, the fixing of their salaries, etc.; n only is it to take over its moneys "from whatever sourc secured," but it is to take over all the property acquired du ing the long years of labor and sacrifice. Do you doubt it Turn to page 90 of the latest edition of our Discipline an read:

"All property acquired during the 1924-1928 quadrenniu by the Board of Foreign Missions shall be held by said Boar likewise all property acquired during the quadrennium h the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society shall be held h said Society."

Why is 1928 set as a limitation if no change is conter plated? "Coming events cast their shadows before." may be noted that the same limitation applies to the Men Board. What difference does it make to the Men's Boar Every man in that Board will be seated in that Missi Board. It is so provided in the Constitution of the so-call Union Board, and the so-called Union Board is the for runner of the proposed "Mission Board."

The prefatory in the Annual Report of the so-called Uni Board furnishes some enticing examples of mergers in oth denominations. We cull the following:

"In the Presbyterian church, in 1923, 'The Woman Board took a further step, losing its identity to find full fe in the consolidated Board of Missions of the Presbyerian Church in the U. S. A. This consolidated Board consts of forty members of whom fifteen are women."

How delightful! A board of twenty-five men and fifteen omen. We quote further:

"The National Council of the Congregational Church, ome months ago, decided to merge its foreign missionary rganizations, and the American board has already enlarged s Prudential Committee, by adding one-third women."

How delightful! Two-thirds men and one-third women. What a privilege to be rubber stamps in an enlarged Comittee!

Members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of he Methodist Protestant Church, are you willing to surrener our charter, "the sheet-anchor of our liberties?" Are ou ready to scrap our Constitution under which we have uilt up a Society in which our hearts rejoice? Are you illing to have the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to ecome only a hallowed memory? Are you willing for our ociety to lose its identity and become but a cog in the wheel f an untried Board? A counter in its department store? he writer of these articles has been a member of the Woman's oreign Missionary Society from her early womanhood, and or herself she emphatically answer, No!

We ask for a referendum for the following reasons:

1. No change can be made in our charter without it.
2. Because the women in our auxiliaries have a right to egister their will in this matter.
3. That the General Executive Board may ascertain the ish of the rank and file.
4. That the approaching General Conference may be inormed as to the attitude of the over ten thousand women ho are the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

AN IDEA RUN WILD

Darwin probably did not foresee that his theory of the rigin and evolution of species would be extended by followng generations to apply to every department of life, not exluding religion and morality. Yet this extended application f the theory of evolution to religion and morality cannot onsist with the Scriptures: "I am the Lord, I change not," with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and thy aw is the truth," "thy word is true from the beginning; and very one of thy righteous judgments endureth forever," nor ith all the other Scriptures that proclaim the inviolable, permanent nature and character of God's laws, commandments, nd precepts.

The universal godlessness and moral laxity of our age are, n large part, directly traceable to this pernicious theory of volution. Recently I read an article in one staidest magaines of the country by a writer who proposed that the standrds of beauty and ugliness should be substituted for the moral tandards of right and wrong. This perverse, absurd proposal s undoubtedly a product of the evolution idea. Virtue and ice, these evolutionists think, are old, outworn ideas analgous to the old idea of fixed species. Obsessed by the theory f evolution, they think that even the old moral standards hould give place to something progressive and higher. They hink that even God himself (those of them who think of God t all) must grow and progress into something higher and etter.

This same theory of evolution is accountable, also, for the cruel, old-time pagan doctrines advocated by modern eugenists. (Pagan doctrines were long since wholly discredited and discarded—why revive doctrines that corrupted and destroyed ancient empires?) In order to square the evolution doctrine of "the survival of the fittest" with the actual fact that those individuals whom eugenists consider fit do not survive, and those whom they consider unfit do survive, eugenists would kill off all poor, weak, afflicted individuals, and preserve only the physically strong, the intellectually vigorous, and the "successful" and wealthy members of the community (the only ones fit to survive in the eyes of these people, obsessed as they are by the degraded, material ideals of evolution and neo-evolution). While Christian men and Christian truth lie sleeping, these eugenists or evolutionists are actually putting their accursed theories into effect, and are preaching, and putting into practice so far as they can, "birth control" and "sterilization" laws. It would surprise a good many people, and awaken them from their easy slumbers if they knew that "sterilization" laws are already in actual effect in a dozen states or more, and that bills of this infamous character are before other state legislatures.

We who love the Christian name, and its divine Founder, and the holy disciples, and apostles, whom that Founder inspired with divine wisdom, know the truth of St. Paul's words, truth that the commonest kind of experience corroborates: "The foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men. For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called. But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the things which are mighty. And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence." Jesus' Resurrection and Ours initial stage of our existence we have but the beginning of the endless series of good things that God has in view for them that love him. This great hope we have because Jesus died and rose again, and we should not allow a contemplation of the heavenly inheritance to which we look to blind us to the sacrificial life and death of Him who gave Easter its fullness of meaning.

Of glory was displayed

OUR SUFFICIENT GUIDE

Be content to wade through the waters betwixt you and glory with Him, holding His hand fast, for He knoweth all the fords. Howbeit ye may be ducked, but ye cannot drown, being in His company; and ye may all the way to glory see the way bedewed with His blood who is the Forerunner.—Rutherford.

The WORK and the WORKERS

In response to the call of the President of the General Conference, Dr. T. H. Lewis, Mr. J. D. Ross and I spent last Tuesday, April 5th, in Baltimore in Kingdom interests. Dr. Lewis will make announcement of the plans and purposes of that meeting in early issues of the church papers.

Wednesday, April 6th, was spent at Star Church, Baltimore, in the sessions of the Maryland Annual Conference. It was delightful to meet and greet so many new friends, and to watch that great conference in action. I need not speak at length of the report of the president of the conference; for it has doubtless already been read by many of you in last week's Methodist Protestant. This is a great conference, and its president, Dr. E. C. Makosky, is proving a worthy successor to the great men who have preceded him in that office. We note with interest that this conference has voted to hold its annual sessions hereafter in September instead of April.

Burlington

Sunday morning, April 10th, was spent with Rev. S. W. Taylor and his people in Burlington. It is always an inspiration to meet with this splendid Sunday school and congregation at First Church, Burlington.

The morning was cold and cloudy, so the attendance was not as large as is sometimes reported, but the attendance was good, and the attention was fine. It was a joy to preach to them. I suspect there is not another church in Burlington with a greater outlook than this one of our own. Brother Taylor and his wife are giving themselves unreservedly to the tasks of this great church, and God is blessing their efforts. They expect a number of new members to join the church next Sunday.

Fountain Place

The evening hour was given to Rev. W. M. Loy and his people at Fountain Place. This is one of our newest church enterprises, and is getting a good hold in that section of Burlington. They have a splendid working band and are well organized for service. The young pastor has won his way into the hearts of his people, and they are backing him in his every effort. At present he is serving under handicap, being a member of the senior class of High Point College. But commencement will soon be here now, and after that Brother Loy will move his family into the parsonage and give his whole time to the work. He is planning an evangelistic campaign for early June, and even before that he hopes to receive several good members by certificate.

Holy Week

We are now in the midst of Holy Week, the period of time in which our minds turn especially to the sufferings and the triumphs of our blessed Savior. And when our hearts especially long for the salvation of those who are out of Christ. Let us pray most earnestly that Easter Sunday may mean a great rtiumph in the decision of many precious ones to follow Christ.

That is also the day set apart for sacrificial giving to Home Missions. We trust every church in the Conference will make an offering on, or near, Easter Sunday for Home Missions. When the offering is taken please send it at an early date to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C., and designate it as "Easter offering," and he will credit it to your G. C. B.

Fifth Sunday in May

If the District Chairmen are planning for a district rally in the Spring, perhaps the most appropriate time to hold that rally will be Saturday and Sunday, May 28 and 29.

In some sections of the Conference these rallies have meant much, because the people have attended well; while in other sections they have accomplished little because of the poor attendance. So the District Chairmen must determine the advisability of putting them on or not. I am this week mailing "Suggested Programs" to the Chairmen for their use if they wish to use them at the time suggested, or at some later time.

The Branch Meeting

The North Carolina Branch Meeting of the W. F. M. S. and of the W. H. M. S. will meet in Henderson, N. C., April 19 to 21. Every Auxiliary in the Conference will do well to have representatives present. Much information and inspiration will be gained by going. These societies, where organized, are doing fine work in North Carolina. Both societies should be organized in each local church.

Sparkles From the Field

Burlington, First: "A class of fourteen are expected to join the church next Sunday."

Calvary: "The revival services yesterday continued to attract wide interest. There were more than twenty-five confessions of faith among the young people."

Thomasville, First: "The Ladies' Aid has just put new carpet in the church, and a new chiffon velvet curtain to the choir loft. These cost over $200."

Roberta: "Thirty-two joined the church out of the recent revival."

Flat Rock, Bethel: "Bethel Church now has a lighting plant which cost $325."

Forsythe: "Mount Carmel new plant nearing completion. Maple Springs remodeling plans are going forward; and a new piano at Hickory Ridge."

Saxapahaw: "All four churches on Saxapahaw Charge now have suitable markers on the highway."

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

HOME MISSIONS

Easter

Attention, Pastors:

I wish to express my gratitude to the Presidents and pastors of our various annual conferences for the splendid co-operation given me in the effort to place the Easter Programs in the churches and Sunday schools. Nearly one thousand have ordered the service to the date of writing this article, and perhaps, by the time all order are filled, the number will amount to one thousand. This will be an increase of two hundred over last year.

We are all looking forward to Easter Sunday with joyful anticipation. I wish to emphasize again the two special features of the occasion. First, the reception of new members into the churches. I have not presumed to suggest any method for this part of the service. It is left to the individual pastors. I have sent out Decision Cards to be used where it meets the approval of the pastors and their workers. About twenty-five thousand of these have been distributed. The Sacrificial Envelopes, which were so satisfactory last year, are being used this year. It it to be hoped that an effort will be made in every church to make some increase of the offering over last year. The goal for the entire church is set for forty thousand dollars.

I am sending to the pastor a return postal with the earnest request that the information asked be given and the postal returned as soon after Easter as possible. In stations that can easily be done the day following Easter Sunday; on circuits more time may be needed for the pastors to get in touch with those who have the service in charge. Prompt returns from all pastors will enable me to report, through our church papers, the results of the day's effort, both in additions to the church membership, and the aggregate contributed to Home Missions. The card is already directed. In fact, we have done everything possible to make it easy for our pastors to comply with this request. Please do not forget or postpone it.

Also do not forget that when the offering is sent to the Annual Conference Treasurer to have it marked Easter Offering for Home Missions. More than one charge last year was not credited in their Conference Minutes because of this omission, nor did the Board of Home Missions get the full benefit of the offering. The postal should reach you just a few days before Easter. Please do not fail to return it.

J. M. SHERIDAN.

A FOURFOLD PROPOSITION

An infidel went to hear Moody preach in Boston. After hearing the preaching several nights he came home and greatly to the surprise of his praying wife he said as he read the Bible, "If that Book is true, I'm a sinner."

Another night he came home and said, "If that Book is true, I'm a lost sinner."

Next night after coming home from meeting he said, "If that Book is true, I may be saved."

Finally he came back from the service and said, "If that Book is true, I am a saved man."

He had taken Christ for his Savior and knew that He had saved him. Rom. 10:8, 9.—G. W. Ridout, in Pentecostal Herald.

A BOY WHO PROVED HIS WORTH AS A FIRE FIGHTER

Not all heroic fire fighters wear blue coats with warm red linings, says a writer in the St. Nicholas. There is a boy out in Colorado who has distinguished himself in fighting forest fires and has twice been commended by the government.

The official report issued by the United States Department of Agriculture says: "Charles H. Williams, a twelve-year-old lad of Salida, Colo., has again distinguished himself in fighting forest fires. In the summer of 1923 Charles discovered a fire caused by a passing train in the Cochetopa National Forest. His prompt work in notifying the forest service officers and his personal aid on the fire line brought forth strong commendation from the late Secretary Henry C. Wallace. Recently Charles was instrumental in checking another fire that had started in a dense strand of pine trees. His work was again commended by department officials."

On reading this the editor of St. Nicholas asked Charles to write for us his own account of the matter. Here is his letter:

"The first forest fire I helped to fight was in the summer of 1923. I saw it while upon a mountain. I came down and told my father, and he attended to it at once, taking his men with him. With a great deal of fighting they put it out. The next morning Mr. A. G. Agee, our supervisor, came, and I showed him the place where the fire was. He said I was a great fire fighter.

"My second fire was in the autumn of 1924. A train crew told me about the fire. My father was absent at the time; so I called his section crew, and we took the motor car and attended to it right away. After a great deal of fighting we put it out.

"We have the forest boxes furnished by the United States government containing shovels, axes, saws and everything that is needed to fire fight. To obtain these tools you have to break the seal. Then you make a report and leave it in the box, telling how long the fire lasted and how many men were helping.

"I had several letters from the late Secretary Wallace. He sent me some fine books. I hope some day to be of greater service to my country."—Selected.

THE EYE OF THE LORD

Some years ago George Kennan, the famous traveler and explorer, in one of a series of articles on the Russian exile system for political prisoners, described the cells in the Strubatski fortress in which such prisoners are first confined.

In the door of each cell is an opening, commanding every portion of the room, just large enough for a human eye. At any time that eye may appear, calm and inscrutable—nothing but the eye. There is no corner in which to hide from it. Every act can be observed, every movement watched, and the effect on the prisoner, guilty or not, is a nervous strain under which many break completely down. It is always the eye, impersonal and terrible, standing for an avenging law seeking evidence on which to condemn.

"The eye of the Lord is in every place, beholding the evil and the good," and the thought is either terrible or blessed according to our view of God and our attitude toward Him. If we think of the Almighty merely as a great Ruler, the King of kings, whose chief aim is to uphold the majesty of His law, watchful for every slip, insistent that each shall bear the fullest penalty of every act, then no wonder if the thought of His all-seeing eye is more terrible than the eye of the watcher in the Strubatski fortress is to the Russian prisoner. But if we rise to the precious truth of the Fatherhood of God, then as His children we rejoice to think of His eye upon us, for it means comfort, protection and help.—Lutheran Observer.

1 Per Cent on Budgets For Superannuates

Lack of time prevents us from telling all who helped this week,—there are six new entries on the A. C. B., one on the G. C. B., three on the College and one on the W. F. M. S. and there are two promotions,—just how huch we appreciate it. An explamation is due the pastor and people of Spring Church Charge. Some way the amount sent from them sometime ago got crediated to Spring Hill church on West Thomasville. We gladly make the correction and this places Spring Church and Lebanon on the Spring Church charge over the top on College assessment

And here is hats off to Spencer, first over the top on all budgets. This should have been announced last week, but we did not get the pastor's phone message correct and so made a mistake. Glad to correct, Spencer, and congratulate you on the triumph.

In His dear service,

A. G. DIXON.

Rev. G. O. McMillan, president of the Fort Smith-Oklahoma Conference, has accepted the invitation of the Board of Regents of Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, to become president of that institution. He will take up the duties of this office about the first of October, and Mrs. McMillan will become a member of the faculty. The Board of Regents have certainly made wise choice, and we predict that the favorable outlook already reported for this important college will be further brightened by the announcement of the acquisition of President and Mrs. McMillan.—Methodist Recorder.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

In Memoriam

It is with sad hearts we, the members of e Ladies' Aid Society and Home and Foreign issionary Societies of Welch Memorial M. Church, High Point, N. C., record the death our dear sister, Mrs. W. M. Welborn, whom e death angel called Home February 6th, 27. She was one of our most loyal and ithful members.

Be it resolved:

First—That we submit to God's will, as thus pray, "Thy will be done on earth as it is heaven."

Second—That we resolve to live in readiness to death, then we will meet Sister Welborn that bright beyond, where parting is no ore.

Third—That we extend to the daughters d loved ones our heartfelt sympathy and mmend them to our Heavenly Father, who ne can give comfort in time of trouble.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions spread upon the minutes of the Ladies' d Society and Home and Foreign Missionary cieties; also, a copy be sent to the Metho-st Protestant Herald and Missionary Record d to each of the daughters.

ervant of God, well done
y glorious warfare's past e battle's fought, the race is won d Thou art crowned at last."

Allred

Isabelle Lineberry Allred was born Septem-r 20, 1845. On March 15, 1867, she was mar-d to Nathaniel C. Allred. Something like years or more ago she professed faith in e Lord, and joined the M. P. church at ay's Chapel, and remained a faithful mem-r till death. She was the mother of seven ildren, four sons and three daughters.

God permitted her to live with her husband years, and two days. Death came on March , 1927, and her Spirit went back to God. v. W. F. Ashburn assisted the writer in e funeral services at Gray's Chapel on arch 18.

Her husband and children have the sym-thy of their many friends.

What a great blessing has been theirs, to ve this Christian woman, as wife and other to direct the foot steps of the chil-en in early life. May they all serve her d and meet her in Glory.

A. O. LINDLEY.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY

We, the members of the Philathea class of idway Methodist Protestant church of idsville, N. C., wish to offer a tribute of r love to our pastor and his wife, Rev. and rs. W. D. Reed, in the loss of their daughter.

Whereas we recognize God's mercy and we ow "He doeth all things well" therefore it resolved:

That we extend the fullest measure of our sympathy to the bereaved family, trusting that the Great Comforter of souls will dispel the darkness of their grief with the light of faith that ultimately we shall meet again in that Eternal Land where there is neither death, parting nor sorrow.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication and that they be spread upon the minutes of our class.

SALLIE C. DOBBS,
MRS. J. W. BARTEE,
MRS. W. A. JOHNSON.

Angel

The doors that hold us to this world swung ajar last Tuesday morning and the spirit of Brother P. H. Angel was liberated from the pains and sorrows of this world to be with Jesus. He suffered much but bore his afflictions with great fortitude. As a babe going to sleep in its mother's arms, he passed on to a greater life, to await the coming of the loving ones left behind. The pall bearers were nephews, and flower bearers were nieces of the deceased. The funeral was attended by one of the largest congregations we ever saw and more visibly affected than usual. He was an affectionate husband, and a kind father and good neighbor, and will be greatly missed.

May the God he served watch over the bereaved ones and help them to realize the goodness of God in all things.

REPORTER.

Welborn

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has taken from our midst our beloved co-worker, Mrs. W. M. Welborn, and whereas, in her death, the Welch Memorial Methodist Protestant Church, as well as the entire community, have suffered a great loss, therefore, it is resolved—

First—That while we bow in submission to His divine will, yet our hearts are heavy at her home-going.

Second—That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the Heavenly Father, who does all things well.

Third—That we shall always cherish her beautiful life as a rich legacy.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald, a copy to each of the daughters and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Quarterly Conference.

"God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon his love had given
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in Heaven."

G. A. KERR,
G. R. WARD,
C. GILL,
Committee.

Welborn

At her home in High Point, N. C., on Saturday night of February 5th, 1927, the spirit of our beloved friend, Mrs. Delphine Welborn, took its peaceful flight to join the hosts of loved ones on the other shore and be with Him who said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and I will give you rest."

Sister Welborn united with our Senior Christian Endeavor Society at the time of its organization and remained a faithful member until the time of her death.

She was ever ready and willing to help in any good cause.

Therefore, be it resolved—

First—That the Welch Memorial Senior Christian Endeavor Society feels very keenly the loss of this faithful member.

Second—That in our sorrow we bow in humble submission to the will of God, who doeth all things well.

Third—That we extend our love and sympathy to her bereaved ones.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent each daughter, a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald, and a copy be spread upon the records of our Senior Christian Endeavor Society.

COMMITTEE.

Willey

Mrs. Della Willey, born April 23, 1888, departed this life March 14, 1927. Before she was married she was Miss Della Matthews, and was raised near Ringwood, N. C. When she was about 12 years old she professed faith in Christ and united with the Methodist Protestant church at Ringwood.

In 1905 was married to Mr. B. F. Willey, Jr., and soon after this she moved her membership to Eden church, where she lived a faithful Christain life, and was faithful to her church until the end came.

Her sudden death was a great shock to the church and community as well as the family

Mrs. Willey was a member of the Eden Ladies' Aid Society, and had been a member nearly every since it was organized, and was always faithful to attend the meetings of this society.

Mrs. Willey was one of the best women in her community. She was always faithful to visit the sick in her community, and see after the needs of the suffering. I think it might be said of her, She has done what she could. She always wore a pleasant smile, and always had a kind word for everybody, and she will be greatly missed in the church, and Aid Society, and community, as well as in the home, but we feel that our great loss is her eternal gain.

She is survived by her husband and three children; two sons, William, and Wright Willey, and one daughter, Annie Jewel Willey.

The funeral services were conducted in Eden church Tuesday afternoon by the writer assisted by Rev. R. C. Stubbins, after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery beneath a mound of beautiful flowers to await the resurrection morning.

C. L. SPENCER.

Bullard

In the death of our friend and neighbor, Mr. Thomas Bullard, Haw River has lost one of the most loyal citizens. About 11 o'clock Saturday night, March 19, his spirit quietly slipped away to go back to God. Mr. Bullard was in his 75th year. He came into the church about 12 years ago and had been faithful in his service, always willing and ready to do his share of what his church proposed to do. His church will miss him, so will his home and community. His funeral service was conducted in his home at 3 o'clock Sunday, by his former pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams. He leaves to mourn his loss a broken-hearted wife and six daughters and two sons, Mrs.

E. L. Thompson, Haw River; Mrs. I. M. Hughes, Haw River; Miss Espa Bullard, Haw River; Miss Clara Bullard, Durham; Miss Alma Bullard, Haw River; Miss Maie Bullard, Haw River; Mr. T. A. Bullard, Haw River; Mr. Harley Bullard, Haw River; and six grand children.

The large concourse of people who attended the funeral and the beautiful flowers placed upon the grave were evidence of the esteem in which he was held.

One Who Knew Him.

Lackey

Mrs. Buna Lackey was the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Reed. She accepted Christ as her Savior at the age of nine and lived for Him for a little more than twenty-four years.

When quite a young woman she became the wife of J. R. Lackey. This union was blessed with four children, one of which died in infancy. Her bereft companion and children feel the loss most keenly. They have our deepest sympathy.

Mrs. Lackey was a loving mother and a good wife. According to the testimony of her father she was always an obedient child.

On March 19, 1927, in the afternoon her spirit quietly slipped away to enter that home prepared for it by our loving Savior.

The following day funeral services were held at the Friendship Methodist Protestant church of Fallston where she was a member. Her body was laid to await the resurrection at the same place.

Surely one of our best has been taken from us. May the hope of meeting her be the comfort of all who mourn for her.

KATIE LEE CLAY.

Jennings

Our hearts were made sad when the death angel came on March 10th and bore away the soul of our dear friend, Mrs. Martha Ellen Jennings, the wife of Bud Jennings. She leaves to mourn their loss her husband, one daughter, Mrs. C. A. Parrish, and son-in-law, two grand children, Henry G. and C. A. Parrish, Jr., all of Greensboro, N. C., and also leaves one sister and one brother to mourn for the dear one. She was tenderly laid to rest on March 17, 1927, in the M. P. cemetery at Cedar Falls by the writer, assisted by R. T. Thorps. This community has lost one of its best friends. She will be greatly missed by us all but most of all by her husband and daughter. She was a good woman. She told her husband shortly before her death that she was ready to go but none of us was expecting her to go so soon. She was born June 23, 1861; was married to Bud Jennings December 25, 1879, and lived happily for 40 years, but this happy home is broken up. How sad for the lonely husband. They have lived most of their married life as neighbors to me and I always found them ready to help when needed. Truly a good friend is gone. May the Lord bless the bereaved ones.

REV. AND MRS. G. A. LAUGHLIN.

Glass

Mrs. Charlie Glass was buried the 16th in Cedar Falls M. P. cemetery by the writer. The deceased was born June 11, 1888. She is survived by her husband and two small children and three brothers and one sister. I have known the deceased all of her life. She was a good girl and a good woman. She told her brother just before she died that she was ready to go and wanted me to conduct her funeral. She had been sick for a long time, so we think of her as being at home above. May God bless the bereaved ones and help them to so live that they can meet her in the sweet by and by.

G. A. LAUGHLIN

Warren

Brother John B. Warren, one of our members residing at Hope Dale, has our deepest sympathy in the passing of his wife. She had been sick about two months when the end came at Rainey Hospital, April 2. Sister Warren was a good woman, and gave assurances of her steadfast faith to the end. The funeral was conducted by the writer in Hope Dale Christian church, where she held her membership. Interment was in Pine Hill cemetery, Burlington. Besides her husband and one child, the deceased is survived by an aged mother, two sisters, and four brothers. May they find sustaining grace in the God that she trusted and served.

S. W. TAYLOR.

Morris

Miss Lucy Jane Morris of Weavers Chapel community, near Littleton, N. C., passed away March 31, 1927. Her age is not definitely known but she was past 70 years of age. She had been afflicted and confined to her bed for many years, but was very patient in all those years. She was converted and joined Weavers Chapel some time early in life.

Funeral services were held from the home Friday, April 1st, by her pastor and her body laid to rest in the family burying ground near by. The bereaved family have the sympathy of all the church and community.

J. B. O'Briant.

Hoy

Myrtle Garrett Hoy, devoted wife of Mr. E. J. Hoy, was born on the twenty-third day of October, 1902; she departed this life February 11, 1927.

Sister Hoy was born and reared in Alamance county, and spent the greater part of her life in the county of her birth. Her married life dates from 1922. In that year, on the twenty-second day of December, she became the wife of Mr. E. J. Hoy with whom she lived happily until death broke the union.

The deceased was a good woman. In her early girlhood she professed faith in Christ as her personal Savior, and united with Mt. Pleasant M. P. church, Mt. Pleasant charge. When her parents removed from that community and came to Burlington to live, she, with the other members of the family, transferred her membership to the Burlington M. P. church. As a church member, she was loyal; as a Christian, she was steadfast to the end. For a year before her death she was confined to her bed, and suffered much; but through it all she was patient and cheerful. She wanted to live, but if she could not, she was fully resigned to her fate. She felt that she was in God's keeping, and whatever happened, all would be well with her. We shall miss her, but we are confident that for her, to depart was far better.

Besides her husband, she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Talmage Hinshaw,, and a large circle of relatives and friends. To these who feel most keenly her passing, we extend our tender sympathy, and commend them to the God of all comfort. May his grace abound toward them in this sorrow.

The funeral and interment were at Mt Pleasant, the church in which she was converted and the cemetery in which the mortal remains of several of her loved ones rest. A large congregation was present to share in this tribute of respect to her memory. The writer was assisted in the funeral by Rev. G F. Millaway. S. W. TAYLOR.

Holton

We are called upon to mourn the passing of one of our older members, Albert A. Holton, well known citizen of High Point, who died at his residence, shortly before midnight on Sunday, March 6th. He had suffered for the past few weeks from grippe, but his condition was not considered serious until a few days before the end when pneumonia developed.

Mr. Holton was nearly 73 years of age, having been born at Jamestown, N. C., April 3 1854, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Franl Holton. On December 28, 1875, he was married to Miss Maggie Tate of Jamestown, sister of Messrs. Will, John H., Albert E., and Fred N. Tate of this city. This couple lived to celebrate their Golden Wedding in December, 1925. A few years after their marriage they moved to High Point, where they have since resided with the exception of a few years spent in Greensboro.

Mr. Holton was prominent in political circles, having been Post-master of High Point from 1882 to 1886, and Clerk of Superior Court of Guilford county from 1886 to 1890. He was also Assistant Post-master here for two years under the late William P. Ragan. At one time he was connected with the Revenue Department. He is survived by his widow, a brother, Wm. F. Holton of Roanoke, Va., and a half-brother, J. F. Holton of this city. There are also several nieces and nephews, who reside here, at Jamestown, and other places.

In 1902 he connected himself with the First Methodist Protestant church of this city.

Funeral services were conducted at the home on Tuesday, March 8th, by the pastors, Rev. P. E. Lindley and Rev. E. Lester Ballard, assisted by Dr. George R. Brown of Reidsville and Rev. John W. Moore of Wesley Memorial M. E. church, this city. Interment was made in Oakwood cemetery. To the sorrowing wife who was a true help-mate in every sense of the word, and a faithful and loyal companion for more than a half-century, the sympathy of a large circle of friends and relatives is extended. BLANCHE A. PICKENS.

Julian

The members of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of Bethany M. P. church bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, in the removal of one of our members, Mrs. George Julian.

We therefore offer this tribute of love and respect;

Resolved, That we remember the beautiful Christian character of Mrs. Julian, and may the kind and unselfish life she lived be an inspiration to our Society and all who knew her, and may each one live in closer fellowship with our Heavenly Father.

We express our gratitude to the giver of all for her beautiful life, and her faithfulness to her church and her Christ.

The church and society have lost a devoted member who was ready and willing to do her part; her loved ones have suffered a great loss; the church and society a devoted and consecrated worker.

Resolved that we express our sympathy to her husband, her sons, and her daughters, and commend them to the Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each member of the family, the Methodist Protestant Herald, the local newspapers and recorded in the minutes of our society.

Respectively submitted,
MRS. C. E. JULIAN,
MRS. W. P. JULIAN,
MRS. C. L. REDDING.

Pickard

After a lingering illness of more than eighteen months with paralysis, Mr. Oscar E. Pickard, a prominent farmer of the Saxapahaw community, passed away February 2, being 78 years old. On the following day his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Concord Methodist Protestant church, the funeral being conducted by the writer. It was the writer's privilege to visit Mr. Pickard often during his long illness. He expressed himself a number of times as being ready to meet his God in peace.

May our heavenly Father bless his widow and children who are left behind.

H. L. ISLEY.

Byars

Sherman Byars, born March 15, 1882, departed this life February 26, 1927. He lived a quiet Christian life and left the assurance that all was well with his soul. He was first married to Miss Emma Brannon who preceded him to the spirit land several years.

To this union were born seven children; Mrs. Ula Good, Clarence, Hazel, Bertha, Bessie, Lamar, and Leland Byars.

He was last married to Miss Hattie Poole who still survives. He also leaves an aged father, Mr. Dock Byars. Three sisters, Mrs. Belle Duncan, Mrs. Gena Leonard, Mrs. Mae King; four brothers, Wade, Pliny, Luther and Leo Byars.

The funeral service was held at Liberty Hill M. P. church where he was a member. The service was conducted by Rev. Lee Leonard and W. Y. Cooley of the M. E. church, his pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, being away at the time of his death.

Sharon

On March 29th Jasper Sharon went back to God. He was 66 years old. He profesed religion many years ago and united with the M. P. church, Palestine, and has been a faithful and loyal member. The last time he attended services he was almost too feeble to get in the church. It was communion day and the writer wondered if he would ever be able to partake of the "Lord's Supper" again. He was a good husband and a loving father and a kind neighbor. He will be mised. He was a great sufferer. He had all done for him that loving hands could do. He has gone to live with his two children. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, and the remains were laid to rest in Palestine cemetery.

Our brother dear is dead and buried,
All the solemn rights are o'er,
With some loved ones we have laid him,
And shall see his face no more.

Heavy were our hearts at parting,
For we loved our brother dear,
He was ever tender-hearted,
And to all he was sincere.

We will not, no ne'er, forget him,
Nor allow our hearts grow cold,
But we'll love and think of brother,
With the tender love of old.

MRS. R. J. SHARON.

McPherson

Judge Carr McPherson was born June 20, 1875, and died April 5, 1927. He leaves to mourn their loss his wife, two sons, Paul and Russel. The oldest son preceded him four years ago, May 10, 1923.

Mr. McPherson joined the Rock Creek M. P. church early in life and remained faithful till his death. He was a devoted husband and father. Truly one of the most valuable men of the community has gone.

The funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. S. W. Taylor, and his remains laid to rest in Rock Creek cemetery.

SMILE

By Grenville Kleiser

If the weather looks like rain,
Smile.
When you feel you must complain,
Smile.
Do not care if things seem gray,
Soon there'll come a brighter day,
You will find that it will pay
To Smile.

If the world looks sad and drear,
Smile.
Banish every thought of fear,
Smile.
Do the very best you can,
Play your part now like a man,
Make each day a better plan
And smile.

If you taste life's bitter cup,
Smile.
Should the doctors give you up,
Smile.
You are very far from dead,
Waste no time in useless dread,
Put your trust in God instead
And smile.

—We thank Mr. Grenville Kleiser for a copy of "Random Rhymes," a collection of poems written by him and Mrs. Kleiser and printed in Paris, France. Mr. and Mrs. Kleiser are spending some time in that country. We reprint two of these poems in this issue of the Herald.

—Rev. Lewis H. Keller, D. D., a student in Adrian College when the editor of the Herald was connected with that institution, is now president of Atlanta Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga., a Congregational school, though four denominations are represented in the faculty and all denominations in the student body.

REBIRTH

By Elizabeth Kleiser

Mother earth is waiting
For the Springtime's gentle rain,
To hasten the renascence
Of tree and flower again.

The human heart is waiting
For Christ to come again,
To bind the wounds of selfishness
And free mankind from pain;

To open wide the door of Love
That all may enter in
To harmony and holiness
Freed from sense of sin;

Where gracious thought and honesty
Will gladden humankind,
Where goodness and humility
Enthrone the Christlike mind.

Christ, so full of selflessness,
So full of Love divine,
Teach us to pray "Thy kingdom come,"
Make Love our only shrine.

—Rev. J. D. Williams is assisting in a two-weeks' evangelistic meeting in Whitakers.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Second Church, Charlotte.—Sunday was a busy day. I taught a Bible class, preached three times and drove nearly one hundred miles. I have been sick with a cold for ever four weeks. I went to see Mr. Nichols, the man we bought the second lot from Monday morning and asked him to give us until the 17th to raise the $130.00. There was $8.00 due. I paid that out of my own pocket. That will go on the purchase price of the lot. I needed that $8.00 and several thousand dollars more. But the Methodist Protestant Church needs that lot. I am going to save it if I can. If all our folks who can will help we can save it much easier than I can save it by myself. My dear brethren and sisters, I am depending upon you to help, please do not disappoint me. I have made many calls for our dear old Zion. I shall soon make my last call. This may be the last call. I am listening for my call to go home. I like to think about Going Home. I am looking that way. May our Father continue to bless you all. Pray for me.

Yours in His name,
D. A. BRASWELL.

High Point.—The Vacation Church School Institute is in session. This institute is being held under the direction of the Board of Young People's Work, of which Rev. Lawrence Little is Secretary, and is especially intended for those who expect to work in Vacation Schools next summer. The attendance is good. Afternoon and evening sessions are being conducted. Mrs. H. W. Maier of Thomasville, who is well known for her work among the children and young people of our denomination, is in charge of the program, which fact insures a successful and enjoyable time for all those who attend. This institute is a forward step for our denomination, and no doubt will be the means of much inspiration for the leaders in the work among our young people.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Societies held their April meeting on Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. S. D. Shelton. Reports of the work for the year just closed were heard. The Home Society raised $600 last year, while the Foreign contributed more than $700. This is the best showing financially in the history of the two societies, and the outlook for the coming year is bright and encouraging.

The Ladies' Aid Society is unusually active these days. Breakfasts were served at the church for three mornings last week during the meeting of the Federation of Music Clubs, and suppers are being served for three evenings during the Institute this week. Supper will be served on Thursday evening also to the Brotherhood.

Misses Mary and Alice Koonce were leaders at the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society Monday evening, and the topic discussed was, "What is Real Christianity?"

Plans are being made to observe Passion Week next week, and services will be held each evening until Easter Sunday. It is hoped and expected that our members will forego all social affairs and attend these meetings in commemoration of the last days of agony and suffering of our Savior on earth. The doors of the church will be opened on Easter Sunday morning for the reception of new members as well as the baptism of little ones.

The music at the 11 o'clock service last Sunday morning was unusually beautiful. The choir rendered the popular Anthem, "Sing, O Daughter of Zion," very effectively; the organist, Mr. Dan W. Smith, played as a Prelude the lovely "To Spring" by Greig, and Clarence Schultheiss, the great favorite, sang "Evening and Morning" very beautifully.

New officers for the Junior Mission Circle, Mrs. R. M. Andrews leader, have been elected as follows: President, Alson Gray; Vice-President, Ernestine Vuncannon; Recording Secretary, William Vance, and Treasurer, Julia Elizabeth Coe.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—The regular services were held here yesterday at 11 o'clock. It was encouraging to notice the large crowd out for preaching. Mr. O'Briant delivered a very helpful and inspiring sermon. His subject was "Get Better Acquainted With God," which I feel was beneficial to both old and young.

We are glad to say that our Sunday school is on the increase. Miss Fannie Barnes is back with us after an absence of over a year. Also we have several other new members.

We were very glad to have Mrs. M. S. Hamill out to our preaching services yesterday. She is 83 years old.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Hawkins Chapel on Easter Monday.

Much sympathy is extended to Mrs. W. R. Carter, one of our good members, in the loss by death of her mother, Mrs. Sallie Carter, who passed away on Sunday night, March 27th, after an illness of an hour or two. She was a member of Bobbitt's Chapel Baptist church and was known as a consistent Christian, and was loved by a large circle of friends.

Orange Charge, Notice.—The second quarterly conference will be held at Union Grove church Saturday before the fourth Sunday in April.

Candidates for delegate to Annual Conference to nominate and other important business. Conference to meet promptly at 2 p.m. A full attendance of the officials is desired.

B. M. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Liberty.—On March 27, the Senior C. E. society had a very interesting meeting. Dr. Dixon, President of the Conference, was present and made a talk on our missionary work on the foreign field. Mrs. George Parker gave us some very interesting news concerning the work of our missionaries in Japan, China and India, including Mr. and Mrs. J. Clyde Auman, of Nagoya, Japan.

The Christian Endeavor society voted on sending one year's subscription to the C. E. World to the lepers in the Philippine Islands. The attendance was unusually good.

Spring holidays at the College will begin Saturday, April 18, and will continue one week. Great preparations are being made for the first commencement, when 13 young men and women will receive their degrees. Much interest is being shown by local people. The latest to announce a medal given to students annually is Mr. Robert T. Amos, prominent textile man of High Point. It will be awarded to the best "all-round" boy who is adjudged worthy for qualifications of personality, scholarship, and moral character.

Congratulations are being extended to Prof. and Mrs. J. D. Hardy upon the arrival of a little daughter in their home.

Miss Helen Pugh, the gifted young pianist of Asheville, who gave a lovely recital at the Municipal Theatre on Friday evening, April 1st, and her mother, Mrs. Chas. T. Pugh, were guests of Mrs. R. T. Pickens during the meeting of Federation of Music Clubs.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett and daughter, Mrs. John H. Walker, Jr., have returned from a visit to Tampa, Fla.

We are sorry to note the illness of little Miss Martha Moffit, young daughter of Mayor and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt.

We are pleased to know that Mrs. W. L. Kivett, who has been ill with influenza, is improving.

A landmark of North Main St., the old Pickett Tobacco Factory, property of the late Messrs. W. P. and F. M. Pickett's estates, was burned in the early hours of last Friday morning. Origin of the fire is unknown.

Mrs. J. Norman Wills of Greensboro, past President of N. C. Federation of Music Clubs, was a visitor here last week during the sessions of the Federation, and had charge of the Young Artists' Contest.

We are quite sorry to learn that Mrs. S. P. Montgomery, who has been in ill health for several months, is not so well, and may be obliged to go to the Hospital again soon.

Miss Lucille Pickens had as her guest Sunday Miss Pauline Moore of Wadesboro. Miss Blanche Armfield of Concord, who is a Senior at N. C. College for Women, Greensboro, will stop here Wednesday to visit her aunt, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, and daughters on her return to the College after spring holidays.

Graham.—Sunday morning we heard a very inspiring sermon by our pastor. It seems as though the world is dying because of the lack of love and sympathy, and if the world is growing worse it is because our hearts are becoming so hard we fail to sympathize with those that are down-hearted and sin-sick.

Sunday night the Township S. S. Convention met with us. Lowen Ross gave an address on the efficiency of an adult Bible class teacher. At this service the men's chorus gave several selections which all enjoyed.

Miss Mattie Cheek continues quite ill and we ask the prayers of all for her recovery.

REPORTER.

First Church, Spencer.—Our attendance was the best last Sunday it has been this conference year. The church was practically full for each service, and there were several new faces in the congregation. Our Sunday school has grown until the Senior class has seen fit to divide into two classes, but we are greatly handicapped by a lack of space and separate class-rooms. The Junior Christian Endeavor society meets every Sunday afternoon at 2:30. It is very interesting to meet with the children and see them transact the business of the society, render a short program and close with a series of sentence prayers and the Mizpah benediction.

We were made glad when Mrs. Charles Jackson reported that she had been successful in raising the last dollar of the General Conference Budget; it enables us to say that all our conference claims are paid in full. Mrs. A. L. Moore also reported that she had sufficient funds in hand to finish paying for our piano and that we had only two more one-hundred-dollar payments to meet on our church lot, one of which we hope to meet this month.

T. GLENN MADISON.

Mebane.—We had 197 present for Sunday school Sunday morning. Our pastor preached splendid sermons at the morning and evening services. The different organizations of the church are doing splendid work.

The Workers' Council recently organized meets once a month at the church. At these meetings different methods are presented and discussed whereby we may be or more service and give more help and encouragement to the different organizations in the church.

The Ladies' Aid met yesterday (Monday) afternoon with Mrs. George McAdams; 22 members and one visitor present. The devotional was led by Mrs. Hyfill Jobe and Mrs. Jack Smith. Collection was $7.25. After the business meeting Mrs. McAdams served fruit salad.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies will be represented at the Branch meeting with their budgets paid in full, and a special report of the things accomplished this year. Rev. and Mrs. Suits are spending a few days in High Point this week. Mr. Suits is attending the School of Methods in progress at this time. REPORTER.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our pastor, Brother Reed, filled his appointment on the fourth Sunday with a splendid sermon. We have been trying to bring our Sunday school attendance to 100, and yesterday 102 were present.

Last night we had a large congregation in Christian Endeavor meeeting. Miss Beach, the Bible teacher in Reidsville high school, came out and brought some of her Bible students. They gave us a good program which was enjoyed by all present.

West Forsyth Circuit.—Plan of appointments for the President:

Harmony Grove, Saturday, April 23. He will occupy the pulpit at 11 a. m. and preside over the quarterly conference in the afternoon.
Baltimore, Saturday, 7:30 p. m.
Stony Knoll, Sunday, 11 a. m.
Pleasant Hill, Sunday, 3:00 p. m.
Tabernacle, Sunday, 7:00 p. m.

C. H. WHITAKER, Pastor.

Siler City.—Last Sunday we had an attendance of 98 at Sunday school.

We were very glad to have Mrs. A. G. Dixon and Dr. Glascock of Greensboro, with us Sunday. Mrs. Dixon brought us a wonderful message on, The Meetings With Jesus. The message was brought in such a way that it made us feel the very presence of Jesus.

The ladies of the church met with Mrs. Dixon and Dr. Glascock at the church Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

The devotional was led by Mrs. Emma B. Siler. The work of Home and Foreign Missions was discussed by Mrs. Dixon and Dr. Glascock. Some of the points she mentioned: The great work going on at our Pine Ridge School. The work of our Children's Home.

Committees were appointed to secure delegates to go to the conference at Henderson in this month.

We enjoyed having these people with us. Hope that they may come our way again.

REPORTER.

Mt. Carmel, South Lexington Charge.—Our Sunday school has improved for the past few Sundays but we have more room to grow.

We were glad to have Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Way and children with us in Sunday school and preaching service Sunday. We were glad to have Brother Ridge and wife with us also in Sunday school Sunday.

Brother Ridge filled his appointment at 11 o'clock with a great and forceful sermon. This stirred the emotion of the congregation.

We are glad to see our congregation improving in number and interest. We are glad that Brother R. M. Fritts returned home from the Davidson Hospital where he underwent an operation.

We held our second quarterly conference at this church April 2, at 2:00 p.m., with both churches represented and very good reports from some. It was conducted in a business manner. The nominees for annual conference: C. L. Hedrick from South Lexington church and Brother H. G. Swicegood from Mt. Carmel. REPORTER.

Bethel, Flat Rock Charge.—Our church has been very active for the past few weeks. On the third Sunday in March we were very glad to have Dr. and Mrs. Dixon with us. Dr. Dixon preached us a fine sermon and Mrs. Dixon also made a nice talk. I'm sure all enjoyed hearing them.

The Billy Sunday Club of Winston-Salem held a 10 days' meeting also, a different team coming each night; we had some fine talks and a good meeting, although there were not many converts. They are doing a lot of good and we enjoyed having them with us.

Dr. Schallert of the club gave a lecture to men and boys only, last Sunday which was good. Dr. Schallert, being a physician, of course knew what he was talking about. Our pastor, Mr. Trogdon, also brought us a strong message on Sunday morning, so plain and truthful. We always enjoy his sermosn. The children are now getting up their Easter program under the leadership of Mrs. A. A. Jones. They will have their services the third Sunday evening at 2:00 o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend. Our Sunday school is doing nicely, although there are more that should attend. Prayer services each Sunday night.

Best wishes to all the readers of the Herald.

REPORTER.

St. Paul.—Springtime being here we hope for a bigger and better Sunday school and an increase in number for church worship. Not that our attendance has not been fairly good, but we are not easily satisfied.

We are expecting a fine Easter program. We will have the program Easter morning and Sunday night, our revival meeting will begin. We are expecting Rev. C. E. Phillips to help our pastor, Mr. Brittan, in the meeting We are praying for a wonderful meeting.

The Sunday school is progressing nicely. The attendance last Sunday was 133. The Christian Endeavorers are having interesting programs. The Ladies' Aid Society is doing good work. The society will meet with Mrs. T. S. Wade next Saturday night. The quarterly conference met last Saturday night.

We are sorry to say that our pastor's wife, Mrs. Brittan, has been seriously ill. We trust and pray that she will soon be on the road of recovery. NELL WADE.

Hope, Bonlee.—Last Sunday Brother Isley's theme was, "Some Things We Will Never Be sorry Of." Among the many good things, he said, we should always stand "pat," for right principles and would never have cause to regret it.

Brother Isley was accompanied by Miss Webster of Burlington who favored us with a vocal selection which was very much enjoyed.

We were glad to have Mrs. R. G. Henry, one of our members from Stokesdale, with us.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Headen has been made sad by the death of their 13-year-old son, which occurred in a Sanford Hospital a few weeks ago. Our hearts go out to them in sympathy. May they be comforted by Him who doeth all things well.

REPORTER.

Chase City Circuit, Friendship Church.—Our pastor, Rev. C. S. Saunders, filled his appointment third Sunday with a very helpful sermon on Spiritual Help. A large number were out to hear him and enjoyed his message very much. On Saturday we held our second quarterly conference. One very interested minute read by our secretary, Mr. O. E. Lenhart, that our debts were paid off on the church. Friendship is free of encumbrance, ready to be dedicated to his service. We ask for a petition in the Christians' prayers, that the members of this church may live a life and use the church as our Master would have us to do.

The Sunday school with J. W. Lenhart as superintendent is progressing nicely. We hope to increase our number when warm weather sets in. We had a good prayer service Sunday night conducted by Mr. Hulin, whom our pastor had with him from Greensboro. Mr. Hulin is past the three score and 10 mark, but sure can tell of God's love for all. May the Lord help Mr. Hulin to come to Virginia again. We enjoyed his visit very much.

We have something to contend with in our church and we would be very glad to get advice from other churches if they have had the same to overcome. We haven't a regular person to play the organ , first one, then another our singing is uncertain; we have a lot of boys and girls and older ones that are interested in singing.

REPORTER.

Halifax.—Our second quarterly conference will convene with Union church on Friday, April 15th, 2 p. m. We want all of the officials to be present.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Spring Valley, Vance Circuit.—The work at Spring Valley is progressing very nicely.

Our Sunday school is doing fine work and improving every Sunday in interest and attendance. Number on roll 108, average attendance since Christmas from 65 to 75.

Christian Endeavor prayer meeting on Sunday nights, doing good work. On April 10th, the Young Peoples' Class had charge of the program with Mrs. J. B. Wiggins, their teacher, as leader. The Bible was the subject, and every member of the class present had some part on the program. We have a fine bunch of young people who will 'most always respond when called upon.

Since Christmas we have remodeled our church, and built two Sunday school rooms, the carpenters' works being finished, ready for painting, and then seating.

We have labored very hard on this work, starting with less than $500 in the treasury. We have managed to meet practically all bills, but their is nothing left on hand, so if any reader of the Herald wishes to contribute anything to us, we will greatly appreciate it. Send to C. B. Basket, Henderson, N. C., R 3.

On the fourth Sunday in April second quarterly conference of Vance Circuit will convene at Spring Valley. Preaching at 11 o'clock, and quarterly conference in the afternoon.

On the fifth Sunday in May our District Rally will be held at Spring Valley also. Pray that both meetings may be successful.

Our pastor has been giving his good sermons this year. He is a splendid preacher, and we hope that he may remain on Vance Circuit a long time.

Our Easter exercise will be held next Sunday night. We hope to have a good program.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society will meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. R. E. Britt and Miss Mabel Britt to make further plans for Branch meeting. At the meeting in March the Missionary budget was reported paid in FULL. REPORTER.

Fairview and Glen Raven.—Our special meeting will begin at Glen Raven third Sunday in June. Rev. R. S. Troxler as pulpit help. At Fairview second Sunday in August. Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, to assist. Nominees to next annual conference are C. C. Garrison and J. F. Barber. T. A. WILLIAMS.

South Lexington.—The revival meeting has been fairly well attended. Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, pastor of Flat Rock Charge, of Stokesdale, has been with us and preached every night last week. The sermons of Brother Trogdon have been uplifting to the Christians and convincing to the sinners. He preaches the plain, simple gospel without fear or favor, and does not soft-pedal any of his sermons or deliverances. The central theme of his sermons is that Christ is the only hope for the human race and all people are lost without Christ. He emphasizes the doctrine of an eternal, burning hell for all who refuse to accept Christ just as strongly as he emphasizes the blessed teaching of a heaven for those who take Christ as their Savior and redeemer.

The services will continue all this week and Brother Trogdon has consented to remain with Pastor Ridge and proclaim the gospel as the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. A glorious service was held Sunday night when five young men were happily converted. There had been one conversion during the week, making a total of six up to Sunday night.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—Attendance at church and Sunday school, yesterday, was good. Secretary reported 248 chapters of the Bible read during past week, by 59 people. Offering, $2.26.

Christian Endeavor was conducted at 7:30 by William Hardin. Some of the main features of this meeting were talks by Miss Ola Whitley and Purvis Neece and a duet by Misses Kate and Beulah Garrett.

Our pageant will be given next Sunday evening 7:30 p.m.

The W. H. and F. M. S. will meet at the home of Mrs. A. P. Coble Wednesday afternoon, April 13. We are glad to report our Home society over the top with budget.

We hope to have both societies represented at Branch Meeting.

On Saturday afternoon, April 2, Miss Nina Smith and Mr. Aruel Reynolds were united in marriage at the home of the bride. Pastor Ashburn officiated. These young people are members of our church here.

Some of our older members are in very feeble health.

We are expecting to hold a memorial service third Sunday in May.

REPORTER.

Jerusalem.—The appointment at Jerusalem was met by the pastor last Sunday morning and there was the usual size congregation. The pastor delivered his Easter message. The Sunday school was held just preceding the preaching service. Brother Beck, of the Reformed church, is superintendent of the school, and Brother R. E. Hunt, of our denomination, is assistant superintendent.

Rev. Bush, a member of the M. E. church and local preacher in that denomination, will preach at Jerusalem next Sunday at 11 o'clock in the absence of the pastor, who will spend the Easter holidays in Alamance and Chatham counties. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Anderson.—Our work is progressing nicely. On the first Sunday in March we were glad to have Dr. and Mrs. Dixon with us at Liberty Hill for an evening service. Dr. Dixon preached, bringing us a very helpful message on Stewardship. The people are still speaking of His splendid message. After the sermon Mrs. Dixon talked to a group of the ladies about the missionary work and organized a misionary society. We were sorry we could not have representatives at the Branch Meeting in Henderson. On Monday evening we drove through the rain to Greenville for dinner at six o'clock with Brother J. Lee Pool and his family, then we were at Fairview for a service at seven-thirty. No definite announcement had been made, but through the help of some of the members the pastor managed to get word of the service over the community and a goodly number came and heard the word gladly. Dr. Dixon brought us another inspiring message on Stewardship. Everyone was glad of the opportunity of hearing Dr. Dixon and is anxious to have him come again. After the sermon Mrs. Dixon spoke of the missionary work and a society was organized at Fairview with a dozen or more members.

Our Easter service was rendered at Liberty Hill Sunday evening. A very large audience was present and many compliments were heard after the service. The pageant, "There is Hope of a Tree," by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, was used. Mr. M. C. Waits of Greenville directed the pageant with the assistance of Misses Kate and Romaine Pool. We are indebted to these kind people and especially to Mr. Waite for his kind and courteous cooperation in the preparation and rendering of this program.

The offering for home missions amounted to something over $5.00. Easter service will be observed at Fairview next Sunday with a sermon by the pastor at eleven o'clock and the Easter exercise by the children at the evening service hour. A cordial welcome is extended to attend these services.

High Point.—A cloud of gloom and sadness was cast over the city when the news of a disastrous automobile wreck last Sunday at 12:30 o'clock was heard. Ten boys of the Children's Home family were returning from Sunday school and church services at the First church when the large Chandler touring car in which they were riding collided with a Buick coupe driven by W. R. Kester, local furniture dealer. The wreck occurred near High Point College, where College Drive and Montlieu Avenue intersect. Following the accident, two ambulances rushed all the boys to the Hospitals, where it was found that Homer Finch, 12-year-old lad, was very seriously injured, his skull having been fractured. Heroic efforts to save his life were made by attending physicians, but he died at 3 o'clock p.m. Sam Coble and Paul Guice were severely injured, the former having his leg broken in two places and the latter is suffering from injuries to his spine. Both these boys are expected to recover unless some complications arise. The other boys were able to return to the Home immediately after being treated. The unlucky car was driven by Ben Bulla, one of the older boys, and he is considered a competent and careful driver. Superintendent Allman stated that he does not hold Mr. Kester responsible for the accident. The dead boy was the son of Mrs. Ida Finch, who lives near Lexington. Funeral services will be conducted at Lexington this (Tuesday) afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. E. Lester Ballard of the First church, assisted by other ministers. He is survived by his mother, father, and a sister, Hope Finch. This is the first death of a child belonging to the Home family, and the tragic circumstances make it doubly sad and deplorable.

Lenten services are being held each evening during Passion week, leading up to Easter Sunday. These services are in commemoration of the agony and suffering of the last week of our Savior's life on earth. Every member is asked to forego all social affairs and attend church for the week. Appropriate programs for each evening have been arranged by Messrs. Lindley and Ballard, and it is expected that a number will unite with the church next Sunday morning. Another interesting service will be the baptism of several babies. The Sunday school will hold special Easter services Sunday morning, and at 5 o'clock p.m. the choir assisted by other local talent will ender the beautiful Cantata, "Olivet to Calary."

The Ladies' Aid Society held its April meetng Monday afternoon with Mrs. R. T. Pickns; 35 members present.

We are pleased to see Mrs. John S. Pickett t home again after a month's absence in renton, N. J.

Many friends will regret to learn that Mrs. . P. Montgomery has gone to Guilford Genral Hospital for treatment. We are wishing or her an early recovery and improvement n health. She is greatly missed in the work f the Women's Societies, being an active and oyal member of the Ladies' Aid and the two lissionary Societies.

State Street Church.—We have been given nother much needed and highly appreciated ift—an organ for the primary department of he Sunday school. This was given by Helen nd John Harkey, two fine members of the hurch and Sunday school and grand-children f our faithful Sunday school superintendent, Ir. John Lindsay.

The ladies of the Foreign Missionary Soiety with the help of some of the Sunday chool children are preparing a pageant to e given next Sunday night. This will be the Easter program.

The missionary society met last Thursday fternoon at the church. New officers were lected or rather a few new officers were lected, and a number of old ones re-elected. Irs. A. H. Evans was elected president of he society. Mrs. Curtis Koonts resigned his office to take charge of the Sunshine ircle. The children's missionary society.

The Christian Endeavor society will hold a rayer meeting with the prisoners at the jail ext Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethea, Miss Virginia Walser, liss Clara Taylor, Miss Willie Veigh Leonard nd a few others of our folks attended the ible School Institute at High Point last week.

REPORTER.

Canaan, Denton Charge.—Our work is going along very nicely. Our Sunday school s gradually increasing.

There will be a memorial service at our hurch on Easter Sunday at eleven o'clock. Everybody come that can, and if possible ring a bunch of flowers, for we hope to ave the graves covered in flowers of some ind.

Our Sunday school is planning on going to adin on a picnic the fourth Sunday in this nonth. All members of our Sunday school ill be provided a way to go if they haven't way. We are glad to say that Brother Henerson and family will also accompany us n this trip. REPORTER.

Harris Chapel, Vance Circuit.—Mrs. J. T. Nuckles, one of our oldest and best members f Harris Chapel church, is now making some mprovements after a long period of sickess. She has been confined to her bed since December. Mrs. Nuckles has been greatly issed. It is hoped that she will soon be well nough to fill the vacant seat which is waitng for her in our church.

Mrs. J. E. Burroughs, the oldest member of Harris Chapel church, has also been confined o her room with a severe cough, but is now mproving.

Our Sunday school is getting on fine. We have a regular attendance.

The covering of our church has just been completed, and we are proud of it.

MISS FANNIE SMITH, Reporter.

West Forsyth Circuit, Pleasant Hill.—The Sunday school is preparing a splendid pageant to be given Easter Sunday night. There will be a pretty full program of music and recitations also. We are planning a sunrise prayer meeting, the usual Sunday school and church service and with the above exercises closing the services we will call it a day.

C. H. WHITAKER.

Rockingham.—We had an excellent Sunday school April 10; 108 present and our collection was $6.76. We are still increasing in number and the interest is growing intensely. We have eight classes; four of these classes are in the main part of our building until we can prepare otherwise for them. Mr. R. F. Gardner, the teacher of the Senior quarterly, has one of the largest classes of the school. He and his class have bought curtains and curtained off a large space for his class.

We have had two or three new members to unite with our church lately and we hope to have a good number on Easter Sunday.

Our children are preparing for their Easter program which will be given Sunday night. Mrs. D. E. McKenzie has charge of this.

We will hold service Thursday night, April 14, at our church at which Rev. Mr. Trolinger, our pastor, will administer the "Lord's Supper" in memory of the time that our Lord was betrayed.

We will also hold sunrise meeting Sunday morning in memory of the visit of Mary and the other women to the tomb of Christ and that he had risen from the dead.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trolinger will preach to us Sunday.

The Ladies' Aid Society held a Bible Study last week in the different homes of the members. This lasted throughout the week.

Our second quarterly conference will meet the Tuesday night after Easter.

We held our monthly teacher and officer meeting the Tuesday night following the first Sunday in April. This meeting met at Mr. R. F. Gardner's. It was one of the best held yet; everyone seemed to be so deeply interested. The reports rendered were very good. At the close of the meeting the hostess served very delicious refreshments.

With best regards to the Herald and its readers.

—Brother Lee Bain, of Grace church, died suddenly of heart failure on Tuesday afternoon. He was near the railway station whither he had gone to see a friend off when the summons came. He was a son of Joshua Bain and was about 62 years old. Grady Bain, civil engineer, is one of his sons.

—D. H. McCulloch died on Wednesday morning of this week at his home in Greensboro, aged nearly 83 years. He was a half-brother of Rev. T. F. McCulloch, J. F. McCulloch, A. E. McCulloch, and C. E. McCulloch. He leaves two sons and two daughters, Fletcher, Flavius, Mrs. C. L. Tucker, and Miss Georgia. He formerly traveled in South Carolina where he had many friends. He was buried at Tabernacle where his wife and one daughter, Ida, lie buried.

—Rock Springs, Texas, a town of about 800 people, was almost wiped out by a tornado on Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. Between 150 and 200 people are reported killed and only half a dozen buildings left standing.

—Rev. W. H. Neece, who has been ill and confined to his room, is still ill and had a relapse April 12. Mrs. Neece, who has been seriously ill for several days, is slowly improving.

Rev. and Mrs. Leigh Layman announce the marriage of their daughters Gertrude to Charles Harding Churchill and Eloise to Norman Sheridan Risley on Saturday, the second of April, nineteen hundred twenty-seven, Congregational church, Madison, Ohio.

Brother Layman is our missionary to Japan.

—The meeting at Calvary church continue this week, Brother Millaway filling the pulpit. He not only preaches strong sermons, producing conviction, but he goes down into the congregation and presses for an immediate decision. There are responses at almost every service.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett was at the meeting in Calvary church Tuesday night and led in prayer, praying that the service might end with every person present saved. There were not many unconverted people present; two asked for prayer that they might be saved.

North Carolina Sunday School Convention will be held in Burlington, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, April 26, 27, 28, 1927. All Sunday school workers of all Denominations invited to attend.

VOLUME XXXIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., APRIL NUMBER 24

A Supposed Letter to Jesus and His Reply

Many books were written about Jesus in the early Christian centuries which have not come down to us. They are referred to by name by a number of writers who had seen them. We will here mention a few of these: The Acts of Andrew, The Gospel of Andrew, The Gospel of Barnabas, The Acts of John. There are about 70 such books or sketches. There are also about 25 books of the same class that have come down to us, though they have not been authoritatively accepted as wholly true. They were denied a place among the books of the New Testament, but have been bound together and published under the title, "Apocryphal New Testament." One of these books which is very brief is known as "The Epistles of Jesus Christ and Abgarus, King of Edessa." We give it here in full:

Abgarus, king of Edessa, to Jesus the good Saviour, who appears at Jerusalem, greeting.

I have been informed concerning you and your cures, which are performed without the use of medicines and herbs.

For it is reported, that you cause the blind to see, the lame to walk, do both cleanse lepers, and cast out unclean spirits and devils, and restore them to health who have been diseased, and raise up the dead;

All which when I heard, I was persuaded of one of these two, viz., either that you are God himself descended from heaven, who do these things, or the Son of God.

On this account therefore I have written to you, earnestly to desire you would take the trouble of a journey hither, and cure a disease which I am under.

For I hear the Jews ridicule you, and intend you mischief.

My city is indeed small, but neat, and large enough for us both.

Abgarus, you are happy, forasmuch as you have believed on me, whom you have not seen.

For it is written concerning me, that those who have seen me should not believe on me, that they who have not seen might believe and live.

As to that part of your letter which relates to my giving you a visit, I must inform you that I must fulfil all the ends of my mission in this country, and after that be received up again to him who sent me.

But after my ascension I will send one of my disciples who will cure your disease, and give life to you and all that are with you.

Learned men have been much divided as to the genuineness of these letters. Whether genuine or not, they are interesting to those interested in the life of Christ.

—Kindness to those about you is sure to result in your own happiness.

Atlanta Theological Seminary

A theological seminary in the heart of Atlanta! That hardly comports with our ordinary picture of Atlanta as a great commercial city. Yet it is a fact,—a fact with ten acres of foundation on the heights within this great city. More astonishing still, this seminary was established by a denomination that we usually think of in association with New England and those portions of the West peopled from New England—the Congregational church. The Congregationalists spread not exactly like wild fire, but they spread and get hold. Their lack of connectionalism does not seem to prevent their spreading. With connectionalism they might spread faster, but as it is they have merits that make them spread. They go as Christian missionaries and remain as permanent workers. We have before us a copy of the latest catalogue of Atlanta Theological Seminary. There are 35 members in the board of trustees. You might expect most of them to be northern men, but 19 are residents of Georgia, and only four live in New England states. The institution is meant to serve all denominations in the south and it is managed with that end in view. It has a faculty of ten members. Its president is Rev. Lewis H. Keller, D. D. It is a training school not only for ministers but also for other Christian workers. The spirit of the place is such that "none wants to leave and all delight to return."

The work is thus described:

"Wonderful things happen in the class room on Seminary Hill. A teacher is talking to his group of young people about God as Father and Christ as Redeemer and helper. There is discussion. All think together. They study the spiritual forces that create and develop churches and build character. Minds expand. Hearts are aflame. There is repeated what happened when Christ by the beautiful sea taught His disciples about God. These young men go forth to preach. They carry with them the inspiration and truth that came to them in those sacred hours in the recitation room. They tell the people about God. There are conversions. The truth is passed on to others, enters into their lives, builds character. Communities are changed. The churches take on new life."

Such an institution is to be heartily welcomed anywhere. It is helping young people to careers of greater usefulness than they would have reached.

—Governor Al Smith, of New York, has signed a very stringent law just passed against red light districts in the cities and immoral road houses in the country. Any house shown to be used for immoral purposes is to be pad-locked for 12 months and the furniture, fixtures, musical instruments and personal property used in conducting the place are to be confiscated and sold. Other states have similar laws and the protection they give is needed everywhere. In such places many unwary girls are led to ruin.

WAR CLOUDS IN BIBLE LANDS

By William T. Ellis

Author of Bible Lands Today

Foreign correspondents are somewhat panicky these days concerning the prospect of another world war, to begin in the Balkins or in Turkey, with Italy as a primary factor.

Other observers, who are more concerned with the trend of the times than with local incidents, foresee a great clash between East and West, with Russia as a pivotal force.

Plainly, there is something doing in the Orient, besides the Chinese unheavals. It is of especial interest to all students of the Scripture that ominous events are now being staged in Bible lands. In my new book, "Bible Lands today," I have set forth the causes which are at work to create a clash between the major group of nations.

With events speeding so rapidly, one caution gravely needs to be uttered to all who are interested in the Biblical aspect of impending developments. This warning is against putting a partial or inadequate or doctrinal interpretation upon events. In their zeal for the easy interpretation of prophecy, many devout persons are running off with superficial or partial meanings of current movements. They do not see the situation as a whole; nor even see any part of it clearly.

Whatever studies a Christian may make of the connection between present sensational events in Bible Lands and the prophecies of the Scriptures, he should first of all have in view the whole picture and its proportions and relationships. Also it behooves all believers in the undisputed moral and social teachings of the Bible to grasp, first of all, the vast issues of right and wrong that are at stake. Whatever other mistakes the churches may make, let them not go astray where simple righteousness is concerned.

Meanwhile, as a preliminary and preparatory study of absorbing interest, Bible classes, ministers and individual students of the Scriptures cannot do better than to trace out the amazing connection, throughout the ages and down to date, between Bible lands and the major movements of history.

THE UNCROWNED QUEEN OF AMERICA

By H. A. Smith

If one will visit Statuary Hall, in the Capitol, at Washington, he will see there among many statues of great men, the statue of a woman, and he will naturally inquire who this woman was and what she accomplished to entitle her to stand there among the great statesmen and others who have blessed their country. Each State in the Union is allowed to place in this hall marble or bronze statues of any two persons, "who have been citizens thereof, and illustrious for their historic renown, or for distinguished civil or military service." The State of Illinois presented the statue of Frances Willard, who has been called "the uncrowned queen of America." In one of the speeches of acceptance, the following reference was made to her life and work: "Her life, like that of her Redeemer, was devoted to the spiritual welfare of mankind, and the world at large has been materially benefited by her prayers and sacrifices. Radiant with a halo of all the virtues, her face shone with the light of intelligence. Her marvelous abilities energized all around and about her, while her gentleness, tact, and self-sacrificaing spirit calmed every storm that rose in the councils which were graced and blessed by her presence. Her grand life is a beacon light to the good and the true of all sexes, races and creeds in the civilized world, and her wonderful achievements are lights and landmarks on the cliffs of fame, which will for all time illumine the paths of millions of women wherever civilization has a footing, and where woman is duly appreciated."

There is nothing more admirable in the life of this great woman than the heroic spirit with which she endured the greatest sacrifices in order to help fallen humanity. When she was contemplating the temperance work she consulted a certain bishop for his advice, and he replied: "If you were not dependent upon your own exertions for the supply of current needs, I would say be a philanthropist, but of all work, the temperance work pays least, and you cannot afford to take it up. I therefore counsel you to remain in your chosen and successful field of the higher education." But this did not set her heart at ease. A few days later, on the same mail, she received two letters: one was an offer of a position as principal of a school in New York with a salary of $2,400 a year, and the other was an urgent request to take the presidency of the Chicago branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but offering a very meager support. She did not hesitate, but immediately accepted the position of presidency of the W. C. T. U. She endured real hardships in this work and often walked miles because she did not have the prerequisite nickel for car fare. Her brother protested against her action in this matter and said: "Your faith method is simply a challenge to the Almighty. You have put a chip on your shoulder and dared Omnipotence to knock it off." But the God for whom she labored, and in which she trusted, never failed her.

She was ambitious but hers was a noble ambition. She says in her autobiography: "I have been called ambitious, and so I am, if to have had from childhood the sense of being born to a fate is an element of ambition. For I never knew what it was to aspire and not to believe myself capable of heroism. I always wanted to react upon the world about me to my utmost ounce of power, to be widely-known, loved, and believed in, the more widely the better. Every life has its master passion; this has been mine. Very few things waken my contempt, and this couplet in the hymn book did:

'Make me little and unknown,
Loved and prized by God alone.'

Its supreme absurdity angered rather than amused me, for who could be 'loved and prized' by the Great Spirit and yet despised by the lesser spirits made in His image? Who could deliberately desire to be 'little and unknown,' of small value and narrow circle in a world so hungry for help and strength and uplift, yet beloved and prized by God? No. I wanted to be now and in all worlds my very utmost. I fully proposed to be one whom the multitudes would love, lean on, and bless. Lying on the prairie grass, and lifting my hands toward the sky, I used to say in my utmost spirit, 'What is it I am to be, O God?' I did not wish to climb by others' overthrow, and I laid no schemes to undermine them, but I meant that the evolution of my own powers should do for me all that it would. I felt that a woman owed it to all other women to live as bravely, as helpfully, and as grandly as she could, and to let the world know it."

She realized this God-given ambition, for, devoting her splendid talents to the temperance work, she saw the W. C. T. U. grow from a small, struggling organization to a world-wide movement, the most splendid organization of women that ever existed, numbering in the United States more than 300,-

000, with a following of a half million. In 10,000 towns and cities local unions were established. The Loyal Temperance Legion was formed, composed of children, with a membership of over 250,000. Temperance instruction was provided in the schools and Sunday schools to more than 16,000,000 children. Tens of thousands of men were induced to sign the total abstinence pledge. It circulated millions of pages of temperance literature and it has gone far to secure equality of treatment of women. It appealed for happy homes—the source of good society and good government—home protection; it appealed to the mothers to save the boys for their country, and it marshalled every moral force to the support of its principles.

Our country little realizes how much it owes to the heroic efforts of Miss Willard and her co-workers who were pioneers in arousing a strong public sentiment against the open saloon.

As a public speaker, Miss Willard was remarkably gifted. A Republican candidate, who was irritated because the temperance movement was turning votes aside from his party, went rather reluctantly to hear Miss Willard speak. In a speech before the Senate, accepting the statue, this statesman said: "For more than two hours this gifted woman, with marvelous command of language, with a delicate sense of the fitness and simplicity of words, with perfect understanding of the secret places of the human heart, moved that great multitude with a skill that belongs to genius alone, and to genius only when it is touched with live coals from the altar. And when it was all over we agreed together that in all our lives we had never witnessed a display so marvelous of intellectual power."

Once when a great temperance rally was being held in Boston, and many prominent speakers were taking part, among them John Wanamaker and John B. Gough, Miss Willard was also a speaker. When the meeting closed, one of the speakers said to another: "Well, the woman has beaten us all; Miss Willard's speech was the speech of the whole day."

It is indeed inspiring to read the biography of such a character,—so unselfish, so self-sacrificing, so Christlike. When her body lay in state at Willard Hall in Chicago, 30,000 persons took a farewell look at the form which, by the grace of God, had so blessed humanity.

Ashland, Va.

TWO NEW BOOKS

We wish to call attention to two new books which are of more than passing interest and merit.

The first is, "A Scientific Investigation of the Old Testament," by Robert Dick Wilson, Ph. D., D. D., Professor of Semetic Philology, in Princeton Theological Seminary.

The book is the result of "More than thirty years study and research, covering some 45 languages and dialects." It seems to be a complete answer and refutation of the claims of the destructive critics. He seems to show what we have believed for quite a while, that the extravagant claims—assertions—of the critics are utterly groundless. The whole thing being imagination—not a scintilla of proof. Having its origin in the wicked, unbelieving human heart, "deceitful above all things and deperately wicked."

This, from the Preface: "In my discussion of the text, therefore, it is my endeavor, to show from the evidence of manuscripts, versions, and the inscriptions, that we are scientifically certain that we have substantially the same text that was in the possession of Christ and the apostles and, so far as anybody knows, the same as that written by the original composers of the Old Testament documents."

"The Method of the Investigation" followed in the book is that known as the "evidential," which is that of the "common law of England" and of the U. S.: "The presumption is that the accused is innocent of an alleged crime until he shall have been proven guilty." While the critics follow the "inquisitorial system in which the accused is supposed to be guilty unless he can establish his innocence." The latter is the method followed by the Roman Catholic Inquisition and tyrants. In addition to Method of Investigation, the chapters are, Text, Grammar, Vocabulary, History, Religion, and Conclusion, with a Glossary &c.

The book seems to be all that is needed to show the utter groundlessness of the critics' claims. Too much cannot be said in its praise.

If the critics have shaken your faith in the Old Testament, get this book and be assured. Published by the S. S. Times Pub. Co., 1031 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Penna. Price $2.00.

The second book is "The New Geology," a Text Book for Colleges, Normal Schools, and Training Schools and for the General Reader, by Prof. George McCready Price of Nebraska University. A volume of over 700 pages with hundreds of illustrations. Published by Pacific Press Publishing Associations, Mountain View, California. Price $3.50.

There is not a dry page in the book. As fascinating as a romance. And the author shows wide reading and research. He seems to be easily at home with his subject. But he claims, and adduces abundant proof for his claim, that the scheme, or system, of Geology as usually held and taught, is purely "artificial." And any one who will read the book with an "open mind"—unprejudiced—must admit that his claim is fully sustained.

Years ago in reading statements of geologists in regard to the different "ages," the question would often arise, unbidden, "How do you know?" "How did you find it out?" But I never saw or found an answer. I never thought about it seriously in those days, but every now and then something within, like a naughty child, would continue to interrupt—"How do you know?" "How did you find it out?" Look at a cut, or diagram, in the Dictionary, or other book, illustrating the different "geological ages," and it looked "mighty nice" and orderly, if I wouldn't think. But soon as I would think, there was that same question bobbing up, "How do they know?" "How did they find it out?" The thing wouldn't down. It just continued to "butt in;" still I saw or heard no answer until I read The New Geology. This answered the question. The answer was, "They don't know." "The system is purely artificial." We think he fully makes out his case. He shows that the current, accepted system of geology is based on relatively meager, local, and insufficient data. That it is contradictory, showing the system to be false. That the "oldest formations," according to the system, are often found where the "latest" should be, and the "latest" where the "oldest" should be. That often a number of "formations" "give out," and others take their place. All this shows that the so-called "onion-coat" theory, that the earth is built up of a number of uniform layers, deposits, or formations is false. Admitting this theory to be true, the question would arise, Where would the material come from, for a new layer over the entire globe? There would have to be a real creation of additional matter for the purpose, as there could be no way for the earth to make itself larger, as there would be nothing of which to do it. Be like a man trying to lift himself by his own boot-straps. There could be succession layers at the mouth of rivers, in valleys &c, on a small scale, compared with the entire surface of the earth. But of this there could be no sure "uniformity." Sometimes landslides cover up entire villages, and fill up, or change the depth, or dimensions, of lakes. As one recently in Norway. The only consistent view is that the earth has undergone many upheavals and convulsions, both local and general. This view agrees with the Bible and the traditional age of man. Also it is in harmony with itself, while the "accepted" view is self-contradictory and is at variance with the Bible.

Prof. Price affirms, as his conviction, that there are no human fossils older than the Flood. This he proves beyond a "reasonable doubt." This "onion-coat" theory of geology is the very bed-rock on which the theory of organic evolution rests. Destroy this, and it has nothing on which to rest. And how much is built up on this baseless fabric! Some of the most mentally nauseous things with which we meet, is how writers in papers, magazines, and books betray the fact that they believe all these baseless theories as if they were unquestioned facts. As if the thing were settled—no longer an open question. Somebody finds a bone—maybe a tooth, a bit of skull, or other fragrant, and, lo, and behold, these geologists and evolutionists can tell us within 10, 15, 20, or 50,000—or maybe, 50,000,000 years of, when the person lived! This is accurate knowledge! If indeed it had been a man. It might have been an ape or kangaroo, as Prof. Virchow once said. They seldom agree, as to time, save in one respect —it was a long, long time ago, before Adam was created, or man was upon the earth, according to the Bible and the traditional view. In this they are agreed, but in nothing else. Like Herod and Pilate, who had been at "enmity," "made friends," when Christ was on trial. So these apostles of error agree on one thing. Scrap the Bible and Christian tradition. When they are so cocksure about "assured results," it seems as if their dates ought to be a little nearer together.

All who are not wedded to the opposite theory get this book and read it. We have heard of converts, and this book might convert you. It can do you no harm.

Other books by the same author: "Fundamentals of Geology," "Q. E. D. or New Light on the Doctrine of Creation," "The Phantom of Evolution," and his latest, "Evolutionary Geology and the New Catastrophism."

It will pay inquiring minds to read these books, especially the young minister or preacher. If you have read the popular side, read the other also, and see how consistent it is. How reasonable, scientific, satisfactory, and scriptural it is. Truth will finally prevail. J. F. Dosier.

—The main objection to the prohibition law is that it is not a local law. If it applied only to the inhabitants of Littletown, then the people of New York and Chicago and St. Louis would have no objection to it at all. It wouldn't affect them in the least. But when the law says, with the power of the federal government behind it, "The people of New York and Chicago and St. Louis shall not sell liquor," the law becomes very objectionable. It would be all right for the majority of the people of Littletown to make the place dry, but it is terrible that the majority of the people of the United States should make the nation dry.

—A world conference on faith and order has been called to meet in Lausanne, Switzerland, August 3-21. Members of the Protestant Episcopal Church have taken the lead in calling this conference and arranging for it. We do not know what they hope to accomplish by it. We suspect that they are so well satisfied that their church is the "one true church" that they hope easily to persuade all other churches to agree with them. This may be an uncharitable supposition, and we will not press it, but wait to see what is accomplished or attempted at the conference. We note the name of Dr. H. L. Elderdice in the list of members. We are depending on you, Doctor, to save the day.

HE THAT TALKETH WITH THEE

The world treasures the talk of great men, which helps other men to be less small. Among individual differences are the disparities which exist between the conversational powers of various people, which difference is due in part to variation in intellectual ability, though not altogether, since some individuals are more dressy in point of language, and can clothe even ordinary ideas in a costume almost equal to the lilies. Our characters, moreover, are largely formed by our conversations—by what we hear, and in turn, by what we try to say back. Boswell was a better thinker because of Johnson, and many a boy became truly a man by listening to the practical wisdom of Benjamin Franklin. Long ago Paul of Tarsus learned from Gamaliel—and Peter and James, though they were loath to admit it, were taught some important things by Paul. Indirectly we, too, can commune with the great—as Socrates, Plato, Augustine, Kant, and Lotze. The best thing about ideas is that they go around. Concepts circulate, for better or worse. True and false prophets are all talking. Some vigorous minds have even put themselves and their reflections into autobiographies, while others, relatives or admirers, have done that work for them; so we have on hand today an extensive literature of talk, a part of it mere twaddle.

The agents of evil are active all the while, even shouting their falsehoods from the housetops. The press of the country has been largely vulgarized, bad pictures talking to the eyes of the young as they pass along the streets, or even gather around the parlor tables of homes where the misrule of coarse and irreligious parents teaches anything but purity and self-sacrifice. Then, too, in literary and academic circles much subtle error is being written or spoken.

It becomes, then, of the utmost importance that men learn to converse with the right persons, and particularly with that supreme Teacher, Jesus Christ. After curing the man who was born blind, Jesus found the then excommunicated convert and tested him with the question, "Dost thou believe on the Son of God?" When the man, still in a daze, asked, "Who is he?" the Lord replied, "It is he that talketh with thee." In the person of Jesus infinite wisdom bent down to enlighten weak and unknowing humanity, while infinite power gave new strength to crippled muscles or atrophied capacities. The talking that Jesus did with the blind man was the telling him where he could find help divine—and that is the best kind of conversation for today.

We need to stop more often than we do, in the rush of life, to hear what the Son of God has to say to us. By this is not meant simply to read the sayings of Jesus recorded in the Gospels, desirable as that is, but also to listen, in the deep quiet of hours of retirement, for the accents of His love sounding in the recesses of our hearts. If this be mysticism, let us make the most of it. It would do some of us much good if for even an hour a week we were in the receptive mood of Thomas a Kempis, and obeyed his admonition "to beware of much talk, remain in solitude, and enjoy thy God."—Jesus Christ would talk with us—have we time to hear Him?—Zion's Herald.

WHOSE HOUSE

My father came into our house soon after I was married and looked around. We showed him every room, and then in his rough way he said to me: "Yes, it is very nice; but nobody will know, walking through here, whether you belong to God or to the devil." I went through and looked at the rooms again, and I thought: "He is quite right." So we made up our minds straightway that there should be no room in our house, henceforth, that had not some message, by picture or wall text, to tell that we served the King.—Selected.

The WORK and the WORKERS

On Thursday evening, April 14th, we were in Concord with Rev. G. H. Hendry and his people. Something like 50 men gathered around a table in the Baraca class room for the monthly banquet of the Brotherhood. They were served an excellent dinner by the ladies of the church. When all had sufficiently feasted on chicken and other good things, Lawrence Little brought them a splendid message filled with wit and fun. I then tried to speak to them on "The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man." We had a good time together.

At the same time, Mrs. Dixon spoke to the women of the Missionary Societies in another room. We feel that it was a very profitable evening happily spent.

The work here is in splendid condition. They have had a great revival recently and about 30 have been added to the church. And it now seems certain that within a few weeks they will begin the erection of a new church.

May God speed the day.

Roberta

On Friday evening we were with Rev. Robert Short and his people at Roberta. An epidemic of flu and deep colds in the community caused the attendance to be small, but wife and I both spoke to the people, and had a happy time with them, thinking and planning for the advancement of Kingdom interests. The people love Brother Short. He is tactfully carrying the work along. They, too, have had a splendid revival with a good ingathering. From all appearances this bids fair to be a splendid year with our Roberta church. They are needing more room in which to work.

Tabernacle

On Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock we met with Rev. W. F. Ashburn and his officials in the second quarterly conference of the Tabernacle Charge, in the Julian church. The spirit of the meeting was good, and the financial reports were fair. The charge is almost up to date with pastor's salary, and is also making a good start on the budgets.

Randolph

We planned to spend all of Easter Sunday with Rev. A. O. Lindley on Randolph Charge, and at his request, and by his planning I was to preach at Bethel and Bethany, and Mrs. Dixon was to speak at Shiloh and Gray's Chapel. Because of the funeral of Mrs. J. H. Bowman I could not get to Bethany in the afternoon. I preached at Bethel at the morning hour to a very attentive congregation, and Mrs. Dixon filled both appointments as planned. It is a joy to preach to our country people on these beautiful Sundays. Brother Lindley is happy among these people and they appreciate him and his services. For the Sunday evening services we drove out to Midway, on Guilford, to help the ladies get started with their newly organized Missionary Society.

Mrs. J. H. Bowman

The news reached us on Saturday morning on our way home from Roberta, of the sudden passing of Mrs. J. H. Bowman on Friday afternoon, on the lawn of Mrs. W. T. Bowman, just in front of the Nathanael Greene school building. The announcement of this sudden death has already sent a shock of sadness through the conference. All our brethren in the ministry knew and loved Rev. J. H. Bowman, who passed suddenly to his reward on the second Sunday in last August while on his way to Bonlee to begin revival services. Just a few days before that Miss Millie Bowman had suddenly gone home from the Children's Home. In October Rev. W. A. Bowman, a brother, was also called hence. And in February of this year a son, Mr. W. T. Bowman, while performing the duties of an officer of the law, was shot down by a negro chicken thief, and now all unexpectedly to her children and other loved ones Mrs. J. H. Bowman has been called home right out of the activities of her noble Christian life.

Mrs. Bowman is survived by one son, J. T. Bowman, of Liberty, and two daughter, Mrs. L. W. Causey, of Liberty, and Mrs. P. C. Futrelle, of Greensboro, and six grandchildren. Mrs. W. T. Bowman and the children of Mrs. W. A. Bowman and many others also feel very keenly the loss occasioned by this sudden death. The prayers of God's people will certainly ascend in behalf of these stricken ones. An obituary committee for Mrs. Bowman will be appointed at an early date.

Financial Report

We will not have the time to work out full financial statement for the HERALD this week. Only a very few charges sent in anything during the week. The following amounts came in on A. C. B.: Haw River Mission, $15; Davidson, $16.80; Pleasant Grove, $12.50; Fairview, Glen Raven, $21.00; Asheville, $10. And on College, Davidson $7.62.

These of course will go into the regular report next week.

I shall try to get second quarterly report blanks into the hands of all pastors by the 30th of April.

Appointments

—The fierce and widespread fight against the prohibition law shows the need of the law. It is not interest in abstract law but interest in concrete liquor that moves the law-fighters. Take away the appetite for drink, and there would be none left to speak evil of the law. Victims of drink, if they saw the matter aright, would be moved to thank the people who passed the law for the measure of protection it throws about those who have been bitten by the serpent of drink. But many of them do not see the matter aright. They do not appreciate the motives and the wise acts of their friends, but they do appreciate their own craving for the poison that has already deeply injured them. What a sad delusion they are under. They are crying out for that which will injure still more terribly and finally bring ruin and death. Shall sober men or drunken men make laws regarding alcohol?

IMPORTANT REQUEST

Dear Pastors:

A letter from the Director of the Census informs me that only 520 reports have been returned by the pastors of the Methodist Protestant Church for the Religious Census. That leaves almost 1,500 charges to be heard from.

I wish I could impress upon the brethren the importance of filling out and sending in these census blanks. For the next ten years, or until the next Religious Census is taken, the statistics that are compiled from these returns will be the accepted figures for the Methodist Protestant Church. How many members have we? How much property? How much money do we raise? The world will get the facts from the Religious Census? What facts will they get? It depends absolutely upon the pastors of every charge in the Methodist Protestant Church.

It is not difficult to get the facts that the Director of the Census asks for. And all it costs is a few minutes time. Will you give that time for the honor of the Church?

Thank you,

C. W. BATES,
Statistical Secretary.

THE MISSIONARY OUTLOOK

China.—Big, persistent, ancient, modern China is the most interesting and most promising missionary field I know of. Yes, there are great disturbances, and grave situations in China at the present time; but great disturbances and grave situations were found in Russia when the old order was abolished and the Soviet Republic set up. And so it was when the German empire was overthrown, and the German Republic established. And so it was in our own land, when we undertook to sever our relations with Great Britain, and establish the United States, with its federal government.

I am glad we have work in China; for when China receives just treatment at the hands of the nations of the world now in control, and her right to self-government is recognized, then a great day for the spread of the gospel will have arrived.

China is not against the missionary, but against the foreigner at whose hand she has suffered great injustices.

Christianity in China is becoming more and more a Chinese religion, a religion that is fitting into the environment and atmosphere of the Chinese people. They want to know God, in terms of their own religious experience.

In spite of the war clouds there are many hopeful signs in China—the student awakening, the new alphabet, the China for Christ Movement, and many others.

India.—When we talk of India in her religious life, we must keep in mind a number of Indias. There is a Hindu India, a Mohammeden India, a Christian India, an India of highly educated and civilized people, an India of the most uneducated and illiterate, and an India of priests and untouchables.

India with its 319,000,000 people, and an equal number of gods; India with its 147 languages and dialects is more like a continent than a country. Today this great mass is seething with unrest. Yes, it is political, it is economic, it is social, and above all else it is religious. India is seeking God, and will find him through the "Christ of the Indian Road."

"Who is Jesus Christ?" is being asked all over India. Ghandi, India's most influential son, a peaceful, non-resistant revolutionist, whose recent arrest and sentence to six years' imprisonment, was likened by the press of India to the arrest and trial of Jesus, before going to prison, sent the following message to the youth of India: "If you sincerely love your country, and want to serve your mother-land, you must study the life and teachings of Jesus, and try to imitate them." Imagine the widespread interest in the study of the gospels such advice would produce.

In India we have an average of one missionary to every 55,000 of the population.

J. C. BROOMFIELD.

MAKING A HAPPY LIFE

John Buroughs is a fine example of what a person may do with himself if he concentrates on a loved task. He was born in the country. He had few of the advantages that are today counted almost indispensable. But he had the gift of observation. He kept his eyes open. He loved the animal life about him, and he watched it with loving patience. Nobody stood behind him, pushing him on. He just followed his bent and recorded what he saw and what he thought. In time he became an authority. He spoke of the things he knew, and the whole world listened.

Concentration on almost any subject will bring a degree of fame if we are persistent. Fabre, the French naturalist, had a similar experience, although he had to wait a lifetime before he was discovered. We do not need to go far afield to find opportunities that lead to honor; they are at our very door. Choose the theme you love and pursue it, forgetting everything else; that is the way of the happy life.—C. E. World.

LET'S

Let's try to make the world
Better to live in,
Fuller of love and truth,
Freer from sin.
Let's try to see in each
Soul in distress a brother
Bear blithely and well our load
And lift that of another.
Let's be more kind and true,
And to our fellowmen
More like the Christ each day
Than we have ever been."

—Pierre Bernard Hill.

PERSONAL FAITH IN THE PREACHER

The Presbyterian reports editorially Dr. J. D. Jones, of England, as declaring that a prominent statesman had recently remarked that the saddest feature of modern religious life is "the absence of personal faith as expressed in preaching." This statement declared that the kind of preaching through which pulsates the mighty faith of a redeemed man died with Spurgeon, though he admitted that a few later preachers have to some degree maintained the great evangelical traditions.

Commenting upon this, The Presbyterian notes two evil tendencies in the modern pulpit. The first confines preaching to ethical instruction; the second suppresses the truth that the Spirit of God would lead the speaker to utter. The first is the performance of the modernist; the second is the method of the peace-at-any-price preacher, who often has personal faith in the supernatural Christ, but is afraid to preach it.—Western Recorder.

THE MESSAGE OF THE RAINBOW

"I do set my bow in the clouds, and I will look upon it and remember."

One of the most beautiful pictures that nature furnishes is a rainbow at sea. The arch that spans, is the one that is reflected beneath and upon the waves. And that in turn is reflected, until not one but countless rainbows are formed, and sapphires, and pearls and emeralds, and garnets, and diamonds, and rubies are broadcasted on the sea and sky and may be had for the looking.

I have thought often of this picture, as not only a pledge from our God to Noah, but as His promise to His people of all times of His faithfulness to the end, and in every promise.

Let us fit a few to the much-to-be-desired houses for our missionaries, when on furlough; and which are to comprise Mission Terrace, in Atlanta.

If we are fair, we must admit the great need for these houses. Grant this—then How—and When?

There can be but one source. And that must be from His own chosen disciples.

His faithful ones who make up the corporate body of Christ. His Church. And When? We have already waited too long. Even now the missionaries are asking for reservations. The need is too great for longer delay. Let's do it now!

Perhaps someone is saying, What has the Rainbow to do with all this? God's part expressed here. "If you will, I will."

Because He could swear by no greater, He sware by Himself, saying, "Blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee." And these promises broadcasted on sea and sky that all may know that He who said, "I do set my bow in the clouds," said also, "Give and it shall be given to you, pressed down and running over."

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all thy increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst with new wine."

"He that giveth, lendeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given will He repay him again."

When will this dream of Mission Terrace become a reality?

The Message of the Rainbow is plain. Our God cannot fail. The failure is ours, until the dream is fulfilled.

Dear Lord, and shall we ever live at this poor dying rate,
Our love to Thee so cold, so faint, and Thine for us so great.

THE LARGER OUTLOOK

"And He brought him forth abroad, and said, look now toward heaven!"

The tent was changed for the sky! Abraham sat moodily in his tent; God brought him forth beneath the stars. And that is always the line of the Divine leading. He brings us forth out of our small imprisonments and He sets our feet in a large place. He desires for us height and breadth of view. For "as the heavens are high above the earth" so are His thought higher than our thoughts, and His ways than our ways. He wishes us, I say, to exchange the tent for the sky, and to live and move in great, spacious thoughts of His purpose and will.

How is it with our love? Is it a thing of the tent or of the sky? Does it range over mighty spaces seeking benefactions for a multitude? Or does it dwell in selfish seclusion, imprisoned in merely selfish quest? How is it with our prayers? How big are they? Will a tent contain them, or do they move with the scope and greatness of the heavens? Do they just contain our own families, or is China in them, and India, and "the uttermost parts of the earth?" "Look now towards the heavens!" Such must be our outlook if we are the companions of God.—John Henry Jowett.

THE MEANING OF THE RESURRECTION

A correspondent characterizes the statement of Dr. Hugh W. White in our issue of November 4, to the effect that Clarke's "Theology" denies the resurrection as "absolutely false." In support of this charge of falsity, he cites certain statements from Dr. Clarke's "Outline of Christian Theology," in which Dr. Clarke sets forth the reality of the resurrection—statements which lead him to say, "If this is denying the resurrection, I would like to know what affirming it is." It we mistake not, however, this correspondent himself offers the proof of Dr. White's representation when he adds, "It is true Dr. Clarke did not teach a physical resurrection." To deny a physical resurrection is to deny any real resurrection at all. Unless the very body that dies is restored to life, there is no resurrection. "The survival of the soul is not resurrection." "Whoever heard of a spirit being buried?" The Greeks believed in immortality, but scoffed at the resurrection. What is distinctive of Christian thought is not that it teaches the immortality of the soul, but that it teaches the immortality of the whole man. No doubt, Dr. Clarke taught that "the resurrection that we hear of in the New Testament implies the possession of a body, an organism for the use of the spirit," but inasmuch as he also taught that the "restoration of the body that died has no place whatever" in the immortal life, it is clear he denied the resurrection in the only legitimate use of the word. The following passage is from Clarke's "Theology:" "The reasonable view of the matter is that the present body, belonging wholly to the material order, has no further use or destiny after death has detached the spirit from the material order, and is abandoned to be known no more; and that whatever organism the spirit may need in the other life will be provided there, without contribution from this world." We might reverse our correspondent's words and say, if this is affirming the resurrection, we would like to know what denying it is.—From The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia.

SUGGESTIVE

A little child was passing along a quiet street, clinging with one hand to the mother's dress; but when crossing one of the busiest thoroughfares, I saw the little hand quickly letting go the dress, and seeking a hold of its mother's hand, which, when it got it, felt safe and content. So it is with us. When pursuing the even tenor of our way, and all goes on quietly and comfortably with us, we are satisfied with the most casual and outward contact with Christ; but when we have to cross the terrible thoroughfares of life, when we are brought face to face with the dangers and distractions of sickness, or bereavement, or sorrow, then we instinctively reach up to clasp the living and loving hand; we long to see the pitying face, and to hear the familiar voice, "Son, daughter, be of good cheer: it is I, be not afraid."—Selected.

WHAT ABOUT YOU?

Where do you fit in this church of ours,
With its hustle and bustle and work?
Are you one of the gang that helps it along,
Or are you with those who shirk?
Are you one of the low averages just drifting along?
Are you listed as "Profit" or "Loss?"
Are you playing for time or starting to climb,
How much are you putting across?
Just pull in the slack and count up your score,
Locate what you're aiming to hit—
Don't waste ammunition and all your ambition,
But find out just where you fit.

I CANNOT TELL A LIE

"What's that funny-looking badge you're wearing?" inquired Frances, peering at her brother across the breakfast table.

"Oh, that!" replied Jim, her brother in question. "That means I'm a fellow with brains—er—er—I mean, that is, er—never you mind what that badge is for."

"I bet it's a secret club or something," she said. "Don't bother to tell me. I'll soon find out myself."

"There are several things I want you children to do before you settle down to enjoy this holiday," said Mother, pouring some coffee. "Frances, you are to give your room a thorough cleaning up. Your bureau drawers are a mess. And Jim, I want you to sit down and write a nice letter to your Aunt Flo, thanking her for the lovely book and tie she sent you."

Frances said: "Yes, Mother," obediently, but Jim turned red and looked down at his plate without answering.

"Did you hear your mother speak?" inquired Dad.

"Yes, but I'd rather she'd write the letter for me," Jim said. "You see, this is a holiday and I shouldn't have to do things like that, besides I have to rehearse for the tableau—er—er—I mean, I ought to be resting up for the tableau. You see, after all the songs and recitations, they're going to have a tableau at the school and I have to be in it."

"Well, I guess it won't be so exhausting that you can't write a letter to your aunt," laughed Mother. "You haven't told us. What are you going to be in the tableau?"

"Well, I wasn't in it until yesterday. Bill Harper got sick, so I have to take his place," replied Jim, rather sulkily.

"What do you have to be?" asked Frances.

"Yes, do tell us," begged his Mother.

Jim hesitated then replied: "I'm George Washington."

"Well, that's nice," said his mother. "What's the tableau about?"

Again Jim looked uncomfortable, then he replied: "It's George Washington telling his father that he did it with his little hatchet. Phil Stevenson is the father and they made a cherry tree. It's real clever."

Frances was laughing.

"You're a nice one to be George Washington," she snickered. "You know you never tell the truth unless you have to."

"Now, Frances, is that nice?" reproved her mother. "Jim is a great kidder, that's all. He means to be truthful, don't you, dearie?"

"Er-er," replied Jim, "not always, I'm afraid. But anyhow Frances needn't talk. I've heard her tell 'em too."

"Well, all joking aside," said mother, "you must write that letter before you do anything else."

Jim knew that he had to do it, so after breakfast, with a heavy sigh, he sat down and wrote:

"Aunt Florence:

"Thank you for the book and the tie. I hate preachy books and a pink tie is sissy for a boy. Mother made me write this letter. Please do not send me anything again. I hate to write letters.

"Yours truly,

"JAMES DALTON."

Before any one could insist on seeing this letter, Jim slipped out and mailed it, and as he was sneaking into the house, his mother stopped him and asked him about it.

"What was the hurry? Why didn't you let me see the letter?" she demanded. "It is probably full of mistakes. Did you tell her how much you appreciated her gifts. Just think she knitted that tie for you herself."

"I thanked her," was Jim's reply.

"Well, you can run off now and play," said Mrs. Dalton, little dreaming of the way her son had thanked his rich old aunt.

Jim went right over to his friend Bill's house to try on the costume Bill's mother had made.

"Gee, I'm glad I don't have to wear it and be in that tableau," giggled Bill, when he saw Jim dressed up. "That looks dumb, that suit, and I told Ma so, and she was so mad she nearly cried, but you know—the Cherry Club."

"Sure," replied Jim, "we got to be truthful." And he touched his badge which was made out of pieces of felt, a shield-shaped black piece with a round red piece in the center, to represent a cherry. "You know," said Jim, "always telling the truth is awful hard on me. For instance, I like to say kidding things, and sort of cheer up people."

"Sure you do," Bill replied heartlessly. "You're the biggest liar in Bloomsfield."

Jim looked ready to fight for a moment, but he realized that Bill was only sticking to their club motto.

"Well, I can be truthful if I choose," he replied, and when Bill's gentle little mother came into the room, he proved it by telling her what a horrible suit he thought she had made. The poor lady looked quite unhappy and Jim felt mean.

"How did George Washington manage to have any friends and be so truthful," sighed Jim. "I'd much rather told Bill's mother that the suit was a wow."

That evening right after supper Jim and his family hastened to the school house, where the celebration of Washington's birthday was to be held. Alas! More trouble awaited Jim. When he got there, he was taken aside by Mr. Jenkins, the principal of the school, and told:

"Mrs. Harper says that you just hate that costume she made, and it doesn't look very well on you. Of course, it is a very beautiful costume, but as it doesn't become you, we have found another boy to wear it in the tableau.

"Good!" exclaimed Jim.

"Well, perhaps," said Mr. Jenkins, clearing his throat. "Now, let me explain further. In our second tableau, showing George Washington at home with his step-children, we had counted on Bertha Spicer to take the little girl's part. She had a historic costume copied by her great-aunt from one which actually belonged to George Washington's step-daughter. It is a lovely thing. We also have a beautiful wig to go with it. Now, Jim, I am going to put this up to you as if you were a man. I know you won't like it, but will you do it as a favor to me? We have decided that as you are blonde and pretty you would look better in the tableau than any of the girls we can get right now on the spur of the moment."

"You mean," gasped Jim, "that you want me to dress like a girl?"

"You can puzzle them all," Mr. Jenkins urged. "Nobody will know you in that dress and wig. Come now, be a sport."

Jim consented, but oh, the shame and suffering he endured! In the first place, he was pretty in the wig. He looked more like a girl than any of the girls. Then, the dress was very tight in the waist, and they put a triple-steel pair of stays on him and squeezed him until he panted for breath. But the tableau was much admired and applauded until the walls shook. Besides, Mr. Jenkins thanked Jim and called him a "real hero" for taking the part and wearing the tight steel stays.

"Well," said Jim, "I'm glad I pleased somebody today. Bill and I have formed a Cherry Club, a truth-telling club, it is, and believe me, it's awful. People don't care for the truth."

Mr. Jenkins' eye twinkled.

"Hatchet Club might be a better name," he grinned. Then he whispered: "Take this from me. You don't have to tell the disagreeable truths. Just say nothing. Instead of a truth-telling club, you might have an anti-lie club. How's that?"

Jim felt a great deal better, and when he got home a little after the rest of his family, there in the front room sat his Aunt Florence herself, who had come on a visit.

"If you get a letter from me, please tear it up without reading it," Jim said to her. "I'd rather thank you in words for the book and tie. It was very kind of you to send them to me."

"Jim," said Aunt Flo, "are you kidding me?"

"No," said Jim, "I may not be telling the truth but I'm not telling fibs, either."

"You should always speak the truth," said Aunt Flo. "Remember George Washington could not tell a lie."

"I'm remembering," grinned her nephew.—Selected.

THANKSGIVING DOUGHNUTS

The M'Quires were a very poor, but a very happy family, which is not so strange as you might think, as happiness often dwells in the very poorest of homes.

There were twelve year old John, who sold papers before and after school, and the nine year old twins, Betty and Bess, who ran errands for the lady who kept the boarding house on L street, and six-year-old Jean, who was the dearest little girl that ever was. Then there was Mrs. M'Quire, who worked in Snyder's laundry for five hours every day, and did fine ironing for folks between times. So you see the little brown M'Quire house, hummed with work and cheerfulness all day and every day.

"Next Thursday is Thanksgiving Day, and the laundry is closed all day. Won't that be fine?"

"Oh Mamma," said Betty, "can we have a Thanksgiving dinner?"

"Don't we always have?" said her mother kissing her little daughter. "How does a nice pot roast, mashed potatoes, and warm apple pie sound?"

"Good, good, good," shouted the children. "Why Mamma, you have thought of the bestest Thanksgiving dinner."

"Mamma," whispered little Jean, "couldn't you make us just one of of your good doughnuts apiece?"

"Couldn't you wait till Christmas? Doughnuts are pretty expensive, dear?"

"Just one little plateful?" begged Jean.

"I'll buy the lard," said John.

"We'll buy the sugar and eggs," said the twins. "Oh, Mamma, it won't take very much. Will it Mamma?"

"If I only take half the recipe, it will not," said her mother, "and that will make two big fat ones apiece."

"Oh I'm going to make Dot and Dimple, out of the dough. Can I Mamma?" said little Betty.

"Oh, boy!" said John. "Mamma, let's each one of us cut out our own two doughnuts."

"Very well. Put on your thinking caps now," said their mother, "and see how many artists we have in the family."

On Thanksgiving Day, the M'Quire kitchen, was the cheeriest, happiest place in town, the children were all gathered around the big table, on which Mrs. M'Quire had rolled out a big dish of the good sweet dough.

"Now you cut out and I will fry them," she said.

"Oh look at John," cried the children. John had taken out of his pocket, a paste board pattern of a ship, and a bell, and laying it on the dough, was carefully cutting around it with his sharp knife.

"Oh why didn't we think of that," cried the twins.

"I'm going to make the Merrimac, and the Liberty bell," said John proudly.

"I thought I'd make a great big turkey, and a big squash," said Betty.

"And I'm going to make Charlie Chaplin, and his funny little hat, and maybe I can make Mr. Brown's big dog Laddie," said Bess.

"Just look at my pretty Dot and Dimple?" shouted little Jean.

Their mother carefully fried them in the hot lard, and the children held their breath when she lifted them out, and laid them in rows on the bread board.

"Not one broken," they shouted.

"Now I'm going to make my two," said their mother, and she cut out and popped into the hot lard, a Pilgrim father, and an Indian.

"Oh the very best of all," cried the children.

"Mamma," said John, "Couldn't we ask little Cripple Dan, and Jackie Knowles for dinner?"

"And Mary Murphy. We'll all divide our doughnuts with them," said the twins. "Oh won't we have a happy Thanksgiving!"

And sure enough, the M'Quire family, in the little brown house, had the merriest, happiest, bestest Thanksgiving that ever was.—Margaret Skinner, in Presbyterian.

MY RESOLVE

"I will start anew this morning with a higher, fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed;
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;
I will waste no moments whining and my heart shall know no fear.

I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;
I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but I'll try to prove my own;
I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach 'your' duty and be more concerned with mine.

MARRIED

On Saturday evening, March 19th, Mr. Sam Willie and Miss Nellie Gray Hamill were married at the parsonage at Brinkleysville, and on Sunday morning, March 20th, Mr. Robert Ivey and Annie May Neville were married at the home of the bride's father, Mr. R. H. Neville.

All four of these young people were members of Eden church, and we wish for them long and happy lives. C. L. SPENCER.

Rudd-Taylor

On Sunday night, April 3, Mr. Clarence Rudd, of Elon College, and Miss Ida Elizabeth Taylor, of Altamahaw, were married at Glen Raven parsonage by the writer. We wish for them a long and happy life.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

McClimon-McAlrieth

Cupid still keeps playing his part in our community and the home of Brother B. A. McClimon seems to be the place about which he delights to play. This time the victim or the fortunate one is Brother N. G. McClimon, the oldest son of Brother B. A. McClimon. The lucky lady was before her marriage Miss Essie May McAlrieth. The ceremony was performed on Sunday, March 27th, by the Rev. W. Y. Cooley, pastor of the bride at Duncan, S. C., the home of the bride's pastor. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for Brevard and an extended trip in western North Carolina. The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. Jeff McAlrieth of near Greer, S. C. The groom is a prosperous young farmer of the Liberty Hill community and a member of the official board of the church.

We wish for these young people a happy and successful journey as they sail the seas of matrimony together.

M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD.

Long-Swicegood

On April 12, Mr. H. Grady Swicegood and Mrs. Lencie Long were happily married at the parsonage of the South Lexington Methodist Protestant church. Rev. Atlas Ridge officiated in the presence of a number of friends of the couple. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Craver, of near Enterprise, Davidson county, and is an attractive young woman. Mr. Swicegood is a son of Mrs. E. S. Swicegood, of near Mount Carmel Methodist Protestant church. He is one of the faithful members of Mount Carmel church, being secretary of the Sunday school. Immediately after the ceremony the couple drove to the home of the bride's parents where a sumptuous supper was enjoyed with friends. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Swicegood wish them much joy and happiness as they journey through the remainder of life together.

MOTION PICTURE FOR THE CHURCH

Motion pictures designed for use in a formal service of worship are being produced by the Religious Motion Picture Foundation, 140 Nassau Street, New York, an endowed institution. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Congregationalist of Brooklyn, Dr. Daniel Russel, Presbyterian of New York, Dean Howard C. Robbins, Episcopalian of New York, Rev. Everett Wagner, Methodist of New York, Rev. William W. Barker, Baptist of Rhode Island and Rev. H. Weiskotten, Lutheran of Brooklyn, are among those who have used these films at their Sunday evening services.

Four pictures have been completed and within the past three months have had more than a hundred showings in approximately fifty churches. Their distribution, which is on a non-profit making basis, has recently been extended from a limited area around New York and Boston to include all the states in the country, since the booking demand has revealed that there is a desire among ministers and churchgoers for the worshipful film.

The Foundation began its work in this field in June 1925, with an appropriation of $50.000 from William E. Harmon, President of the Harmon Foundation. The power of the motion picture as a vehicle for religious instruction and a means of vitalizing the service was tested before production was begun. Mr. Harmon's appropriation has made it possible to distribute the films to churches at a rental cost comparable to that which is usual for other artistic service supplements, such as special music.

BIBLE SCHOOL INSTITUTE

Recognized by those deriving the benefits therefrom as one of the most needed and worthwhile phases of the work of our denomination, the Institute for workers and teachers in Daily Vacation Bible Schools, held at First Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, April 4th, 5th, and 6th, was highly praised in every way. It was under the direction of Rev. Lawrence Little, Executive Secretary of the Board of Young Peoples' Work, assisted by Mrs. H. W. Maier, Superintendent of Children's Work in our denomination.

The program was complete in every detail, and the best teachers and speakers that could be secured appeared on the program. Among them were Rev. O. E. Lee, Director of Religious Education of the First Baptist church, Greensboro; Rev. J. W. McFall, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Winston-Salem; Dr. Raymond Smith, Director of Religious Education of Wesley Memorial church, High Point; Prof. S. A. Bennett, head of the department of Religious Education of Elon College; Gordon Blair, Boy Scout Executive of the High Point District; Miss Kate DuBose, Director of Religious Education of the Winston-Salem and Orange Presbyteries; Miss Maude Forsyth, of Greensboro, primary teacher in Presbyterian Daily Vacation Bible Schools; Miss Mary Dozier, Charlotte, beginners teacher in Daily Vacation Bible Schools of the M. E. Church, South; Mrs. John Whitesell, former assistant to pastor of the First Christian Church in Burlington; Mrs. R. E. Ranson, Principal of Ray Street School, High Point; Mrs. H. A. White, head of Greek Department of High Point College; and our own Prof. and Mrs. P. E. Lindley, Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Maier, and Lawrence Little. Others presiding and conducting the afternoon devotions were Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D., Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Rev. N. G. Bethea, and Rev. E. Lester Ballard.

The devotionals for the evening programs, led by Rev. H. W. Maier, not only provided the worship service for the Institute, but were effective and beautiful examples of real worship programs.

The various courses of study were filled with definite information for teachers and principals who are expecting to conduct Vacation Bible Schools in the local churches. The lessons in sewing, paper cutting, poster making, basketry, and other craft work were especially interesting and helpful.

Supper was served at the church each evening by members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. P. Church.

Representatives from the following churches were in attendance: First and English Street, High Point; Asheboro; Community Church, Thomasville; West End, Greensboro; Henderson; Mebane; First M. P., Burlington; Gibsonville; Charlotte; Concord; State Street, Lexington; Kernersville; Pleasant Grove. Other denominations in High Point, Thomasville, and Greensboro were also represented.

Mr. Little is hoping to make this an annual affair and is urging that many representatives from other charges will avail themselves of this unusual opportunity in the future. The Board of Young People's Work of the N. C. Conference is lending its support and hearty cooperation to the project, with the hope that the entire program of our Board may be more effective and far-reaching.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD, Secretary
Board of Young People's Work.

—Between 1,000 and 1,500 Sunday school workers from all parts of the State are expected to attend the annual Convention of the North Carolina Sunday School Association in Burlington on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 26, 27 and 28. The Convention will open on Tuesday night with an address by Governor Angus W. McLean, and close on Thursday night.

—Mrs. Rev. J. H. Bowman died suddenly last Friday while she was engaged in entertaining some children. The funeral on Sunday afternoon was attended by a great throng. Her husband died suddenly last autumn, and her son was killed a few months ago while in the discharge of his duty as county sheriff. Mrs. Bowman was a woman of excellent Christian character.

A MOST PROMISING INFANT

Babies of all sorts are perennially appealing but none more so than a college during the first few years of its history. The youngest institution of higher learning in North Carolina, which is de novo in every respect, is High Point College. It will round out the third year of its existence with its first graduating class this Spring.

A visit to this institution is a refreshing experience. With an excellent physical plant of three excellent buildings of uniform and beautiful architectural design, a virile and enthusiastic faculty, and a fine student body of boys and girls, almots equally divided, it is a composite of educational efficiency and eager interest in life. Every college has its own individuality and High Point College has its distinctive qualities. It is neither ultra-modern nor ultra-conservative. It finds its extreme youth no handicap for doing good substantial work. Its first graduates have had their freshman work in other colleges, but nevertheless they will go out into the world bearing the High Point College stamp upon their lives and characters with the avowed purpose of impressing the world with the sturdy and substantial qualities of their alma mater.

The spirit of the institution is admirably exemplified in the well poised and genial personality of its president, Dr. R. M. Andrews, who has guided the destinies of the college thus far with a firm and efficient hand. Sympathetic and interested in youth, he is admirably fitted for the position he holds. It is gratifying to know that the college has no aspiration to be a large college numerically. North Carolina has need of many small institutions of higher learning as well as large ones. If "the child is father of the man," as Wordsworth assures us, the future history of High Point College will undoubtedly furnish one of the brightest chapters in the state's educational history.—Editorial comment by Associate Editor Charles T. Weaver, in Winston-Salem Journal.

TEN WEEKS OF TITHE EDUCATION

Any church may now put on a Ten Weeks' course of tithing education, right in the midst of its other activities, and at a ridiculously small cost.

The Layman Company, which has distributed many millions of pamphlets on the tithe, now announces an attractive new series, at so low a price that distribution to an entire church through ten weeks costs only two cents and a half per family.

A complete set of samples and full particulars will be sent for thirty cents, this includes two playlets; a Tithing Account Book, Winning Financial Freedom, and Adventures in Tithing.

Please give your denomination; also mention the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Philathea Meeting

The Mizpah Philathea class held its regular meeting Sunday at church.

The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. H. G. Jones; roll called and minutes read by assistant secretary, Miss Annie Tate. After a short business session the meeting adjourned to meet in May.

COLLEGE SUCCESSES

The vigor of High Point college in competition for honors with other colleges of the state is remarkable. The institution here is only three years old and it is inadequately endowed financially, but neither its newness nor its comparatively slender purse has served to give it the complex of a weakling. On the contrary, in the various fields of collegiate rivalry, High Point college colors have been advanced courageously and with marked success.

In sports, the local college has made its prowess respected. High Point college has been fortunate in the coach who heads its physical education staff. He knows how to develop a fighting team and he is willing to oppose it to the strongest rivals in his region. Working with very little money but with great resourcefulness, he has made the athletic teams of the college respectable in good company to an extent all out of proportion to natural expectations.

But it is not in this secondary manifestation of college strength alone that High Point college is distinguishing itself. It forces the fight in the arena and it triumphs in the forum. A local boy and High Point college student, in competition with the representatives of seven other state colleges, last night won the oratorical contest; and recently High Point college debaters defeated Guilford and Lenoir-Rhyne teams, supporting both sides of the same question.

These victories are not immensely important in themselves, perhaps, but they do reflect the character of the campus life and show forth the spirit and quality of the men and women who make up the faculty, as well as the ability of the student body. It is by such striving and such victories that the tradition of college success is created. With the right sort of financial support a strong institution of large importance to the community and the state can be built here on the excellent foundation established.—High Point Enterprise.

An Appeal For Second Church, Charlotte

Owing to the illness of the pastor, Rev. D. A. Braswell, who is suffering with influenza, I am writing at his request in the interest of Second Church, Charlotte.

A new developement has opened up in Charlotte and the pastor and people thought it necessary to sell the lot they had recently bought and buy one in this development which is much more desirable. In order to make the change it is very necessary that they have about $200.00 by the first of April.

Brother Braswell is hoping that 200 friends will send at least $1.00 each to him at once that he may take care of this. Several have responded already to this great need, and will you not also do your bit in helping these struggling people get their lot paid for that they may build a church.

Send all contribuitions to Rev. D. A. Braswell, Ann St., Concord, N. C.

MRS. D. A. MCLAURIN.

—There were two funerals at Tabernacle last Thursday. D. H. McCulloch was buried at 11 o'clock and Alson Jones at 2 o'clock. Brother Jones was in his 91st year. Brothetr Millaway conducted the former and Brother J. A. Burges the latter with others to assist.

THOSE FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

The devotional, the roll call, the select readings, so diversified and unfolding of the history of the healthen nations, and then the pledges made, or paid, with the refreshments following. How significant, this multiplied by earth's myriad societies; how colossal the aggregate amount in information and mone tary value!

Omnipotent Father, impress the Christian world overpoweringly, overwhelmingly, with the thought of this great need! Oh, America! "With your gold heaped up, and your fine gold. as the mire of the street." Awake! Oh, awake, and send Bibles through all the foreign fields.

Dr. J. C. Broomfield says: "The progress of missions is the burning bush of church life, aflame with the presence of God." Father, help us all to toil, and give, and pray, for the salvation of the nations, their 319,000,000 in their seething unrest.

"And to the old rugged cross, help us and them (converted) all to be true,
And its shame and reproach gladly bear.
May we love and cling to that cross,
The emblem of suffering and shame,
For 'tis the nations of the world, and our,
only hope,
Till beneath it we, with all the Christians of the world,
Our trophies at last we lay down."

FANNIE O. KIRKPATRICK.

BOARD MEETING

The annual Board meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society will be held at Pine Ridge, Kentucky, May 5-10, beginning at 2:00p.m., May 5. Delegates who expect to attend, please notify Dr. Woodford. Train schedules will be given later.

MRS. E. A. CRAIG,
Secretary Central Committee.

A GREAT SURPRISE

On Saturday night, April 16th, about eight o'clock a number of our neighbors and friends, consisting of members from Welch Memorial and Lebanon churches—our former pastorates—called upon us. We found each one laden with the things which will reduce our grocery bill for quite a while.

We would love to give the names of those present and mention the numerous articles but space will not allow. However, let us say that it was an unusual experience with us since it was not from the people of our present pastorate but from those who had learned to love us in other days.

After they had made their deposits in the dining room we read the 103rd Psalm which was followed by the song—"Blest Be the Tie." Brother Edward Suits then prayed one of the best prayers we have ever heard him pray .

Another song and prayer by Brother Reddick. Several made short talks which made our hearts glad to know we have served a people who love us and remember us in this way.

It is not the intrinsie worth of the articles brought but the spirit which prompted the act that makes us appreciate the gifts all the more. May the Lord bless all who planned and took part in this and may your lives be made richer and brighter by this act.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pine Hill, Davidson.—Pastor Ridge filled his appointment yesterday after which the sacrament was taken. We are having a good Sunday school this year. The people are taking more interest than common. Brother Dug Smith is sick. We miss him at Sunday school and preaching. We are building a new church at our place. We have it about all framed and weatherboarded; we want to get it ready to worship in by our special meeting, which will convene the fourth Sunday in July.

We want to thank all who have contributed to help build our church as we people are making a sacrifice in a financial way.

If any one would like to help us some on our church whom we don't see, please put the money in our pastor's hands, Brother C. E. Ridge.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Pine Hill church Saturday afternoon, April 23, 2:00 o'clock.

A. L. LOMAX, Reporter.

Lincolnton.—The revival meeting will begin at Lincolnton Monday night after Easter, April 18. Brother N. G. Bethea of Lexington will be the pulpit help. We are expecting and praying for a great revival as we have been tuning for it and as Brother Bethea is a celestially charged battery o r a machine gun on the firing line and we have many good people here who have stood by the old gospel guns.

Those who can are cordially invited to be with us in the meeting with your prayer, personal work and songs.

Last Sunday we organized a W. H. M. S. Miss Hattie Johnson, president; Miss Lena Eury, vice-president; and Miss Daisy Hartman, treasurer; Miss Hester Johnson, secretary.

We are working for a 100 per cent organized church. We have curtained off the church into Sunday school rooms and we are expecting our school to do better work.

W. L. CARSON.

Littleton Circuit.—Our pastor preached a good sermon last Sunday. We also had Preacher Braswell to preach for us Sunday night. There were not very many to hear him, but I am quite sure everyone there enjoyed his sermon. We hope to have him with us again. Our Sunday school has good attendance, but we hope to have better when the weather gets warmer.

We wish to thank our pastor, Rev. J. B. O'Briant, for giving us an extra service on the third Sunday nights.

We are planning to have an Easter service next Sunday night, April 17th, and on Easter Monday Preacher Stubbins will preach at 11 o'clock. Then in the afternoon the second quarterly conference will be held.

BEATRICE HAWKINS, Reporter.

Melton's Grove.—A few weeks ago some of the members and friends went to the church and partly cleaned up the grounds. Mr. Trollinger and his wife came up from Rockingham and brought some fish. So while the men were working, the ladies cooked the fish. We all had a good time and the church and surroundings look so much better. We have decided to meet again and finish cleaning up and plant flowers which will make it more attractive.

On March 20, we were made sad by the death of one of our members, Brother Dee Sasser. We shall miss him. He was a good man and faithful to the church. Our hearts go out in sympathy to his family.

We held our second quarterly conference Saturday night, April 9. One new member was received into the church, Mrs. Mance Sasser. We are glad to have Mrs. Sasser join with us.

We were glad to have our pastor and his wife in Sunday school this morning, (April 10). He also gave us an Easter sermon at eleven o'clock.

MRS. DELLA THOMAS, Reporter.

Calvary.—This is not a report from Calvary. Our reporter will attend to that. However, I did want to say in this way that the pastor of Calvary certainly appreciated the good work that Brother Millaway did the two weeks he was with us. He labored under a great handicap because of the illness of his wife who was here in a hospital, but his preaching was of a very high order. I mean by that that he preached the gospel. Our reporter will tell you about the good results.

Perhaps what I wanted to say to the readers of the Herald is that the pastor of Calvary is enjoying the use of a new "Whippet" automobile. This has been provided by a number of the members and friends of Calvary church for the use of the pastor. I am enjoying it very much, however, I am not presumptuous enough to think that it was provided for my enjoyment alone, but that I may render a better service for the church and the kingdom than I could without it. That is just what I shall attempt to do. The members and friends are to be commended for providing a car for the pastor who is not able to provide one for himself. When a man is giving his life to the gospel ministry, and the particular church that he serves does not feel able to pay an adequate salary so that the pastor can provide his own car, then it is a mighty fine thing for them to provide the car. I do not know all who had a part in this great favor, but I want to thank every one.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Mebane.—Sunday evening at 7:30 a pageant, "There is Hope of a Tree," was given at our church by members of church and Sunday school. This service was largely attended. Mrs. H. C. Nicholson had the training in charge, and each part was carried out well. This was one of the prettiest and most impressive services rendered here for some time. Collection amounted to $15.00.

On Monday evening of last week the Home and Foreign Missionary societies met with Mrs. June Smith. Twenty members were present. The program was in charge of the Home society. Collection, $5.55.

During the social hour Mrs. Smith served sandwiches, pickles and ice tea. Our May meeting will be with Mrs. Carl Sykes. Miss Pauline Nicholson, recently elected president of the Foreign Society, made a splendid talk at our April meeting and laid some plans before the society for our year's work. We feel that Miss Nicholson will make a wide-awake president and we hope she may receive the loyal support of the society. Mrs. Jack Smith, our retiring president, did splendid work last year and we are sure her efforts have not been in vain.

Our home society did some excellent work. last year having as our president Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, who was re-elected for another year. We feel fortunate in having Mrs. Nicholson for our president.

Misses Alta Allen, Grace Barnette, Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson are spending the Easter holidays at their homes here.

Mr. Murray F. Nicholson and Miss Callie Hurst motored to Danville, Va., Tuesday, March 22, and were quietly married at the M. E. parsonage by Dr. J. B. Winn. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson are members of our church and Sunday school, and are popular with a large circle of friends who wish for them much happiness through life.

REPORTER.

Anderson.—Sunday was a good day for us at Fairview. We had more than the average in Sunday school. A larger congregation than usual was present for the preaching service. Easter was observed with an Easter sermon by the pastor at eleven o'clock and the regular Easter service was rendered at the evening service hour. A very delightful and helpful program was enjoyed by a larger congregation that we have had at any service since I have been on the work. The service consisted of recitations, songs, and exercises by the children and choir, bringing to us messages with the spirit of missions. It was delightful to see the large number of children taking part in the program. Something like fifty or more participated besides the choir of ten or twelve voices which rendered several selections. We were glad to see Brother T. E. Martin and his two sons in the congregation. Besides these visitors a goodly number from other churches as well as Greenville and Easley were with us. Our offering for Home Missions when complete will amount to about six dollars. Our people have had two very short crops and our finances are a little behind, but we will look forward to a better crop and hope to do more in the coming months.

Second quarterly conference was held at Fairview Saturday afternoon. Only a few of the officials were present, but we transacted the business of the conference. It was delightful to see the fine spirit manifested and the pastor was gratified to see the interest in the conference. A written report was presented, setting forth the activities of the pastor and also several recommendations were offered and accepted and passed in a brotherly way. We will doubtless have more to say about the conference later. Brother Marcella Watson of Fairview and B. A. McClimon of Liberty Hill were the nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference.

M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD.

Winston-Salem.—Easter Sunday was a great day for us. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and potted flowers and the program well rendered by the Sunday school. The offering amounted to nearly one hundred and seventy-five dollars.

There were fine congregations at both preaching services, while at the morning service I received twelve persons into full membership. There will be others to join later.

All departments of the church are doing fine work.

The church has been repaired from the damage done by the fire and the entire interior of the building repainted. All of this has been paid for. The cost was over four hundred dollars exclusive of the Insurance collected. A new piano has been bought by the Sunday school and that is half paid for. A junior choir has been organized and every evening they sing for us which makes the service more attractive and the children enjoy it very much. Many strangers are visiting us at the evening service, and a registration book is kept in the vestibule of the church, in charge of one of the Board Stewards, who secures the name and address of the stranger. This record is handed to the pastor in order that he may visit them during the week. Winston-Salem is the home of the Moravian Church and every Easter they have a great sunrise service in the cemetery. This year it is reported that twenty-five thousand people attended this service. This has a tendency to keep people home from the morning services at the churches. But this year our church was packed with people who were happy to lift their voices in grateful praise to Him who has brought Life and Immortality to light through the Gospel.

Pray for us, that God may honor the preaching of His Word with a great out-pouring of the Holy Spirit upon us.

C. MORGAN COMPHER.

Asheville.—Easter Sunday was one of the best days for us in quite a while. A very good attendance, a good program of recitations by the children, choruses and group songs by the young people, and a beautiful anthem by the choir. Pastor Bates made an appropriate address and baptized an infant. The offering was about forty dollars. It was a delight to see the children and young people taking part, and to see the many outside friends and visitors together with the faithful ones.

Miss Novella McIntyre is spending the Easter holidays with her parents here.

Little Miss Josie McNiel recently won a prize for making the most unique kite, in a contest among the schools here.

Pastor Bates and Mrs. Bates are attending the Missionary Conference in Henderson, N. C., this week. Other delegates are Miss Wenonah Joyner, Mrs. C. C. McNeil, and Mrs. J. S. Williams. Our Missionary Society recently elected officers as follows: Mrs. C. C. McNeil, president, Mrs. U. S. Miller, vice-president, Mrs. L. M. Joyner, secretary; Miss Eula Taylor, treasurer of the Foreign Missionary group, and Mrs. E. C. Fawcett, treasurer of the Home Missionary group.

The brotherhood met in the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Williams on April 12. The guest of honor and principal speaker was Rev. Mr. Belk of the Asheville School for Boys. He explained the movement of "group evangelism," urging the church to win men to Christ.

Our Board of stewards in a recent meeting adopted the plan of paying all the budget in full due by the middle of the Conference year. They also recommended that the second Sunday in May be observed as home-coming in connection with Mother's Day.

REPORTER.

Albemarle.—The Ladies' Aid Society met in regular session April 5, at the home of Mrs. R. L. Leonard. There being much sickness in the community, our number was smaller than usual, only 18 being present. We were very much pleased to have Mrs. Roy Lowder as a new member.

The visiting committee reported 110 visits made this month. Several beautiful articles for the traveling basket were brought in and were all sold.

Much business was transacted during the business session. A committee was appointed to try to dispose of our communion set, as it is inadequite for our needs, and get a larger one. Plans were also made for sponsoring a play, "If I Only Had a Million," to be given Friday, April 22, at the High School auditorium, by members of Brevard M. E. church at Charlotte. One of our members saw the play given at Charlotte and boosts it as being one of the best.

The latter part of the meeting was devoted to the Dollar Social. Twenty-five members brought or sent in a dollar. Two of our little junior members, Francis and Irene Hatley, earned fifty cents each helping their mother and brought it in. Much merriment was produced as some of the reports were made of how the dollar was earned. One lady sold a big fat hen; one cleaned rugs with her vacuum cleaner; one cheated the laundry one week; another sold a calf, others mowed lawns; did pressing; sewing and embroidery. We consider the meeting a wonderful success.

A letter was read from one of our most faithful members, Mrs. Marshall Hatley, who was unable to attend the meeting on account of sickness. We missed her very much and hope that she may soon be able to fill her place, not only in the society, but in the church and Sunday school. At the time of this writing, she has been carried to the hospital in a critical condition, but hopes are held for her recovery.

At the conclusion of the business hour, Mrs. Leonard assisted by Mrs. Roy Lowder served sandwiches, cake and coffee.

Charlotte, First Church.—Easter was enjoyed here with special programs for both services. Sunday morning the children's service consisting of recitations and songs. Mrs. D. A. Horne had charge with Mrs. Geo. E. Young assisting. Sunday evening a program of music consisting of anthems, duets, violin solo, saxaphone solo and a reading. "The First Easter" was dramatized. Three members were received into the church Sunday morning. They were Mary Millaway, Louise Lindsey, and Hoyle Thomas.

The egg hunt Monday afternoon was greatly enjoyed.

The W. F. M. S. met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. E. Hawkins.

The Workers' Council of the Sunday school will hold their monthly meeting Thursday evening with supper at 6:30 and business meeting following.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lindsey a son, Jarrett, Jr., on April 12th at St. Peter's Hospital.

Mrs. B. W. Terrell of Greensboro who had just returned from Florida where she spent the winter was called here to the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Z. M. Rea. Mrs. Rea's condition is somewhat improved.

One of the recent weddings at the parsonage was that of Mr. Edgar Thompson and Miss Willie Lee Kelly.

Mr. Theodore Ballard spent the week-end in High Point, (as usual).

Mrs. C. A. Stikeleather left Tuesday night for Henderson to attend the Branch meeting Mrs. Stikeleather goes as a delegate for the W. F. M. S.

Prayer services are being held preparatory to the Gypsy Smith, Jr., meeting which begins May 1st.

REPORTER.

Denton Church.—Our Christian Endeavor Society met yesterday morning and had a Sunrise meeting. This meeting was well attended. All present enjoyed every word said by our good leader.

Our Sunday school report for April 3: Attendance, 119. Year ago, 76. Offering for April 3, was $4.20; year ago, $3.06. Report for April 10: Attendance, 85; year ago, 62. Offering for April 10, $2.10; year ago, $1.65. Report for April 17: Attendance, 116; year ago, 60; offering yesterday, $3.25; year ago, $2.64.

Our Easter program was carried out. The collection for General Conference Budget was $16.00.

We were glad to have with us last night Rev. J. M. Hulin and wife from Midland charge. He preached a fine sermon which was enjoyed by all present.

CALLIE BAILEY, Reporter.

Rockingham.—Our Sunday school on Easter Sunday was very good. Everyone seemed to be deeply interested. Every Sunday our small children sing a song, but yesterday they made a special selection. They sang with all their little hearts, "I'll Be a Sunbeam."

There was a good number out to the Sunrise meeting at our church at 5:00 o'clock on Easter morning. This was a glorious meeting to everyone present. I think every one received a great blessing. We had one to step out and take his stand for his Lord in this meeting.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, delivered to us a very inspiring message at eleven o'clock. There were three new members to unite with our church at this hour.

On Easter Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock a singing convention met at our church. There was a large attendance. Our church was very well filled. We had present at this convention the Vaughan "Happy Two," Mr. A. B. Sebren and Mr. C. G. Wilson. Everyone present enjoyed their singing to the fullest extent. They sang a number of songs, and the different leaders from the churches also led a good many songs with the choir singing.

Mrs. D. E. McKenzie, in charge, gave an Easter program at our church Easter Sunday night at 8:00 o'clock. This program was carried out nicely with the several selections of the choir singing. Just before the close of the program Mr. Trollinger, our pastor, was asked to make a talk which he did; and then after another recitation an offering was taken for the Home Mission work.

This was one day that was about spent in church going with us. We had five different meetings here as you see.

May God be with all those who are trying to serve Him to the best of there ability.

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

High Point.—After helpful and impressive services each evening during Passion Week, Easter Sunday was a day of gladness. Beginning at 9:30 o'clock, all classes and departments of the Sunday school met in the Community room. Each department presented a program. At the 11 o'clock service we were delighted to have as our guests High Point Commandery of Knights Templar and the DeMolay chapter in uniform, who occupied seats reserved for them in the middle tier. We were also much pleased to have the members of the Junior church present.

A beautiful and most interesting preliminary feature was the dedication to God by baptism of two lovely children, Mary Elizabeth Barton, charming little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Barton, and Gilbert Arminius, the adorable little son of Mr. and Mrs. June Gray.

The choir rendered a beautiful Anthem, "The Lord is My Light," and Mr. Clarence Schultheiss sang, "Come See the Place," by Shelley with fine effect. Dan W. Smith was at the organ, and rendered "A Springtime Sketch" by Brewer, "An April Day" by Harris, and "Alleluia" by Loret in his usual charming manner. Mr. Lindley then delivered a beautiful and appropriate message on "The Triumphant Life" from John 11:25.

The pulpit and choir loft were artistically decorated in palms, ferns, Easter lilies, and other cut flowers, by Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny as a fitting memorial to their sainted daughter Evelyn; a most lovely girl who left them at the age of 14 years, but who lives in their hearts and in those of countless young friends and school-mates in sweet and blessed memory although five years have passed since she went away.

At the close of the service fourteen boys and girls of the Junior church were received into our communion and fellowship, and Mr. and Mrs. Krieger and Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Allman of the Children's Home united with us by transfer. These good people are gladly welcomed to our ranks, and we trust that this church may become a dear and sacred place in their lives, hallowed by tender memories.

At 5 o'clock the lovely Easter Cantata, "Olivet to Calvary" by Maundery was rendered in an admirable manner by the regular choir, assisted by local talent. This beautiful Cantata is in two parts, the first dealing with Christ's approach to Jerusalem and His entry into the temple, while the second part depicts the agony and betrayal in Gethsemane, the trial before Pilate, and His cruel crucifixion on Calvary. The concluding hymn, in which the congregation joins, was the old favorite, "Rock of Ages." Coming as the hour of tranquil twilight fell upon a worshiping world, this sublime music touched the hearts of the large audience, increased their faith in the blessed hope of resurrection and immortality, and was a most fitting close to this gladsome Easter day.

An interesting marriage occurred in Reidsville, N. C., on Saturday, April 16th, at 5 o'clock p.m. when Miss Doris Crook of this city became the bride of Mr. Furman R. Auman, one of our finest young men and a steward of the church. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage by Rev. Geo. R. Brown, former pastor of Mr. Auman.

The newly wedded couple will make their home in High Point, where Mr. Auman has a position as vice-president of the Carolina Casket Company.

Another interesting wedding was celebrated on Tuesday, April 12th, at the home of the bride in Thomasville, N. C., the groom being Mr. Ross Davis, a son of Mr. J. M. Davis of High Point, and the bride, Miss Mary Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Johnson of Thomasville. The groom holds a responsible position with High Point Hardware Company, and is a young man of splendid character and business ability. Many congratulations are extended to the happy young couple, and good wishes for a serene and successful voyage over the sea of wedded life.

We have the pleasure to chronicle another happy marriage, which was solemnized on Saturday evening, April 16th, at the parsonage. Mr. Roy Boone and Miss Irma Surratt both of this city plighted their troth in the presence of a few friends, the officiating minister being Rev. E. Lester Ballard. The bride is a member of the First church, being leader of the music in Intermediate Department of the Sabbath school. Mr. Boone has a good position with Tomlinson Chair Company, and the young people will make their home in this city. These three young couples have the best wishes of our entire congregation, and we earnestly hope that they will make the First church their home. There is nothing more wonderful in life than young love, and may all their bright hopes and dreams be fully realized.

The hearty sympathy of numberless friends is extended to Mrs. D. A. Neese in the loss of her sister, Mrs. J. H. Bowman.

Rev. and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard left this (Tuesday) morning for Henderson to attend the N. C. Branch meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies. Mrs. R. M. Andrews is another delegate from High Point in attendance.

High Point College students are enjoying their Spring vacation of a week.

Asheboro.—Yesterday was a splendid day with us. We had 185 in Sunday school and a fine congregation at the morning church hour. Four members were received into the church on profession of faith. They are Evelyn Holder, Frank Henley, Jr., Clifton Brown, and Elko Frye. Two others, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cole, were received a week ago, they being received from Why Not Circuit.

At the eleven o'clock service yesterday the choir rendered a very beautiful Cantata, entitled, The Prince of Life. It is very rare that we ever have anything here any finer than this and so insistent has been the demand to have it repeated that we have announced that it will be given again next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

At 7:30 last evening we had the service by the children of the Sunday school, using the program as sent out by the Board of Home Missions. Miss Cornelia Coltrane had taken the lead in getting it up and was assisted by Misses Callie Way and Esther Lowdermilk. The service was very pleasing and a good sized congregation was present. The offering amounted to $32.22.

A couple of weeks ago Brother Elmer Rich was in an automobile accident between High Point and Thomasville and had his nose broken and received several cuts and bruises. He is beginning to be out again. Last Saturday morning Brother Frank Lowdermilk and his youngest daughter, Lucile, were returning from Hamlet and when Brother Lowdermilk struck at a wasp which had lighted on Lucile; the car left the road and ran into a tree, breaking the windshield and cutting both of them right badly. Lucile received a right bad cut on her throat and is still in the hospital at Hamlet.

Our revival meeting is scheduled to begin the first Sunday in June with Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D., doing the preaching. Every church in town is supposed to have on a revival at the same time. Our second quarterly conference will be Monday evening, April 25 at 7:30.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—Our children rendered a short program last Sunday afternoon after which our pastor made a splendid talk from the subject, "The Empty Tomb," it being his regular preaching day. The children did remarkably well considering the practice they had.

Brother Garner is doing some good preaching and it seems that every sermon gets better. We were glad to have as visitors Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Buie of High Point; also Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Allen of Asheboro.

Brother Wade Saunders of Montgomery Company will preach for us next Sunday afternoon.

Brother Garner is teaching a Bible class at New Hope two nights each week, Tuesday and Friday nights. These lessons are interesting and everyone that can should take advantage of the opportunity of learning more about the Bible.

We are having a splendid Sunday school. We have prayer meeting once every month.

Our special meeting will embrace the third Sunday in July. We are hoping for a great revival.

Our Sunday school secretary, Miss Rosa Merritt, recently married to Mr. Garrett Dawson. Mrs. Dawson has been a faithful worker in our school and we will miss her, but we trust another school will be the gainer.

Some of our members expect to attend the state convention at Burlington this week.

REPORTER.

Haw River Circuit.—The ladies of Friendship church gave a pageant, "The Crucifixion," Sunday night. It was well rendered and much enjoyed by the packed house that heard. Collection, $9.00.

A splendid Easter program was rendered at Mizpah church Sunday p.m. Brother Roy Stewart, the faithful superintendent, assisted by Miss Carrie Diamond and Mrs. Roy Stewart and perhaps others, made possible his splendid program. Collection, $15.00.

Midway, also, had a program but is yet to be heard.

The ladies of Reidsville will entertain the Mizpah congregation Sunday night.

Our second quarterly conference will convene at Mizpah church on Saturday before the first Sunday in May at 2 p.m.

Aunt Margaret Jones was called home April 9th. An obituary will appear later.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Heath

After several weeks of suffering John Harris Heath departed this life March 24th.

He was the son of Rev. John Heath. December 20, 1883, he was united in marriage to Emma Nora Causey of Guilford county. To this union were born two children. One died in infancy. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Miss Bertie Heath. The funeral was held from Tabernacle church, conducted by Pastor Ashburn and other ministers who were boyhood friends of Brother Heath.

The floral offering was beautiful. He was converted in childhood and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church and lived a true Christian life. He was a faithful husband and a loving father.

Brother Heath has gone beyond the pains, sorrows, and disappointments of this earthly life to be with loved ones already gone before and to await the coming of other loved ones.

We extend to the widow and daughter our fullest sympathy, trusting that the great Comforter will dispel the darkness of their grief with the light of faith that we shall meet again in that Eternal Home.

REPORTER.

Heath

John Harris Heath, aged 74 years, seven months, 20 days, breathed his last on Thursday, March 24, 1927, at 8:25 p.m. Early in life he joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church, and lived a true Christian life. He is survived by his wife, and one daughter.

It was so hard to give him up, and a vacant place which can not be filled is left in our home, but we grieve not as one without hope, for we know that he is standing at the right hand of God, ready to welcome his loved ones as they one by one enter that beautiful home where cometh no sorrow, no care.

Husband, father, we loved you, but Jesus loved you more, and you have entered into the joys of that home prepared for you. You are resting "safe in the arms of Jesus, safe on his gentle breast." We will treasure the fond memories of you, and may your wise advice and your influence shed upon our lives lead us on to higher and nobler things. May you meet and welcome us as one by one we shall reach the shores of eternity, and together we will spend the countless ages in that land where no tears are ever shed, and we say good-bye no more.

"We loved him, yes, we loved him,
But angels loved him more,
And they have surely called him
To yonder shining shore."

WRITTEN BY HIS DAUGHTER.

Watson

Clarence M. Watson, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Watson, born May 23, 1918, departed this life April 5, 1927. As the day fades into night this young life slipped out into the great beyond to be with God and his angels. Clarence was not allowed to linger and suffer long as many are, falling sick with Muscular Rheumatism a little more than a week before his death, and later developing pneumonia. We do not understand the mysteries of God and why He calls the ilttle children from among us, but we have the assurance that He is too wise to make a mistake and too good to do wrong. It is sweet and comforting to think of this young life (taken as it was) being a flower just transplanted from this world into one more beautiful, into a Flower Garden that is cared for by our Heavenly Father and that we too may by living for Christ be with him in the Garden of Prayer where God is the keeper. The funeral was conducted at Fairview Methodist Protestant church Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock by the writer. The large number of his schoolmates and friends present showed that he was loved and would be missed in the community in which he lived. The pallbearers were schoolmates. The flower girls were members of his class in school. Burial was in Fairview cemetery; beneath a mound of flowers his body lies awaiting the resurrection morn.

While hearts are heavy and bleeding because of his going may each one who mourns think of what the poet says:

"Too thick in every graveyard
The little hillocks lie,
But every hillock represents
An angel in the sky."

M. IVEY CRUTCHFIELD.

Garmon

With sorrowful hearts we learned of the death of Mr. John C. Garmon, father of our teacher, Mr. O. B. Garmon. While not entirely a shock to us, for we knew that he was quite ill, still we hoped that he would be up again; but Our Heavenly Father knew best and we submit to His righteous will, therefore be it:

Resolved, That we the members of the Philathea class extend our heartfelt sympathy and deep regret to our teacher and to the members of the family in their great loss; though feeling that their loss is His gain, yet when the ties of human nature are severed there is a sorrow that nothing else can bring. Therefore the love and deepest sympathy of each member of the class is herein extended to each bereaved member of the family. And be it:

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our teacher, to the Methodist Protestant Herald, the Reidsville Review, and a copy be placed on the minutes of our Philathea class.

Knight

The fields are white unto the harvest and God is calling his servants home. Two weeks ago Susan Knight, wife of W. W. Knight, heard the voice in loving tones, "Come unto me and I will give you rest." She leaves a husband and thirteen children to mourn the great loss of wife and mother. She was a quiet, unassuming woman. Was 64 years old, was a devoted wife, a loving mother and kind to all her neighbors. She was born and reared in this community, living not more than five miles from her mother's home, Aunt Jane Lemmons, who has gone before her. Of several brothers and one sister, Mrs. Knight leaves but the one sister, Mrs. Nannie Rumbly. She has five sons. W. H. Knight, J. S. Knight, T. L. Knight, R. G. Knight, and P. G. Knight; all of Stokesdale, and has eight daughters: Mrs. O. E. Comber, Mrs. A. J. Garrett, Mrs. W. R. Gentry, Mrs. J. F. Powell, and Mrs. C. W. Angel of Stokesdale, and Mrs. P. M. Johnson, Mrs. O. F. Stafford and Miss Pearl Knight of Greensboro.

The floral display was the greatest I ever saw and I never saw the bereaved more hurt. And may we remember the good deeds done by our dear ones and help us to know that we have the opportunity of being reunited with them in the glorious beyond.

It will be recalled that over two years ago a number of friends of the college indorsed notes and secured the money through their banks, in order that financial pressure upon the treasurer might be to some extent relieved.

Among these notes were two for One Thousand Dollars each, which our good brother, D. A. McLaurin, of Concord, handled for us, with the assistance of other loyal friends of that aggressive church. One Thousand Dollars was paid at maturity, and I am now informed by Brother McLaurin that the indorsers have assumed payment of the other note, thus relieving the college entirely.

While it has been understood that the notes would be taken care of eventually by the local churches, as long as they are outstanding they are obligations of the Board of Education, and it is always a relief to have one disposed of.

Brother McLaurin has proved to be one of the most loyal friends of the college. There are a number of the same kind, but, unfortunately, that number is not large enough. If it could be greatly multiplied the perplexities of the treasurer would be at an end.

We appreciate very much indeed every contribution made to this good work; we have been made sad since last we reported through this column, in the loss of one of our fine boys. We wish to thank all who so kindly sympathized with us in this loss, for the floral contributions, also for the cars furnished to take the children to the funeral.

On The Essential

Numbers of times those in authority have occasion to refer to deep spiritual things and say "next to inspiration," and it seems that such expressions are "safe."

The above may serve as a reminder of certain other expressions that are often made in reference to the essentials—as that whatever God requires is essential. However, some claim that God requires water baptism, (Immersion), and that it is essential.

It seems that there are lots of good people, sincere Christians, who have never been baptized by water.

At one of the popular churches where they urge for water baptism only a few take their church paper. Now, in order to help us to think clearly on the water essential let us make a question and ask which is the nearest "essential" for a person, water baptism, or the church paper. It seems that the members of that church above referred to could do better by means of their church paper than by "means" of their water baptism.

Of course they have their Sunday school literature, but that is not the "official organ."

The church paper seems to serve more as "means of grace" than all of water baptism.

However, "These things ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone."

We can safely say that our religious literature serves as next to the essential, and every family should have their church paper as a "means of grace." What do we learn to read for?

Commencement at Westminster Theological Seminary

A theological seminary is a great incubator for hatching out young preachers. The Methodist Protestant Church has been fortunate in having such an incubator for more than forty years. It is located in the town of Westminster, Md. It is ordinarily almost as quiet as a sitting hen. But when hatching time comes there is a stir and a bustle. Next week is hatching time. A fine brood of ten young preachers is to come off. Six are Marylanders, two are Virginians, one is a New Yorker, and one is a West Virginian. Here are some of the subjects treated in their graduating theses: Human Suffering, Immortality, The Miracles of Jesus, The Deity of Christ, The Problems of the Rural Church, The Social and Recreational Program of the Rural Church, God and the World War, Religious Leadership.

The program for the week includes sermons by President Elderdice and Rev. G. I. Humphreys and an address by Prof. T. C. Miller, of Fairmont, W. Va.

Some people imagine that hen-hatched chickens are to be preferred to incubator-hatched ones, but what would our church have done without this great incubator on Westminster hill? The men who have quietly wrought there for the preparation of man for the Gospel ministry have done and are doing a great work. We may take a just pride in this school of the prophets, and we should encourage our young preachers to take advantage of the help it offers.

We thank Dr. Elderdice for an invitation to the exercises of commencement days, May 1-3.

Superstition Still Lives

We have just received from an anonymous lady in Burlington, N. C., a long letter clipped from a newspaper and headed "An Ancient Letter Supposed Written by Jesus Christ." We are asked to publish this letter. This is the third time we have been asked to publish this absurd letter in the last thirty years. We have declined twice before and we must decline this time. The letter pronounces a curse upon those who refuse to publish the letter and a blessing upon those who pass it on. We presume this explains the fact that we have been repeatedly asked to publish it.

We think it time to let the letter die.

According to a claim of the letter, it was written by Christ just after His crucifixion. It does not say whether it was written while He was still nailed to the cross or not. The language would imply that it was written before His resurrection from the dead. It is also said that it was signed by the angel Gabriel ninety years after the Savior's birth. What force would Gabriel's signature give to a document already signed by the Son of God? And why should he wait nearly sixty years to sign it? The further statement is made that the letter was deposited presumably by Gabriel under a stone at the foot of the cross with the following inscription on top of the stone: "Blessed is he who shall turn me over." Nobody seemed to have had curiosity enough to turn the stone over until at last a little child came along and turned it over and found the letter. He gave it to a Christian in whose family it remained for a thousand years, bringing trouble after trouble because it was not passed on to others.

The letter was probably written by some waggish fellow amusing himself with the thought of how superstitious people would take pains to keep the letter in circulation.

This one statement taken from the letter is enough to prove that Jesus did not write the letter: "Do but once think of what I have suffered for you; if you do it will be well for you in this world and in the world to come."

Anecdote of Mr. H. J. Heinz

Mr. H. J. Heinz, formerly a member of the Methodist Protestant church in Pittsburgh, Pa., from a small beginning built up an immense business with ramifications throughout the civilized world. His success was in large measure due to his sterling integrity. The following related by Mr. E. D. McCafferty in his biography of Mr. Heinz illustrates:

"One day he accosted a new employee at the weigher's platform weighing apples. The young man, eager to impress his value on his employer, said: 'We are getting you good weight today, Mr. Heinz.' 'Fine!' said Mr. Heinz. 'What are you doing for me?' 'Why, you know, a quick hand, and you can always slip over a few pounds extra.' Mr. Heinz nodded and after a few moments asked him mildly to go with him to the office. When they arrived he said: 'Do you know what office this is? It's the cashier's office. You will be paid off, and you will leave this place at once.'

"'But, Mr. Heinz,' cried the astonished young man. 'I was saving you money!'

"'You were robbing a man who was selling to me,' said Mr. Heinz, 'and you were robbing me of something more precious.' Then, laying his hand on the discharged young man's shoulder, he added: 'There's only one way to weigh, or to do anything else. Be as square to the other fellow as to yourself.'"

—President Calles of Mexico thinks mutual interest should move our nation and his to peaceful intercourse. He says there are only four million out of fifteen million people in Mexico who wear shoes. If we should educate the lower classes, they would wear shoes and form a new market to be supplied. This is but one item in a long list.

—Governor Al Smith of New York has answered the objection to his being president based on the fact that he is a Roman Catholic. The answer is satisfactory to some but not to all. But he has failed to qualify in the eyes of those who regard his record with reference to the liquor traffic. He has a spot on his hands which will not wash out.

"SEEKING GOD"—ACCORDING TO AMOS

By H. H. Smith

What a pity that Amos should be called a minor prophet! "Minor" can mean nothing diminutive as applied to this man of God who felt the message of Jehovah burning within his soul so fervently that he cried out, "The Lord hath spoken, who can but prophesy?"

When Amaziah, the priest of Bethel, where the idolatrous sanctuary established by the wicked Jeroboam was located, undertook to put Amos to rout: "O thou seer, go, flee thee away unto the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there," quick as a flash Amos came back: "I was no prophet, neither was I am prophet's son; but I was an herdman, and a dresser of sycamore trees: and the Lord took me from following the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel. Now therefore hear the word of the Lord,"—and forthwith the intrepid prophet pronounced an awful doom upon Amaziah and all Israel.

The Israelites were seeking God most diligently by their appointed feasts and offerings, and outwardly they were very religious. But Amos saw beneath all these empty forms and ceremonies. He saw the poor robbed, and the laborer cheated, and injustice and cruelty and sensuality on every hand. Their very sanctuaries were places of licentiousness and sin. And so the prophet cries out, "Seek the Lord and ye shall live." To explain what he means by seeking the Lord, he changes the phrases and says, "Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live." "Seeking God," according to Amos, means seeking the good, especially the good of our fellowman, and his welfare materially and spiritually. It was a time when "man's inhumanity to man" was appalling. The rich, forgetting everything except the gratification of their selfish desires, "bought the poor for silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes," and "sold the refuse of the wheat, making the ephah small and the shekel great,—falsifying the balances by deceit." Yea, they even snatched from the poor, as security, their only garment to keep them warm as covering at night, refusing to restore it by sunset, as the law required. And still they considered themselves a very religious people, because they punctually observed the feast days and offerings.

The burden of Amos' message was this: God's blessing could never be secured, so long as justice and brotherly kindness were ignored in dealing with one's fellow man. To us, in theory at least, this is commonplace, but not so to the ritual-loving Israelites. In order to bear this truth home to them, Amos becomes startlingly bold, and represents God as thus speaking to Israel: "I hate, I despise your feasts, and I will take no delight in your solemn assemblies. Yea, though you offer me your burnt offerings and your meat offerings, I will not accept them; neither will I regard the peace offerings of your fat beasts. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. But let judgment (justice) roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream."

O, Amos, mighty prophet of God, speak to us today; for we, too, are seeking God. Do we fail to find Him and realize His presence as "closer than breathing" because we are relying too much upon external forms and ceremonies, forgetting justice and brotherly kindness in dealing with our fellow man? Teach us, thou prophet of righteousness, that it is not enough to attend church and pray and give money. May we never forget the "Inasmuch" of the Son of God, our Saviour: "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it not unto me."

> "I sought the Lord in sun and stars,
> And where the wild seas roll,
> And found Him not. As mute I stood,
> Fear overwhelmed my soul;
> But when I gave to one in need
> I found the Lord of Love indeed."

What a wide application has this doctrine of justice and brotherly love proclaimed by Amos long ago! Yonder is a man at the head of a great factory. He is active in the business life of his town and also in the church. But there is something lacking in his Christian experience. He feels it if he does not confess it, or confide it to anyone. He would like to enjoy the blessings of a deep Christian experience, but how can he so long as he employs a large number of women who work ten hours a day at the low wage of $10 a week, trying to support their families? So long as these underpaid laborers pile up dividends that enable their employer to live in the greatest luxury, it is little less than robbery to deny them a living wage.

A recent investigation of one of the textile mills in the North disclosed the fact that a large number of women were compelled to work at night to supplement the meager income of their husbands who worked in the same factory during the day. Many of these women were mothers of small children, and, working at night, they could snatch but a few hours of sleep during the day, for there were the usual household duties, besides the care of the children. In the name of humanity, how can multi-millionaire mill owners enjoy their huge incomes procured at the price of overworked mothers and dwarfed children? Amos would have represented the Lord as saying to such men as these who rob their fellow man of a a decent wage, roll in luxury, and then hope to draw near to God by psalm-singing on Sunday: "Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. But let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream."

But there are two sides to this subject of seeking God. Amos was a great prophet raised up to awaken the Israelites to a sense of their social obligations. Our obligations to our fellow man must never be overlooked, but we owe duties to God as well as to man, and happy is he who follows the full teaching of the Master on this subject: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." While the message of Amos is applicable to multitudes today, there is another side that should be emphasized for the benefit of others. It is well put by Dr. John R. Mott: "An alarming weakness among Christians is that we are producing Christian activities faster than we are producing Christian experience and Christian faith; that the discipline of our souls and the deepening of our acquaintance with God are not proving sufficiently thorough to enable us to meet the unprecedented expansion of opportunity and responsibility of our generation."

Some preachers are none too fond of systematic pastoral visitation. They regard such work as distracting, and prefer to spend their time with their books. To encourage them to be faithful pastors they are sometimes told they will find sermons in pastoral visitation. They will find more,—they will find God.

"The parish priest
Of Austerlitz
Climbed up in a high church steeple,
To be near God,
So that he might hand
His word down to the people.

And in sermon script
He daily wrote
What he thought was sent from heaven;
And he dropped this down
On his people's heads
Two times one day in seven.

In His wrath, God said,
'Come down and die';
And he cried from the steeple,
'Where art Thou, Lord?'
And the Lord replied,
'Down here among my people.'"

MODERNISM PROPAGANDA

About two years ago we received a pamphlet from the University of Chicago, the title being "Evolution, the Bible, and Religion." The pamphlet was sent by its author, and bearing the imprint of the University of Chicago Press, but the author disclaimed having any official connection with the University.

The object of the pamphlet is to try to make the reader believe that evolution does not contradict the Bible nor interfere with religion, but on the contrary is a great aid to faith and piety. Of course, as usual, by all such writings, no proof whatever is given to sustain this claim. The pamphlet is wily, seductive, and bordering on plausibility, if you will not think, but just listen to the siren voice of the charmer. Of course the whole thing is false, but calculated to deceive the young, the unwary, and the uninformed. This seems to be its object.

There was a letter accompanying the pamphlet giving prices, etc., at which it was to be furnished and calling on pastors to order and distribute liberally among their people. Extolling the great good that would result, by dispelling darkness, ignorance, confusion, etc., by disseminating this great evangel of light and truth. It was also stated that it was being placed with the Y. M. C. A.'s for their enlightenment, and of course as distributing points.

I decided to send out a "feeler" and sound the orthodoxy of the author; to break through the "smoke-screen" in which he had enveloped himself—to force him into the open so that his true attitude might be disclosed. I was already satisfied, in my own mind, for no orthodox person would, or could, write such a pamphlet. Still he tried, as the most of such writers do, to impress the reader that he was sound. So I sent in the following unequivocal questions, so worded that he could not "straddle the fence" on the word "divinity." Do you believe:

1. That Jesus Christ is God?
2. That the Holy Spirit is God?
3. Do you believe in the Blood atonement?
4. Do you believe that the Bible is inspired?
5. Do you believe in the real literal Resurrection of Christ? That the identical body that was put in the tomb, arose?
6. Do you believe in the Resurrection of the human body?

We could have put other questions—the virgin birth, etc., etc., but we knew that these six would disclose him. And sure enough they did. They made him indignant. He never answered one of them, either yea or nay. But dodged the whole issue by saying that he believed that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." His answer was equivocal and evasive. Had he been orthodox he would have been eager to have answered each of the six questions in the affirmative.

Persons give equivocal, evasive answers when they wish to hide something. His answer so far as it extended could be either orthodox or Unitarian, all depending on the interpretation given. But he failed to interpret it, and his failure to answer the questions shows him to be heterodox, but did not wish to confess it. Orthodoxy is never ashamed of its faith nor ashamed to confess it. It has nothing to hide.

We answered his evasive letter, telling him that as he had taken the initiative in pushing his propaganda, he ought not to complain; that what was "fair for the goose was fair for the gander." This fetched him down from his perch and lowered his temperature, and we have not heard from him since. But the disease has broken out afresh, in a new place.

It is "The American Institute of Sacred Literature" this time, hailing from the University of Chicago. Some weeks ago we received a lot of tracts and booklets from this plant, with letter and printed matter, extolling the tracts, their merit, and the great good done by the old-time preachers in the use of tracts; urging pastors to buy and circulate, especially in their own congregations. True, tracts have been used to good account, but not such as those sent out by this American Institute of Sacred Literature.

The word "sacred" sounds good, but it may "cover a multitude of sins." (Lies.)

The Hindus have their sacred books. And so do the Chinese, Japanese, Persians, and the ancient Egyptians. Even Joe Smith has his sacred (?) book. In this case, the samples of tracts sent were all modernistic, Unitarian, rationalistic, and evolutional. With taking orthodox titles, such as the Bible, the Son of God, Inspiration, Conversion, Jesus Christ, Second Coming, God in Man, etc., etc. We read them all and found them unsound. Much in them is equivocal and misleading . Deceivers, "deceiving and being deceived." After reading them I put them in the grate. Few have any idea or knowledge as to how industriously, persistently, and steadily this pernicious propaganda is being pushed. The object is to sow the whole country with these "tares" while the evangelicals "sleep." The young, inexperienced, poorly informed are caught by the titles, which sound good, but the interpretation of these titles is the rankest, most pernicious heresy. So we sound this warning: Anything you receive from the American Institute of Sacred Literature is modernistic propaganda, and the best place for it is in the stove or grate. They say that only about one in ten of the pastors to whom they send samples of their tracts, with order blanks, prices, and their appeal, respond. But they catch a "sucker" now and then. Of course the evil will spread unless it is exposed and counteracted by wholesome literature.

It has been said that God never builds a church but what the devil builds one beside it. This may not be always the case, but it is largely true. And as the Moody Bible Institute Colportage Association has been for a number of years furnishing much good religious literature at small cost—tracts, booklets, and books, it seems that Satan has adopted the tract and pamphlet method to neutralize as much as possible the work of the Moody and similar institutions. The heathen religious have adopted the Sunday school to teach their religion—borrowed from Christianity. And now it seems that modernism has adopted from the evangelicals the tract method to spread their heresies all over the country among the unsuspecting, but enlisting the pastors to carry on the deadly propaganda.

Beware! A word to the wise is sufficient.

J. F. Dosier.

THE WAR IS ON

It is provoking in the extreme to hear the champions of evolution repeat over and over again the false claim that evolution is science, and that the opposition to teaching evolution in tax-supported schools is opposition to science and the teaching of science. Fundamentalists and the opposers of evolution have no desire and no purpose to limit freedom in the pursuit of truth. They are hospitable toward truth, all truth, but they are unalterably set against being taxed to support schools in which there is a teaching that is purely naturalistic and leads away from faith in God. The war is on. Our Christian religion is being challenged, and it behooves orthodox Christian men and women to accept the guage of battle and enlist for the war. We may lose some battles, but under God we expect to win the war.—Word and Way.

FERTILE SOIL

The hearts of children and young people, those who are reached most easily and effectively by means of the Sabbath School, are fertile soil for the seed of God's Word. In the parable of the sower and the soils, the good ground which brings forth 30 or 60 or 100 fold, may represent the minds and hearts of those who are young. Children and young people are curious and eager to learn new things. They are therefore ready for the good news of the kingdom. They are also ready for new friends, and those who seek to introduce them to Jesus Christ, the friend of sinners, and the elder brother of all the saved, will find them easy to approach and warm of heart. The character of youth is in the process of formation and is not hardened into indifference or cynicism or worldliness. It is only a step for the tender feet of children from the way of death to the way of life. Here, then, are hungry minds and hearts, responsive wills and easily molded characters, waiting for the shaping hand and witnessing voice of the teacher of the Word. This is the golden opportunity of the teacher.—Selected.

FOR HIS SON'S SAKE

D. L. Moody used to tell a story of a busy judge who, during war time, was approached by a soldier who presented a letter. Before reading this the judge seemed disinclined to pay much attention to his visitor, as he was absorbed in an important legal case. Upon opening the letter his whole attitude changed. It was from his own son. He read: "Dear Father: The bearer is a soldier discharged from the hospital, and he is going home to die; assist him in any way you can for Charlie's sake." All the tender emotions of the judge's soul were laid open. He said to a friend afterwards, "I took that soldier to my heart for Charlie's sake; I clothed him in Charlie's clothes; I let him sleep in Charlie's bed, and supplied him with every comfort for Charlie's sake." Moody added, "God will never turn away any needy one, for His dear Son's sake."—A. C. Crews, in Westminster Teacher.

GOD REVEALED, NOT DISCOVERED

Philosophers and scientists have much to say about the origin of things and the Deity. If they admit that there is a Supreme Being, as a rule, their portrayal of Him is not such as to give assurance and confidence to mankind with respect to His relations to men. This is not surprising, for the finite mind, though it sees in the physical universe much evidence of the existence of a Creator, is utterly inadequate to apprehend either His character or His purposes. The testimony of nature is not uniform even as to the benevolence of its Maker, for in the world are to be found both good and evil, both things that bless and things that curse. So true is this that nature has been spoken of by some as "red in tooth and claw." To be sure, we have the sunshine, but there is also the destructive storm; we have vegetation that feeds and clothes the body, but we also have noxious weeds and grasses that plague and must be warred against; we have in life many joys, but we also have sickness, suffering, and the dark tragedy of death.

The human intellect by searching cannot find out God. No truth is written more clearly in human history than this. All the false religions of the world bear pathetic witness to it, as also do the philosophic systems that have set the Bible aside and sought by independent efforts to solve "the riddle of the universe." Such investigators, when conceding that there is a God, have generally done one or the other of two things; they have either removed Him far away from the earth and the human race, interposing between the Creator and His creatures a vast system of inexorable laws which govern in His stead; or they have made Him one with nature, stripping Him of His personality and thus in reality annihilating Him. In either case, the God for which the heart of man cries out is not at all brought into view. Such a God is revealed only in the Holy Scriptures, Divinely given for that purpose, and these are some of His characteristics:

1. He is knowable. Guided by the inspired Word, man can by faith find Him, and be conscious that He is. He cannot comprehend Him in the fullness of His being, but this fact does not destroy the validity of his knowledge. The child knows his earthly father, though he cannot understand his parent's larger thoughts or go with him into all the realms in which he moves.

2. He is a God who answers. He does not leave His children orphaned, groping in darkness amid their heartaches and perplexities. His ears are ever open to their cries. He gives response to their prayers.

3. He is sufficient. He is not only willing to help those who rightly call upon Him, but has the resources at His command to do so. He is able to do for us "exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think." He is omniscient and omnipotent, and can care adequately for those who trust Him both in life and death—both in time and in eternity.—Selected.

—We need to take heed how we hear these days. Especially is this true regarding reports from China and from Mexico. It is now said that reports of outrages in China were greatly exaggerated, and the motive for the exaggeration is said to have been the hope of American interference to save the day for other nations that have interests there. From Mexico come conflicting reports from Roman Catholic authorities and from men representing the Mexican government. In view of the conflicting statements we should withhold judgment until the truth appears.

If we love one another, we shall be willing to think differently, and yet seek to harmonize our differences.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Branch Meeting

The Branch Meeting of the Woman's Foreign and of the Woman's Home Missionary Societies was held in Henderson April 19 to 21. We were privileged to attend all the sessions, and we rejoice with the good women in the splendid reports made by both organizations. The Foreign Branch raised over $6,000 during the year, and the Home Branch over $4,000.

The meetings were well attended, and a spirit of progressiveness prevailed in every session. It was good to be there. I am sure someone else will make full report of these splendid meetings.

Moriah

On Friday evening, April 22nd, I had the pleasure of meeting with the second quarterly conference at Moriah. This charge has built a splendid new parsonage on the church grounds at Moriah, and the pastor, Rev. H. C. Carmichael, has moved his family into the parsonage. The people are very much pleased with Brother Carmichael, and the work is going along splendidly. We are expecting great things on this new charge this year.

West Forsythe

Early Saturday morning, April 23rd, we started for a two-day visit to West Forsythe, and reached Harmony Grove in good time for the eleven o'clock service. Dinner was served on the grounds, after which we returned to the church for the second quarterly conference. The attendance was good, all the churches save one being represented. The business was transacted with promptness and in a splendid spirit. We noted that about one-third of pastor's salary was paid. We reminded them, as we do all the charges, that one-half of the year has passed and one-half of the salary should be paid.

On Saturday evening we were at the Baltimore church, and preached to a splendid congregation for a week night. The congregation was largely made up of young people and they gave earnest heed to the word.

On Sunday morning we started out with the pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, to visit three churches, Stony Knoll, Pleasant Hill, and Tabernacle. At each one of these churches we met good congregations, and preached to people who heard the Word gladly. It was a pleasure to preach to them.

The church buildings and grounds in each case showed that the people are taking some pride in keeping them neat and attractive in appearance. Markers by the road would mean much. This is the fifth visit I have made to this charge as president of the Conference, and if I am capable of judging, the work is now in the best condition it has ever been. Last year's report was the best for years, and we predict that this year's report will be better still.

Brother Whitaker is doing fine work, and the people speak well of him. The parsonage and grounds are in the best condition I have ever seen them. Some work should be done on the parsonage, and was ordered done soon.

At each church they laid plans to collect the college assessment and send it in soon.

Pastors, Please Note

The College Assessment laid upon each charge is small. This assessment is for college running expenses, and is meant for this college year. And this college year closes on May 26th, so this amount on each charge should be collected and sent to Mr. V. W. Idol certainly not later than May 20th. We are depending upon each charge to raise this amount. Please attend to this at once, for the time is short.

Church Extension

A few days ago your Board of Church Extension met and gave careful consideration to every application before it. These applications amounted to nearly $10,000. The Board gave careful and prayerful thought to the applications for some two hours, and tried to be fair to all, and yet to scale them down to within a reasonable expectation of the real annual income of the Board. Based upon last year's income, we could only expect about $3,000; but because of the earnest calls and the pressing needs, your Board of Church Extension appropriated about $3,900. This will be paid provided the money comes in through the A. C. B. Please remember that the Board has no other way to get this money; $5,500 is distributed to the charges for Church Extension, and if all this is raised, which it should be, your Board can and will pay all apportionments for the year, and will have some left to pay on notes it is now carrying. Be sure to bear this in mind in raising A. C. B.

That Easter Offering

We rejoice at the good reports coming in from the Easter offerings. If you have Easter money in hand please forward at once to Mr. V. W. Idol, High Point, N. C., so he may send it in. The Board of Home Missions needs it immediately. Thank you.

In fact, it will be helpful all around if when money is collected for either of the budgets it could be sent in at once.

Summer Conference

The Summer Conferences are rapidly approaching. They will be held in the High Point College July 18 to 25. We are expecting every pastor to be present, and shall be disappointed if they do not get there. Come to spend the entire week. Get your people to excuse from service on Sunday, July 24th, and remain at the College with your young people.

Of course the Superannuates and any other ministers without work are expected to be present, also.

Rev. F. W. Paschall and Rev. N. M. Harrison will keep you posted about the Young People's Summer Conference. In the meantime be planning to come in goodly numbers. A fine program is in the making.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Ever since the death of Dr. Klein, last December, as president of the Union Board, I have been writing the weekly missionary article. Since Rev. S. W. Rosenberger, D. D., of Columbus, Ohio, has been elected to succeed Dr. Klein, and assumes his new duties on May first, this will be my closing article, and hereafter this column will be filled by the new secretary. Before laying down my pen, there are at least three matters I want to bring to your attention.

Support Dr. Rosenberger

First, I would solicit for Dr. Rosenberger your hearty support. No one knows better than I do the "man's job" he is undertaking. To follow such a capable, efficient, well-informed and widely-traveled secretary as Dr. Klein is in itself a great responsibility. Your Board of Foreign Missions believes in the suitability of Dr. Rosenberger for this office, and they were unanimous in their choice. Read all he writes to you, whether it be in the church press, or circular letter, or private correspondence; and to the limit of your ability grant all his requests.

Co-operate in the Memorial

Second, letters have been sent to all the ministers and Sunday school superintendents of our denomination telling of the plan of the Union Board to make the coming Children's Day service a memorial to Dr. Klein, and to use the increase in the offering, over the usual amount received, to help provide a Klein-Coulbourn Memorial Church at Nagoya College, Japan.

There are several reasons for uniting these two names in this memorial church. For instance, both men served as executive secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions, and both men died while thus serving. Again, several thousands of dollars were raised, ten or twelve years ago, to provide a Coulbourn Memorial Church at Nagoya College, but the plan was never completed. Dr. Klein was our first ordained missionary to Japan, and founded the school that has grown to be Nagoya College. These, and other reasons, appealed to your Board as justifying this memorial to these faithful servants of God.

Therefore, when your Sunday school observes Children's Day, arrange to give at least fifty per cent more in your offering than you did last year. This additional amount will be needed to complete the memorial church at Nagoya College. Send to Mrs. Fred C. Klein, Berwyn, Md., for Children's Day supplies.

India—Our Most Needy Field

I have always tried to keep our three missionary fields, Japan, China and India, on a par in my thinking. I feel, however, that the physical needs of our work in India are greater at the present time than in either of the other two fields.

In what was possibly the last letter received by Dr. Klein, from Rev. Paul M. Cassen, one of our missionaries in India, I find the following paragraph: "I believe there are people at home who will be willing to give enough money to build a chapel, or a house for a preacher, if only we would present the opportunity to them."

Four hundred dollars would be sufficient to build a very comfortable house for a preacher; and five hundred dollars would build a very nice chapel, that would be of great use in our work. We have received word from a friend at home that they were going to put some money into our hands to be used in the mission as we feel wise. At the present time it amounts to about four hundred dollars and there is a possibility of its being more than doubled in the near future. The one request is that we mention no names. Our actual needs at the present time are eight houses and two chapels.

Here is a fine opportunity for ten people to provide one each of these much needed buildings.

Still greater than these needs, is the need for two new bungalows in which to house our two missionary families. When the Minnises and Cassens went to India, it was with the understanding that as soon as possible the Board would provide them suitable homes. Because of the failure of the budget to provide the Board with enough funds, the Board has been unable to make good its own expectations. I have deeply regretted that these two families have had little real home life during the years they have been in India. They have had to occupy the same house, thus denying to them the privacy, without which there can be no real home life.

One friend, appreciating this situation, has given $1,000 toward a home for the Cassen family. I appeal to our people to make possible by their gifts these two much needed homes in India.

And so I close, what to me has been a labor of love, with repeating these three requests—support the new secretary, Dr. S. W. Rosenberger; co-operate in making the Klein Memorial Children's Day a great success; and help our missionaries in India to secure the houses, and chapels, and bungalows they so much need.

J. C. Broomfield.

HOME MISSIONS

An Appeal to the Pastors

As far as I have information, Easter was a great day throughout the entire denomination. Never before in the history of our church was such interest taken in the celebration of our Lord's Resurrection. Never before have so many churches had special Easter programs to make the services attractive and profitable. Never before were the congregations as large or the enthusiasm as great. Special effort was made to present the Gospel to the individual.

I am receiving reports from every section of our denomination stating that both children and adults have confessed Christ as their personal Savior and united with the church. Returned postals were sent to all of our pastors a few days before Easter with the request that they would report to me the number of members received and the amount of the offering for Home Missions. Will the brethren please take time to return the card? If you have misplaced the one sent, send another card giving the name of your Annual Conference, name of local church, your own name and address with the number of members received, and amount of the offering. I do not wish to make a partial report through our church papers and am waiting to hear from all.

Please do not send the money to me, as some are doing, but to your Annual Conference Treasurer, stating that it is the Easter offering for Home Missions. Last year some did not do this and then were disappointed that they did not have credit for an Easter offering in their Annual Conference Minutes. Their money went into the General Funds and the Board of Home Missions did not get the full benefit of it.

With the aid of the pastors in sending at once the number of members received and the amount of the offering I will be able to report through the church papers what has been accomplished. Please let me hear from you without further delay and then watch the church papers for results from the whole church.

It is not possible for me to communicate with each pastor and church personally. I will therefore take this means of expressing the gratitude of the Board of Home Missions for the splendid co-operation it has had from every section of our beloved church. J. M. SHERIDAN.

PRAY—GIVE—GO

Three things the Master hath to do,
And we who serve Him here below,
And long to see His Kingdom come,
May pray, or give, or go.

He needs them all—the open hand,
The willing feet, the asking heart—
To work together and to weave
The threefold cord that shall not part.

Nor shall the giver count his gift
As greater than the worker's deed,
Nor he in turn his service boast
Above the prayers that voice the need.

Not all can go; not all can give
To earn the others for the fray;
But young or old, or rich or poor,
Or strong or weak—we all can pray.

Pray that the full hands open wide
To speed the message on its way;
That those who hear the call may go,
And—pray that other hearts may pray.

A MOMENT WITH CHRIST

"See that ye despise not one of these little ones: for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father who is in heaven."—Matt. 18:10.

Some of our families will never more be complete. Yet how can we say this, knowing that nothing can really separate us from those we love?

" 'How many are you, then,' said I,
If there are two in heaven,'
Quick was the little Maid's reply,
'O Master! we are seven.'

" 'But they are dead; those two are dead!
Their spirits are in heaven.'
'Twas throwing words away; for still
The little Maid would have her will,
And said, 'Nay, we are seven.' "

By the little Maid's affirmation her family was kept still complete. We must believe that they yet belong to us; we must affirm this in our hearts—those shining little ones who have been withdrawn for a time from our sight, still ours although they are where they behold the Father's face.

Prayer:

Our Father who art in heaven, help us to think of our family, not broken, but whole! In the world we must needs be careful of our speech, but in our thoughts we know we still are—"seven." Keep, O Heavenly Father, the unseen children whom we love so much. Bless them this very day in ways we cannot comprehend. Thou hast set us in families with bonds which never need be broken. Some reason there must have been for Thy sending these little ones to be our own. Oh! keep in beauty, clear, pure, and strong, that something which was the reason for Thy choice of us to be their parents. That something may we never lose. So shall they be ours forever. Amen.—Zion's Herald.

CONCERNING A REVIVAL

The greatest need of these specialists going about the country telling us that the old-time revivals were "mob psychology," is a pungent, deep conviction for sin, and a few days' struggle at the mourners' bench. Any preacher or layman who tells you that the day of revivals is past is backslidden—if he ever had anything to backslide from. He neither knows the need of the people or the power of God. If we would have a revival of true religion we must have a tidal wave of repentance sweep over the land, and this will not come without faithful preaching.

We are not going to have a great revival of religion preaching modernism. It produces doubt instead of faith, conviction, and saving trust in Christ. We shall not have a revival if we do not recognize the Holy Ghost and give him his full place in our preaching, faith, hearts, and labor. He must convince the world of sin, righteousness, and the judgment to come. We must come back to the Bible, back to Christ, back to the Holy Ghost, back to repentance, regeneration, and full redemption from sin if we would save the people, cleanse the moral atmosphere, and save the nation.—From The Pentecostal Herald.

ROBBING

"Go easy now, brother, and don't say too much
About money and giving and tithing and such!"
So heeded the preacher; and ceased for to tell
That the earth is the Lord's—all the cattle that dwell
On the hilltops, the fruit of the tree and the vine,
The wealth of the soil and the sea and the mine!
That men are retainers and tenants alone,
The servants and stewards of God and His throne!
Now preacher and people are poor and distressed,
And life is a dreary, hard struggle at best;
And none seems to know as he labors and delves
That in robbing the Lord we have robbed our own selves!

—By Rufus Lee Dodd.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR THOUGHT

Ask yourself the following questions, reading them over slowly, and think; then answer them to yourself:

Does my life please God?
Am I studying my Bible daily?
Am I enjoying my Christian life?
Have I ever won a soul to Christ?
How much time do I spend in prayer?
Is there any one whom I cannot forgive?
Just where am I making my greatest mistake?
Is there anything that I cannot give up for Christ?
Is the world better, or worse, by my living in it?
Am I doing anything that I would condemn in others?
How does my life look to those who are not Christians?
How many things do I put before my religious duties?
Have I ever tried to give one-tenth of my income to the Lord?
Is Christian service my chief joy, rather than worldly pleasure?—The Mission Messenger.

OUR STORY PAGE

IN EIGHTEEN-SIXTY-ONE

Sarah Wentworth was just like her name, rather prim and quite precise. She was visiting in New England in the spring of 1861, when the war broke out.

"And lucky you are," said her cousin Walter. "You may thank your stars you are not in the South. There'll be a hot time down there when the Yankees come and lick the rebels!"

"Walter," said his sister Maggie, "don't say such things to Sarah. You know, Hal, and Aunt Jane and Uncle Bart are Southerners."

"Well, they ought to be ashamed of themselves for enslaving people," said Walter. "I believe in freedom, I do! All men are created equal. Freedom forever!"

"The Yankees were the ones who went and stole the slaves away from their homes and sold them to us Southerners," she said. "Why don't the Yankees buy the slaves back?"

"Freedom for me!" was all Walter said.

"Why don't you free everything then?" snapped Sarah. "There's your poor canary. He'd like freedom. That bull in the barn. How I pity him! He is kept tied up all the time."

"I'm talking about people, Sarah," said Walter. "Human souls, not animals."

So it went on. Argument and quarreling. All the children, everybody, took an interest in what went on, and no wonder! Most everyone had a father, or brother or cousin in the war. It seemed as if everybody's heart was breaking, and Sarah went very pale and silent as the weeks went by.

She was only a little girl, but she had strong feelings. No news came from her home in Georgia. She heard cruel words said against the South. She heard of dreadful things going on along the battlefront. She saw soldiers coming home sick and wounded.

"Why do they do it?" she asked.

Someone told her about Abraham Lincoln.

"He's got a silver tongue," they said. "He could make you think black was white. He is a wonder!"

"Then he's the one who made all the trouble," thought the little maid.

It all happened so suddenly—the dreadful thing that came to pass. Just think! Little Sarah was arrested!

She had gone with her aunt to the postoffice, and there on the wall was a big picture. Under the picture was the name

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Sarah stood before the picture and heard what was being said around her. Someone said: "Here's the list of killed and wounded." And someone said: "We'll bring the South to her knees!"

Suddenly Sarah looked into the homely face in the picture and hated it. She thought it looked like a wicked ogre. The artist who had made the picture had not flattered Abraham Lincoln. He had drawn every homely line. Sarah stared and stared, and then she seemed to be acting without knowing what she was doing. She suddenly cried: "You did it! It's your fault!" And there was a loud tearing sound. She had snatched the picture from the wall and was tearing it into bits.

Rough hands were laid on her, and she heard her Aunt cry: "She's only a child! Don't hurt her! She has a mother in the South! She is only ten years old!"

But the men and women in the postoffice were angry.

"She's old enough to be taught a lesson!" said an old lady who had a son in the army.

Sarah did not cry, she did not flinch. She stood proud and still.

"Just take me to that man," she said in a weak voice. "I'll tell him I hate him."

"A rebel if there ever was one!" cried one of the boys.

"Poor dear!" sobbed her aunt. "Let me take the child home. I will punish her. She is so over-wrought with worry, she doesn't know what she is doing."

So Sarah was led away and when she got home her aunt sent her to her room.

"I can understand how you feel, child," said the lady. "But it was an ungracious act, and a bold, rough act for any little girl. For that you can stay in your room on bread and water for a week."

Sarah was silent, but her heart was all in a tumult. She made up her mind to run away and somehow get home to her mother. She wanted to hear the Truth from those sweet lips that she knew could never speak a false or unkind word. At the thought of her gentle mother, she began to cry, and soon her cousins, Maggie and Walter, came to comfort her.

"We will coax mother to let you off," said Walter. "You're as brave as a lion, if you are a rebel."

"I don't want to be let off," sobbed Sarah, for she felt that if her aunt were too kind, she wouldn't be able to make up her mind to run away.

That night she stole out of the house and ran as fast as she could away from town. She knew she was headed south. It was ever so far and might take months, but she made up her mind to run on and on.

Alas! She had not gone far, when she was stopped by a soldier. It was Greg Cameron, and he had been in the postoffice when she had torn down Abraham Lincoln's picture!

Greg was only nineteen, but he had raised a beard all the way around his chin, but his lips were shaved. This gave him a very old look and that was what he wanted. He flashed a lantern in Sarah's face, then he began to chuckle.

"You're arrested!" he said. "Come along!"

Sarah was too scared to beg for mercy. She was dragged along until she came to a farmhouse brightly lighted. Inside, it was full of soldiers, and an old officer sat at a table in the parlor. Sarah heard Greg tell the officer about her actions in the postoffice.

"Now, they will shoot me!" she thought.

But not right away! The officer beckoned one of the soldiers and whispered something. They all waited while the soldier went away. Then they heard slow, heavy footsteps coming and Sarah was sure it was the Executioner. The door opened and a tall, thin figure stood there. Sarah looked up, and saw—Abraham Lincoln.

My! She could have fainted away with fright. He came in and stooped down before her. She looked into his eyes and somehow they reminded her of her mother's; they were so tired, so kind, so wise. Before she knew what she was doing she was in his arms, sobbing on his big shoulder.

"I want my mother!" she sobbed.

"So do I," he said, and his eyes were full of tears.

"I'm sorry I tore your picture," she said in a small voice. "But it wasn't a bit like you any way. It was an ugly picture. You aren't ugly. Oh, can't you stop the War?"

She felt sure he could and would. He was so strong, so dependable.

"I'll do my best," he said.

One of the soldiers took her home after awhile, and it was fun riding in front of him on an old farm horse.

Her Aunt and Walter and Maggie certainly had a surprise when they answered the soldier's loud knocks.

"Oh, Auntie!" cried Sarah. "I'm not a rebel any more. I'd die for Abraham Lincoln!"

The soldier whispered in her ear:

"Don't tell any one you saw him. It is a secret."

So the family never knew just what it was that changed Sarah into such a faithful follower of Lincoln.

"It's just his greatness," she explained. "If he could just speak to everybody in the South, one by one, they would all trust him."

And after all the child knew what she was talking about. It wasn't so much what Lincoln did, although it was a great deal—it was what he was that makes us love him still after all these years.—Selected.

READING THE BIBLE THROUGH

I supposed I knew my Bible,
Reading piecemeal, hit or miss,
Now a bit of John or Matthew,
Now a snatch of Genesis,
Certain chapters of Isaiah,
Certain Psalms (the twenty-third),
Twelfth of Romans, first of Proverbs,
Yes, I thought I knew the Word;
But I found a thorough reading
Was a different thing to do,
And the way was unfamiliar,
When I read the Bible through.

You who like to play at Bible,
Dip and dabble, here and there,
Just before you kneel aweary,
And yawn through a hurried prayer;
You who treat the Crown of writings,
As you treat no other book—
Just a paragraph disjointed,
Just a crude, impatient look—
Try a worthier procedure,
Try a broad and steady view;
You will kneel in very rapture,
When you read the Bible through.

A RULE OF THREE

Three things to govern: Temper, tongue and conduct.

Three things to cultivate: Courage, affection and gentleness.

Three things to commend: Thrift, industry and promptness.

Three things to despise: Cruelty, arrogance and ingratitude.

Three things to wish for: Health, friends and contentment.

Three things to admire: Dignity, gracefulness and intellectual power.

Three things to give: Alms to the needy, comfort to the sad and appreciation to the worthy.—Selected.

UNFINISHED TASKS

What! Here so soon,
Sunset and night?
Why, I have work to do that needs the noon
And day's broad light!
See! on the palette there the colors are but set,
The canvas still unwet,
And it is night!

How shall it rise—
That heavenly strain—
On heavenly wings to woo the listening skies
To earth again,
While lies the violin here, untouched, unstrung?
The music still unsung,
And it is night!

How sweet 'twould be—
My work all done—
To sit at eve my threshold on, and see
Stars, one by one,
Flash from the dark heaven. O happy rest!
My folded hands, how blest!
But—'tis already night!

FACE YOUR TROUBLE

"I had plowed around a rock in one of my fields for five years," said a farmer, "and I had broken a mowing knife against it, besides losing the use of the ground in which it lay, all because I supposed it was such a large rock that it would take too much time and labor to remove it. But today, when I began to plow corn, I thought that by and by I might break my cultivator against that rock; so I took my crowbar, intending to poke around it and find out its size once and for all. And it was one of the surprises of my life to find that it was little more than two feet long. It was standing on its edge, and so light that I could lift it into the wagon without help."

"The first time you really faced your trouble you conquered it," I replied aloud, but continued to enlarge upon the subject all to myself, for I do believe that before we pray, or, better, while we pray, we should look our troubles squarely in the face.

Imagine the farmer plowing around that rock for five years, praying all the while, "O Lord, remove that rock," when he did not know whether it was a big rock or a little, flat stone!

We shiver and shake and shrink, and sometimes we do not dare to pray about a trouble, because it makes it seem so real, not even knowing what we wish the Lord to do about it, when, if we would face the trouble, and call it by its name, one-half of its terror would immediately disappear.

The trouble that lies down with us at night and confronts us on first waking in the morning, is not the trouble that we have faced, but the trouble whose proportions we do not know. —Advance.

DIFFICULTIES A TEST

You may very often see dead fish floating with the stream, but you never saw dead fish swimming against it. Well, that is your false believer. Profession is just floating down the stream, but confession is swimming against it, no matter how strong the tide.—Dwight L. Moody.

Christian unity is not won without labor. It is far too precious and real to be achieved by the sluggish.

One per cent on budgets for superannuates, English Street, 50 cents.

The report from the treasurer of the W. F. M. S. did not get in this time so the amounts in this column are a bit short of what has been paid in from November, or last Conference. Individual churches which are O. T. will be shown in next report, as heretofore.

Look up your record and ask yourself the question, "If every member and every church were doing as well as I and my church are doing, would the Kingdom be well supported?" If you are not satisfied with the answer there is another quarter ahead, before the next report of this kind. See what you can do and what you individually can lead your church to do for the Kingdom, as represented by the budgets.

There is quite a good Easter report in and we are hoping that a goodly number of the charges will report on this interest yet.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

"CHRISTIANITY BECOMES DANGEROUS"

"Thank God for the announcement on the floor of Congress that Christianity, as represented by the Federal Council of the Churches, has become dangerous!

"Dare we hope that we are coming into a time when the principles of Jesus, incarnate in His Church, are to exchange challenges with the forces of greed, injustice and violence? The outburst of Representative Free in the House of Representatives, calling for an investigation of the propagandist activities of the Federal Council of the Churches, makes articulate this increasing realization that Christianity is to be taken seriously as an influence in molding civilization. It has been said that the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment and the passage of the Volstead Act were the work of the Protestant Churches. It has been said the unanimous vote of the Senate in favor of arbitration with Mexico was the result of pressure from the Churches. The Washington Conference on Limitation of Armament is credited to or blamed upon the Churches, and the President's recent appeal for a further five-power agreement for limitation of naval armament—which may turn out to be only a three-power agreement or perhaps no agreement at all—is said to be the result of church influences.

"So long has the Church limited its influence to a narrow range of other worldly interests or, at best, to the field of individual morality, and so seriously have its divisions weakened its power even in these fields, that the voice of a Church even partly united and speaking upon problems of world-wide significance, sounds to the purely political ear like a menace, and visions begin to arise of the return of the days when the emperor received the crown from the Pope and when kings did homage for their kingdoms. It is a foolish fear, but we cannot wholly regret that it has arisen. For it is a welcome acknowledgement of the fact that the united consciences of Christian people are beginning to exercise a power which has too long been denied to them."—The Christian Century, March 17, 1927.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MISS ESTHER ROSS, Editor

EXTENSION WORK OF W. F. M. S

Following is the report of the Committee on Extension of Work, N. C. Branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. P. Church.

1. We recommend the use of the study book, either in connection with the monthly program, or as a study class during the year; that we use our question box; and that we give special study to the country, the work, and the workers in each of our mission fields.

2. That we may increase our membership, we recommend that all ladies who are members of the church but not members of the missionary societies be placed on the roll as inactive members, letting each member be responsible for securing one or more of these ladies as active members.

3. We urge all auxiliaries to study some book on Stewardship, and as many as possible sign and return cards to the Secretary of Stewardship. Two days may be set apart for this book, or have one lesson a week.

4. We further recommend that the Missionary Record be sent to all new societies for six months, and that we make an effort to place the Record in every home.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. C. W. BATES,
DR. JOY H. GLASCOCK,
MRS. C.C. M'NEIL,
MRS. W. P. PICKETT,
MISS LEAH DAVIS,
MISS PAULINE NICHOLSON,
MRS. CARL STIKELEATHER.

SPECIAL CONTINGENT FOR W. F. M. S.

The old story of only one cent of every dollar raised for foreign missions reaching its goal has been exploded long ago. In the Methodist Protestant church the W. F. M. S. is so anxious to send every cent possible that we go to the extreme of not keeping enough to pay running expenses.

We have less than one thousand members and, since we keep only ten cents per member to use for expenses, we have less than a hundred dollars for a whole year. Out of this we give from ten to twenty-five dollars for literature to send the auxiliaries, especially the new ones; we pay postage on letters sent out by secretary and treasurer; we pay for printing our Branch minutes and programs, and this year we paid about thirty-five dollars for special organization work.

We have not enough money to send even one delegate to our Board meeting, May 11. We can not afford to have no representatives at this meeting. It would be as bad as not sending delegates to General Conference. On account of being so far south we do not have the inspiration that comes from meeting our returned missionaries, or even talking with members of the Executive Committee of our Board. We must keep in touch with the general work in some way, so it is vitally important that we send two delegates to Board meeting.

The only way I can suggest to obtain the necessary funds is for each of our auxiliaries to send in immediately at least one dollar for contingent fund.

We can not carry on any kind of business without some expense and our work in N. C. has already suffered because we have tried to do so.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, President W. F. M. S.

A Gift of Love and Appreciation

At the recent meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Branch in Henderson it was suggested that we send to our missionary, J. Clyde Auman, and his wife a letter of congratulation and a gift for the son who has come to their home.

Many friends and members of churches Mr. Auman served in our conference spoke feelingly of their love for him and their wish for his continued success and happiness.

A nice amount of money and pledges were received from individuals and auxiliaries.

Perhaps you were not there and would feel slighted at being left out so we are giving you an opportunity to add your personal contribution or that of your auxiliary. Please send it at once to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer, Burlington, N. C., and mark it "special for Auman baby."

The Aumans are returning to N. C. in July, on furlough, and we are anxious to send them the gift at once.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, President W. F. M. S.

TRIUMPH

By Rebecca B. Liner

The sunshine and flowers so priceless,
Are oft from our vision away,
The fragrance and beauty we cherish,
Seems only to live for a day.

Yet back of the shadow the sun shines,
And out in the light flowers grow,
If we strive, wait and pray we'll behold them
Springing up from the seed that we sow.

So often our hearts may seem lonely,
And the days may seem dreadfully long,
Our efforts may seem, oh, so futile,
As we labor to trample out wrong.

I think that the angels of mercy,
Hover nearer and nearer us then,
Bright petals of hope they scatter,
In our pathway again and again.

Let us strive, wait and pray, believing,
That somewhere, a crown of light,
With an hour of joy we know not
Is winging her silent flight.

—It costs the United States approximately $2,000 a year to maintain one of its soldiers; Great Britian $1,572, and France $263.

Jones—"Come over as quickly as you can, doctor. My wife has fallen and broken her leg."

Specialist—"Which leg is it?"

Specialist—"You'll have to get some one else, then. I specialize on the right leg only."

WAR AND HUMAN NATURE

By The Hon. Lady Barlow, of England

Never let it be said that human nature does not change. That is wrong, a thousand times wrong! Human nature does change. I will give you one proof. If you went this afternoon to Knightsbridge, to that spot known and beloved of Britons all the world over—Tattersall's—there you would be handed a catalogue describing in detail the horses which are to be sold at auction tomorrow. I have been in the city of Hull, to Wilberforce House, and there I have seen just similar catalogues which describe, not horses, but human beings: "A carpenter to be sold for 300 pounds," "A wench who understands cooking, no longer required by her owner, who is leaving for abroad, 30 pounds," "An old woman to be sold, with bad legs, for 6 pence."

Do not laugh, friends. I have seen there an iron collar which was fastened round the neck of a runaway slave, and this collar had iron spikes the length of my arm protruding at right angles, so that he could never pass through any small apertures and he could never lay his head upon the ground. Now these horrors have passed. William Wilberforce stood out and gave his life for this work. It took him some forty years; but if he could abolish slavery we can abolish war.

It seems to me that from time to time thought moves forward, surges into a new conception of the value of human life; a new ethic is born. It may be that this meeting tonight in which we find ourselves is making history. They say when the tide comes in that it is the seventh wave that tells. I believe this is the crest of the seventh wave.

In conclusion, let me leave with you a parable. Thought today is dwelling upon the unity of humanity, and science, too, is pointing that way. We say that we are as different only as leaves on the same tree, and that these differences of race are all clear, and far less different than we had thought, and here is my parable to illustrate it: A prophet was walking at dawn upon the mountain side, and through the mist he saw approaching him a form, and he said, "It is a beast," and as the form drew nearer, the prophet said, "Lo, it is a man;" and when they came together and looked each other in the eyes, the prophet said, "Behold, it is my brother."

THE EIGHT RULES OF THE GAME

In promoting healthy living among children the American Child Health Association has put forth eight rules as follows:

1. A full bath oftener than once a week.
2. Brushing the teeth at least once every day.
3. Sleeping long hours with the windows open.
4. Drinking as much milk as possible but no coffee or tea.
5. Eating some vegetable or fruit every day.
6. Drinking at least four glasses of water a day.
7. Playing part of every day out-of-doors.
8. A bowel movement every morning.

These are good rules for grown folks as well as children.

—Grace church's Easter cantata was encored and repeated the next Sunday night.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Moriah.—We have no reporter from Moriah, but I feel that the people will be interested in knowing of the progress of the church. After we were left without a pastor last fall, we were fortunate enough to have some good minister preach for us every Sunday. However we felt that we could not grow as a church without a pastor. Dr. Dixon kept asking that we be patient, and now we feel that we are well repaid for waiting. In February Rev. H. C. Carmichael of Lexington came to preach for us. He came three different times and finally agreed to come as pastor of this charge. The people were enthusiastic over the idea of having a pastor in our midst, and at once began planning for a parsonage. It was finally decided to build on a part of the church grounds. And now by the united efforts of all the members we have an up-to-date seven room house with electric lights and running water for our pastor. We are all proud of our new parsonage, and feel that we have a building that any church in the conference might well feel proud of. On the 15th of April Rev. Mr. Carmichael and his interesting family moved into the parsonage. They have already won the love and esteem of the people and we are delighted that they are in our community. He preaches strong, inspiring gospel sermons, and every Sunday there is an increase in number, both in Sunday school and in the church service.

On April 24th we had 109 present for Sunday school, the largest attendance in years. We also had a large attendance at the church service at which the Lord's supper was administered. The children of the Sunday school gave an interesting program on Easter Sunday. This service was attended by a large congregation and the collection amounted to nearly eighteen dollars. On the 27th of March the ladies of the missionary societies had their Thank-offering service. At the morning service our pastor gave us a strong missionary sermon. At night the ladies presented lantern slides showing pictures of the different work and workers of the Foreign field. These pictures were very interesting and helped to increase our determination to do more for Foreign Missions.

Both the Foreign and Home Missionary Societies reported their budgets raised, at the branch meeting last week. At an early date we expect to organize "A Young People's Work." Our Sunday school will be represented at the Sunday School Convention in Burlington this week. A MEMBER.

Kernersville.—At our second quarterly conference Brothers Henry Crew of Pine Grove church and R. M. Whitt of Ai church were nominated for delegate.

Easter exercises were held at the following churches on this charge: Pine Grove, Kernersville, and Sandy Ridge. Offerings were as follows: Pine Grove, $6.20; Kernersville, $20.62; Sandy Ridge, $5.00.

A lighting plant has been purchased for Ai church, and money is being raised to paint Pine Grove church. During the present month a double service has been held at each of the country churches on this charge.

Pine Grove and Ai each served dinner on the ground.

We believe these special services increased the attendance, and interest also.

We are planning to have a circuit rally on this charge the fifth Sunday in May. The following is the plan of appointments on this charge. First Sunday, Pine Grove, 11 a.m. Kernersville at night. Second Sunday, Ai, 11 a.m., Sandy Ridge 3:00 p.m. Third Sunday, Kernersville, 11 a.m., Pine Grove 3 p.m. Kernesville at night. Fourth Sunday, Sandy Ridge, 11 a.m., Ai, 3:00 p.m.

Through the kindness of some of the good people of this work, we have received since our last report many gifts for the table. For all these kindnesses each contributor has our many thanks.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Mizpah, Haw River Charge.—The members of the Missionary Society from the M. P. church, Reidsville, came to Mizpah last night and gave us a splendid program. These women were very kind to give a program just for our benefit. We are sure the Heavenly Father will reward them.

Mrs. George Brown made a good talk on Foreign Missions. In a few well chosen words she told how the foreign missionary work originated. Mrs. Brown gave some splendid illustrations and good pictures of the work that is being done in China, Japan and India at the present time.

I think all Christians should pray earnestly for all missionaries in China.

MRS. FRED E. JONES, Reporter.

Saxapahaw Charge.—Elaborate preparations are being made at Salem church for the Centenary celebration to be held May 6-8. New lamps have been purchased, a linoleum carpet has been placed in the aisles, and the members have spent a part of thre days beautifying the lawn. Salem is the second oldest Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina, being organized the latter part of 1826. Seven of the former pastors have accepted an invitation to be present and participate in the exercises. We invite all the friends of this old historic church to be present and help make the celebration a success.

A very pleasing Easter service was rendered at the Saxapahaw church on Easter Sunday night. The committee in charge deserves praise for arranging such a splendid program. The Easter service at Concord conflicted with the Saxapahaw service so the pastor could not attend both; but reports indicate that the service there was good.

Rev. C. C. Lindley has the sincere thanks of the pastor for preaching at Salem church Easter Sunday morning, making it possible for all the churches on this work to have Easter sermons. H. L. ISLEY.

Gibsonville.—The second quarterly conference met April 6. Each organization of the church gave a written report.

A Sunday School Institute for Rock Creek Township was held at our church Sunday, April 10. In the afternoon at 3:00 o'clock Rev. Sam Rankin of Greensboro made a very earnest and urgent appeal on "Know your Bible;" following this Dr. W. T. Whitsett, very forcibly spoke on "The Lesson Background." Then again at 8:00 o'clock in the evening we listened to a very inspiring address by Professor P. E. Lindley of the High Point College.

Tuesday night, April 19, the Woman's Home Missionary society met with Mrs. J. T. Shelton. A very interesting program was rendered. During the social hour refreshments were served.

Mr. Vergil Yow and Miss Pomona Johnson, students at High Point College, are spending the Easter Holidays with their parents.

We now have three Christian Endeavor societies, with good attendance and interesting programs.

On Easter Sunday evening at 8:00 the young people of the church gave a pageant, "The Tree of Hope." It was heard by a large and appreciative audience.

MRS. F. G. HAMMER, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—The second quarterly conference met at Union Grove Church Saturday, April 23rd. Each church was represented. Reports showed some progress is being made.

W. A. Davis and A. M. Dodson both of Union Grove church were nominated for delegate to the next annual conference. Either of these brethren will make a good delegate.

The township Sunday School Convention met with the Efland church first Sunday night in April. Brother Lawrence Little delivered the principal address. Brother Little was at his best. "Enough said."

B. M. WILLIAMS.

South Lexington.—There was an increase of 25 in the Sunday school attendance last Sunday, there being 178 present on the previous Sunday. Brother H. C. Koonts, the superintendent, was absent and the assistant, Brother W. H. Kindley, presided over the school.

The men's class had 42 present with $2.74 offering. Brother Frank Forshee is the new president of the class, succeeding Brother A. C. Huneycutt, who has moved to Alabama. The class is planning for a social occasion which, it is understood will be in the nature of a barbecue.

The morning church service was attended by a larger congregation than usual, and Pastor Ridge preached better than usual, we think.

In the evening another good sized congregation was present. The pastor again delivered a good sermon. At the conclusion of the sermon the doors of the church were opened for the reception of members and two new members were received. They are Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Deaton, who have been residents of South Lexington since last year, and have been regular attendants at our Sunday school and church. The pastor's method of receiving them into the church was to have the members of the church and others extend the hand of Chritsian fellowship at the close of the ritualistic part of the reception and during the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts in Christian Love." Mr. and Mrs. Deaton are members of the choir and otherwise valuable members of the Sunday school and church.

The Easter service was held on Easter Sunday night and a program was rendered by members of the Sunday school. The children rendered their parts well and a large congregation was present. The offering which was for the board of home missions, amounted to over $7.00.

Brother C. L. Hedrick was elected by the Sunday school last Sunday morning as delegate to the State Sunday School Convention at Burlington.

Only one preaching service will be held next Sunday. The pastor will be at Mount Carmel for the morning service, next Sunday being the regular appointment for that church. At night he will preach at South Lexington. C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Hatley

Mrs. Mary J. Tucker Hatley, was born February 25, 1869, departed this life April 9, 1927. She was united in marriage to J. T. Hatley December 23, 1885. To this union were born four children, three daughters, and one son, all of whom are living. To mourn the departure of this good woman there are also ten grand-children, one brother, Mr. W. A. Tucker, of Red Cross, one grand-father, of Texas, who was 104 years old the 10th of April, 1927, hosts of friends and relatives. But let us be able to say that we have just parted with this good woman. She has just gone home a little before us, we are following on, and we shall meet again in our Father's House, and enjoy each other more happily than we could have done here below. At the age of 14 she professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. church at Oakboro. Later when she came in this community to live, she placed her membership with the Methodist Protestant church at Friendship. Here she remained faithful to attend all the services as long as health permitted, then she was still loyal to her church to the end. It was not my privilege to know this Christian woman but a short while, but I did love such a spirit as she possessed. She was sick quite awhile but bore all suffering patiently, waiting the summons to go home. During her sickness she was heard at different times to make the remark that she wanted to get able to attend church to hear her new pastor preach. When I visited her she told me she was so glad to see me with such a sweet smile on her face. On the 10th of April, 1927, at 2 o'clock p.m., she was brought to her church for the funeral, which was conducted by the writer, then she was laid to rest in the cemetery at Providence church beneath a mound of flowers. The Ladies' Aid of which she was a member were the flower-bearers. I will say to the sorrowing ones, weep not. We see but dimly through the mists and vapors; amid these earthly damps what sems to us but sad, funeral tapers may be heaven's distant lamp. One of the daughters at the grave said, Drifting away, drifting away. Good-bye, Mama, I will see you again sometime. I know that will be a happy meeting on the other shore. Take Mother's Savior for your Savior, and He will guide you all safely through. For death is but a path that must be trod if we would ever pass to God. C. H. HILL.

Burlington.—Our work here is moving hopefully along, though we are not realizing all in the way of growth and development that we long for. On Easter Sunday we received the following into the church: Walter Stokes Smith, William Donald Crutchfield, Ralph Joseph Bennett, Clay Pritchard Way, Paul William Davis, Mary Blanch Phillips, Christine Thomas, Laura May Teer, Mildred Davis Sykes, Ruth Dare Spoon, Pauline Thomas, and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Thomas. The last two in this list came by letter; the others on confession of faith. We met them regularly, in a group, for about six weeks, and by instruction and prayer, prepared them for church membership. This seems to us to be a good way of bringing children into the church. In this preparation work, we used the catechism prepared by Dr. Lewis for our church.

For our Easter Sunday school program we used the pageant prepared by Miss Dorothy Elderdice for the Board of Home Missions, "The Hope of a Tree." The attendance was large and the effect good. The offering however, was not up to our expectation; only $34.71 was realized.

President Dixon made his official visit to this church on the second Sunday, and preached at the eleven o'clock hour. We were glad to have him with us.

On next Sunday we begin our special meeting. Rev. R. A. Hunter will be with us to do the preaching. A large number of the membership has pledged to pray daily for the meeting. We are hoping for good results.

S. W. TAYLOR.

Henderson.—On Monday afternoon, April 11th, the Ladies' Aid Society and the Missionary Society of our local church held a joint meeting. A splendid attendance was present and much important business was discussed and voted on. This being the time for electing new officers in the Missionary Society, the following were elected: president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch; vice-president, Mrs. Sam R. Harris; treasurer, Mrs. F. R. Harris; secretary, Miss Myra Hight; assistant secretary, Mrs. Henry Powell; superintendent of the Mission Band and Intermediate Christian Endeavorers, Mrs. Walter Grissom. The various committees gave in their reports and the treasurer read the year's report from the Mission Band and the Young Ladies' League. These were very interesting and showed much interest, and progress made by these societies. At the conclusion of the business the meeting was dismissed by prayer by Rev. R. A. Hunter.

On Wednesday evening, April 13th, our second quarterly conference was held at the church. Much business was transacted and everything seemed to be going well for the coming year.

Easter Sunday was well observed at our church; beginning at the Sunday school period a special program was given by the children, which was greatly enjoyed. Our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, gave a most beautiful sermon on the "Risen Lord" and appropriate music was rendered by the choir.

The Branch meeting of the W. H. and F. M. societies began its opening session in our church Tuesday afternoon at 1:30. The program as given in the Herald some weeks ago was carried out completely and much interest and enthusiasm prevailed. About one hundred delegates registered and a great number from the rural churches attended daily. Dinner was served in the basement each day and a real social hour was then enjoyed. We as the local church and Missionary Society wish to express to all how glad we are you came and hope that your coming will mean as much to you as it did and will to us in the future. We also wish to thank those societies of the rural districts who responded so heartly in supporting us with the luncheons served. And again we want to thank the ladies and gentlemen also of the church in general, for the cooperation and help in entertaining the delegates. We feel that our "thank you" is small compared to the pleasure you received by helping and also the blessings which will come in due season when we so willingly serve our Lord and His workers.

Sunday morning we enjoyed a very helpful sermon from our pastor, so much in keeping with the closing of the Branch meeting and so needed in the lives of all struggling Christians. His sermon was on the "Parable of the Labourers." At the evening hour Rev. C. W. Bates gave a most inspiring sermon on "Faith," as a grain of mustard seed. A large congregation was present and we enjoyed the privilege of hearing again this true servant of God.

MRS. CLYDE L. FINCH, Reporter.

Harmony.—Our pastor filled his regular appointment the fourth Sunday, delivering two good sermons.

Easter services were held Easter Sunday night with a good attendance. Offering was very good, about 14 dollars.

The Missionary society held its regular appointment the 21st with only a few members present.

The Christian Endeavor is doing very good with a small attendance. We are planning a mother's day service the second Sunday afternoon in May.

EDNA HUGHES, Reporter.

Moriah.—We are glad to welcome our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Carmichael, and family into our community, and he expressed his appreciation last Sunday for the nice new parsonage and the many nice things he received at the pounding April 15.

The quarterly conference was held at our church April 22. Brother A. G. Dixon was present.

The Easter exercise which was given Easter Sunday morning was enjoyed by all present.

Sunday was a good day for us. There were 109 present for Sunday school, besides the large number of visitors. We are glad to see our Sunday school building up and hope it will continue to increase.

Delegates to the Sunday school convention which will be held this week at Burlington are as follows: Mr. Robert Kirkman, Miss Edna Sharpe, and Mr. E. P. Sharpe.

We were indeed glad to have Rev. Mr. McCulloch with us again Sunday.

We are glad to see a number of the children taking an interest in the singing.

Best wishes to Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

High Point.—We were delighted to receive a large number into our communion and fellowship on Easter Sunday morning. Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Allman of the Children's Home were transfered from our church at Asheville, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard B. Krieger came by letter from the Moravian church at Riverside, N. J. The following boys and girls united by confession of faith: Ruth and Bettie Frishkorn, Dorothy, Mildred, Milton, and Letha Krieger, Nancy and Louise Wright, Margaret and Martha Routh, Ernestine Vuncannon, Quinelle Mayhew, Annie Bevill, Flora

Coble, Alice Koontz, Christine and Rachel Fogleman, Margaret Crickmore, John Grier, Ruth Markland, Addie Lee Guest, Ruth Beam, and Edna and Lily Doby. May God's richest blessings rest upon these precious young lives, and may "their lines fall in pleasant places," for they indeed have "a goodly heritage."

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Mrs. W. P. Pickett, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Mrs. J. H. Walker, and Mrs. S. D. Shelton have returned from Henderson, N. C., where they attended the Branch meeting of th Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies. They report a largely attended and highly enjoyable session.

At 11 o'clock Sunday morning Rev. P. E. Lindley delivered a timely and able sermon on "Our New Responsibilities," and at the evening service Mr. Ballard brought a helpful message on "Living with Jesus." He stressed the fact that we will encounter crosses, temptations, and disappointments in following Jesus, but if we are faithful to our promise to serve Him to the end, our reward will be rich and full. "A Haven of Rest" was beautifully sung by the male quartette, Messrs. Smith, Koonce, Davis, and Schultheiss.

Mr. and Mrs. Furman R. Auman, who were married in Reidsville April 16th, by Dr. Geo. R. Brown, have returned from their wedding journey to Schenandoah Valley, Virginia, and other points, and will be at home to their friends at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Williard, 1102 Johnson Street. The bride before her marriage was Miss Doris Crook, and is popular with a large circle of friends.

We are much pleased to see Mrs. L. J. Diffee out again after being shut in by illness since her return from a trip to the Orient and the Holy Land.

The W. C. T. U. of the city will meet Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. H. A. Moffitt.

The magnificent new home of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny near Jamestown on High Point-Greensboro Highway is nearing completion, and will be one of the most beautiful estates for many miles around High Point. The extensive and well arranged grounds with lovely grass shrubbery and flower beds make an ideal setting for the elegant mansion.

We are delighted to see Miss Mary Sheppard at services again after an absence of several weeks.

Messrs. Lester and Earl Teague have completed their new residence off Sunset Drive, and the family consisting of themselves, their brother, Hunter, and sister Gertrude are now occupying it.

We are pleased to see Mrs. Fred Leonard out again after a prolonged illness. Mrs. S. P. Montgomery has returned home from Guilford General Hospital, and is somewhat improved.

Two concrete driveways are being laid at the entrance to the church, the lawn will be sown in grass and shrubbery and ornamental plants set out, which will add greatly to the appearance of the surrounding grounds.

Dr. Frank W. Stephenson, Executive Secretary Board of Education, is spending today (Tuesday) at High Point College, and made an address to the students at Chapel services.

We are sorry to note the illness of Mrs. R. M. Andrews. Robert Jr., has recovered from an attack of measles.

Mrs. Martin spent last Sunday here as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. E. Lester Ballard.

Henderson.—Since our last report the Henderson church has entertained the Branch Meeting. Our people, especially the good women, received from the sessions of this conference inspiration and information that will be of great benefit to them in the work of the church. The meting was one of the very best, in point of interest and attendance, that it has been our privilege to attend.

We held our quarterly conference Wednesday night, April 13th. The reports of the various officers and organization leaders were encouraging. The following brethren were nominated for delegate to the Annual Conference: J. B. Hicks and T. J. Evans.

The following are a few of the things done recently which denote real life in the church: New screens for the basement at a cost of approximately $35.00; a new carpet for the Sunday school assembly room at a cost of $50.00, and a new "Aristocrat" Church Bulletin at a cost of $75.00. The pipe organ has also been repaired at a cost of approximately $50.00. These items have been taken care of by the Ladies' Aid Society, Sunday school classes, etc.

We have received five new members into the church since Conference as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Silas Powell, Louise Powell, and Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Floyd. These are all splendid young people and will be quite an asset to the church.

We were happy to have Brother Bates, of Asheville, preach for us last Sunday night. He brought a splendid message, which was heard by a large congregation.

R. A. HUNTER.

Graham Church.—The quarterly conference met Saturday evening, April 9, at the church and had a very good meeting. Brother J. L. Amick and Brother Paul Cheek were nominated as delegates to the annual conference.

The Ray Memorial Bible Class held a combined business and social meeting at the church Tuesday evening, April 12, and there was a large crowd present and every one enjoyed the evening immensely. During the business part of the program, there were a number of very interesting talks made by different members of the class and by Rev. Mr. Williams. The class decided that they would pay the town street assessment for the church. After the business meeting was over, sandwiches and coffee were served.

Our Easter program given on Easter Sunday night was very interesting and enjoyed by all. There was a short program by the children, a pageant by the intermediate girls and a solo by Mrs. C. E. Core. The offering amounted to $18.

A group of the young people under the leadership of Miss Clara Hughes gave a play at the Court House Thursday evening, April 21. The title of the play was "Mammy's Lil' Wild Rose" and it was given for the benefit of the furnace fund. The play was a decided success and the auditorium was filled to overflowing. After all expenses are paid the amount cleared will be approximately $110.

Miss Mattie Cheek, one of our most faithful members, who has been seriously ill foi sometime is improving.

We were very glad to welcome Mrs. H. M. Rogers as a member of our church on Sunday evening, April 10. She comes to us from the Graham Baptist church.

Our Sunday school is doing some excellent work under the leadership of our very efficient superintendent, Mr. J. L. Amick. The attendance is growing and also the membership. The C. E. socities are likewise doing some very splendid work.

We have been hearing some very interesting and inspiring sermons recently from our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams. We feel that he is giving us something really worthwhile. He has been in very poor health for sometime but seems to be much better now and he has our sincere hopes and prayers that he will soon be enjoying good health again.

MARY TOME HUGHES, Reporter.

Yadkin College.—At the request of the members of this church the pageant given at State Street church Easter Sunday night was taken to Yadkin College church on Monday night following. We have no children scarcely at this place and young and old were glad to go out and help out this faithful little band. Some of our best were too unwell to be present but sent their messages of appreciation just the same. All the offering taken was applied on G. C. B. for Yadkin College.

This was a real outing to our children. We took about ten car loads. If more of our churches would help to encourage where they haven't the material to have such helpful services a real service would be rendered to such communities. We thank all who helped to make the rendering of this program here a success.

N. G. BETHEA.

State Street, Lexington.—Our Easter Pageant was a success in every way. It was not purely a children's affair this time, as several of the grown-ups took part. We used the one sent out by our Board of Home Missions, of course. The collection was good and we are hoping by the time we have our Children's Day services to have all claims paid. Our A. C. B. College Assessment and most of G. C. B. is now paid which we think is good considering the money that is being paid on our building by our faithful little band.

Dr. Brannock who lives next to the church on Second Avenue has sown the lot in grass around the church, is putting out shrubbery and flowers. It is looking good. He is doing this at his own expense. We all appreciate this very much. Our special meeting begins Sunday. Brother Gerringer will do the preaching after Sunday and the meeting will continue for ten days or two weeks. Will all who read these lines please pray for us. We are planning for our Vacation Church School. We had a very successful school in the parsonage last year, and with better facilities and more volunteer workers this year we are planning for a begger and better one.

Our work here is very encouraging.

N. G. BETHEA.

Chatham Circuit.—Since my last report the work on the entire circuit has been making progress. Two new members have been received into the Hickory Grove church: Mrs. W. M. Pike by letter from the English Street church, High Point; and Miss Stella Merritt from the Stokesdale M. E. church, South.

A splendid Easter program was given by the Sunday school children of the Hickory Grove church on Sunday morning. In the afternoon the pastor preached. Both services were well attended.

All of the churches are working on the Budget, and we are hoping to pay off all claims by conference, which we will be able to do if every member will do his part.

C. G. ISLEY.

Shiloh, North Davidson Circuit.—Our Christian Endeavor society met at the church Friday night, April 15, and had our meeting. After the meeting we practiced for our Easter pageant.

We had a real interesting topic Friday night. It was, "Christ in us. Power for new life." If we want our lives to count, we know we must have Christ with us. For if we go through this life without Christ our life has been an entire failure. But if we will just have Christ with us and live for Him each day it will help us to bear hard things, will bring comfort to us in time of sorrow. Christ tells us His yoke is easy and His burden light. So if we will just look to Christ and follow Him we will not only be happy ourselves but will make others happy.

On Sunday night, April 17th, we gave an Easter pageant. The name of it was "There is Hope of a Tree." We had a large crowd present.

Let us all continue to pray that Christ will lead us on in paths of usefulness.

EMMA BERRIER, Reporter.

Calvary.—The special evangelistic services which were in progress for two weeks closed on Easter Sunday. Rev. G. F. Millaway preached each evening during the meeting and everyone enjoyed his gospel sermons. We had no song leader but were very fortunate in having several visiting singers, who added much to our services. We are indebted to Miss Lois Allred who served as organist at every service. The attendance was very good and much interest was shown. It was the best meeting we have had in our church. We believe the success of the meeting was due in a large measure to the earnest prayers and personal efforts of the pastor and some of the members. Much more could have been done if we had all done our part in this great work.

Sunday morning, April 10, Decision day was observed in the Sunday school. About twenty children made a decision for Christ.

Easter Sunday was a great day for our church. The church was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and tulips. The choir rendered beautiful Easter music. The pastor preached a very impressive sermon on the Resurrection. At the close of the service sixteen members were received, fathers, mothers, young people and children of our Sunday school. At the evening service the children gave a very good but short Easter program. The children were trained for this service by Mesdames Thos. B. Waugh, M. H. Greer, and H. N. Highfill.

Monday evening, April 18, the regular monthly meeting of the Home Missionary Society was held at the church. There was a good attendance and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Miss Mary C. McCulloch; vice-president, Miss Velna McCulloch; recording secretary, Mrs. C. F. Garrett; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. L. Laughlin; treasurer, Mrs. M. H. Greer. Representatives from the society at the Branch meeting at Henderson were Miss Josie Taylor and Miss Mary C. McCulloch.

Our pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, is with Rev. G. L. Curry in a special meeting. He was back for the eleven o'clock service Sunday. He preached a very helpful and appropriate sermon on "Growing Christians." He said that young Christians should grow and develop spiritually as children grow physically and mentally. But that they need to be nurtured and cared for by the older members. Five new members were gladly received at this service.

We are very sorry to report that Mrs. J. H. Coble, one of our best members, has been ill and unable to attend services for some time. We are glad to know that she is improving. Agnes Pherson was missed from all the services Sunday on account of illness.

On next Sunday, we will have communion service.

REPORTER.

Randleman.—We are to begin a special meeting at Mt. Lebanon next Sunday. Rev. R. S. Troxler will assist, arriving for the Monday evening service.

The nominees for delegate to next annual conference are Brothers W. A. Wood and W. A. Jennings.

WM. H. NEESE.

Oak Grove.—Yesterday we had a large attendance at Sunday school. A fine collection was given the Children's Home.

At eleven o'clock our pastor, Rev. J. D. Morris, preached a very interesting sermon, enjoyed by all.

Our Christian Endeavor society seems to be moving along very nicely. We hope to have more when the weather gets warmer.

Our topic for last evening was, If I Were to Be a Foreign Missionary, What Country Would I Choose? Why?

There were several interesting talks and discussions by the members of the society.

TO ECONOMIZE

Back in the direction of ancient days my grand-father said that a singing teacher was dining at his table, and horse radish was on the table. It was a new thing to the "new man," and it seems that he had an idea that in order to taste the flavoring fully, would be to take it "straight," and not spoil it, mixed in with other things. So he took in a half-tea-spoon of it at once. But the stuff was not used to being eaten that way, and my grand-father said that "he cried mighty fast." Onions, when serving on the negative side of life, often have their "name cast out as evil." Horse radish seems to be a very crude case of flavoring.

The merit for onions seems to be far beyond that of horse radish. To "eat an apple a day will keep the doctor away," and to eat an onion a day is a very economical way.

Our parents and grand-parents, instructed my "generation" to not throw a grain of corn or an apple peeling in the fire—that "a chicken thinks as much of a grain of corn as you do of an apple." The instructions were that "it is a sin to throw a grain of corn in the fire." We need the onions and the various things in their place. One of the old farm demonstrators instructed our people to chew wild onions, and swallow the juice for health. It seems that his instructions were reasonable and safe. One of the able instructors said that we must eat and sleep in order to live. One of the able doctors says that it is not the best to sleep out in the porch—but in the house, and it seems that his advice is safe. However, we read that "Isreal dwelt in tents"—and thus they lived in the fresh air day and night.

For most of people a measure of raw onions is worth more (really,) than two or three measures of potatoes, and it seems that this case should be remembered as a safe "object lesson," right on the line of economy.

Lots of people need something of raw onions for their health. The case of wild onions is no little matter, and they too should be made to "serve."

There is more economy by saving late fruit, "laying up for winter," than early fruit, i.e., to preserve and can up peaches that ripen in September and October. The same for apples, but the winter apples are mainly to serve. At many places fruit trees should be put in to serve for shade.

One of the most beautiful shade trees that I ever saw was a large cherry tree. It was a real case of perfection. Near the house is the place to economise by the use of a variety of fruit trees.

A certain large family has but one concord grape vine, and so large that it produces more grapes than are needed in the family, and they used to give a good many grapes to their neighbors.

In the most of cases we need urging in order to stir us up to the cultivation of our fruit trees. "Old field pines," and all other wild growth, can grow without cultivation, but the tame trees must have cultivation in order to do well.

Much of the forests have been wasted. The small timber should be left to grow. It belongs to the finest of economy to allow the forests to stand and grow, and cut out the large trees, but allow the small ones to stand until they grow large enough for "saw logs."

In the wild west they plant trees for forests, but what we have need to do is to allow our wild growth to remain and grow up into forests.

W. F. GRABS.

THE MINISTER'S CALL

I am sure of the fact that every man God has called to preach the gospel has the divine call burned in his heart and he doesn't only see the need of preaching, but he feels the need. I am sure of the divine call to preach as much as I am about getting saved. I know the Gospel has its effect, but to listen to a man preach from an experience of grace and then listen to one that preaches from a theory any man who has been saved by grace can tell the difference. If we had more men who knew that they were called to preach we would be in better shape to go out and meet the opposition that we have to meet, and when the salary is low, the work hard, and the devil tries to make us quit, the man that got the divine call burned in his heart to preach, thank God there is something there the world don't know anything about, so he looks up through it all. So, brethren, let's look up and pray God to send men into the field, for I am aware of the fact that we have men in this country preaching from a theory and not experience.

Sunday School Offerings

Friendship, Haw River Circuit, $5; Mitchell Grove, Guilford Circuit, $1.81; Burlington, $47.01, for March and April.

We feel very grateful to each contributor for the above offerings. While our report this week is not as large as it sometimes is we appreciate each one very much indeed. Our boys who were in the wreck are all improving nicely; however, one is still in the hospital, with a broken leg.

E. F. ALLMAN, Superintendent.

A school for rural ministers will be held at the University of Maryland from June 13-24, inclusive. The purpose is to give technical training on rural problems and questions pertaining to the farm, in order to assist the Church in becoming a greater factor in developing a better rural life.

—Miss Eugenia Hunter, of Grace church, recently returned from a trip to Europe.

—The Mississippi river and its tributaries have been overflowing their usual bounds, washing away houses and lands. Quite a number of people have lost their lives. Those made homeless by the floods are in a destitute condition, and people everywhere are asked to contribute for their relief. Relief work is directed by the Red Cross organization.

—A process of ripening fruit by ethylene gas has been discovered. The discovery is looked upon as one of great practical importance. The flavor of the fruit is said to be better than when sun-ripened.

—Brother G. O. Coble has recently completed his work of preparing a lawn for Calvary church. The blue grass came up well and looks fine, and now he has covered the slope to the sidewalk with a good coat of turf. We thank him heartily.

Peter's Denial and Ours

We may deny Christ as truly as Peter did, and our denial is much more culpable than Peter's was. Jesus was on trial and expected and wished to be condemned. He did not ask his disciples to witness for him before Caiaphas or Pilate. He might have done so. They were competent as character witnesses and also as witnesses of his conduct. They had companied with him and they knew better than anybody else what he was and what he had done. We might have expected Jesus, in view of the trials he foresaw, to ask his disciples to be on hand to bear testimony in his favor when he was falsely accused before the authorities. But he did not do so. Especially might we have expected that he would appeal to Peter to stand up boldly for the Master. But he made no such appeal to Peter. He did not ask for the defence of his disciples because he did not want it. He expected to be and wished to be condemned and crucified because he knew that it was the will of God. Without this experience on his part the world could not be saved. It was a loving sacrifice which his love was great enough to make. Peter had already tried to save Jesus from such a fate, saying to him, This shall not be unto thee. When Jesus was about to be arrested, Peter boldly drew his sword and struck out at the multitude of officers and policemen. Jesus reproved him for that act. Peter must have felt that his efforts to save Jesus were not only unavailing but also unwelcome.

Very different is the case with us. We are expected to be witnesses for Christ. We are asked to be witnesses. We are asked to be witnesses before all men. We must somehow say to every man we meet, I believe in Jesus Christ. I am one of His followers. He is a most worthy Master, and I sit at his feet daily. He is the world's Savior, and without Him can no man be saved. His salvation is a great and glorious thing. It adds infinitely to the value of life here and promises fullness of joy in the unending life hereafter. To know such a Christ and such a salvation imposes a supreme obligation to witness before all men on all occasions. To fail to be His witnesses in our situation is much worse than to fail as Peter did. Peter's failure was unutterably, disgraceful, but what about ours?

Sun Spots and Storms

Observers of the heavens and the earth have discovered a correspondence between the occurrence of spots on the sun and great storms on the earth. Both follow a schedule of about eleven years. We are this year having great floods in the Mississippi valley. Eleven years ago we had great floods in Western North Carolina. Those living on the earth eleven years hence may expect to hear of or see destructive storms somewhere in the world. The precise causal connection between these two classes of phenomena is not certainly known, but the correspondence has been observed for centuries and cannot be doubted.

The fact represents the dependence of the earth upon the heavens, of man upon God. Sometimes man grows vain in his imaginations. Because he has learned to master some of the forces that act upon the earth he is tempted to think himself supreme. But the first thing he knows he will be disillusioned by some mighty power from the heavens manifesting itself in a way to bring him to a sense of his weakness. How puny is man at his best in the grasp of the Infinite. Why should mortal man be proud? All the power of human science cannot lift man above a state of abject dependence upon God. Instead of being lifted up by any consciousness of power, we should the rather be humbled by our relative ignorance and weakness. We cannot escape dependence upon the mighty will of God. The issues of our lives are in His hand. It is good for us that we constantly realize our dependence upon God. We could then be grateful for our preservation in the past and would be brought to look constantly to God for His guidance in the paths of the future.

What the Sun Does for Us

It is not strange that the ancients worshiped the sun. They realized somewhat the greatness of the sun's service to the earth and its inhabitants. Not only are we indebted to the sun for the great revival of vegetable life in the springtime, but every day in the year every living creature receives from the sun the warmth necessary for the maintenance of life. Suppose the sun should fail to rise some day. Not only would the world be wrapped in dense darkness, but the temperature would fall and the chill of death would soon come upon us. Without the sun this world would soon be a dead world. Did we not know that the sun is itself a creature of God, we would probably be worshipers of the sun. But human thought has groped its way to higher and truer conceptions than the early men had, and we worship not the sun but the Maker of the sun.

What the sun is to the physical world, Christ, the "Sun of Righteousness," is to the spiritual world. The glory of the earth in springtime is a symbol of the glory that Christ is bringing out in the realm of spiritual life. No more necessary is the sun to plant and animal life than Christ is to the life of the soul and spirit. The earth has its tropics, regions where the power of the sun is most completely demonstrated. In like manner the spirit of man may attain to its most glorious state by nearness to Christ and complete realization of His life-giving power.

—The destructive floods in the Mississippi valley have made thousands homeless and brought about a situation that appeals to all for relief. It is a time for the exercise of Christian charity on a wide scale. All people should feel appealed to by the misery of those suddenly reduced to abject dependence on others for the necessaries of life. Disease, too, must be battled against. The American Red Cross is at work with its relief measures, but it is dependent upon the American people for the means. Christ is looking on. Will He see you make an offering, or will He see you close your heart against the appeals of the suffering?
